The British were almost led into a terrible trap, and discovered the danger only just in time. They turned to retreat, and the Zulus poured in a volley which brought down the grey horse of a mounted infantryman. His rider fell head foremost. The rest thought both man and horse were killed at first, but the former soon struggled to his feet, with his face covered with blood and dazed with his fall.

Lord William Beresford, seeing what had happened, pulled up, and, in the face of advancing hosts of yelling savages within easy range, quietly trotted back and told the man to mount behind him.

With a cool courage scarcely second to Lord William's, the man refused, noble fellow that he was, preferring the certain sacrifice of his own life to the probability of destroying his preserver.

The reply was admirable, terse, and telling. The savages swarmed closer and closer, bullets rattled around them; the two who lingered were almost within reach of the assegais, and Lord William said:

"Get up, or I'll punch your head!"

The man obeyed, and rescuer and rescued escaped.

WESTERNER CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

A Stubborn Case of This Painful Disease Cured After the Patient Had Suffered for Years by a Few Bottles of Sanol.

Slowly but surely it has come to be a recognized fact by both the people of Canada and the Medical profession that SANOL is the one remedy that may be relied on in cases of kidney disease, gravel, stones in the bladder, gall stones, kidney stones and all diseases and ailments due to the presence of uric acid in the system. This remedy has great numbers of cures to its credit and its makes have received many strong testimonials as to its powers. One of these testimonials was recently received from a gentleman who resides in Winnipeg, and who is well-known as a most reputable citizen. This letter reads in part as follows:

"For some years past I had suffered from my kidneys. About 18 months ago I had acute inflamation of those organs, when I was ordered to bed by the medical man attending me. I received considerable relief, but after a few months the trouble started again. It was then that I decided to try SANOL, of which I had both read and heard. After taking two bottles I felt very much better, and my condition rapidly improved. When I had taken the contents of eight bottles, I felt better than I had done for years, for my kidney trouble had entirely left me. It is now about three months since I finished with the medicine and I am enjoying the best of health."

The address of the gentleman who wrote the above will be given to any who may inquire. The makers of SANOL are able to give a large number of addresses of people who will give to inquirers similar testimony as to the benefits they have derived from the use of this remedy.

SANOL is manufactured only by the SANOL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD. 977 Main street, Winnipeg. It may be purchased from The Warne Drug Co., Limited, 351 George st., Peterboro, Ont.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE

The question of compulsory military service is one which has been moot in England in and out of season. Lord Roberts has devoted his energies toward pleading with the people for universal service, that Britain may have a strong and well trained population fitted, if need be, to bear arms in the field, though not belonging to any active militia or reserves. "Bobs" has a great deal of logic on his side, and though it may not seem necessary that with such a navy as Britain has there should be as extensive a scheme for military defence, yet the risk to which the United Kingdom would be exposed were that navy to be crippled, is something that cannot be slightly regarded. The cities and towns of England are swarming today with men out of employment, undersized, wretchedly constituted from a physical standpoint, to whom military training in their youth would have been a great blessing. If the youth of the country served under the flag for a year or two years, beginning as cadets as in Australia and New Zealand, there would be a better physical standard, a better mental equipment on the average, than there is to-day. "The total defence force of Britain, in a military sense, is about 500,000 men. Compared with the German two millions Austria Hungary's million, Italy's half million, Britain has an insignificant supply of trained men who could take the field. The "expeditionary force" of 160,000 men that Britain has available for foreign service would not be of much use against the millions that the Continental countries could put into the field. The navy is and must continue to be Britain's first line of defence, but assuredly it would not be amiss if there were behind it a well trained active population every man of whom had been through some military training, and could readily take his place in the field if occasion need be.

MARKETING FRUIT

A few weeks ago Mr. Hicks of the Kootenay District, British Columbia, gave an interview to the Calgary Herald complaining that under the present American competition in fruit, the British Columbia fruit growers were not able to make any profit on fruit shipped to the prairie. He said that unless there were some change in the duty to give the Canadian grower more protection British Columbia fruit-growing already on its last legs, would be utterly destroyed. There had to be a larger Canadian market at better prices.

The Ontario fruit commissioner in the West, Alexander Earle, reports to the Government that the Ontario fruit growers are suffering severely from British Columbia competition on the prairie market. He says that the Ontario fruit shipments are falling off instead of increasing with the growth of the population on the prairie. The chief cause of this was the lack of skilful packing and grading by the Ontario growers. The product for which they expected to get as much money was much inferior to the British Columbia fruit.

The apple trade, which is the main trade of the fruit-growing provinces with the prairie, is a valuable one. It was recently reported that a barrel of Ontario apples sold in Manitoba for $5.75 which had netted the grower in Ontario $1.75. If this great disparity between the price paid by the consumer and the price received by the producer could be lessened, the trade would become much more profitable to the Ontario producer, because the lower price paid by the consumer would induce a larger consumption, and thus enable the producer to procure a higher price. In the West, the American competition is undoubtedly very keen, and interferes with both Ontario and British Columbia trade. But it would certainly be most unjust to the prairie people if the duty were raised so that a still high price could be exacted of the consumer and the transportation interests and middlemen reap a larger profit. What is wanted in Canada, and what must come very quickly is a cheapening of the cost of transportation for articles of food. There must be more co-operation by the farmers, such as have put into effect in so many parts of Ontario in the egg circles. The producer and consumer in the large cities and distant markets must be brought into more immediate relation. The remedy for such matters as the high cost of living is not so much the lowering of the duties upon American and foreign products as a sane regulation of our own house.

PITMAN AND WOMAN

The hundredth anniversary of the birth of Isaac Pitman, founder of the Pitman system of shorthand will be celebrated in his native country, England, next year, and probably thoughout a very large part of the world. It is certain that honor will be done this man in all English-speaking countries. He was born at Trowbridge, Wiltshire on Jan. 4, 1813, was educated in the normal college of the British and Foreign School Society of London, was appointed master of the British school at Barton-on-Humber in 1832, established a similar school at Wotton-Under-Edge in 1836, and in 1837 published his work, "Stenographic Shorthand." This he followed in 1840 with another work entitled. "Phonography or Writing of Sound." He soon organised a shorthand school, published the Phonetic Journal, and in 1853 produced his chief work on stenography the "Complete Phonographic Class Book." His system was introduced into the United States, by S. P. Andrews, and A. F. Boyle in 1847. It soon spread to all the English colonies. Ben Pitman, brother of the founder of the system, was for years a famous stenographer in the United States.

Loke everything else, stenography has undergone a great change since Pitman's time. Readers of "David Copperfield" will recall the hero struggle with the system, and it has been claimed that Dickens pictured faithfully in his masterpiece, the common experience of shorthand learners in his days. Proficiency in the employment of Pitman characters was at that period attained only after years of practice. Under the improved methods of teaching in our times, as much headway may be made in months. It was the more modern method that made shorthand the common acquirement it is to-day. It was the simplified form that made it available, not only to thousands of young men but to tens of thousands of young women.

The claim has never been made for Sir Isaac Pitman that he was the original inventor of shorthand. His distinction and the knighthood conferred upon him are due to the fact that he was the first to reduce all of the crude methods in existence through the centuries to a system. Up to his time there were no accurate shorthand reports of parliamentary proceedings or important trials. But Pitman's system demanded students of extraordinary ability and patience. Those who have followed Pitman have brought shorthand within the reach of ordinary students. To Pitman belongs the credit of making this latter achievement possible.

Womankind has had few better friends than this man, for it was through his labors that woman first found her way into the real activities of the business world. It is a remarkable coincidence that the typewriting machine and the simplification of stenography came at about the same time. These two made a place into which woman fitted immediately and gracefully. But their influence has extended leagues farther than this. Tens of thousands of women are now employed in the business world who know nothing of stenography or typewriting, but who nevertheless owe to both of these their introduction to opportunities of making respectable and comfortable livings. It was the woman stenographer and typewriter who paved the way for them. They made woman's presence in the office and counting room tolerable in the first place; she has made herself desirable and indispensable in the second place. Stenographers and typewriters were the pioneer business women, and on the coming Pitman centenary women generally will have good reason for remembering and honoring one who was unconsciously a benefactor of their sex.

SILVER SERVICE FROM CHURCH

The Rev. Canon and Mrs. Marsh Observe Silver Jubilee

Lindsay, Nov. 27— Rev. Canon Marsh, Rector of St. Paul's Church for the last twenty-five years, and his estimable wife, were the recipients of a magnificent silver tea-set, a gift from a very appreciative congregation, as a mark of the high esteem in which both are held, at the conclusion of their silver jubilee in Lindsay.

A quarter of a century ago, Rev. J. H. Marsh was transferred from Orillia to Lindsay, and he has worked faithfully for his parishioners and the church ever since.

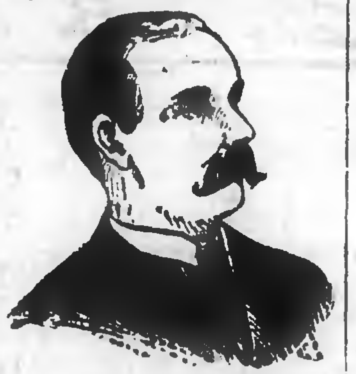
SEN. CORBY, "THE PEOPLE'S HARRY"

Newly Appointed Member of the Upper Chamber at Ottawa Has a Reputation for Genial and Affable Methods In Politics and Private Life—He Has a Record for Philanthropic Work.

"The People's Harry" is the favorite title for Henry Corby of Belleville, who has just been called to the Senate by Premier Borden. There was never a more popular or open-hearted man in Eastern Ontario than Senator Corby. His gifts to his native city have been many and generous. Among them may be mentioned a public park and one of the finest-equipped public library buildings in Canada. There were no stringent stipulations in any of his donations to the municipality—no string attached that so much money must be raised by the citizens before the offer took effect, etc. Of a genial disposition and affable manner, "Harry" Corby, who practically knew everyone in his riding, never stopped for an introduction when he ran across a new-comer. He had a bow and a pleasant word for all. During the thirteen years that he sat in the Commons as representative for West Hastings he always carried the seat hands down, and it was difficult to get a standard-bearer to oppose him. As a campaigner and organizer, he has few equals. He always imbued his followers with the idea of work, work, work, until the last vote was cast on polling day. On the night previous to each election, Mr. Corby would hold rousing meetings in the opera houses at Trenton and Belleville, which were the chief centres of population before the riding was extended north. The candidate would speak at both places the same evening, driving from one point to the other. At each of these final rallies he would wind up his stirring remarks by declaring: "Now, gentlemen, we are going to win to-morrow—that is if you all get out early and labor as you have been doing during the past few weeks. Remember, our opponents are not asleep. Keep your efforts up for just twenty-four hours longer, and we will have a magnificent demonstration right here to-morrow night. I want everybody to come."



SENATOR HARRY CORBY.

Could such an appeal be resisted? It was electrifying on the eve of battle. Mr. Corby resigned his seat in the Commons in 1901, owing to ill-health, and was succeeded by Mr. E. Gus Porter, the able Belleville lawyer. Of late years, the newly-created Senator has spent much of his time traveling, and to-day feels better than he has for many years.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Last Minute Gifts That Are Useful to Have on Hand

No matter how soon one begins to prepare Christmas gifts or how carefully one makes out a list of them to be sent to friends, at the last minute there is sure to be some one that has been overlooked. To provide for such a contingency it is well when making gifts to have on hand a few simple presents to meet this demand.

Mr. J. R. Collins of Tornoto, delivered a very instructive and interesting lecture on "The Distance and Motion of the Stars and Modern Methods of Determining the Same," in the Collegiate Institute laboratory room last evening. Slides were shown with explanations of different instruments and scales, giving very complete instruction on the ways of the modern astronomer. A fairly large number were present and all expressed keen interest in the very instructive lecture. Rev. Dr. Marsh presided as chairman.

THE CONSPIRACY FOR THE EXTINCTION OF FRENCH RACE

Ottawa, Nov. 27—The Review's Ottawa Correspondent writes as follows—

The last hour before dinner last evening was occupied by Mr. Burnham, M.P., of Peterborough West, who, by request of the whip, followed Mr. Turgeon and replied to the Hon. Frank Oliver. Mr. Burnham closely analyzed Mr. Oliver's speech on the alleged Macdonald improprieties, and showed by quoting from the honorable member's own words that the latter was not prepared to make any definite charge, from which the House could be called upon to take action. The most interesting portion of the speaker's remarks however was in reference to what he called "the conspiracy for the extinction of the French race." Often, as the two races had been rivals and much as both races might have to complain of and much as these might have to be settled of a delicate nature in the future, the English-speaking portion of Canada would never consent to the extinguishment of a race, which stood true to Canada in the past and who showed so strong an inclination to be imperial and loyal at the present. The people of Ontario and of Canada, who joined this combination, would yet learn that they were being led into a trap.

He was warmly thanked by the French members, both Conservative and Liberal.

THE LADIES' AID MEETING

Drew Large Gathering to Charlotte Street Lecture Hall

The Ladies' Aid of Charlotte street Methodist church have every reason to feel proud of the success of their Olde Tyme Bysiness meetyng last night in the lecture hall. The entertainment drew a capicity audience, many standing throughout the entire evening. The Society intends repeating the concert.

The largest share of the entertaining was done by the ladies, who displayed all kinds of latent talent and bright, racy humor.

Even some of the participators were surprised at the easy manner in which they conducted themselves before the unaccustomed glare of the "foot-lights."

The staging represented a parlor in Mohawk Crossroads, a peaceful little village during the Victorian age. Two Boston ladies were guests at a meeting of the Ladies' Aid at the home of one of the members, and and the gathering were all apparelled in the quaint old-fashioned garb of the Victorian period. The business before the gathering consisted principally of discussing into how many pieces a pie should be cut, and transacting like "business."

No other performers but ladies could have carried out the amusing farce to such perfection, and the audience were kept convulsed most of the evening. Two of the most humorous characters were the lady from Boston, of abnormal literary tastes and the suffragette with her red flag and "votes for women" slogan. Every member of the cast, however, acted her part splendidly.

The ladies also exercised their keen but harmless wit, at the expense of local proceedings and celebrities. The local hits were all good, and aroused in some instances regular gales of laughter.

Miss Ida Sanderson, at the close of the sketch sang very sweetly, and had to respond to persistent encores. The elocutionary ability of Mrs Christie was also evidenced in two readings, her first number being a recomposed selection, purely original and most appropriate.

The Ladies' Aid desire to heartily thank Miss Rochester, of the Y.W.C.A., for her assistance in training them, without which they could not have scored such a marked success. They also appreciate all donations.

The ladies who took part in the sketch were: Mrs. (Dr.) M. A. Morrison, Mrs. Lightfoot, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. W. A. Howard, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. George Hall, Mrs. Adamson, Mrs. James Lillico, Mrs. T. B. Wright, Mrs. Bookhout, Mrs. M. Lyle, Mrs. Wolstenholm, Mrs. S. Clegg, Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Whitcroft, Mrs. Watt, Mrs. Thistlewaite, Mrs. Cornell, Mrs. R. E. McKee, Mrs. F. Sandy, Mrs. Christie, and last, but not least, Miss Thomas, who capably essayed the part of an Irish domestic.

The entertainment will be repeated owing to the large number who purchased tickets, but who were unable to obtain admission.

The President of the Ladies' Aid is Mrs. Walter Stocker

The proceeds were $140.

The Shallow North Sea.

The North Sea is so shallow that a vessel can sail from London to Hamburg in water not more than 120 feet deep except for one short stretch. If this depth could be decreased by one-half—that is, the bottom of the North Sea raised sixty feet—the islands of the Frisian shore would be linked together in an even coast line, a belt of land ten miles broad would be added to the Danish coast, a multitude of low islands would spring up off the English and Belgian coasts and a great island would rise up in the Dogger bank.

Sullivan promised to quit the use of liquor for good and get to work as soon as possible.

EXCELLENT WORK BY ST. GEORGE'S CHORAL SOCIETY

An Appreciative Audience Heard Concert in the Collegiate

St. George's Choral Society scored heavily in their concert at the Collegiate Auditorium last evening, when the program received most generous applause by a large audience. That the Society has a very promising future was indicated by the clever work in solo, quartette and chorus work, and the hearty manner in which each part was interpreted.

The concert was given, as Mr. R. J. Devey, the conductor, stated, simply to show what progress the Society had made since commencing rehearsals for the "Messiah" which is to be given next year.

To the audience, there was no doubt as to the advancement of the organization. The choruses were well sung—not alone to the music—but also with a true conception of the spirit and meaning. This is where the Society displays strength. It is with this manner of interpretation that an audience can enjoy a program of vocal music.

With the society growing in numbers and developing as it most assuredly will under the guidance of Mr. Devey, Peterborough people may look forward to a decided treat when the Messiah is given. The tenor soloists, Messrs. George Chandler and Harold Lee were heard to splendid advantage and the male quartette of Messrs. Chandler, Allen Harris and Dickson made a pronounced impression. Their first number, "My Lady Sleeps" was most pleasing to the ear and their interpretation of that familiar tale of the schoolmaster who failed to see the point was very clever. Mention might also be made of a laughing chorus by the choir one of the most liberally applauded numbers.

Mr. Devey presided at the organ for the solos and quartettes and Miss Flowers for the choruses. Miss Pearl Ruth contributed a pianoforte selection.

Canon Davidson made a few commendary remarks on the work of the Society.

SILVER CUP IS ON EXHIBITION

Was Presented to 57th Regiment by English Regiment

The cup presented to the local 57th Regiment was taken out of customs this morning and is on view in the window of Clegg's furniture store. It is in the form of a loving cup and it is doubtful if any other in the city can compare with it in form or worth. The inscription is—"Presented by the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of the 1st Battalion, Duke of Cambridge's Own Middlesex Regiment, late 57th Foot, to the 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers, in Commemoration of their Affiliation, 1911."

In upper corners are the crests of both regiments.

A wire frame partly covered with canvas the invention of a New York man, forms a back rest for a boat seat which can be snapped into place in an instant.

MADE TROUBLE FOR THE OFFICER

Disorderly Stranger Had to be Handcuffed

A fracas occurred in the waiting room of the C. P. R. station, which commenced when a stranger, who gave the name of Hobson, resisted Constable Brown, who sought to arrest him. The officer discovered the man lying on the floor of the waiting room, after the 12.10 C.P.R. had pulled out. He requested that he bestir himself, but the young fellow refused, using some obscene language in enforcing his refusal. The man had his coat on with the back of it reversed, and his arms shoved into the sleeves in that position. Following the officer's attempt to arrest him, the man grabbed a chair and struck him on the forehead and on the leg. He was finally handcuffed and taken to the police station, using an extended vocabulary of oaths on the trip up George street.

This morning, in police court, he was fined $8.75 for being intoxicated. The assault charge was not pressed at the solicitation of his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon and Chief of Police Thompson.

Sentence was suspended by Magistrate Dumble, who hoped that the fine might prove a sufficient salutary lesson, and assist him to abstain in future from the use of intoxicants.

BEN HOBSON

Was ordered to leave the city, with a promise of six months in Central Prison should he be arraigned again in Peterborough, was the Magistrate's disposition of Benjamin Hobson, charged with being drunk.

Hobson promised to forsake the city at the earliest possible moment.

MANY VISITORS TO PROTESTANT HOME

Yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock the beautiful and handsomely furnished building of the Protestant Home was thronged by a large assemblage of sympathizers with the institution and its inmates. The guests were received by Mrs. Roger, president, and Miss Lancaster, Superintendent, in the handsome board room which was decorated with pink chrysanthemums. After making a tour of the building those present were escorted to the tea room where Miss Brown presided at the tea table. The table and room looked charming with its profusion of yellow mums and ferns. A very generous donation of jams and pickles was presented by the various guests to the gratification of the directorate and the superintendent.

IMPROVEMENTS AT SHORTLY'S STORE

Mr. Benjamin Shortly, the well-known harness and leather goods dealer, George street, has made many improvements and changes in his store and two handsome new "silent salesmen" have also been installed which add attractiveness to the store fittings and where fine leather goods are effectively shown.

The general business of the store has also been facilitated by the addition of new shelving and wall fittings on the north side of the store in the space behind where the office formerly stood. Here the large and varied assortment of gloves for which this store is noted has been conveniently displayed as well as other lines of a similar nature. An excellent stock of trunks of many varied styles and cases, etc., occupy a central position in the store, as well as a fine range of club bags, shopping bags and other leather goods. The harness, collars and stable sundries occupy prominent places in the store, where customers can conveniently examine the different styles and kinds with better light and service.

The Westerner's Ideal.

The westerner's willingness to give up home, neighbors and old associations for the sake of a "claim" on the prairie is not sordid. His stern preoccupation with "getting ahead" is a part of his inherited passion for personal independence. I have seen a gray hue steal over the face of the settler when speaking of some one who had "lost his farm" and "had to go out by the day." For the wage earner's lot the true born westerner feels a dread quite incomprehensible to cities and to old communities. If he ruthlessly sacrifices comforts and culture, it is that he may win a footing of his own and so call no man master. Once he has cleared off the mortgage, improved his place and gained a soothing sense of financial security, he will provide books, piano, music lessons, travel and college education for his children, even if in the meantime his own capacity to enjoy has been atrophied.—Professor Edward Alsworth Ross in Century.

Women and the Violin.

"A distinguished violinist of this city," writes Philip Hale in the Boston Herald, "was talking recently about women who fiddled and now fiddle. He complained that nearly all of them classed as great erred in this—they tried to play like a man; they wished it said of them that they had a virile tone. He did not except Lady Halle, Maud Powell or Miss Parlow. 'The only great woman violinist I remember was Teresina Tua, and her greatness consisted in the fact that she always played like a woman. She was womanly and fascinating.' Saint-Saens once said apropos of Augusta Holmes that when a woman wrote for the orchestra she was noisier than any man because she wished to show that she was not a poor, weak thing on account of her sex."

TAUGHT M.P.'S TO SPEAK

English Elocutionist Is a Famous Trainer of Budding Orators.

To the man in the street, perhaps, the name of Mr. John Duxbury is not very familiar; but among public men it is widely known, for Mr. Duxbury has probably trained more ministers and members of Parliament in the correct method of speaking than any other teacher in the kingdom, and the announcement that he is shortly leaving Manchester to settle in London has aroused great interest. For some years Mr. Duxbury has conducted a school of elocution in Manchester, and thousands of pupils have passed through his hands.

As a young man Mr. Duxbury was passionately fond of elocution, and studied the art under several teachers, with the result that he was ultimately appointed teacher of elocution at the Lancashire Independent College and at other theological colleges in Manchester, while three years ago he received his appointment at the Manchester University. Many of his students are now in some of the best pulpits in England, while he numbers several of the present members of Parliament amongst his pupils.

Mr. Duxbury now proposes, however, to give up teaching elocution and devote himself to reciting. He has a great reputation as a reciter, and possesses a prodigious memory. At some of his recitals he has delivered scriptural and other pieces lasting for a couple of hours.

When committing a long piece to memory Mr. Duxbury first goes over the work, and then puts down the book and endeavors to go through it from memory. Then he carefully reads the piece over again, and tries a second time to see it in his mind. "I think," he says, "it is the best way to learn a piece—to get the whole thing in one's mind, like a photograph. This is much better than learning it verse by verse, like a Sunday school reciter, who finds the task gets harder as he goes along, and consequenely loses confidence in himself before he gets to the end."

Leigh Hunt's Daughter.

General surprise will probable be felt at the announcement that Leigh Hunt's youngest daughter is still alive at the age of eighty-four. Leigh Hunt himself was born in 1784, and it was exactly 100 years ago that he was fined and imprisoned for describing the regent as a "corpulent Adonis of fifty," so that his daughter represents a remarkable link with the past. The daughter, who is now ill and in reduced circumstances, married the late Charles Smith Cheltnam, who died in April of this year after a remarkably diverse career in which he was successively a wood engraver, art critic to The Illustrated London News, manager of The Morning Chronicle, editor of The Belgravia Magazine and one of the subeditors of The Daily Telegraph. —London Globe.

ARE YOUR HANDS CHAPPED?

Zam-Buk Will Cure Them.

The particular danger of chapped hands and cold cracks (apart altogether from the pain) is that the cold is likely to penetrate and set up inflammation, festering, or blood-poison. Directly the skin is broken by a cut, graze or scratch, or chafed and cracked by the action of the cold winds and water, the one necessary precaution is to apply Zam-Buk freely.

The pure herbal juices from which Zam-Buk is prepared are so perfectly combined and refined that the immediate effect of these Zam-Buk dressings is soothing, antiseptic, and healing. Pain and inflammation are allayed, disease germs expelled from the wound or sore, and the latter is quickly healed.

Zam-Buk is not only a powerful healer and skin purifier; it is strongly antiseptic and germicidal, and so forms the ideal protection for the skin against disease germs.

It quickly heals cold cracks, chaps, chilblains, cold sores, etc.

Mrs. O. M. Jhorn, Neuchatel, Alta., writes:—"I must tell you how pleased I am with Zam-Buk. My husband had an old frostbite on his foot for many years, and had tried almost every known remedy without any effect, but the first application of Zam-Buk seemed to help him so much that he persevered and the sore is now cured. We would not be without Zam-Buk in the house."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, blood-poison, bad leg, eruptions, etc. Its purely herbal composition makes it the ideal balm for babies and young children. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co. Toronto, for price. Try also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

Saved In the Nick of Time

By RUTH W. MALTBY

The early settlers in Kentucky came largely from the same direction. Reaching America from the old world, they settled in Pennsylvania, later emigrated to western Virginia and, having worked out their lands there, moved on down the Ohio river to appropriate the virgin soil of Kentucky.

Among these movers was a family named Martin, the father and mother being elderly persons, their elder children grown. A daughter, Hester, was a girl of eighteen. They settled not far from where Bowling Green is now situated.

The war of 1812 was being fought, and soon after the arrival of the Martins in their new home the battle of New Orleans was fought and won by the Americans, or, rather, the woodsmen of the west, among whom the hunters of Kentucky were conspicuous. The war had been ended by treaty before the battle, though the news of peace had not yet got across the Atlantic, and soon after it was over the troops came marching home.

A company of Kentuckians recruited from the region about where the Martins lived was disbanded, and a young man, Abner Armstrong, who had marched away and returned as a lieutenant, was among the number. At the time of his appearance John Bartlet, a man of forty years of age, had asked Martin for his daughter Hester's hand. There were many mouths to feed in Martin's family, and Bartlet was the only suitor who had established himself in the new country; therefore Martin persuaded Hester to marry him.

But before the wedding had taken place along came the soldiers whose rifles had won the battle of New Orleans. Young Armstrong was a strapping, flaxen haired, blue eyed boy with every appearance of manliness, but withal an engaging smile. Hester looked at him and surrendered.

There is but little reason in youth. Instead of confessing to her father and her betrothed that she had not known what love was and that, having discovered it in the young soldier, she had changed, Hester resolved on the most desperate course to be conceived of. She told Armstrong, who was as deeply smitten with her as she was with him, that she could never face either her father or her betrothed to tell them of the change in her and the only course left for them was to run away. It was not likely that one who had but recently helped to win a battle should show the white feather.

The only means of conveyance in those days in Kentucky was a horse. Armstrong had but one animal, but it served for both. They started on an afternoon, and their flight was discovered about 9 o'clock the same night. Bartlet was notified, and when he learned how he had been treated he said:

"I'll go after 'em and bring 'em back. Then I'll tell 'em they kin git married for all me as soon as they like."

With this he mounted his horse, his rifle slung to his saddle and pistols in his holster, for no one went about unarmed in those wild days, and, assuming that the fugitives would make for the Ohio river, he rode straight northward. About midnight he saw a lurid light on the clouds to the northeastward, and, thinking the fugitives had bivouacked and built a fire, he turned his horse's head in that direction.

Suddenly he reined in to a stand and listened. A distant confused barking fell upon his ear. He shuddered. A picture came before his mind's eye painted by the hand of experience. A Kentuckian, he knew that the barks he heard were those of wolves and that one of the ways of fighting wolves was by fire. He saw the girl he had hoped to make his wife and the man she had eloped with besieged by hungry beasts.

Urging forward his horse, guided by the light, the barks growing more distinct as he approached, he finally burst in upon the very scene he had pictured. Armstrong and Hester occupied the center of a circle of fire they had built to keep off the pack. Armstrong's ammunition had been expended, and whenever a wolf snarled too close he beat it back with the barrel of his rifle or with a burning brand. Hester, like a true daughter of the forest, was bravely arranging the wood they had gathered to keep it burning.

Having ridden as far as his terrified horse would go, Bartlet dismounted and, aiming at a wolf, shot him dead. Then, while the pack were devouring their companion, the rifle was reloaded and another wolf was brought down. Drawing nearer to the besieged couple, Bartlet called upon them to run toward him while he covered their retreat. They started, Hester in advance. The wolves sprang after them, and just as their leader was about to spring upon Armstrong, who was moving with his face to them, Bartlet shot the beast dead. This gave Armstrong time to make good his retreat, and before the wolves had finished eating the carcass already slain the three persons had got away.

The next morning all appeared at the Martin home. Bartlet, without a word of reproach, released Hester from her engagement to him, and her father consented to her marriage with Armstrong as soon as he had a cabin to put her in. But the latter proved a better soldier than pioneer and never got the cabin. In time Hester married Bartlet of her own free will.

A Friend In Need.

"Had a queer experience recently," said the Billville poet. "Robber held me up on the highway. Didn't have a cent in my pockets, only a poem which I was takin' to the editor."

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, handed it back to me and said: 'Friend, here's $2. You need it worse than I do.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

Hard to Swallow.

"If you make any noise," threatened the holdup man, "I'll stuff this handkerchief in your mouth."

The victim regarded it with a ghastly smile.

"Oh, that's such an old gag!" he protested.—Chicago Tribune.

Why Not?

THE ANCIENT TRAVELER.

Outfit He Was Advised to Carry In the Eighteenth Century.

A small "Traveler's Guide," dated 1780, contains a good deal of serious advice as to the luggage which should be carried.

"Take," says the book, "two suits of clothes, one coffee colored and one blue; a chest flannel, a pair of leather breeches, a sleeping suit, three pairs of stockings, two pairs of gloves, two wigs, one hair bag (?), two caps, two hats, two pairs of shoes, one pair of slippers, six 'undershirts,' four 'overshirts,' six neckties, six collars, six handkerchiefs, four pairs of cuffs, three cravats, two pairs of cotton hose and two pairs of socks."

But this is not all, as is shown by the following items: "Take a Bible, a book of sermons, a 'Traveler's Guide,' two albums, a diary, a quire of white paper, quills and ink, an almanac, a mirror, a silver watch, a silver snuffbox, a silver spoon, a pair of silver shoe buckles, a silver tie pin, three silver studs, a gold seal ring, a knife and fork with silver handles, a sewing case, an opera glass, a compass, a wax light and a tinder box, a toothbrush, a silver toothpick, a sword, a silver mounted cane, a padlock with which to fasten your door at night inside, a clothes brush, a box of medicine."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Marking a Book.

There's a dear old chap in this town—too gentle and too modest to put his name or profession into print—who administered a rebuke worth remembering to a young friend. The young man showed him a book in which certain passages were marked with pencil. The older man asked if he might borrow the book.

"I—I can't lend it," said the other. "I borrowed it myself."

"Ah! And who marked these passages?"

"I did."

"Oh, my boy! You shouldn't make pencilled comments in a borrowed book."

"I—I—I know it—I"—

"The owner might erase them, you know. Always use ink and so pass your wisdom along!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Properly Boiled Meat.

To boil meat so as to retain the juices and soluble salts and yet cook it sufficiently it should be plunged into boiling water and boiled rapidly for about ten minutes. After this fast cooking the kettle must be pushed over to the back of the fire, where its contents will simmer gently. This tends to coagulate the outer rind of the meat so that the juices cannot escape. If meat is treated in this manner the inside will be found juicy and tender, but if the meat is allowed to boil it will be found hard and chippy, the goodness having all boiled out of it.

Dickens' Gay Clothes.

We were walking down Wellington street, Strand, and just passing the office of Household Words, when a hansom cab stopped, and out stepped a gayly-dressed gentleman. His bright green waistcoat, vivid scarlet tie and pale lavender trousers would have been noticed by any one, but the size of the nosegay in his buttonhole riveted my attention, for it was a regular flower garden. My father stopped and introduced me, and I, who had only seen engravings of the Maclise portrait and a very handsome head in my mother's photograph album, was astonished to find myself shaking hands with the great novelist, Charles Dickens.—From Miss Friswell's "Recollections."

Origin of Tapestry.

It is said that the art of weaving tapestry was borrowed from the Saracens, although it is claimed that the invention of tapestry hangings belongs to the Netherlands. They were made in France under Henry IV. by artists imported from Flanders. The art was brought into England by Sheldon, the first establishment for its manufacture being at Mortlake, 1608. Under Louis XIV. the art was greatly improved in France. Very early instances of tapestry making are mentioned by the ancients; hence the Saracens could only have received the art in what may be called modern times.

Love came to me with wea-ry eyes, and begged me let him stay with-in my

SPORTING NEWS

INCREASE OF TWO FOR THIS YEAR

Sixteen Deaths From Injuries in Football Game

New York, Nov. 27.—Football continues to exact its toll of death, despite the changes in the rules calculated to minimize chances for serious injury. The death list for this year is larger by two than that of last year. Sixteen players died during 1912 as a result of injuries sustained in the game. Fourteen died last year.

Of these, one was a college player, four High school youths, and the remainder were members of various professional and amateur teams throughout the country.

Forty one participants in the grand old sport were seriously injured, thirty of this number being college players.

SPORTING GOSSIP

The hockey players will commence training on Friday night. The regular nights thereafter will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday and the hour from 7 to 8.

Two dozen or more players were around last night at the Lyceum and displayed considerable enthusiasm. The prospects for a big season appear bright.

PROVED HER WORDS.

The Ladies Knew Each Other Even Before Their Introduction.

There was a great crowd at the picture exhibition, and empty seats were at a premium, when two pretty women spied and made for a place at the selfsame moment. They reached the prize together, both pretending ignorance of the other, and, flopping themselves down, succeeded in squeezing breathlessly and miserably in. There they sat then, each scowling and staring at the rudeness of her respective neighbor, each wriggling and squirming as much as possible in order to crowd that neighbor still further. Finally the situation became acute, and one of the women spoke, with fine sarcasm, "I beg your pardon, but do you need the whole seat?"

"I beg yours," the answer came, "but I never talk to strangers."

Just then a third pretty woman passed, stopped and addressed the two at once: "Why, to think of finding you two here together! And I have always wanted to introduce you, because I know you will just love each other. Mabel, this is Maud, and Maud, this is my dear old Mabel. You are bound to love each other because you are so exactly alike in disposition."—New York Press.

Resting a Model.

Adolphe Menzel, the German painter, at one time was engaged on a work of mural decoration and kept a man posed in an exceedingly fatiguing position on a scaffold for two hours. The great painter worked away, heedless of his model's discomfort. Finally the victim called down, "Herr Professor, how about the recess?"

"Certainly, my dear sir. Come down right away and you shall have your recess."

As the model was descending from the scaffolding his limbs assumed a position which was one for which the artist had long been looking.

"Stop!" Menzel thundered. "Hold! Ah, fine! Keep that while I make a little sketch of it!"

The artist drew vigorously for half an hour, at the end of which he called out imperatively: "There, that will do for now. Get up on the scaffold again. We have had our recess."

"There," sighed the widow, pointing to a cottage, "is where my sweet romance ended."

"Ah, dear, and did your husband die there?"

"Dear me, no! That's where we were married."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

REPORT DENIED BY G.T.R. OFFICIALS

A report, originating from Ottawa to the effect that the Delaware & Hudson Railway has refused to ship any more coal into Canada as they are unable to obtain return of their cars from the Canadian Railroads, is officially denied by the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. D. C. Crombie, Assistant to the Vice-President in charge of Transportation, states that far from this being the case the Grand Trunk has supplied the D. & H. with empty cars which is needed for its own purposes, in order to assist the latter company in getting anthracite coal into the Dominion. During the period between November 1 and November 17, 547 D. & H. cars were delivered to them by the G. T. R., as well as 452 cars the property of the Grand Trunk and other roads, making a total of 999 cars. During the same period, only 379 cars were received by the G. T. R. from the Delaware and Hudson, so that there is now a deficit of 620 cars, to be returned by the D. & H. to the Grand Trunk loaded with coal.

ELECTRIC HEADLIGHTS ON G.T.R. ENGINES

The Grand Trunk Railway has just placed 10 new engines on the Middle Division in Ontario, to take care of the manifest freight traffic and within a short time a total of 40 locomotives will be added to the power equipment for the same purpose. This first consignment has been assigned to the Sarnia terminal. The locomotives were built by the Kingston works and are modern in every detail. The latest improvements include the Walchaert valve motion, Smith's super-heater, and steam grate shakers. For the first time, it is understood, the company is equipping its engines with electric head-lights and a complete electric lighting system.

A ROMANTIC IMPOSTURE.

How Mary Wilcox Put Up a Trick on England's Wisest.

One April evening in the early years of the last century a Gloucestershire agricultural laborer was seated in his cottage, having supper with his family, when a timid knock sounded on the front door.

The good wife went and opened it, returning a moment later with a young woman of prepossessing appearance who made signs that she wanted rest and refreshment. Meat and bread, together with a mug of cider, were accordingly placed before her, and she was asked to sit down.

This hospitable invitation, however, she promptly declined, but all the while bowing and smiling, as if fearful of giving offence, and talking very rapidly in what her puzzled hosts took to be a foreign language.

Eventually, after much persuasion, she was induced to partake of a little plain boiled rice and a draught of water, after which, refusing an offer to share the bed of her hostess' grown-up daughter, she shrouded herself in an Oriental shawl she was wearing, and lay down on the floor to sleep.

The following day, as nobody could make head nor tail of the new arrival, she was taken before the nearest county magistrate, a Mr. Samuel Worrall, of Knole Hall.

But to this gentleman and his family the mysterious young woman proved an even greater puzzle than she had done to the humble laboring folk, upon whom she had first dropped from the sky, as it were.

They kept her with them for several months, and many learned professors of languages were called in to try and converse with her, but none succeeded. By dint of signs, however, and by drawing rough sketches, at which she was very clever, the girl gave the Worralls to understand that she came from a far Eastern country, that she was a great personage in her own land, and that she had been kidnapped as a move in some dynastic plot or other, and afterwards brought to England and set ashore in a destitute condition.

Incredible as this story may sound to our ears, it nevertheless met with pretty general belief, so that in a little while all England was agog with the news. The highest in the land came to Knole Hall to interview the Princess Caraboo, as she styled herself, and the young woman, attired in robes of gold brocade fashioned by herself from materials the Worralls provided her with, made a sufficiently imposing and interesting figure.

And now the excitement was intensified by the news that the mystery of the princess' speech had at length been solved. A tramping Portuguese sailor called at Knole Hall, and pretended to interpret her language, which he averred to be a dialect akin to Chinese, used in certain parts of Sumatra and other islands of the Far East.

The girl was, he said, undoubtedly of royal descent, the daughter of an Achinese Rajah. This made the East Indian Company prick up their ears, for the Dutch were then pressing them sorely in that part of the world, and it would obviously be a feather in their cap if they could restore to the Achinese—the native inhabitants of Sumatra—a kidnapped princess of the royal blood.

A ship was accordingly placed at her disposal to convey her back to her "native land" and great preparations were made for the voyage.

Meanwhile the girl held a species of miniature Court at Knole Hall, dispensing "royal" favors and signing innumerable autograph in what purported to be Arabic characters.

It was owing to this that she was undone. A certain Mrs. Neale, a Bristol lady, paid her a visit, and at once recognized her as a former serving-maid of hers, a Mary Wilcox, hailing from no further away than the little Devonshire village of Witheridge.

The story went that the recognition was mutual, and the "princess," being pressed, confessed to the fraud in the broadest of West Country tones. She had, she said, conceived it and carried it out entirely on her own initiative. But there were many who doubted this.

Certainly the tramping sailor who pretended to interpret the gibberish that she had invented, or which had been invented for her, must have been an accomplice, unless we assume that he perpetrated a minor independent fraud on his own account. It seems inconceivable, too, that an ignorant peasant girl could have shown so intimate an acquaintance with Oriental manners and customs, unless she had been carefully coached by somebody.

Mary Wilcox, it may be added, was never punished for her share in the affair, but was packed off to America soon afterwards by her friends the Worralls.

"Labby's" Bearded Friend.

Labouchere had a friend who spent a good deal of time and money in order to shirk the bestowal of tips. He had a conscientious objection against tipping barbers and could not shave himself. He told me once that, according to careful conclusion, he had been forced to travel considerably over a hundred miles in one year to find new barbers' shops where his unbending attitude on the tip question was unknown, and he spent rather more than $25 on bus and cab fares in doing so. Finally, having exhausted the whole of inner London and most of the suburbs, he [illegible] struggle and grow a beard.—London Chronicle.

Kiss Salutations.

Kissing as a form of salutation among Englishmen was abandoned in the eighteenth century. The nose kiss still exists in races so far apart as the Eskimos of the Arctic regions and the Maoris of New Zealand.

PIKEMEN OF OLD.

Their Ponderous Armor and Their Sixteen Feet Weapons.

The pikeman was covered with defensive armor, an iron headpiece, iron "back and breast" and "tasses," a kind of iron apron protecting him from waist to knee. He carried a pike sixteen feet long, with an ashen shaft, an iron head and a blunt iron spike at the butt end, whereby to fix it in the ground, and, besides the pike, a rapier.

The pike, from its great length, was a weapon which required deft handling in order to be of effective use and, as may be imagined, was excessively showy on parade. The modern lance exercise is a pretty sight enough, but the old pike exercise, perfectly executed by a large body of men, must have been superb. We are not surprised, therefore, to find that the postures or instructions for this exercise are extravagantly minute.

To give one example, at the close of the instruction, on the word "Order your pikes," we find after a mass of complicated details the following conclusion: "You place the butt end of your pike by the outside of your right foot, your right hand holding it even with your eye and your thumb right up; then, your left arm being set akimbo by your side, you shall stand with a full body in a comely posture."—Westminster Gazette.

FIRST AID IN THE HOME.

The Way to Care For Wounds Until the Doctor Arrives.

There should always be some one in the home who understands the principle of "first aid in injury"—some one who can clean a wound, stop bleeding and apply a bandage.

Even the simplest wounds—where any blood flows—should be given prompt and scientific attention. This does not mean that every home should have a trained surgeon. The following ten emergency hints should be memorized:

Stop the bleeding if severe.

Do not touch an open wound with the fingers.

Note the nature of the injuries and put the injured person in a comfortable place and position.

Summon a surgeon.

Do not disturb blood clots.

Never probe for a bullet.

Pick shreds of clothing and splinters or dirt from a wound.

Then bring the edges of the wound together, but without touching them.

Pack the wound with gauze or absorbent cotton and apply bandage.

Bind on splints if bones are broken.

With a little study, a half hour a day for a week, and some practice, any one will be able to carry out the foregoing hints in a hygienic manner.—Kansas City Times.

I never saw quite so much astonishment as he displayed when told that the charge against him was insanity. "What!" he said; "me crazy! Why, I know more than the rest of you." ORGAN OPENING AND RECITAL

Despite the inclement weather of last evening and many counter attractions an audience of very considerable numbers gathered in Murray street Baptist church, drawn thither by the attraction of the formal opening of the magnificent organ, now fully installed, and the anticipation of hearing so capable and thoroughly perfect an artist as Mr. Richard Tattersall, of Toronto, who had been invited and had consented to come and play for the evening. Music lovers anticipated a treat and were not disappointed. Mr. Tattersall had come to Canada with an enviable reputation as that of one of the foremost masters of the organ in England, and displayed a technique at once varied and satisfying. It was a gratification to the officials of the church to have so eminent and well qualified a performer display the capabilities of the fine instrument. Before the opening number, Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the church, briefly introduced Mr. Tattersall, and spoke of his eminent position in the profession.

The instrumental numbers on the program assigned to Mr. Tattersall were six, selected to display the resources of the organ and to give appreciation to several of the finest works of the great composers. No extended criticism is in place, if indeed such were attempted. Following each number were explanatory notes in print, which gave a summary of the spirit and theme of the composition. The numbers were as follows:—

Imperial March Edward Elgar—This March was composed for the jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897 and was also performed during the recent Coronation Ceremonies in Westminster Abbey.

Duologue (Bernard Johnson).—A delightful specimen of the works of the organist of Albert Hall, Nottingham, England, with the sub title, "The Smile."

Prelude and Fugue in D. Major (J. S. Bach).—This brilliant and effective show-piece represents the highest capabilities of organ music, and in its way is undoubtedly one of the most successful pieces of its kind ever written.

Priere et Berceuse (Guilmant).—In this delightful little piece by Guilmant the theme is preceded by short sentences or phrases, including a simple, childlike prayer, immediately reposeful character.

Elves (Joseph Bonnett).—This fanciful piece, of which the title is sufficiently descriptive, displays many charming and piquant effects obtainable from the modern organ.

(a) Scherzo (b) Pastorale, (c) Finale (C. M. Widor) from the Second Symphony—The eight grand organ Symphonies by Widor—written with an absolute knowledge of the capabilities and limitations of the instrument.

At the close of each number the audience gave expression of approval and gratification, most thoroughly well deserved.

Most pleasing contributions were added to the program in the vocal solos of Miss Clara Kidd and Mr. Asa Huycke. It is a very creditable thing that from the excellent choir of the church, soloists of more than local celebrity could be called to assist on so important an occasion, and both singers well repaid the interest and confidence of their many friends. Both are favorites whenever heard, and strengthen any program which secures their assistance.

Miss Kidd sang "I Will Extol Thee," by Costa, a difficult selection, but which was sung with clear intonation and many charming passages. In response to an encore Miss Kidd gave "Sleep, Lady, Sleep," a sweet little ballad, and on concluding the song was presented with a handsome bouquet, Miss Jessie Mathews being the bearer of the beautiful token.

Mr. Huycke is always sure of an appreciative audience, and his singing of "O Rest in the Lord," from Elijah, and the recitative preceding this familiar and always acceptable number, was exceedingly well given. As an encore he sang, "Mighty as a Rose," by Jean Everett, and only the lateness of the hour restrained further urging that he again sing.

In connection with the opening occasion some general description of the organ may be given, as such has not already appeared in print. The organ proper is at a higher elevation behind the show pipes in a recess prepared for its reception above the baptistry. A number of the show pipes speak, and the face of the opening is entirely filled with seventy, or more, of graded proportions. The finish is a rich, dark copper, subdivided, but effective. The console is placed close to the choir gallery with the bellows and wind pipes in the basement of the church. The whole arrangement is exceedingly good.

The specification is as follows:—

Great Organ—Open Diapason, Dulciana (stopped diapason 8 bass), Melodia (stopped bass), Principal Fifteenth.

Swell Organ—Bourdon, Open Diapason, Salicional, Viol de Orchestre, Gedact, Harmonic Flute, Piccolo, Cornopean, Oboe, Vox Humana.

Choir Organ—Geigen principal, Viol di Gamba, Aeolin, Stopped Diapason, Flauto Traverso, Clarinet.

Pedal Organ—Open Diapason, Bourdon, Lieblich Gedact from No. 6.

Triplet Couplers, Swell to Great Unison to Sub to Super, Choir to Great Unison and to Sub.

Many other combinations are also included, giving the instrument a great range and effect.

The case, or woodwork, is of polished quarter cut oak, and the action tubular pneumatic.

BERNARD DALY IN "DION O'DARE"

One of the prettiest stage pictures ever produced will be seen at the Grand next Saturday, Nov. 30, matinee and evening, when Bernard Daly appears in his popular Irish comedy drama "Dion O'Dare." The scene represents the exterior of Dion's home, with the mountains in the background. It is just twilight and little Gillie, a waif that has been adopted by Dion, begs for one song before bedtime. Dion finally puts her up on a see-saw and sitting there with the moonlight breaking over the hills, sings the little one to sleep. It invariably brings forth round after round of applause.

Mr. Daly will render many popular songs during the action of the play, among which are, "Many Years Ago" "Rose Serenade," See-Saw," "Call of the Wind," "Macushla," and the latest compositions, entitled, "The Rose of Yesterday," and "Love is like a Shoogy-Shu."

MEMBERS SAY WAR CLOUD IN EUROPE CALLS FOR ACTION

A Generous Contribution Should be Made for the Imperial Navy Defence

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—The debate upon the address in the House of Commons yesterday was continued by Mr. Barnard, Conservative member for Victoria, B.C., who expressed his surprise at Sir Wilfrid Laurier's criticism of the promises made by Sir Rodolphe Forget in the Richelieu bye-election. Mr. Barnard said that at the last general election in Victoria Mr. Templeman used a telegram from Hon. Mr. Pugsley, then Minister of Public Works, promising a $2,000,000 breakwater and other huge public improvements. He declared for a prompt and generous contribution to Imperial naval defence, saying that British Columbia hoped the Government would err on the side of generosity.

Mr. MacNutt, Liberal member for Saltcoat, Sask., and Mr. Cruse, Liberal member for Dauphin, Man., discussed the Macdonald bye-election. The latter was challenged by Dr. Schaffner (Souris) when he stated that separate schools had been re-established in Manitoba. As neither member had the statute before him, the dispute was still on when the House adjourned at 6 o'clock. Mr. Cruse insisted that his statement was borne out by an article in The Orange Sentinel.

Mr. Armstrong, Conservative member for North York, made a fighting speech, strongly tinged with Imperial sentiment. He denounced election misconduct by Liberals, and doubted if there had been any wrongful arrests of Liberal workers in Macdonald.

Mr. Armstrong believed that all immigrants entering Canada should be taught to respect and admire the British flag and British institutions. He also advocated such amendments to the Bank Act as would make the president and directors criminally liable where a bank was wrecked through any misconduct.

He said he had no fear that the naval question would, as the Opposition hoped, "wreck the Conservative party." He had no hesitation in declaring himself in favor of such generous contribution by Canada to Imperial defence as would forever secure Britain's supremacy at sea.

Mr. Ball, Conservative member for South Grey, admitted that he had at one time inclined to the idea of a Canadian navy, but in the disturbed condition of Europe, with the ever present danger of the Mother Country becoming involved therein, he believed that a contribution should be made by Canada to the defence of the Empire.

Major Sam Sharpe of North Ontario introduced a bill to require every incorporated company to hold an annual meeting to make an annual statement to stockholders, and to have an annual audit.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane announced that the Dominion Express Co. had been given the same facilities over the Intercolonial as the Grand Trunk.

FAST EXPRESS IS DERAILED

Two Conductors and One Passenger are Killed

Canadian Press Despatch.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—The derailment of the Cincinnati express on the Pennsylvania Railway at Glen Loch, twenty-five miles west of here shortly before midnight, caused the death of at least three and injured fully two score more. The dead are two Pullman conductors of New York, and one passenger believed to be a woman. It is thought the accident was caused by a broken rail.

Americans Voting In West.

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—The subject of American citizens voting in Western Canada is now exciting much attention. The Conservatives claim that during the last Saskatchewan election Americans voted and were urged to do so, regardless of the fact that they were not naturalized. Liberal papers published advertisements asserting that it was not necessary to be a British subject to vote. These charges are now before a Saskatchewan legislative investigating committee.

It is asserted that so many Americans have exercised the franchise in many municipal elections as to hold the balance of power. At Edmonton Tuesday, before the Improvement Association, the fact was brought out that in one rural municipality there were not sufficient persons eligible to fill necessary offices.

May Call for Plebiscite.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Mr. Mondou, Conservative member for Yamaska, who sprang into prominence last session with an amendment to the Manitoba Boundaries Bill, is talking today of proposing another amendment to that part of the address from the throne which forecasts a naval contribution.

He would give no details, but it is intimated that he takes a stand similar to Mr. Monk, that any move of the character should be preceded by a referendum.

Fellow-members from Quebec have strongly counselled Mr. Mondou to save his powder till the bill comes down, and he may do so.

London Police Chief Shot.

London, Nov. 28.—Sir Edward Henry, K.C.B., chief commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police, was shot by a would-be assassin Tuesday night with a revolver and wounded in the neck.

He is believed to be seriously injured. The outrage was committed outside his private residence in Kensington. The assailant was arrested.

Sir Edward Henry is 62 years old, and has been commissioner of police since 1903. He was inspector-general of police in Bengal, India, for some years.

Liberals In Caucus.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Members of the Opposition foregathered in caucus yesterday morning and selected Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer as permanent chairman.

The attitude on the naval question will not be considered formally by the caucus till the full details of the Government bill is forthcoming.

LOUGHEED ON THE NAVY

Leader of Senate Replies to Sir George Ross

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—An important speech on Canada's present and future position in the British Empire was delivered in the Senate yesterday by Senator Lougheed, Minister without portfolio, and Government leader in the Upper House. Senator Dandurand replied, forcibly touching on the naval question.

Senator William B. Ross of Middleton, N.S., was introduced and took his seat in the Senate.

Speaking of the navy, Hon. Mr. Lougheed said the Premier's visit to Britain had been commented upon in a friendly way. He was not open to criticism for not having made in England an announcement of his naval policy. The correct constitutional course required him to formulate that program in Canada. Sir George Ross seemed to expect that Premier Borden should have stepped into the Admiralty office with a check for the 10, 20, 30 or 40 millions, asked them to cash it and go buy a few Dreadnoughts with the proceeds. That would not have been a feasible or proper course. The proper one was that which was followed.

In the opinion of the speaker a point had been reached when Empire consolidation must take a prominent place in the consideration of the British people.

Canada was as much concerned as was Great Britain in preserving the integrity of the Empire. In his opinion this could only be done by a consolidation which would give one fleet, one army, one exchequer administered by one Imperial Parliament. Australia, New Zealand and the Straits Settlements had already been giving naval aid and to-day the eyes of the world are on Canada. The time was not distant when Canada will be the seat of Empire. The present generation will live to see the trade and wealth of Canada greater than those of the Mother Country and from Canada will radiate influence equal to that of the Mother Country. These considerations should be borne in mind when dealing with the naval bill, which would speedily be brought before Parliament.

Senator Dandurand said he did not know what mandate the Conservatives felt they had received from the people in the last election on the naval question. It could be better told when the bill came down.

It was understood that the Government proposed an emergency grant to satisfy one wing of followers and later a permanent policy voted on to satisfy the other wing.

If Britain needed emergency financial aid towards naval construction, everyone in Canada would be glad and anxious to extend that aid. It might be that the situation had changed since last June. The country would be glad to learn the contents of the naval bill and the reasons on which it should be built.

Senator Roche of Halifax adjourned the debate.

NO MARKS OF FOUL PLAY

Body Exhumed and Identified as That of Missing Man

Kingston, Nov. 28.—When the body of a man buried at Flower Station, on Kingston & Pembroke Railway, a short time ago, was exhumed it was identified by brothers as that of Harry Powers, a former storekeeper at Flower Station, who had for some time been living at Caldwell, Ont. He had been missing since May.

Powers' disappearance from his home was a mystery. It appears he left his home in Caldwell to go to a mill six miles away, but never returned. Afterwards he went to Flower Station and searched for work, but failing wandered away into the woods, where his body was found later.

There were no marks of foul play on the body. It is supposed deceased, who was about sixty years of age, dropped dead.

MAIN LINE VIA LONDON

C. N. R. Transcontinental Passes Through Western Ontario

Toronto, Nov. 28.—The Canadian Northern Railway Co. has at last brought to light the final plans for the completion of the Ontario portion of the C.N.R. transcontinental system. Up to the present time the plans of this railway regarding the Western Ontario outlet, the main transcontinental line, have been kept secret, but they have now reached the stage which makes their announcement feasible.

These plans include the running of the Western Ontario line of the transcontinental southwest from Toronto to Hamilton and from that city to London. From London the line goes through the western portion of the province to Detroit, at which place connection will be made with the big American roads of the west.

January, 1914, by which time it is predicted, the C.N.R. transcontinental will be built right through from Vancouver to Montreal, is the date for the completion of this railway's Western Ontario line to Detroit. This is the date on which the lease expires and the C.N.R. could obtain possession of the London and Port Stanley Railway, for the acquirement of which the C.N.R. are now concluding arrangements. It is the intention of the C.N.R. to have their line through to Detroit ready for operation at the same time as they take over the L. & P. S. R.

The final arrangements for the acquiring of the L. & P. S. R. are to be made to-day, the matter only needing the ratifications of the citizens. There has been a proposition put forth by the Hydro-Electric Commission to electrify the L. & P. S. R., but this would mean that the C.N.R. would run their main line to Detroit through St. Thomas instead of London.

With London on the Western Ontario through line it is the intention of the Canadian Northern to make the City of London a second Toronto. With the deepening of the harbor at Port Stanley, the C.N.R. will make it one of the calling ports of the eighteen great lake steamers controlled by the Mackenzie and Mann interests and thus give London and Western Ontario a through water connection for freight with the west and Montreal.

In the development of the City of London itself the C.N.R. agrees to put up a large new hotel, to cost at least $250,000, in addition to providing modern station facilities. Although this latter has not been definitely decided upon as yet, the C.N.R. also state that in addition to the above it is altogether probable that London will be selected as the location of the Western Ontario divisional shops.

Practically the only objection raised by the people of London was that it might interfere with the service of the Pere Marquette Railway, the present company operating the L. & P. S. R. This objection has been met by the assurance of the C.N.R. that they will, on acquiring this line at the expiration of the lease at the end of 1913, grant the Pere Marquette running rights, and further state that if an agreement between the two railways cannot be reached, they are willing to let the matter of terms be decided by the Railway Board.

ISLANDS ARE STORM SWEPT

An Estimate of Loss of Life is Impossible

Canadian Press Despatch.

Manila, Nov. 28. — Loss of life which it is at present impossible to estimate, resulted to-day from a severe typhon which swept across the Islands of Samar, Leyte and North Panay. Houses were blown to pieces and the property loss is estimated at several million pesos.

Halifax For C.P.R. Traffic.

Montreal, Nov. 28.—The C.P.R. is evidently making for Halifax, and the opinion gains ground daily that the vast terminal project unfolded a few weeks ago by the Minister of Railways and Canals had not been perfected without the knowledge of the Canadian Pacific, whose intentions to make Halifax the ocean port for their passenger business are most apparent.

It is now known that the C.P.R. will build a new line across Maine from Megantic to a point near Centreville, in New Brunswick, and from thence to Chipman and Moncton. A look at the map will show this to be as straight as the crow flies, and will be by all odds the shortest railway line from Montreal to Moncton. From Moncton it is understood that the C.P.R. have likewise plans for reaching the port of Halifax by a line having the lowest possible grades, the intention of the great company being to secure a fifteen-hour service between Montreal and Halifax, this line to be especially used for fast freight, passengers and mails.

Jail Faces Defendants.

Indianapolis, Nov. 28.—On the ground that their present bonds, aggregating $105,000, were indemnified and therefore invalid, 14 of the 45 defendants in the "dynamite conspiracy" trial were instructed by the court yesterday that within a reasonable time they must procure new bonds or remain in jail during the intervals between sessions of the trial.

The court held, as it was on the eve of a holiday, he would not enforce his ruling last night, in which event, attorneys for the defence said, the defendants must inevitably spent to-day in jail, for new bonds could not be had on such short notice.

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC SHOWS SIGNS OF DIMINISHING

Better Conditions Now Exist in the Turkish Capital

Great Britain and Germany Are Working for Peace

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Nov. 28.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Telegraph says hospital conditions have been improved and cholera patients have been isolated where they can obtain some attention. The cholera epidemic shows pronounced signs of diminishing, due partly to the cold weather, but is far from over, and daily claims one hundred victims. Although the exact figures are not known, it is estimated that seventeen thousand victims have succumbed to the epidemic. Only eight per cent of those attacked survived. The death list from enteric fever and dysentry is also heavy.

London, Nov. 28.—The tension of the Balkan crisis is sensibly relieved by the news that the peace plenipotentiaries are continuing their negotiations, and that Great Britain and Germany are working actively to secure a peaceful settlement between Austria and Servia.

According to one Constantinople report, the difficulties in the way of arranging a formal armistice are so great that the negotiations are taking the form of seeking a basis for peace.

The danger of the reopening of hostilities, however, is still serious. Apparently only an informal armistice of 48 hours has been agreed upon, and it is reported that the Bulgarian forces are already moving closer to the Tchatalja lines and are entrenching themselves in readiness to renew the attack.

The Turks have an army of more than 100,000, and soon will have 130,000, for the most part fresh picked troops, behind the lines, and it is certain, according to all the correspondents, that they will give a good account of themselves if the fighting is resumed.

Under these circumstances, with Adrianople and Scutari still holding out, Turkey is little likely to show a very yielding attitude in the peace negotiations.

The report that the Servians have reached Durazza appears to be premature. A wireless despatch of yesterday's date brings the interesting news that Albanian independence has been proclaimed there; that the Turkish governor is preparing to depart and that the town is accepting without opposition, the new regime.

What attitude the Servian army and Government will assume towards this development should afford some idea of whether, as reported, Servia is willing to accept the suggestion of an autonomous Albania.

The greatest weight is attached in the diplomatic world to the seemingly well authenticated reports that Germany and Great Britain are now acting in cordial co-operation on the basis of postponing all side issues until after the war settlement. A reassuring statement also comes from St. Petersburg that Russia and Austria do not desire to fight over a port in the Adriatic.

Thus what appears to be an imminent danger of Europe being divided into two hostile camps seems to be dissipated for the time being at least.

A Constantinople despatch to the Evening Telegraph Co., says that the council of Ministers has telegraphed new instructions to the Turkish peace delegates, and that a more optimistic feeling as a result of the negotiations prevails to-day.

A despatch from Sofia says that the president of the Sobranje, in an interview, asserted that the Bulgarian peace delegates have informed the Turkish delegates that if Turkey failed to accept the Bulgarian conditions within 48 hours hostilities would be resumed immediately.

Adrianople on Fire.

Sofia, Nov. 28.—A large part of Adrianople has been set afire through the dropping of pyroxylin bombs from aeroplanes, according to a despatch from Mustafa Pasha.

Unofficial reports say that partial mobilization of the Roumanian army has been ordered.

The Bulgarian recruits of the 1914 class have been summoned to join the colors by Dec. 3.

Mobilized In Error.

Nancy, France, Nov. 28.—A flutter of excitement was caused along the Franco-German frontier Tuesday evening by the receipt of an order to mobilize by reservists in the seven townships comprised in the district of Arracourt.

Throughout the night the men hurried through the streets on their way to the garrison towns of Nancy and Luneville, only to find on their arrival at headquarters that an error in the transmission of a despatch addressed to the brigadier-general.

Sacrificed Her Life For Baby.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Mrs. D. Shaw, aged 23, died in the Western Hospital yesterday morning as a result of burns she received in attempting to protect her baby from fire caused by an overturned lamp on the night of Nov. 19.

While playing near the table at their home, 381 St. Clarens avenue, the child pulled the cloth off, thus upsetting the lamp. Mrs. Shaw rushed to the aid of her child, but her own clothes caught fire and she was fatally burned.

Percy Kemp Remanded.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Percy Kemp, accused of assaulting Mrs. Sheik at her home on Rainsford road two weeks ago, was remanded in the police court yesterday for another week. The crown will not be ready to prosecute until it is seen whether the woman will recover or not. Mrs. Sheik is still in the hospital.

Fire at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N.J., Nov. 28.—Fire on the Board Walk always creates much excitement in Atlantic City, and yesterday's outbreak drew thousands of persons to the scene. The fire was in the section of the city known as the "Bowery." A strong west wind carried sparks along for two blocks. Loss $40,000.

Thunder Startles Kingston.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—The second big snow and sleet storm of the season visited Kingston during Tuesday night.

At 1.30 o'clock Wednesday morning, in the midst of the storm, the citizens were startled by several loud claps of thunder and vivid flashes of lightning.

AID DOES NOT ALTER PLANS

British Naval Plans Not Changed Through Colonial Action

London, Nov. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Joe Martin in the Commons last night asked Premier Asquith if he had seen the statement in the Duke of Connaught's speech from the throne to the effect that certain naval disclosures were made to the Canadian Ministers on their recent visit to London, which had made it imperative that the naval forces of the Empire should be strengthened. If so, was the Canadian Government warranted in coming to that conclusion?

Coupled with this question was another from Hogge, Liberal member for East Edinburgh, who wanted to know why such an announcement as that of the Duke of Connaught had been made if, as was represented, the relations of Britain with foreign countries still remained of the friendliest character.

Premier Asquith's reply was purely non-committal. He said a memorandum had been prepared at the express wish of the Canadian Government, which defined with fullness and precision the position adopted by the Imperial Parliament. This would be laid before the House without delay, but must go first before the Canadian Government.

The First Lord of the Admiralty asked what man-of-war for defence of the Empire had been built during the last four years by New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, Canada and the Malay States, and if these ships would be in addition to those voted by Parliament, and if the shipbuilding program was deemed sufficient by the Admiralty, Churchill said New Zealand had one battle cruiser nearing completion for the royal navy, Australia had one battle cruiser and two second-class protected cruisers nearing completion, one second-class protected cruiser building, three destroyers in commission, and two submarines building, all for the royal Australian navy. South Africa and Canada had none, but the Niobe and Rainbow have been purchased by Canada. The Malay States had one armored ship for the royal navy, recently offered, and one accepted. None of these vessels affect the forecast of new construction already announced.

Arthur Lee enquired whether the Malay ship was to be an addition to the program announced in July?

Churchill: The Malay ship is additional. (Prolonged cheers.)

SHIPS COULD BE RECALLED

Rumor Says Canada Will Give $35,000,000 For Dreadnoughts.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—It was rumored here yesterday that the announcement to be made by Premier Borden on his naval program will be that Canada is to contribute $35,000,000 at once, the money to be given to the British Government for the purpose of building dreadnoughts in England. The battleships are to be attached to the British navy, but are subject to recall by the Dominion Government, to be used as a nucleus if Canada decided to build and control a navy of its own.

Mallory stared at her in amazement. He was beginning to learn what ignorant heathen women are concerning so many of the gods and demi-gods of mankind. Then, with a tenderness he might not always show, he threw the paper down and took her in his arms: "You poor child Mattie is a man—a pitcher—and you're the only woman I ever loved—and you are liable to be my wife any minute."

The explanation was sufficient, and she crawled into the shelter of his arm with little noises that served for apology, forgiveness and reconciliation. Then he made the mistake of mentioning the sickening topic of deferred hope:

"A minister's sure to get on at the next stop—or the next."

Marjorie's nerves were frayed by too much enduring, and it took only a word to set them jangling: "If you say minister to me again, I'll scream." Then she tried to control herself with a polite: "Where is the next stop?"

"Ogden."

"Where's that? On the map?"

"Well, it's in Utah."

"Utah!" she groaned. "They marry by wholesale there, and we can't even get a sample."

CHAPTER XXV.

The Train Wrecker.

The train-butcher, entering the Observation Room, found only a loving couple. He took in at a glance their desire for solitude. A large part of his business was the forcing of wares on people who did not want them.

His voice and his method suggested the mosquito. Seeing Mallory and Marjorie mutually absorbed in reading each other's eyes, and evidently in need of nothing on earth less than something else to read, the train-butcher decided that his best plan of attack was to make himself a nuisance. It is a plan successfully adopted by organ-grinders, street pianists and other blackmailers under the guise of art, who have nothing so welcome to sell as their absence.

Mallory and Marjorie heard the train-boy's hum, but they tried to ignore it.

"Papers, gents and ladies? Yes? No? Paris fashions, lady?"

He shoved a large periodical between their very noses, but Marjorie threw it on the floor, with a bitter glance at her own borrowed plumage:

"Don't show me any Paris fashions!" Then she gave the boy his congé by resuming her chat with Mallory: "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

The train-boy went right on auctioning his papers and magazines, and poking them into the laps of his prey. And they went right on talking to one another and pushing his papers and magazines to the floor.

"I think I'd better get off at Ogden, and take the next train back. That's just what I'll do. Nothing, thank you!" this last to the train-boy.

"But you can't leave me like this," Mallory urged excitedly, with a side glance of "No, no!" to the train-boy.

"I can, and I must, and I will," Marjorie insisted. "I'll go pack my things now."

"But, Marjorie, listen to me."

"Will you let me alone!" This to the gadfly, but to Mallory a dejected wail: "I—I just remembered. I haven't anything to pack."

"And you'll have to give back that waist to Mrs. Temple. You can't get off at Ogden without a waist."

"I'll go anyway. I want to get home."

"Marjorie, if you talk that way—I'll throw you off the train!"

She gasped. He explained: "I wasn't talking to you; I was trying to stop this phonograph." Then he rose, and laid violent hands on the annoyer, shoved him to the corridor, seized his bundle of papers from his arm, and hurled them at his head. They fell in a shower about the train-butcher, who could only feel a certain respect for the one man who had ever treated him as he knew he deserved. He bent to pick up his scattered merchandise, and when he had gathered his stock together, put his head in, and sang out a sincere:

"Excuse me."

But Mallory did not hear him, he was excitedly trying to calm the excited girl, who, having eloped with him, was preparing now to elope back without him.

"Darling, you can't desert me now," he pleaded, "and leave me to go on alone?"

"Well, why don't you do something?" she retorted, in equal desperation. "If I were a man, and I had the girl I loved on a train I'd get her married if I had to wreck the—" she caught her breath, paused a second in intense thought, and then, with sudden radiance, cried: "Harry, dear!"

"Yes, love!"

"I have an idea—an inspiration!"

"Yes, pet," rather dubiously from him, but with absolute exultation from her: "Let's wreck the train!"

"I don't follow you, sweetheart."

"Don't you see?" she began excitedly. "When there are train wrecks a lot of people get killed, and things. A minister always turns up to administer the last something or other—well—"

"Well?"

"Well, stupid, don't you see? We wreck a train, a minister comes, we nab him, he marries us, and—there we are! Everything's lovely!"

He gave her one of those looks with which a man usually greets what a woman calls an inspiration. He did not honor her invention with analysis. He simply put forward an objection to it, and, man-like, chose the most hateful of all objections:

"It's a lovely idea, but the wreck would delay us for hours and hours, and I'd miss my transport—"

"Harry Mallory, if you mention that odious transport to me again, I know I'll have hydrophobia. I'm going home."

"But, darling," he pleaded, "you can't desert me now, and leave me to go on alone?" She had her answer glib:

"If you really loved me, you'd—"

"Oh, I know," he cut in. "You've said that before. But I'd be court-martialed. I'd lose my career."

"What's a career to a man who truly loves?"

"It's just as much as it is to anybody else—and more."

She could hardly controvert this gracefully, so she sank back with grim resignation. "Well, I've proposed my plan, and you don't like it. Now, suppose you propose something."

The silence was oppressive. They sat like stoughton bottles. There the conductor found them some time later. He gave them a careless look, selected a chair at the end of the car, and began to sort his tickets, spreading them out on another chair, making notes with the pencil he took from atop his ear, and shoved back from time to time.

Ages seemed to pass, and Mallory had not even a suggestion. By this time Marjorie's temper had evaporated, and when he said: "If we could only stop at some town for half an hour," she said: "Maybe the conductor would hold the train for us."

"I hardly think he would."

"He looks like an awfully nice man. You ask him."

"Oh, what's the use?"

Marjorie was getting tired of depending on this charming young man with the very bad luck. She decided to assume command herself. She took recourse naturally to the original feminine methods: "I'll take care of him," she said, with resolution. "A woman can get a man to do almost anything if she flirts a little with him."

"Marjorie!"

"Now, don't you mind anything I do. Remember, it's all for love of you—even if I have to kiss him."

"Marjorie, I won't permit—"

"You have no right to boss me—yet. You subside." She gave him the merest touch, but he fell backward into a chair, utterly aghast at the shameless siren into which desperation had altered the timid little thing he thought he had chosen to love. He was being rapidly initiated into the complex and versatile and fearfully wonderful thing a woman really is, and he was saying to himself, "What have I married?" forgetting, for the moment, that he had not married her yet, and that therein lay the whole trouble.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Delilah and the Conductor.

Like the best of women and the worst of men, Marjorie was perfectly willing to do evil, that good might come of it. She advanced on the innocent conductor, as the lady from Sorek must have sidled up to Samson, coquetting with one arch hand and snipping the shears with the other.

The stupefied Mallory saw Marjorie in a startling imitation of herself at her sweetest; only now it was brazen mimicry, yet how like! She went forward as the shyest young thing in the world, pursed her lips into an ecstatic simper, and began on the unsuspecting official:

"Isn't this country perfectly—"

"Yes, but I'm getting used to it," the conductor growled, without looking up.

His curt indifference jolted Marjorie a trifle, but she rallied her forces, and came back with: "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

"Five minutes," very bluntly.

RAZORS IN CHINA.

They Cost Little, but They Are Made From Old Iron Horseshoes.

An interesting feature of Chinese industry is the making of knives and razors from old horseshoes. The local blacksmiths in the interior cities and towns supply the great population of the empire with knives, razors and scissors of an inferior quality at a very small cost. This cutlery comes from small shops, where only one or two men are employed, usually the proprietor and his sons, and is chiefly made from old horseshoes imported from England and the continent. A discarded steel shoe offers the best material for blades, but the black smiths prefer the old shoes of soft iron that come from Glasgow and Hamburg.

One British firm at Tientsin brought over a cargo of old horseshoes from Australia recently, but could not dispose of them, as the native smiths said that the iron was too hard. They like the soft iron because it can be more easily worked by their primitive methods.

A razor commonly used by the poorer class, having a cutting edge of less than two inches, costs 20 t'ung-tzus, about 9 cents in American currency. Upon the strop the blade takes a fair cutting edge, but is too soft to hold it. Any number of stroppings are necessary before the act of shaving can be completed. After the blades are forged they are simply case hardened and not subjected to the careful tempering employed in the production of western cutlery.—Youth's Companion.

THE WIDOW'S GOAT

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

Deacon Carter of the village of Romeo was a good man, and a good neighbor. He never refused to lend his hoe or his wheelbarrow, and his wife just doted on lending her flatirons or washboard. The deacon would have no more hurt a person's feelings than he would have jumped off the bridge into Thornapple creek, and that he was ever to be threatened with a lawsuit was the last thing to be thought of.

One day the deacon got a message to the effect that his widowed daughter over at Glen Dale was dying, and he borrowed a horse and buggy and drove over. The daughter had no children to mourn her. The father got there in time to receive her last instructions and to close her eyes.

The widow had neither dog nor cat, but in place of either or both had a goat. It had been sent to her when young from a distance, and they had learned to love each other. The goat had made no trouble at all, and the daughter charged her father to take Billy home with him and watch and guard him and treat him with loving kindness.

The goat was brought home and made to understand that it's future lines were to be cast in pleasant places. It was given the run of the yard, and for three days its attitude elicited sympathy and commendation. It really shed tears over the mistress and the home it had lost, and then it braced up and became playful.

The deacon had a tomato patch, and he went out one morning to pick two or three tomatoes to go with his breakfast. As he gathered them there was a concussion, and it was ten minutes later when his wife came out and found him just coming to himself again.

"W-what is it, Jeptha?" she gasped.

"The—the goat!"

"What about him?"

"Came on the run and struck me with his head!"

"But I don't see how he"—

But she did see. The goat came bounding on like a cyclone and bowled her over and over until she struck the row of sunflowers.

Two days passed quietly, but on the evening of the second the goat quietly slipped his collar and slipped out to see the sights of Romeo. While ranging around he encountered six different persons on their way to prayer meeting. He took them in as fast as he came to them. Some went rolling into the ditch and some against the fence, but all underwent the same sensation. They thought a tree had fallen on them.

Even a good man can't escape consequences if he is the owner of a butting goat. Next day six limping people wanted to know what Deacon Carter was going to do about it. Like the square man that he was, he offered them $3 apiece and made settlements.

"If it wasn't that I had promised Hanner on her dying bed," he said to his wife as the last victim limped away.

"I know, I know, deacon," was the reply.

"We'll have to keep him."

"We will."

"Durn his hide!"

"S-s-s-h! There he stands in the door!"

That night the goat was shut up in the barn, but there was a window through which he jumped, taking the sash and glass with him. Mr. Griggs, the grocer, had locked up and was on his way home when some white object flashed before his eyes, and he knew no more for half an hour. The sexton of the Baptist church had spent two hours sweeping and dusting and had started for his fireside with his hands clasped under his coattails. He went down like ripe barley before the sickle. His last impression was that a meteorite had fallen from the night sky and plunked him between the shoulders.

There were half a dozen others that were treated to various surprises and sensations, and this time it cost Deacon Carter $50 to settle.

"We'll have to sell him," he said to his wife, with a sigh.

"And Hanner's ghost will haunt us!"

The goat was chained up, and for two days he was a quiet, reflective animal. He stood most of the time with half closed eyes, as if seeing his past and hoping to see his future.

Then Sunday came, and the people gathered at the church. The goat worked some sort of hocus pocus on that chain and was once more at liberty. The front doors of the church stood wide open, as if inviting all the goats to enter with the sheep, and this goat entered. He entered on the run, and within three minutes he had driven out the congregation.

Could such a thing as that be overlooked and the offender forgiven? You know it could not. With pickets pulled from the fence, with clubs and rocks and umbrellas, they swarmed for the goat, and, though he fought back, they were too many for him. They finally hemmed him in on the bridge, closing in to take his life, when he went over the rail into the creek and was drowned.

"I s'pose Hanner is an angel," observed the deacon's wife as they sat together that evening.

"Yes, I s'pose so."

"And she saw it all?"

"Yes."

"What do you think she thunk?"

"Probably that she had a fool for a father."

Between the toothache and the dentist, a man is forced to choose between two evils.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $300.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

Will You Join the St. Nicholas Club?

Every Lady in Peterborough is Eligible For Membership.

Christmas less than a month away and many children are wondering what Santa Claus is going to bring them. Some have made up their minds as to what they want, and are already wishing hard. Some, no doubt, will wish in vain, for the reason that older persons know, but little ones not aware of. That the number of children who will be disappointed on Christmas may be reduced to a minimum, the Review suggests the organization of a St. Nicholas Club, which every woman and girl in the city may join by sending her name to the Review office on a post card.

What will the cost be? Just whatever you want it to cost you—nothing more. The Review's St. Nicholas Girl will send you the name of a little boy or girl who has a wish. You can go and see the little one, and find out his or her hopes or needs to make Christmas happy, and fulfil them according to your purse and the feeling of your heart.

The greatest joy at Christmas comes from giving.

A False Alarm.

Over the telephone a worried voice addressed the proprietor of a small hardware store in a west Kentucky town.

"Say," the speaker began, "I come in your place today and bought one of them dollar alarm clocks, and you set her for me to go off at 5 o'clock in the mornin'. D'ye remember?"

"Yes," said the hardware man, "I remember."

"Well," went on the other, "I've jest found out that I don't have to git up at 5 o'clock in the mornin'."

"Glad to hear it," said the hardware man, "but what do you want me to do about it?"

"I want you," said the customer, "to tell me how to unalarm this clock."—Saturday Evening Post.

Mme. Scarron.

Mme. Scarron, afterward the famous Mme. de Maintenon, the wife of Louis XIV., was in her girlhood remarkably beautiful. She was dark, with piercing black eyes and wavy hair. In middle life her gravity of countenance and of deportment was considered quite extraordinary in that age of gayety. One of her contemporaries said that she did not smile once a year, and yet she was not gloomy, but only of a sedate habit of mind.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—At the Canadian Pacific Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 23 were 3000 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 300 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 1300 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 300 calves.

Lambs firm, under a good demand and small supplies and sales were made at $6.25 to $6.50, while sheep brought $4 per cwt. "YOU'LL SUFFER ALL YOUR LIFE"

That's what the Doctor told him

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Him"

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., Jan. 25th 1911

"For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and that I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life.

I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but none of them suited my case.

Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using this fruit medicine nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured.

I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible.

I am now seventy-six years old, and in first class health"

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

In all the world, there is no other remedy that has cured so many cases of so-called "incurable" kidney disease, as "Fruit-a-tives".

This famous fruit medicine acts directly on the kidneys—healing and strengthening them—and ridding the system of the waste matter that poisons the blood.

A DETECTIVE STORY.

One They Tell in London on Two American Police Officials.

As an illustration of the good nature of Frank Froest, who used to be chief of Scotland Yard, they tell this story in London:

Many years ago two American detectives chanced to be in London together, awaiting the extradition of criminals who had been arrested in England for offenses committed in the United States. The Hotel Victoria was then American headquarters in London, and one evening the two Hawkshaws, who had had a convivial day, fell asleep side by side on a divan in the big smoking room of the hostelry. An American humorist found a pair of handcuffs in the office of the manager of the hotel and proceeded to shackle the pair together, when for two or three hours they slumbered peacefully while the guests of the hotel, American and English, including the ladies, came to gaze upon the scene.

When the detectives finally awakened about 1 o'clock in the morning it was impossible to find a key to the handcuffs and hence impossible to liberate them. They would not hear of sending to a police station for assistance lest the story of their ridiculous plight get out, but they had confidence that Froest, who was then a plain detective inspector, would not betray them. A messenger to Scotland Yard, near by, learned that Froest had gone home long before, but got his address several miles away in the suburbs. An American newspaper man who knew Froest reached his home by cab after 2 o'clock in the morning. He was awakened from slumber and without protest came all the way to the Victoria and released his fellow craftsmen.—New York Sun.

WESTERNER CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

A Stubborn Case of This Painful Disease Cured After the Patient Had Suffered for Years by a Few Bottles of Sanol.

Slowly but surely it has come to be a recognized fact by both the people of Canada and the Medical profession that SANOL is the one remedy that may be relied on in cases of kidney disease, gravel, stones in the bladder, gall stones, kidney stones and all diseases and ailments due to the presence of uric acid in the system. This remedy has great numbers of cures to its credit and its makers have received many strong testimonials as to its powers. One of these testimonials was recently received from a gentleman who resides in Winnipeg, and who is well-known as a most reputable citizen. This letter reads in part as follows:

"For some years past I had suffered from my kidneys. About 18 months ago I had acute inflammation of those organs, when I was ordered to bed by the medical man attending me. I received considerable relief, but after a few months the trouble started again. It was then that I decided to try SANOL of which I had both read and heard. After taking two bottles I felt very much better, and my condition rapidly improved. When I had taken the contents of eight bottles, I felt better than I had done for years, for my kidney trouble had entirely left me. It is now about three months since I finished with the medicine and I am enjoying the best of health."

The address of the gentleman who wrote the above will be given to any who may inquire. The makers of SANOL are able to give a large number of addresses of people who will give to inquirers similar testimony as to the benefits they have derived from the use of this remedy.

SANOL is manufactured only by the SANOL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD. 977 Main street, Winnipeg. It may be purchased from The Warne Drug Co., Limited,

THE WAR CLOUD

If it is true that Britain has told France and Russia that she will not fight with them on behalf of Servia's claim to a port on the Adriatic, and other claims, the threatening aspect of the Balkan trouble will be somewhat relieved. The acute stage of the negotiations now is on and it would not be surprising at any time if the big powers became involved over the quarrels of the smaller ones. It is evident that every effort is being strained to preserve the peace between the powers, but the existing alliances are so strong, the opposition of the rival entente and alliance so well balanced that there might easily be no escape but war, if interests are rigidly upheld. To preserve the peace, it may be necessary to offer up Servia on the altar, denying her legitimate rights as to territory. The Russian Bear again holds the key to the situation for if it decides that Austria must be opposed in the interest of Servia, the chances of continued peace would be very remote.

HYDRO ELECTRIC ADVOCATE

Adam Studholme, the Labor M.P.P., who is to speak at the Trades and Labor Council's smoker to-night is one of the warmest supporters of the Whitney Government's power policy, and has done splendid missionary work for Hon. Adam Beck. He advocated the Hydro Electric on the platform in Hamilton, Brantford and other cities, for the reason that he believes it a good thing for the people. Mr. Studholme has done a large amount of this work at a great personal sacrifice. His coming to Peterborough is purely for the good of the cause, and the Trades and Labor Council, and in fact the citizens generally, will have reason to be thankful to him, as he will no doubt impart a lot of information—information that may save the city from binding itself to the power ring for a quarter of a century. If this city is to become a great manufacturing centre, as it should on account of its being located so close to water power, it must be in a position to supply electrical energy at the very lowest rate to the factories, and light in the homes of the artisans at prices that are prevailing in other Hydro Electric cities, or lower.

MR. KENDRY FOR SENATE

Six new senators have been appointed in the Maritime provinces. Notice has been given of a bill to give the Western provinces increased Senatorial representation. In Ontario the policy of keeping district balances well maintained in the appointment of senators is yet in force. But the balance in favor of Western Ontario is somewhat too strong. Many Western Ontario newspapers have been endorsing the suggestion that Mr. W. S. Dingman, of the Stratford Herald, a veteran newspaper proprietor, be made a senator. The newspaper fraternity, which does so much for Canada, with such little public recognition, is entitled to more representation. This the Review heartily endorses. In the case of Mr. Dingman, though it would add a senatorship more to Western Ontario, when there should be more consideration of Central and Eastern Ontario.

The Review is of the opinion, which it has expressed before, that Peterborough is entitled to a senatorship. At the time of the Dominion campaign, it was stated that had the Laurier administration been returned, Mr. Stratton was to become a senator in the event of his defeat. But though Peterborough did its part loyally and well to make that arrangement impossible, it still feels it has a solid claim for consideration. There is one Conservative in Peterborough, who by reason of long service to the party, both in and out of the House of Commons, and by the vigor of his zeal in the party cause, is the natural choice. That gentleman is, of course, Mr. James Kendry. Peterborough would, quite apart from bias, we think, heartily endorse such a selection. There ought to be a concerted move to draw this to the attention of Premier Borden.

CATTLE AND COST OF LIVING

Pat Burns, the Western cow-boy, who has become a millionaire, says that the food problem in Canada will be solved if the farmers of the West raise cattle. The high cost of living is made up principally of the increase in the cost of food, and of this, meat constitutes a very large part. Back of the high price of meat there is a scarcity of supply, as compared with the growing population. Both in the United States and Canada, the effect of this has been very marked, quite apart from the operation of meat trusts, cattle kings, middlemen and other influences at work arbitrarily raising prices on the customer.

As Pat Burns says—

"At the present we import beef, mutton, poultry, butter and eggs from Austria, and New Zealand. A customer at Peace River was astounded, when told that butter and eggs, which he was buying at a local store, had been imported from those distant parts of the British Empire. We import more beef and dairy products from the United States than is at present raised in Western Canada. Ranches are surely and steadily growing fewer in number and farmers, in the mad rush to get rich, are adopting their efforts on grain growing.

"Let them raise cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry and feed them on the offals which they are at present either wasting or not making the most of. They would find a ready market for their cattle, at a price which would represent $1 a bushel for wheat at home, for which they are at present receiving about 60 cents. They would not have to buy a single extra horse, or plough or rake, or hire an extra cook or man. The other day I bought 2,600 steers at an average price of $84 per head at Maple Creek, Sask."

The census figures for 1900 and 1910 in the United States, show an increase in population from 76,000,000 to 82,000,000, and a decrease in the supply of cattle from 67,000,000, to 61,000,000 of sheep from 61,000,000 to 52,000,000, and of swine from 62,000,000 to 58,000,000. The Canadian figures show that while in the decade, the population increased from 5,200,000 to 7,190,000, the stock of cattle increased from 5,500,000 to 7,500,000, while sheep and swine remained about the same. Thus Canada has increased the stock of cattle correspondingly with the increase of population. But this has not held down the price of beef, because the American price has to some extent, dominated the Canadian price. The American demands upon the Canadian supply have been sufficient to make Canadian prices about equal to those across the line, because as soon as the difference in price becomes greater than the freight and duty, there is a rush, to buy Canadian cattle for American markets. If Canada had an export duty upon its cattle, there would be an immediate slump in the price of meat here, but under present conditions, the outlook for a lowering of the cost of meat is indeed very gloomy. What the remedy is, it cannot readily be said, because though Canada were to double her stock of cattle, the surplus would be as quickly and readily drained by the United States. It is not an inviting prospect for the consumer, at least.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A society woman of San Francisco has confessed to swindling stores out of hundreds of dollars' worth of merchandise during the course of a year. Some of the newspapers in reporting the court proceedings refer to her as a highly respectable lady. Is a person who steals highly respectable because she happens to be wealthy and prominent socially?

At a temperance meeting at Moncton on Sunday last one participant found it necessary to refer to another as a liar and a scoundrel, whereupon the other repeated the statements which drew forth the unseemly protest. It is sad when good men thus indulge in violent and wrath-provoking expressions of want of confidence in each other. It sets such a bad example to the wretched politicians who abound in the land.—Montreal Gazette.

A PLEASING PRODUCTION

A good plot, intermingled with comedy, love, pathos and good singing characterizes the play "Don O'Dare," which will be presented by Bernard Daly at the Grand on Saturday, Nov. 30, matinee and night. Staged magnificently among the grand scenery of Erin's Isle, no prettier picture could be drawn, and with Bernard Daly in the leading role the production will be pleasing. [illegible] Daly's sweet tenor voice and his captivating Irish songs will surely hold the audience and every number will be encored more than once. [illegible] sympathetic tone reaches the heart of his auditors, and he is often cheered to the echo. The play is intensely interesting from a dramatic point of view, and with Mr. Daly's melodious voice he wins a very large part of the encomiums. His rendition of the songs, "Many Years Ago," "A [illegible] of Yesterday," "Lo[illegible] is like," "Shoogy-Shu," "Call of the Land," and "Mocushla" are fascinating [illegible]. Mr. Daly's supporting company is far above the average, and with the wealth of scenery is without doubt one of the best that will be seen here this season. ld

LAW LIBRARY TO BE IMPROVED

County Council Will Proceed with Much Needed Work

Messrs. D. O'Connell and J. W. Bennet, representing the Peterborough Law Association, interviewed the County Council Wednesday afternoon, asking for several improvements at the Law Library in the Court House building.

The library at present, is cramped for lack of shelving upon which to stock the ever increasing volume of legal reports and statutes.

Messrs. O'Connell and Bennet asked the Council to authorize the necessary improvements. Both barristers stated that the library was one of the best and most extensive in the province and the improvements would increase its efficiency.

The Council assured the deputation that they would be pleased to make the required improvements and as soon as feasible.

The deputation also conveyed to the Council the appreciation of the legal profession for the much needed improvements that had already been effected in the Judge's chambers, and the court room, which they considered now compared favorably with any judicial quarters in the province.

At four o'clock, Mr. E. A. Peck, the township solicitor went into a discussion with the Council, in connection with the threatened $3,000 writ against the city over the Buckhorn bridge.

BLACKLISTER PAID $10 FINE

Another Interdicted One Had Weak Spell in Witness Box

James Wallace, a blacklister was under the influence of liquor yesterday and his arrest followed. He admitted the fact to Magistrate Dumble this morning, who imposed the usual $10 fine, which was paid forthwith.

Albert Tivey, of Stanley Avenue, East City, while trying to tell where he secured his liquor, was seized with a weak spell and toppled over in the witness box, falling to the floor. After a rest, he was able to go on with the story, but it was of such a rambling nature that Chief Thompson requested a week's remand.

Tivey is on the "list", and was arrested while intoxicated last evening. He was with John Switzer, an old man who was also taken into custody intoxicated. The latter was given ten days on the hill, in default of a $2 fine.

Switzer said he had no home.

One of the funny things we sometimes see is a woman who is built like a bale of hay trying to act sentimental.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS HOUR OF MARKET OPENING REMAIN AT TEN O'CLOCK

Contract With Market Clerk Does Not Expire Till April 1, 1913—Some Interesting Arguments Advanced for Opening of Market at an Earlier Hour, or for Removal of Restrictions—Prices Higher on the Market Than in the Stores, it is Said.

MORE PRODUCE WITH OPEN MARKET

Farmers Take Produce Away in Hope of Bigger Prices the Following Saturday—Should Fowl be Sold by Weight?

The hour of market opening will remain unchanged for the balance of the market year which ends April 1, 1913.

The above decision was reached last evening by the City Property Committee after a protracted and interesting discussion in which four representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association took active part. The latter organization was represented by Messrs. Thomas Barrie, W. J. Oke, N. C. Cameron and R. C. Braund.

It is generally known that the subject of the discussion arose through a motion moved by Ald. Brown some weeks ago that the hour of market opening should be changed from ten o'clock to eleven on Saturday mornings. His reasons for introducing the resolution was to give local buyers an opportunity to get the benefit of market purchasing before the best of the produce offerings had been bought up by outside buyers. The proposed change aroused a lively interest and ended with the Retail Merchants' Association taking the matter up. General public opinion on the question seems widely diversant, and those in favor of, and those opposed to the change are fairly even in strength.

Mr. Thomas Barrie, of Barrie's, Ltd., expressed himself first.

AN EARLIER MARKET.

"If your Committee intends to recommend any change," said Mr. Barrie, "let them favor an earlier market. We merchants find that the majority of outside marketers do not complete their buying early enough to allow them time and opportunity to patronize our stores. They must leave on trains and their buying is prevented or else very hurried.

LOWER PRICES IN STORES.

Also at the present time prices for produce on the market are often higher than in the stores which is one of the biggest points at issue. Then also it must be remembered that the man who goes to the market regularly to buy is the only man competent to set the prices by his being conversant with the range of prices from week to week.

Mr. Barrie referred to the letter in the newspapers from Hamilton on the market question and he stated that Hamilton was conceded to possess the best market in Ontario and their market was an open one.

MORE PRODUCE.

"If the farmers have an open market there will be much more produce sold," he remarked, "and the hour of opening if altered at all should certainly be made earlier. Personally Mr. Barrie claimed to be uninterested in the question except for the fact of people rushing into his store at the last moment hurriedly making a purchase and leaving with a remark about having to catch a train.

"Why is it that you have people taking their stuff off the market?" he asked.

Alderman Brown—Perhaps because they are over greedy.

Mr. Barrie—No it is because they think they can secure bigger prices on the following Saturday.

AN OPEN MARKET

Mr. W. J. Oke, George street, raised an interesting point when he referred to Toronto purchasers, who had asked him to buy up turkeys by the bulk on the local market. Mr. Oke said that he had no recourse but to reply that Peterborough had a restricted market and that it was impossible for him to fill their order for one or two hundred turkeys on that account. They could not be purchased here in such quantities. Mr. Oke was of the opinion that Peterborough was located where she should have the best and biggest market between Toronto and Ottawa and he regretted that such was not the case.

"An open market would certainly induce farmers to bring in produce," was Mr. Oke's positive argument, in concluding. He also corroborated the statement of Mr. Barrie, that farmers have been known to take their produce off the market, in the hope of making three or four cents more on the succeeding Saturday.

The matter of forestalling on the market was brought up. Ald. Duncan said that the Police Chief, from time to time, stationed watches to detect such practices, but while it was known that such took place, they had been unable to positively locate the guilty parties.

FOWL BY WEIGHT.

Mr. R. C. Braund mentioned an interesting fact when he referred to the habit of farmers refusing to tell a purchaser, the weight of fowl.

"Hundreds of women pay 20 cents a pound for fowl, when they should only pay 14 cents," said Mr. Braund.

"Let the farmer give a purchaser the weight of a turkey or a goose and then the purchaser, knowing the price per pound, can figure out whether she is losing on her purchase. The people of this city are losing that way, five times what the farmers are paying in tolls.

Ald. Graham—"They will weight fowl for you, if asked."

Mr. Braund—"Not always, I have had them tell me to go and have it weighed."

Mayor Bradburn explained that owing to the market contract being let, he could not see how any change could be made. He advocated, however, the suggestion that fowl be sold by weight, and he considered it would be wise for the Council, at a later date, to discuss its feasibility. He favored an open market.

Secretary Cameron inquired if the committee would consider changing the hour, should the Retail Merchants' Association secure Market Clerk Girvins' consent to the alteration. The Mayor replied that they might then consider it.

Alderman Duncan informed the deputation that the committee could do nothing until the year's market toll contract expired and hence they were not in a position to take any action in the matter.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

President Eastwood has found it necessary to call a meeting of the Board of Trade for to-morrow night, he having received a telegram from the local member to the effect that the meeting with the Government by the Trent Canal deputation has been arranged for Tuesday of next week.

With this short notice, it is evident that the Board of Trade, City Council and County Council have no time to lose. A large and representative deputation from Peterborough is very necessary, and all interested in the important question now upon the slate, are asked to attend the Board of Trade to-night.

In regard to the telegram to Mr. Eastwood the following wire was received by the Review from Mr. Burnham—

"Trent Valley members, realizing how necessary it is to get to the Ministers the estimates before they are decided on, got as early a date as possible, for the interview. If anybody wants to delay the Trent Valley Canal scheme, all they have got to do is to come down here, after everything is decided on for the session. In addition to that, the Montreal Midland Air line, going through the upper part of the country, goes before the Minister, December 3rd, and it is most important that Peterborough should join with the others in the inspection of this project. It is useless to urge that all Peterborough is so busy as not to be able to send somebody down here on a day agreed to by all Trent Valley members as best.

RAILWAYS TO ISSUE DEBENTURES

Montreal, Nov. 28.—The G.T.P. and the G.T.R. have each applied to Parliament for authority to issue $25,000,000 four per cent. debenture stock, or $50,000,000 in all. When Parliamentary authority is obtained the two issues will have to be sanctioned by the shareholders in London. It is understood that this issue is to be devoted to the purchase of equipment for both roads, as the previous votes have become exhausted.

The sum appears a large one until it is realized how much traffic is being handled by the Grand Trunk system and how many cars are required to carry the immense volume of freight constantly moving over the road. The statement was made yesterday that no less than 15,000 loaded freight cars are being moved over the G.T. system daily. Hence the preparations now being made to provide for the ever-increasing traffic.

FOWL SUPPER WON SUCCESS

The Ladies of Cavanville Church, Provided Splendid Program

A fowl supper and entertainment that surpassed anything similar in the history of the church, was given under the auspices of the ladies of Cavanville Methodist Church on Monday evening. Every person who attended, pronounced the affair to have been the biggest, best and most successful that Cavanville Church ever witnessed. It was estimated that three hundred people attended the event and the handsome sum of $78 was realized after all expenses had been paid.

The entertainment was of local interest owing to the presence of the George street Sunday School Orchestra and other Peterborough entertainers.

LUMBER MILLS ARE THROUGH

Men are Going to the Wood for the Winter

The mills of the Peterborough Lumber Company and the McDonald Estate have closed down for the winter, after a successful and busy season of a little over seven months. About 100 men were employed by the Peterborough Lumber Company, at Burnham's Point, a large number of whom have left for that company's camps in Cavendish, Anstruther and Burleigh, where 200 men are employed at three camps cutting 10,000,000 feet of lumber for next season. Nearly 10,000,000 feet of lumber was cut at the mills this season.

The McDonald Estate also handled a large business and have lumber camps in the north country working full shift to bring down a good supply for next season.

BOQUET FOR PETERBOROUGH

A clipping from the St. John's News has the following:

"It was reported lately that the De Laval Dairy Supply Co. had changed their plans and were to remain in St. Johns. Such does not seem to be the case. The company apparently has irrevocably determined to close the St. Johns branch after the end of the year as they are now building at Peterborough, Ont., in view of concentrating their entire industry at that flourishing town where enterprise goes hand in hand with energy and common sense."

Some people read the riot act, and give the guilty parties time to argue and organize their friends. A better way is to give them both barrels when they are not expecting it.

RADIANT HOME HEATER

WILL KEEP THE TEMPERATURE UP AND THE COAL BILL DOWN

Ever since base burners were invented the Radiant Home has been pre-eminent.

It will radiate more heat from a given amount of fuel; it will retain fire longer; it will obey the action of the dampers quicker than any other.

Its arrangement of flues and construction of grate are patented, so that imitations are necessarily imperfect in the vital points.

There is no lost heat—no waste fuel.

You will be agreeably surprised at the ease with which the coal bin repels the assaults of the Radiant Home.

REBECCA'S WEAVING

A Story of Little River

By CLARISSA MACKIE

In the weaving shed under the walnut tree, Rebecca Oswald sat with idle hands before the big loom. There was a pungent smell of green walnuts and the peculiar odor of rankly growing hollyhocks that latticed the window with fluted pink cups.

Rebecca's lips were curved in a bitter smile as she dreamed in the mellow gloom of the shed. Her slender form, erect and motionless, was sharply outlined against the light.

Within the shed everything was immaculately clean and fresh with the penetrating odor of cedar shingles. The big loom filled one end of the room with its massive framework, and in the corners were rolls of rag carpet and several baskets filled with bright hued rag strips.

Maria Oswald paused in the doorway, her round eyes peering sharply at her sister's tense profile. "Rebecca, what the land are you doing?" she asked sharply.

Rebecca started and turned her head. "I wasn't doing anything, Maria. I was resting awhile."

The older sister advanced and sat down in a chair near the loom; her keen eyes searched Rebecca's sensitive face and her own reddened with indignation. "I saw Ida Benjamin's boy coming out of the gate. What did he want?" she demanded.

"He brought some rags; his mother wants some mats made—for Edna," said Rebecca quietly.

"Of course you won't make them," protested Maria.

"I must—if I don't, Ida will say its because of Edna marrying Myron."

"If that ain't just like Ida Benjamin—the spitefulest critter that ever drew breath! Why didn't she take the rags down to Peterkin?" Suddenly Maria's disturbed countenance became an urbane mask. "Don't you dare cry, Rebecca Oswald," she added fiercely; "she's coming now!"

A shadow darkened the doorway, and Ida Benjamin entered. She was a tall, strongly built woman, with colorless hair rolled stiffly away from her sallow skinned face. Cold blue eyes were set unpleasantly close to a prominent nose hooked above a bitter mouth. She carried herself with the proud insolence of one whose weapons are always unsheathed. Ida Benjamin's keenest weapon of attack and defense lay behind the even rows of her false teeth. Now she rustled forward with an amplitude of starched skirts.

"Busy as a bee, Rebecca. I declare you're always at it, ain't you? I'll take this chair, Maria. You needn't get up." She beamed amiably upon the sisters.

Rebecca removed her foot from the treadle and turned to the newcomer. "Robbie brought the rags, Ida. What color warp do you want?"

"White, I guess. Do you think you can get them done by the 1st of October? They are for Edna's new house and"— She paused significantly.

"Why not take them down to Peterkin? He's starving for work, and Rebecca's got all she can do," interpolated Maria acidly.

"I want nobody but Rebecca should touch them," protested Ida Benjamin. "Being Edna's wedding outfit, they are very special, and Rebecca makes such pretty mats."

"Very well, Ida; I can make them. There's plenty of time before the 1st of October. Tell me how you want them made," said Rebecca quietly.

While the two women discussed the making of the rugs—or "mats," as they are called in Little River—Maria arose and silently left the weaving shed.

Alone with Rebecca Oswald, Mrs. Benjamin dropped the ball of rags she had been displaying to the weaver and leaned back in her chair. "Well, Rebecca, I hope you don't hold any hard feeling toward me and Edna," she said, with a malicious smile.

"We never have been intimate friends, Ida; you know that," said Rebecca proudly, "but why do you imagine that I should feel any especial enmity toward you now?"

For an instant Ida Benjamin's sallow face reddened; then, as if Rebecca's question offered an opening for which she had long waited, the color left her cheeks sallow and strained, and she spoke coldly and deliberately:

"You needn't pretend you don't mind losing Myron White after keeping company with him for five years. Of course he's older than Edna, but the very minute he set eyes on her he lost his heart. You can't blame him, Rebecca: Edna's so young and fresh, and you—and me, too—are not as young as we used to be. There; you needn't redden up, and look so proud, Rebecca. You might as well look the truth in the face as to pretend you don't care."

"Have you got anything more to say?" asked Rebecca icily.

Ida Benjamin hesitated. An eager question had burned her tongue for five years. To her coarse grained mind there was no indelicacy in the asking of such a question, but she did shrink from Rebecca's answer. She felt instinctively that Rebecca Oswald would speak nothing but the truth. Her eagerness now found vent in the question.

"Sarah Quigley says that years ago, before I married Jonah Benjamin, he courted you and wanted to marry you. I told her it wasn't so and that he never appeared to like you, but just the same it spoiled all my mourning for him. I haven't been to the cemetery since she told me that. Did he ask you to marry him?" Ida Benjamin's voice sank to a low tone of bitter anguish, and her harsh face was distorted with an effort for control. She leaned forward, her eyes fixed on Rebecca's face.

"That's why you've been so hateful to me the last five years—because you're jealous of that?" asked Rebecca pityingly.

The other woman flared fiercely. "I'm not jealous, not a mite, but I can't have it that way."

Now the power was in Rebecca's hands. She could flay Ida Benjamin's suffering heart with a detailed account of how the defunct Jonah had in his youth wooed her. His doglike devotion, his obstinate refusal to take "no" for an answer, had been a village jest. These facts were weapons in Rebecca's hands. With them she might avenge herself upon this woman who had deprived her of the man she loved and destroyed her happiness through some long cherished jealousy.

Ida Benjamin was waiting for Rebecca's answer, hoping it would be a denial that she might carry forth to confound her fellow busybodies, with whom she waged alternate war and peace and in whose midst reputations were won and lost in an hour.

All at once Rebecca seemed to see down into Ida Benjamin's sordid little soul, and a revulsion of feeling swept over her. A strange light came into her eyes as she looked at the woman standing there so curiously subdued and expectant, suffering tortures of jealousy, and she was filled with pity.

Then it was that Rebecca Oswald spoke to her enemy and told her first lie. "Jonah came to see me a few times, Ida, but I guess he got tired of me. I want you to bear in mind he never asked me to marry him." Rebecca was quite pale when she concluded.

The other woman sighed relievedly. Her head went up with her accustomed insolence. "I never believed a word of it, Rebecca. I knew Sarah Quigly was lying. I suppose you're willing to repeat that before her?"

"I think I have said enough," replied Rebecca wearily. The sunshine had faded from the pond, and the shadows seemed reflected in her face.

"I'll have to be going now." Mrs. Benjamin stood in the doorway looking down at the weaver, a curious hesitancy in her harsh voice and a strange expression mingled with the triumph in her hard eyes. It was almost as if she felt sorry for Rebecca Oswald.

When Rebecca was alone she stared through the lattice of hollyhocks with a strange sense of desolation. It had been a hard day. The pressure of humiliation had been strong upon her, and she had suffered. All at once she beat her fists upon the window sill with a little fury of despair. "It isn't fair and just," she sobbed. After awhile she arose and closed the window. Touching the loom with one slender hand, she looked down at the maze of purple warp blurring before her eyes.

"I suppose people's lives are like rag carpets—some's plain, some's striped and others are just 'hit or miss,' with lots of bright colors. Mine's been in stripes, with lots of gray and black in between for trouble. I guess it was stopped now just as I was beginning a beautiful stripe, thinking all the rest of the carpet was going to be that rosy color. But I've got to keep on weaving. It'll be drab colored for awhile until I get some sense into me." She dashed away the tears and straightened proudly. "I've got to weave those mats for Ida Benjamin. I've got to make them so as to pay me back for telling that lie."

The door flew open with startling suddenness, and Myron White stood there, handsome, black eyed and with black brows meeting in a heavy frown. His attitude was one of mingled shame and defiance.

"Rebecca, Maria was down to the store, and she told me that Ida Benjamin had brought mats for you to make. Where are they—here?" At Rebecca's nod of assent Myron bent down and swept Mrs. Benjamin's bags of rag balls into his arms and deposited them in a wheelbarrow he had left outside the door. Then he came back and faced Rebecca in the gathering gloom of the weaving shed.

"I'm a doggoned fool," he said bitterly. "I've gone and cut myself off from the only woman I ever wanted to marry just because—oh, I've got to tell it so's to do right by you, Rebecca. You know I was getting up courage to ask you to marry me when Ida Benjamin got after me. I don't know what she meant by it, but she said Edna was dying for love of me. Well, what could I do? When Maria told me you was going to weave mats for us I just made up my mind I'd be a man, so I've been and told little Edna all about it—that if you won't have me I don't care whether anybody else does or not. And she was just as glad as I was—said she was planning to elope with Lance Wayland anyway, and she said she hated me and my old rag mats. I can't trust myself to talk to Ida Benjamin, but I'm going to take her rags back. I won't have you making mats for her. I hope you'll forgive me for all the trouble. I guess you never want to see me again." He turned and walked dispiritedly toward the door. "I don't suppose I deserve you should forgive me," he added.

Rebecca's eyes were heavy with unshed tears. She who had patiently taken up the weaving of her drab future suddenly found her weft was rose and gold. All at once her restored happiness found utterance in broken words:

"Myron, I shall never—forgive you—if you go away now."

There's nothing a mother likes better to talk about than the popularity of her daughter.

It's easy enough to be pleasant when being straightforward and honest and courageous means being unpleasant.

MINISTERS WHO QUIT

Resignations In Canadian Political Life Are Not Common.

The Hon. F. D. Monk's resignation from Mr. Borden's Cabinet stands out as probably the most clearly-marked instance of resignation from motives of principle, as distinguished from pique or expediency, which the political annals of Canada afford.

Indeed, resignations of any kind are comparatively rare in the history of Canadian Cabinets. In the year 1864, George Brown and Sir John A. Macdonald were instrumental in forming a coalition Government for the old Province of Canada for the main purpose of carrying Confederation. But a year or two after its formation the former resigned from it, ostensibly on account of some difference with the Government relative to the question of reciprocity. But there was a pretty general idea that he wanted to get out — largely because he did not get on with Macdonald. A little later, Sir A. T. Galt resigned from the same Government, on the ground that he could not agree with its educational policy, which, in his view, did not sufficiently safeguard the Protestant minority in Quebec. Sir A. T. Galt, in fact, was something of a Quebec Ulsterman. In 1867, he rejoined the Macdonald Government. But the fever of resignation seems to have run in his blood. For, a few months later, he again resigned, retiring from his office of Minister of Finance on account of a difference of opinion with the Government as to the proper mode of dealing with the Commercial Bank, which had failed. Altogether, this worthy knight seems to have been a man of very considerable independence. When he accepted his knighthood from the crown, he was careful to stipulate that such acceptance should not be held to prejudice his giving expression to his view that Canada's future destiny lay in the direction of complete independence. And in this stipulation the British Government of the day acquiesced.

Another resignation on a question of principle was that of Mr. Clarke Wallace, who, not very long before the first Laurier Administration came into power, resigned from the Conservative Government. As a steadfast Orangeman, he refused to approve of the remedial order requiring the Province of Manitoba to restore Separate Schools. Shortly after seven other members of the same Government, "the nest of traitors," resigned, including the Hon. George E. Foster. But in their case it was tactics, rather than principle, which underlay their action. They professed not to have complete confidence in Sir Mackenzie Bowell, as being the strongest man for the position of Conservative leader, and in consequence of their action Sir Charles Tupper superseded him. The Hon. Clifford Sifton resigned from Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet in the year 1905 on the ground that he differed from its policy, as regards the educational clauses in the bill creating the autonomous Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. A year or two before that, Mr. Blair resigned from the Liberal Government because he considered its legislation too favorable to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and it was also understood that he went further in the direction of favoring public ownership than did the Government, as a whole, at that time. Mr. Tarte's resignation in 1902 was stated to be due to differences with his colleagues with regard to the tariff. But it was generally believed that he was ordered to resign because he had been talking too loudly.

Canada's Best Company.

The company which bore all the loss in the Streetsville wreck, A Company of the 48th Highlanders, is by military experts considered to be the best individual company in the Dominion. The individual members are just as fine as the whole company. Each one is an athlete of magnificent physical build and each one averages between 5 feet 10 and five feet 11 inches in height.

In the words of General Sir John French, when he last visited Canada: A Company was "the finest company of infantry" he had ever seen.

"At the sham battle, from which the men were returning, they were 44 strong, although the full company comprises 88, but even with half their number they were the strongest in number on the field. "And," said the presiding officer, "only four of the entire company reported on the night of the wreck on their return. It was a pathetic spectacle when the lone four of the largest and finest company marched in to return their arms."

Displacing Cedar Ties.

In 1910 eastern cedar composed 40 per cent. of the total number of cross-ties purchased in the Dominion; in 1911 it fell to 5.4 per cent. and to fifth place in importance of species used. Its place has been taken by jack pine, of which wood 40 per cent. of the ties used in 1911 were made. Tamarack, with 19 per cent., Douglas fir with 14 per cent., and hemlock with 12 per cent. are the three next in order.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, which is authority for the foregoing, states in its bulletin on the subject that 13,683,770 ties, or 4,459,803 more than in 1910 were purchased in 1911. Railway development in the West is largely responsible for the increase.

Another Last-Ditcher.

Alphonse Verville declared at a political meeting in Montreal recently that so far as reciprocity is concerned he is a last-ditcher. He declared that he would continue to support reciprocity even if every other member of the House of Commons opposed it.

Alphonse Verville, M.P., is one of the greatest of the Labor leaders of the Dominion. He was born at Cote St. Paul, in 1864, and learned his trade as plumber and steamfitter in Montreal. Though nominally a Liberal he refuses to attend a party caucus. Indeed, it may safely be said that he regards himself as the nucleus of a Canadian Labor party.

Another Charge Laid.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Another burglary is charged against the three youths, Reilly, Latimer and Ryan, who were arrested on Tuesday. This affair happened in Parry Sound, where the premises of I. Haddele were entered and $12 taken from the cash register.

The House at the Top

WE ARE the house on the hilltop of quality—and whatever is best in fine clothing you will find in Semi-ready Tailoring.

Just a Gentle Prod.

There is only one maker of Semi-ready—and how good it is you will know when many men on the street will eagerly claim their product to be "Semi-ready made," or some other play on this good name. Fame attracts infamy, and prestige causes envy; where the man's character is weak he just imitates and gibbers.

Whether $15, $20, $25 or $30. The Price is in the Pocket.

"Semi-ready" is the house at the top—and we alone can sell genuine Semi-ready garments—the clothes with the price-mark and guarantee label sewn in the pocket—and sold everywhere in Canada at the identical values.

HIS SLUGGING HURTS THE GAME

Havana, Nov. 28.—The mighty slugging of Frank Baker, hero of the 1911 world series between the New York Giants and the Philadelphia Athletics, has soured all Cuba on American baseball teams, and as soon as the present trip of the White Elephants is concluded, Cuban teams will play among themselves and never again tamper with the really good teams of the American major leagues.

It has been Baker's delight to come to bat in pinches and send careening to the fence one of those wonderful clashing drives of his, ending the hopes of the home team to take the victory. Baker has killed the golden goose of the Cuban diamonds.

You'll never be a great leader until you invent a lot of giants and keep them from eating the people. That's the popular thing these days.

Test cases will be made by the N. H. A. of the action of Prodgers and Oatman, of the Quebec team, who are now en route to British Columbia after accepting terms and signing contracts with the club of the Ancient Capital. A clause is inserted providing for the forfeiture of $1000 for the violation of each contract. As soon as Prodgers and Oatman play one game for the Vancouver team action will be taken against them. The salaries of the men will be garnisheed, but the responsibility will rest with the Patricks.

Albert Dowler, aged seventeen, has completed 1 115 day walking trip across the continent, starting from Erie, Pa. He travelled thirty-two thousand miles and made his living by selling papers.

Tom Phillips, who captained the famous eKnora Thistles, has retired from hockey. If Tommy had any weakness it was due to the style of game that Thistles played, not to individuality. As an individual Tommy was possessed of rate assets. He could outskate nine out of every ten of the speed merchants and for the spectacular rushes up the ice, and for hard and true shooting from any angle, he never had an equal.

King Cole, a cast-off pitcher from the Cubs, is now twirling lather in a barber shop at Iowa.

Bobby Leach, the hero of the Horse Shoe Falls, has gone to Europe where he will lecture as the films of his hazardous trip are shown.

Scotty Davidson, who will be remembered here for his work with the Kingston Frontenacs, is slated for a job on Bruce Ridpath's team.

A Widow's Hog

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

"When you strike the village you strike the hog," is an old saying among those who drive about. There may be ordinances against him, but they cannot be enforced. The hog is turned loose to make the village picturesque, and he never quits his job until called upon to fill the pork barrel.

The village of Stamford had its hogs and its mudholes to comfort them. Sam Harris was one of the fifty hog owners, and when he died he left his widow a house and lot and a hog. It wasn't a porker in a pen, but a hog that was running at large around the streets of the village. It was against the ordinance for live stock to run at large, but everybody felt sorry for Sam's widow, and the hog was not disturbed. It was only when Josiah Flint was made village marshal that the old black porker was driven off to the pound one day. There were folks that said it was right and folks that said it was wrong, and there was so much feeling about it that after two or three days a public meeting was called. There was a big turnout, and the first speaker was Squire Flatbush. The squire always starts every one of his speeches with the landing of the pilgrims and gradually works down.

Abraham Fuller came next. Abe had an undelivered Fourth of July address that he had been holding on to for several years, and he had determined to ring it in on this occasion. He began with the battle of Lexington, and he got down to Benedict Arnold before he brought in the hog. From that time until the colonies won their independence, liberty and the widow Harris, the American eagle and that black hog were sandwiched in to make a powerful speech of it, and when he closed it was amid applause. Had a vote been taken then the hog would have been released, but there was a delay of two or three minutes, and it was fatal. Moses Taylor got his feet under him and rose up and began on that speech of his about the rise and fall of the Roman empire. He had got it off a dozen times before, and it had always weighed a ton. Moses was the only man who was way up on the Roman empire, and he knew it and made the best of it. In eleven minutes he created and destroyed the empire and knocked out the widow's hog, and his own oratorical effect was decided to be equal to anything of Clay's.

Ebenezer Schoolcraft had ranged himself with the anti-hog anti-widow party. He had resurrected a political speech he made when General Grant was a candidate for a second term. Everybody was wondering just how he could swing the hog into the speech, but he did it as handsome as you please and made it tell. It was over half hog and had there been a campaign on it would have elected the whole county ticket. When he had concluded and sat down with a broken suspender, there was a general feeling that the widow's hog would never emerge from the public pound until the fees had been paid in cash.

It was then that the prohogs put forth their last card. They had got hold of a barbed wire fence man who could take the top off a liberty pole, and he rose up with his ears working. His speech was a happy combination of Napoleon, Washington, Judas Iscariot, American independence, the Missouri compromise and the widow's hog, and he didn't give anybody any time to rest. He was as gentle as a baby and as savage as a meat ax by turns, and some of his thunderbolts made the shingles rattle. He was being paid cash for his speech, and he wanted to introduce his brand of barbed wire to our community, and his shirt collar was wilted in the first four minutes. A windmill man or a sewing machine agent wouldn't have had one show in a thousand against him. Every time he jumped two feet high and came down to bang on the desk with both fists he lifted two-thirds of the audience off the benches and when he sank his voice in a whisper and softly waved his arms he melted hearts.

There were ten men shedding tears and feeling for that hog when the man sat down, and for two or three minutes everybody chewed tobacco and kept his feet still. A vote was about to be taken as to whether the hog should be turned loose and permitted the freedom of the town the rest of his life, or held for the fees and turned into the pork barrel, when Lish Billings came sauntering in. Lish is always a little late at public meetings, but his opinion goes a good way.

"We'd like to hear from Mr. Billings on this case," says the chairman.

"But what it is?" asked Lish.

"It's a hog case."

"Who's hog?"

"The widow Harris'."

"What's your idea?" asked the chairman.

"I hain't got none. While you have been arguing the matter he's starved to death in the pound, and if there's any more talk here it had better be about saving his bristles!"

Then Josiah Flint felt it his duty to make a call on Mrs. Harris and announce:

"Widder, it is with sorrow that I make this statement that your black hog is no more."

"You mean that he is dead?" she asked.

"Dead as a door nail!"

"Thank heaven! I've been hoping for it for the last year!" [illegible]

TEMPLE IS DEDICATED

SIKHS IN VICTORIA HAVE NOW A PLACE OF WORSHIP.

Simple, But Impressive Ceremony, Is Attended by Fourteen Hundred Natives of India—Upper Room Is the Sanctuary of the Temple and the Basement Will Be a Room For Recreation.

Sunday, Oct. 6, witnessed in Victoria an event which was to Anglo-Saxon people an occurrence of much interest. It was the dedication of a Hindu, or more properly speaking, a Sikh, temple for divine worship. By many persons the occasion would have been designated as the dedication of a "heathen" temple, for, to many people in the Christian church fellowships of Canada, the consecration of a place of worship other than a distinctively "Christian" place of worship could mean only the consecration of a building to the perpetuation of some form of idolatry entirely at variance with the orthodox method of saving the soul and to be condemned as a work of darkness rather than light, says Walter W. Baer in Canadian Courier. Those who witnessed and took part in the dedicatory services at the Khalsa Diwan (literally "The Place of Divine Worship") on the day named must have been deeply impressed with the conviction that "In any nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him."

The Khalsa Diwan of Victoria is an institutional structure built after Hindu architecture, and though in no sense pretentious, is a most creditable sanctuary. The main building is 40x40 feet, built of red brick with a commodious basement room for recreation purposes, the whole established upon cement foundations. The "Upper Room" is the sanctuary, the part of the building specifically dedicated as an holy place. No partitions divide either basement or temple, though stout, square pillars of wood support the interior and roof. Around it all runs a verandah some ten feet in width, supported on square columns with ornamental capitals. In the rear of the building, but detached from it, is another structure, in which are living rooms for the priest or minister, and a kitchen furnished throughout for the preparation of food. The sanitary arrangements comply with the civic bylaws. There are no chairs, pews or seats in the Temple or Worship room, as the worshipping Sikh sits on the bare floor, only the Ministers standing. They also sit when not ministering. The temple cost nearly $10,000, and is a monument to the religious zeal and faith of a people far from home, in a strange land which has not treated them justly and among a people to whom they are united by but two bonds. The first of these is their attachment to the throne and empire of the British people who delivered India, and the second is their unconquerable conviction that "God hath made of one flesh all the nations of the earth." It is the last rather than the first which makes the Sikh tolerant of the abuse and misrepresentation to which he has been subjected.

Three Hindu women were present; the sole remnant of the domestic memories of a numerous people who had been denied the right to bring their wives into Canada. There was also an English woman, the wife of a prominent Hindu of Vancouver, who had married the swarthy son of India, who adoringly called himself her husband. It was her second marriage, and, though it is a childless marriage, she declares it to be—save for this—a happy one.

In the definitions of belief or articles of faith the Sikh religion approximates more nearly to the Unitarian bodies of America than to any other. There is no such thing in their credo as [illegible] sacrifice. They assert, as do Unitarians—that salvation must be by character, and they believe in the progress of the human race onward and upward—to higher planes of development—forever.

Unlike most Oriental peoples, they assemble on given days for worship. In Canada they observe the Christian Sabbath as their day for worship. They "forget not the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some is." Though they recognize a priesthood the priest exercises no authority over belief or conduct. He is a chosen officiating minister for the reading and expounding of the Sacred Books, the administration of sacraments, the conducting of obsequies and performing of those services to his fellows which are functionary in their character. He volunteers his services and receives no official stipend or salary.

There are adaptations of Methodist procedure in some of the acts of worship. The Methodist "Love-feast" is nearly approximated in one of the sacraments as the distribution of the parts of huge baken wafers is symbolical of the equality of all who partake the sacrament. They have, also, an order of service much resembling the Methodist "fellowship meeting," in which — as in the case of the Friends or Quakers — those "whom the spirit moves" exhort, testify or pray.

These practices are not traceable to the evangelistic work of Christian missionaries among the Hindus. They date from the "reformation" in India corresponding almost, as to both time and revolt from orthodox religion, to that of Martin Luther in Europe. There can be no doubt that "God hath revealed Himself in divers manners" to the nations of the world.

It is for the perpetuation of their reformed religion that the Sikhs have erected temples in British Columbia. The one dedicated on Sunday was the third in the province, the Sikhs evidently being determined to keep their faith unspotted from the world. They do not intend to hang their harps upon the willows and remorsefully ask, "How can we sing the songs of Zion in a strange land?"

A Brave Ache.

Of brave deeds done upon the battlefield and amid the thunder of cannons and the cries of the wounded and dying, of heroes of the Victoria Cross, and great generals who rose from small beginnings, the teacher told her class, firing them with enthusiasm for their mother country. "Please, miss," cried one little girl excitedly, "my father was in the Boer war!" "And did he fight in any of the battles?" inquired the teacher. "Oh, yes," answered the little maid. "'E was at Graspan an' Modder river an' Pardyburg, an'"—"And was he wounded in any of them?" pursued the teacher. The little girl's face fell. "No, miss, he wasn't wounded," she replied. And then she brightened again. "But, please, miss, 'e had a awful 'eadache!"

CHANGE OF THE HOUR FOR MARKET WOULD BE MISTAKE

Is the Opinion of the Market Clerk Who Also Disagrees With Statement That Store Prices Are Lower

"The market hour of opening is all right as it is," said Market Clerk Garvin to-day to a Review representative. "It would be a mistake to change the hour, and any interference might prove extremely harmful."

Mr. Garvin's views were diametrically opposed to several expressed by members of the Retail Merchants' Association last evening.

In the first place he did not agree with the statement that produce could be purchased cheaper in the retail stores than on the market. There may be exceptional instances of it, he said, but few people can go to any store and buy butter and eggs at a lesser price than sold on the market.

Mr. Girvin said that as far as selling fowl by weight was concerned, he would advocate installing scales in the market hall, where buyers could weigh fowl themselves. Then they would know whether they were receiving full value for their money.

An open market would be to the detriment of local householders he felt, and if any benefit was derived through it, it would be received by outside buyers. He considered ten o'clock to be amply early enough to commence selling, as even at that hour, and particularly at the present time of the year, there were very few farmers able to reach the city much earlier.

WORK STARTED FOR NEW GATES

Are to be Constructed at King Street Crossings

Work was commenced this morning on the G.T.R. gates at King street under the supervision of Bridgemaster Kearns, of Lindsay. There will be two pairs of gates, the first pair to be directly on either side of the Bethune street tracks and the second pair to take in the shunting lines nearer Aylmer street, together with two new proposed lines on the east side of the present tracks. The gateman's house will be situated on the south side of the street, on the north side of the round house, which is rather a bad position as it affords the gateman no view of the trains coming from the south.

It is expected that the gates will soon be completed and in operation.

OBITUARY

Frederick Hunt

Frederick Hunt, of 208 Westcott street, passed away this afternoon about 2.30, after a three days' illness. He was a valued employe of the George Matthews Company, having been with the firm for the past twenty years. Fuller particulars will be given to-morrow, together with funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Joseph Condon

The death occurred yesterday morning at her home, Concession 6 Douro, of Honrah O'Brien, wife of Mr. Joseph Condon. The deceased lady was 54 years of age and had lived all her life in Douro. She was well known and highly respected, having been a life-long member of St. Joseph's Church.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning from the family residence to St. Joseph's Church, thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro.

HE REFERRED TO FAMOUS SPEECH

One of the Ottawa papers makes reference to Mr. Burnham's remarks on the floor of the House, and notes what he said as a "somewhat remarkable reference." The report follows:

Said Mr. Burnham:—"The allegation has been made indirectly that there is in this country a conspiracy for the extinguishing of the French-Canadian race, a race that has borne itself with all the honor and distinction that we should look for in one of the foremost races of the world. There is at the present time a conspiracy on foot to deprive them of their language, and to deprive them of their language is to deprive them of their customs, their history, their traditions, and of their institutions.

Whether it is proposed that this shall be accomplished by means of the government, or in some other way, let me say, representing a large number of English-speaking people, who, I know, hold the same opinion, that, much as we have been inclined to differ from them in the past, and often as we have had to meet them in keen debate, nevertheless, bearing in mind their loyalty to the empire in the past and their loyalty in the present, and their recognition of imperial needs, we will never even at the sacrifice of the English language go back upon or prove recreant to such a people.

As far as I am concerned, I would prefer never to speak another word of English if it meant that the French-Canadians should be deprived by force of the right to speak their language whenever they feel so inclined."

The reference in Mr. Burnhams' address to the famous speech recently delivered by Cardinal Bourne, in which he ordered the French to give up their language so that the Church of Rome might more easily win Canada to the true faith.

CONCERNING THE HOME LIBRARY

Bookcases That May Be Added, Section By Section, As The Number Of Volumes Increases

IN SOME HOUSEHOLDS books are more of a burden than a benefit. Children are admonished as to the inestimable value of reading, and perhaps upbraided in the same breath for strewing the tables and chairs with their books. But when the small boy and small girl are provided with shelves of their own in the living-room all such trouble is happily obviated. The sectional bookcase that takes up so little room, that conforms so harmoniously to the general furnishing scheme of the room, and that protects its books from the dust that settles on shelves and bindings—this is the foundation stone of the home library.

The GLOBE-WERNICKE CASES, as embodying all these qualities, merits emphatic notice.

They are obtainable in sections of similar width and different depth—suited to books of different sizes—with top and base, prices being as follows:

	Plain Oak	Quartered Oak or Imitation Mahogany	Genuine Mahogany
Top	$1.75	$2.00	$3.00
8½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.50	3.00	4.25
8½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	3.75	4.25	5.50
10¼ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.75	3.25	4.50

The oak cases are procurable in golden, fumed or early English finish.

SERVIA HAS RENDERED THE SITUATION CRITICAL

Move by Servia is Taken as Equivalent to Challenge

London, Nov. [illegible].—The Servians, ignoring the proclamation of Albanian independence, have occupied the port of Durazzo without resistance. This information comes in a direct despatch from that town last night. Thus the conflict is now raised in acute form between Austria and Servia, and it remains to be seen whether the Austrian Government will take any direct action or will be content to leave the question for the after-the-war settlement.

The Servian action, coupled with the eminently warlike feeling prevailing at Vienna, is likely to keep Europe in a continued state of anxiety. On the other hand, the fact that the negotiations are progressing at Baghtche, and that there is no sign of the resumption of operations on the Tchatalja lines, while the great powers are exchanging proposals for the assembling of a European conference, all make for a peaceful settlement.

Should the proposed conference materialise — for apparently Austria has not yet consented to participate— it would be considered as preparatory to a later full conference, which would include the Balkan States and Turkey, for a final settlement of all questions.

Nothing has been decided as to where the conference will be held or precisely what questions will be discussed.

The project appears to have arisen out of a general sense of irritation at the inevitable delays necessitated by the constant telegraphic interchanges of views.

Great secrecy is preserved regarding the conference at Baghtche, and it is not known whether the plenipotentiaries are discussing the terms of an armistice or bases for the conclusion of peace.

It is reported from Rome that a provisional Albanian Government has been constituted by eighty Albanian delegates.

No Resistance at Durazzo.

Durazzo, Albanian, Nov. 29.—The Servian troops occupied the town yesterday. No resistance was offered.

The Austrian Lloyd steamer Graf Wurmbrand left immediately with a number of refugees.

Durazzo is the port on the Adriatic which Austria is determined Servia shall not hold.

Austrian Army Mobilized.

Vienna, Nov. 29.—Much excitement has been occasioned by the action of the Government in arranging for the mobilization of the Austrian army, which proves the Ministers' determination to be fully prepared for any developments in the Balkan crisis.

The Parliamentary leaders met last night and decided to allow the Premier's three bills dealing with matters connected with the mobilization to go to committee without the customary first reading.

According to The Neue Freie Presse, the Premier in announcing the bills to the procedure committee told the Parliamentary leaders that there was no change in the international situation. The Neue Freie Presse regards this as an admission that the situation is still critical.

Another incident commented upon as being of equal importance to that of the recent visit to Berlin of Gen. Schemua, chief of staff, is the visit of Field Marshal Baron von Hoetzendorf, inspector-general of the Austrian army, to Bucharest, where he arrived Wednesday as the guest of King Charles. He bears an autograph letter from the Austrian Emperor, and will confer with the Roumanian chief of staff.

War Feeling Strong.

London, Nov. 29.—The Daily Mail's Vienna correspondent says it is believed in military circles that Austria will take no steps to drive the Servians out of Durazzo, at least until her preparations are completed, because such a step would almost certainly bring her into conflict with Russia.

The war feeling in Vienna is very strong. Patriotic songs are sung in the music halls and there are military concerts nightly.

From Alaska to Balkans.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Of all the natives of the Balkan States who have returned to their respective countries to take part in the present Turkish war, the long-distance record must be conceded to a party of 48 Servians from Fairbanks, Alaska. In miles the distance of the journey of these soldiers is 4,500.

The party came by way of Seattle, Wash., and passed through Chicago on Wednesday evening. A special G.T.R. car carried the men from Chicago to New York, where they caught the boat yesterday.

NEGRESS NEARLY KILLS MATRON

Owen Sound, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Percy Ringo, a colored prisoner, made a murderous attack upon the county jail matron, Jennie McNeill, Wednesday, and the matron lies in a precarious condition as a result of the beating that she received. Her assailant, Mrs. Ringo, will be sent to an asylum, as she has lately developed maniacal tendencies.

Mrs. Ringo had, among other hallucinations, the idea that Miss McNeill was trying to poison her, and her insane attack may be attributed partly to this belief.

The matron was rescued by County Jailer Miller, after she had been thrown down and beaten, kicked and choked into insensibility.

PATRICK IS FREE AT LAST

He Rejoins Woman He Wed on Eve of Death.

New York, Nov. 29.—Albert T. Patrick, thrice on the verge of death in the electric chair, and a life prisoner in Sing Sing prison for the murder of Wm. Marsh Rice, ate his Thanksgiving dinner at home in New York last night, a free man. Pardoned Wednesday by Governor Dix, he was released from the prison at 4.25 yesterday afternoon, and less than two hours later was in the welcoming arms of his wife at their home on Clermont avenue.

"I expect always to continue my fight for vindication and to clear my name," the pardoned lawyer announced just before he left the sombre walls of the prison behind him. "I have been twelve years in prison— eighteen months in the Tombs in New York, and over ten years here. I shall never cease my efforts to clear my name until I have been successful."

Cheers from a crowd of several hundred persons greeted the pardoned lawyer when the automobile drew up in front of his home in New York. But the greeting passed unnoticed by Patrick. On the threshold stood his wife. Her one word of welcome was "Al." Ten years ago, on the eve of the day when Patrick was sentenced to die, the pair was married in the Tombs.

MAN IS FOUND AFTER 8 YEARS

Will Return to Care For His Aged Father

Woodstock, Nov. 29.—After a search lasting many years, in which the police of the whole Dominion and the United States took part, Heber Lane, who disappeared from his home in Ingersoll eight years ago, has been found, and a wire received by Chief Fish of Ingersoll Wednesday night, from Chief of Police Koehler of Cleveland, gives the information that the young man, who has been sought after for so long a period of time, is on a boat plying between Duluth and Buffalo. He will return to his home in this county in a few days, where an aged father has been anxiously waiting for news from him for several years.

A DOUBLE DROWNING

Canadian Press Despatch.

Belleville, Nov. 29— Daniel Sweeney and his wife, aged forty-four and forty, were drowned yesterday on the Bay of Quinte, when their motor boat, in which they were coming from Point Anne to Belleville, was scuttled by running into a cove which was frozen over. The woman's body has been recovered, but the man's has not yet been located.

ALLAN STUDHOLME URGES AGAINST CITY MAKING COMPANY AGREEMENTS

You Have the Power at Your Own Door; Go into Business for Yourself and Get the Benefits for Yourself, He Says.

Don't entangle yourself with any company; get into business for yourself.

Get into the game early and whatever there is in it, keep it for Peterborough.

You in Peterborough ought to be thankful that you are so close to the supply.

No one can tell what Peterborough will be in 20 or 30 years. If you sign with a company where will you be? In the same position as you are to-night.

Don't take anything. Get your mass meetings, public discussions and convince the people they can get something better.

You are in the most favorable situation. Right at your own door stands your power.

ALLAN STUDHOLME, M.P.P.

A most attentive gathering at the Labor Hall last night, heard a strong address by Allan Studholme M.P.P. when he dealt for the major part of his time on that very interesting subject, "Hydro-Electric Power and its significance to Peterborough or any other municipality."

Undoubtedly, he strengthened the already widespread feeling in favor of public ownership. He made many statements of facts, generally known and which in many cases have been brought strikingly before the people through the bitter fights in different municipalities in a futile endeavor by private corporations to go one better than the Hydro Electric Commission. He advised strongly against Peterborough doing business with companies. There was nothing in it for the city, he averred. One of his strongest arguments against such a situation was that Peterborough had power right at her own door, and no one could tell what Peterborough would be in 20 or 30 years. Doing business with companies meant that the city would, at the expiration of that time, stand in the same position as to-day.

THE PARTNERSHIP

Speaking of the recent proposition of the Electric Power Company, to take the city into partnership in the promotion of the several utilities, and by which the city would agree to take power from the Company for thirty years, he pointed out that the supply of power came from Peterborough's) own door and the city would not come in for the big thing. After ten years, the city could buy out the company, if the price was not satisfactory, arbitration proceedings could be taken. What was it worth? The speaker pointed out

INDIA'S CONTRIBUTION TO ENGLAND'S NAVAL FORCE

Three Super-Dreadnoughts and Nine Armored Cruisers

Canadian Press Despatch.

Bombay, India, Nov. 29 — Three Super-dreadnoughts and nine first class armored cruisers will shortly be presented to the British Government by independent rulers, princes and nobles of India, if they can carry out successfully a plan, recently drawn up by them, to collect funds for this purpose among themselves. It is suggested that the warships, when presented, be stationed in the Red Sea, Mediterranean and Indian Ocean.

LIBERALS AND CONSERVATIVES CLAIM CONSPIRACY EXISTS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 29— J. H. Burnham, M. P., for Peterborough West, is the subject of long editorials in the Montreal Star, Ottawa Citizen and other papers, which all insist that no conspiracy against the French exists, although they admit that it is possible that he may have something up his sleeve. On the other hand the French are all in Mr. Burnham's favor, both Liberal and Conservative, charging that there is a conspiracy and no matter how august the parties in it, they will fight it to the death

Big Price For Winnipeg Land.

Winnipeg, Nov. 29.—The property formerly owned and occupied by the Eastern Townships Bank, on the east side of Main street, near the corner of Portage avenue, and now owned and occupied by the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has been purchased by the Dominion Trust Co. The price was $300,000, or $7,500 a foot. This is the highest price ever paid for Winnipeg property. The lot has a frontage of 40 feet on Main street.

SLAVERY SAID TO EXIST IN CONSTRUCTION CAMP

Serious Charges Made to United States Consul by Laborers.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 29— According to complaints to United States Consul Jones here, a condition of virtual slavery is said to exist in the construction camps of Foley, Welch & Stewart, on the Grand Trunk Pacific and sensations are promised, if American laborers who complained to Washington, substantiate their charges. Those killed in accidents, or dying from other causes, were buried with scant ceremony, and in case of foreigners, burial has not been humane. SHOOTS HIS DIVORCED WIFE

Fatal Shooting as Woman Was Cooking Dinner.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Dorothy Pusey was shot and fatally injured by her divorced husband yesterday as she was preparing a Thanksgiving Day dinner for her five young children. Pusey then failed in an attempt to commit suicide.

Mrs. Pusey had roasted a large turkey, and was at a delicatessen store near her home when her former husband called. Unaware of his presence she returned with her arms full of dainties for the dinner.

"Are you going to invite me to your dinner?" asked the former husband.

"No, I'm not," replied Mrs. Pusey, "the children are all I want. This is going to be a happy party."

Pusey then drew a revolver and fired three times. One of the bullets struck her in the head.

After he saw his wife fall, Pusey turned the revolver on himself. He fired into his neck, but surgeons say the wound would not cause death.

CONTRACTOR'S HEAVY LOSS

Big Power House Nearing Completion is Burned

GERMAN JESUITS ARE CURBED

Berlin, Nov. 29.—The Bundesrat has reached a decision regarding the administration of the anti-Jesuit bill, which, in effect, holds that Bavaria's recent course was illegal.

By the Bundesrat's ruling the Jesuits will be permitted to hold family masses in the home, administer extreme unction, deliver scientific addresses, which, however, must not touch on religion; but they are permitted no further activities.

A secret order issued last spring by the President of the Bavarian Council of Ministers permitted the holding of "conferences" in the churches, at which sacraments might be administered.

NEW LIBERAL POLICY FORSHADOWED BY CARVELL

Member For Carleton Says Opposition Stands For Better Living at Lower Cost.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—F. B. Carvell, the Liberal member for Carleton, N.B., perhaps prematurely disclosed to the House in the debate upon the address, yesterday afternoon, some outline of the so-called "New National Policy," upon which the Liberal party hopes to unite before the next general election. He declared that the chief aim of the Liberal party was to reduce the cost of living. Cheaper clothes, cheaper food, cheaper homes and general comfort for the people would be their slogan in the next campaign. To this end he declared for an increase in the British preference, and reaffirmed the fealty of the party to reciprocity and wider markets everywhere. Before Mr. Carvell arrived at this point, however, he had been the centre of a stormy scene in the debate on the Macdonald election. One of the Liberals arrested had been lodged in jail at Portage la Prairie, he said, and in spite of Mr. Meighen's statement to the contrary, Mr. Carvell insisted that he had not been allowed to consult a lawyer for several days. This was proved to be untrue by the affidavit of the man himself.

The Minister of Public Works declared that the victory in Macdonald had been an honest, clean-cut victory. The Conservatives had won because they denounced reciprocity. The Minister had stated reciprocity in that campaign and now declared to the House that there was no honest sentiment for reciprocity in Western Canada.

The Liberals had attempted to win in Macdonald by appeals to the Roman Catholic voters, he said. Such appeals had been made by Mr. Boyer and by Mr. Gauthier and by a French Liberal newspaper in Winnipeg, which had described the Conservative party as "the slave of the Orange Order." These appeals had failed in their design. But they had not been relied upon exclusively by the Liberal party, which he charged with seeking by bribery and every kind of electoral corruption to snatch a favorable verdict from the Macdonald electorate.

According to Mr. Rogers, no one had been improperly arrested and the authorities had erred only in showing too much leniency to men who were very properly placed under arrest.

As to the Richelieu bye-election Mr. Rogers denied authorizing Sir Rodolphe Forget to promise the marine railway to the electors of Sorel. "I never heard of the marine railway," he continued, "until weeks after the election."

In conclusion Mr. Rogers said that he believed the Government could carry any riding in Canada where reciprocity was the issue. He quoted from a speech by President-elect Wilson, to the effect that the Canadians had better adapt the tariff to their economic needs than had the people of the United States.

Mr. Carvell, after discussing the Macdonald bye-election, outlined the ideal of the Liberal party. "We want cheaper food for the working people," Mr. Carvell said, and at the suggestion of someone sitting near him, declared that the chief purpose of the party was to reduce the cost of living and improve the general condition of the people. To this end he favored an increase in the British preference and all arrangements within and without the Empire which would increase the trade of Canada.

As to reciprocity Mr. Carvell declared himself strongly in favor of it. He did not believe that the Tories could carry another election on the reciprocity issue, "even though they waved the flag and crucified Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Ontario because of his creed."

Mr. Carvell then presented tables of statistics to show that the Canadian people were paying millions of dollars into the United States treasury because of the defeat of reciprocity. The Canadian producers, in his opinion, paid the duty upon all cattle, fish, hay, lumber, laths and shingles exported from Canada to the U. S.

One Canadian to his knowledge had lost fifty thousand dollars on account of the hay duty. In New Brunswick and Quebec, according to Mr. Carvell, the people all regretted the defeat of reciprocity.

Trade arrangements with the British West Indies and Australia were commendable, as were all arrangements that gave us wider markets. Wider markets, cheaper living, and a substantial increase in the British preference were, together with reciprocity, "nailed to the mast" by Mr. Carvell.

Mr. Boyce, who followed Mr. Carvell, called upon Mr. Graham, Mr. Lemieux and Mr. Pugsley to also stand up and declare where they stood on the reciprocity issue.

Mr. Placaud, the Liberal member for Megantic, Quebec, said that the people of his province were not unwilling to contribute to Imperial defence, and that no sensible person would condemn the proposals of the Government in advance.

Mr. Turriff, Liberal member for Assiniboia, declared that the Government was under the influence of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. This accounted in Mr. Turriff's opinion for the refusal of a conciliation board to the men in the recent strike.

That strike, he said, was causing a grain blockade at Fort William. It was at the instigation of the C.P.R. that the standard of the National Transcontinental had been degraded

GERMANY'S AIR NAVY

Fleet of Twenty Zeppelin Dirigibles to be Built.

Berlin, Nov. 29.—In the lobbies of the Reichstag yesterday discussion centred on what is now regarded as the certain appearance of Germany's first aerial navy law.

I am able to state on reliable authority that the recommendations of the German War Office and Admiralty include the creation, as a beginning, of a fleet of twenty Zeppelin airships of about 920,000 cubic feet capacity, capable of traveling fifty one miles an hour, and remaining aloft four days and four nights without landing, and capable of carrying and discharging a ton of explosives.

From the same authority I learn that Gen. Von Moltke, chief of the general staff, a few months ago unsuccessfully sought to induce the Government to bring in estimates for a fleet of twenty-five Zeppelins.

Mr. Churchill's Admission.

New York, Nov. 29.—A London cable says: Following an announcement from Berlin that the latest Zeppelin dirigible, manned by a crew of 18 men, and costing $175,000, on her test flight flew successfully for four days, dropping a third of a ton of high explosives on to a huge raft, which was destroyed. Mr. W. Joynson Hicks, M.P., in the House of Commons yesterday questioned the First Lord of the Admiralty as to the identity of an airship which passed over Sheerness on Oct. 14.

Mr. Winston Churchill admitted that it was not a British airship, and confessed that England had no airship equal to Zeppelin's, or capable of traveling sixty miles an hour. The navy has aeroplanes capable of traveling seventy miles an hour, but there was no doubt Germany held pre-eminence in airships.

Col. Seely said the army has five aeroplanes capable of making seventy miles an hour, and fifteen now are being constructed. He refused to tell whether Great Britain has guns capable of hitting air craft six thousand feet high.

Belleville Man Returns From West Only To Meet Death.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 29— Andrew Latta, aged sixty-five, of Belleville, was found asphyxiated this morning at the home of his sister, Anne Street, Toronto. He had just returned from a trip to the West, on a Harvesters' excursion. Indications were that that the gas had been accidentally turned on.

Kingston Railway Not for Sale.

Kingston, Nov. 29.—H. W. Richardson, president of the Kingston Street Railway, told a deputation which waited upon him from the City Council to secure a price for the sale of the road to the city, that the road was not for sale. He says that the company financed it when it was not on a paying basis, and now that it is paying the company wants to get the cream.

Three years ago the city could have purchased the railway for almost nothing, and the citizens are agitating for the purchase of the road.

This was brought about owing to the fact that the council and company are at loggerheads over the paving of Princess street.

Quick Action on a Cold

One of the most important points in treating a cold is to act quickly, at the first sign of trouble, before the cold has a chance to get "settled" anywhere.

The other point of vital importance is to take

NA-DRU-CO
Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne

This safe and reliable household remedy acts very quickly. It relieves the irritation and "stuffed up" feeling in the air passages, loosens the phlegm, promotes expectoration, soothes the tickling which makes you cough, and drives out the cold before it gets troublesome.

But even if the cough or cold has become deep-seated and persistent, Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne will break it up.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED BY HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT BY H. K. FLY CO.

Marjorie poured maple syrup on her tone, as she purred: "This train of yours is an awfully fast train, isn't it?"

"Sort of," said the conductor, with just a trace of thaw. What followed made him hold his breath, for the outrageous little hussy was actually saying: "The company must have a great deal of confidence in you to entrust the lives and welfare of so many people to your presence of mind and courage."

"Well, of course, I can't say as to that—" Even Mallory could see that the man's reserve was melting fast as Marjorie went on with relentless treacle:

"Talk about soldiers and firemen and life-savers! I think it takes a braver man than any of those to be a conductor—really."

"Well, it is a kind of a responsible job." The conductor swelled his chest a little at that, and Marjorie felt that he was already hers. She hammered the weak spot in his armor:

"Responsible! I should say it is. Mr. Mallory is a soldier, but soldiers are such ferocious, destructive people, while conductors save lives, and —if I were only a man I think it would be my greatest ambition to be a conductor—especially on an overland express."

The conductor told the truth when he confessed: "Well, I never heard it put just that way." Then he spoke with a little more pride, hoping to increase the impression he felt he was making: "The main thing, of course, is to get my train through On Time!"

This was a facer. He was going to get his train through On Time just to oblige Marjorie. She stammered:

"I don't suppose the train, by any accident, would be delayed in leaving Ogden?"

"Not if I can help it," the hero averred, to reassure her.

"I wish it would," Marjorie murmured.

The conductor looked at her in surprise: "Why, what's it to you?" She turned her eyes on him at full candle power, and smiled:

"Oh, I just wanted to do a little shopping there."

"Shopping! While the train waits! Excuse me!"

"You see," Marjorie faltered, "by a sad mistake, my baggage isn't on the train. And I haven't any—any—I really need to buy some—some things very badly. It's awfully embarrassing to be without them."

"I can imagine," the conductor mumbled. "Why don't you and your husband drop off and take the next train?"

"My husb—Mr. Mallory has to be in San Francisco by tomorrow night. He just has to!"

"So have I."

"But to oblige me? To save me from distress—don't you think you could?" Like a sweet little child she twisted one of the brass buttons on his coat sleeve, and wheedled: "Don't you think you might hold the train just a little tiny half hour?"

He was sorry, but he didn't see how he could. Then she took his breath away again, by asking, out of a clear sky: "Are you married?"

He was as awkward as if she had proposed to him, she answered for him: "Oh, but of course you are. The women wouldn't let a big, handsome, noble brave giant like you escape long." He mopped his brow in agony as she went on: "I'm sure you're a very chivalrous man. I'm sure you would give your life to rescue a maiden in distress. Well, here's your chance. Won't you please hold the train?"

She actually had her cheek almost against his shoulder, though she had to poise atiptoe to reach him. Mallory's dismay was changing to a boiling rage, and the conductor was a pitiable combination of Saint Anthony and Tantalus. "I—I'd love to oblige you," he mumbled, "but it would be as much as my job's worth."

"How much is that?" Marjorie asked, and added reassuringly, "If you lost your job I'm sure my father would get you a better one."

"Maybe," said the conductor, "but—I got this one."

Then his rolling eyes caught sight of the supposed husband gesticulating wildly and evidently clearing for action. He warned Marjorie: "Say, your husband is motioning at you."

"Don't mind him," Marjorie urged, "just listen to me. I implore you. I—" Seeing that he was still resisting, she played her last card, and, crying, "Oh, you can't resist my prayers so cruelly," she threw her arms around his neck, sobbing, "Do you want to break my heart?"

Mallory rushed into the scene and the conductor, tearing Marjorie's arms loose, retreated, gasping, "No! and I don't want your husband to break my head."

Mallory dragged Marjorie away, but she shook her little fist at the conductor, crying: "Do you refuse? Do you dare refuse?"

"I've got to," the conductor abjectly insisted.

Marjorie blazed with fury and the siren became a Scylla. "Then I'll see that my father gets you discharged. If you dare to speak to me again, I'll order my husband to throw you off this train. To think of being refused a simple little favor by a mere conductor! of a stupid old emigrant train!! of all things!!!"

Then she hurled herself into a chair and pounded her heels on the floor in a tantrum that paralysed Mallory. Even the conductor tapped him on the shoulder and said: "You have my sympathy."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Dog-on Dog Again.

As the conductor left the Mallorys to their own devices, it rushed over him anew what sacrilege had been attempted—a fool bride had asked him to stop the Trans-American of all trains!—to go shopping of all things! He stormed into the smoking room to open the safety valve of his wrath, and found the porter just coming out of the buffet cell with a tray, two hollow-stemmed glasses and a bottle swaddled in a napkin.

"Say, Ellsworth, what in —— do you suppose that female back there wants?—wants me to hold the Trans-American while—"

But the porter was in a flurry himself. He was about to serve champagne, and he cut the conductor short:

"'Scuse me, boss, but they's a lovin' couple in the stateroom forward that is in a powerful hurry for this. I can't talk to you now. I'll see you later." And he swaggered off, leaving the door of the buffet open. The conductor paused to close it, glanced in, started, stared, glared, roared: "What's this! Well, I'll be—a dog smuggled in here! I'll break that coon's head. Come out of there, you miserable or'nary hound." He seized the incredulous Snoozleums by the scruff of his neck, growling, "It's you for the baggage car ahead," and dashed out with his prey, just as Mallory, now getting new bearings on Marjorie's character, spoke across the rampart of his Napoleonically folded arms:

"Well, you're a nice one!—making violent love to a conductor before my very eyes. A minute more and I would have—"

She silenced him with a snap: "Don't you speak to me! I hate you! I hate all men. The more I know men the more I like—" this reminded her, and she asked anxiously: "Where is Snoozleums?"

Mallory, impatient at the shift of subject, snapped back: "Oh, I left him in the buffet with the waiter. What I want to know is how you dare to—"

"Was it a colored waiter?"

"Of course. But I'm not speaking of—"

"But suppose he should bite him?"

"Oh, you can't hurt those nigger waiters. I started to say—"

"But I can't have Snoozleums biting colored people. It might not agree with him. Get him at once."

Mallory trembled with suppressed rage like an overloaded boiler, but he gave up and growled: "Oh, Lord, all right. I'll get him when I've finished—"

"Go get him this minute. And bring the poor darling back to his mother."

"His mother! Ye gods!" cried Mallory, wildly. He turned away and dashed into the men's room with a furious: "Where's that damned dog?"

He met the porter just returning. The porter smiled: "He's right in heah, sir," and opened the buffet door. His eyes popped and his jaw sagged: "Why, I lef' him here just a minute ago."

"You left the window open, too," Mallory observed. "Well, I guess he's gone."

The porter was panic-stricken: "Oh, I'm turrible sorry, boss, I wouldn't have lost dat dog for a fortune. If you was to hit me with a axe I wouldn't mind."

To his utter befuddlement, Mallory grinned and winked at him, and murmured: "Oh, that's all right. Don't worry." And actually laid half a dollar in his palm. Leaving the black lids batting over the starting eyes, Mallory pulled his smile into a long face and went back to Marjorie like an undertaker: "My love, prepare yourself for bad news."

Marjorie looked up, startled and apprehensive: "Snoozleums is ill. He did bite the darkey."

"Worse than that—he—he—fell out of the window."

"When!" she shrieked, "in heaven's name—when?"

"He was there just a minute ago, the waiter says."

Marjorie went into instant hysterics, wringing her hands and sobbing: "Oh, my darling, my poor child—stop the train at once!"

A WONDERFUL CASE

Three Months in Hospital and Came Out Uncured.

Zam-Buk Cured Him in Few Weeks.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholster and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N.B., says:—

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. When the knees got warm, it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger, and at a time when my finger was in such a terrible condition that I feared it would have to be amputated."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.

My Diamond

By LAWRENCE E. DENTON

Helen Wallace and I played together as children. When we grew to man's and woman's estate our companionship assumed a different phase. But I could not remain in the place where I was born and raised, for there was no career for me there. I must go forth to seek my fortune. And what troubled both Helen and me was that the only opening that presented itself was in South Africa. A man who was intending to take a stock of goods out to the cape and open a store there offered to take me along with him as assistant.

My parting with Helen was harrowing—so harrowing that I was tempted to back out before sailing. But Helen had the stuff in her to prevent my doing so, and in due time I found myself in my new home. But the attempt of my employer was a failure, and I found myself stranded in a foreign country without means to get home.

I was obliged to go to work with pick and shovel in the diamond mines. I gave up all hope of possessing Helen, for to marry a man must have some means, or at least decent employment, and I had neither, besides having an ocean between us. The only thing I learned that was of any value was to tell a diamond in the rough when I saw it. But almost any knowledge is useful if one has luck to go with it. One evening when going from work to the house where I boarded, being tired and seeing a shady spot beside the road, I went there and lay down and fell asleep.

When I awoke I lay on my side and was looking straight before me at the ground. I was very near a stone about as big as a hickory nut, and my vision at opening my eyes after they had been for some time closed was very keen. The stone was so near like a diamond uncut that I reached for it and examined it more closely. Then the realization that it was a gem came over me, and I knew that I was rich.

"What you got there?"

I thrust my find in my pocket as one of my fellow workmen named Saunders came and stood looking down upon me. I said nothing, and he knew that I had something to conceal. The look that came over his face frightened me. I saw in his eye that he suspected I had stolen a diamond from the mines and had succeeded in getting it past the examiners. He would either accuse me or try to dispossess me.

Presently we walked on together and parted at my abiding place. That evening he left his own boarding house and took a room at mine. The same night I slept with my diamond in my mouth and before morning heard some one in the room rifling my pockets. I knew that it was Saunders looking for the diamond.

My problem was to cross the Atlantic ocean with my treasure. I had no money to pay my passage and must find an opportunity to work my way. A ship was leaving for New York, and I asked for a berth as cabin boy, but was told that the ship's company in every department was full. Not daring to remain behind, I went aboard just as the ship was casting off and hid below in the cargo. I remained there till the vessel was well at sea, where, being hungry, I went on deck, confessed myself to be a stowaway and offered to do any work which I might be assigned.

"The meanest job we have," said the officer to whom I made the confession, "is scullion. Go down to the galley and tell the cook to make use of you."

As I was proceeding on my way to the galley whom should I see but Saunders. I caught at a rail for support. He did not speak to me, but the look he gave me told me that he was resolved to possess himself of my diamond before we left the ship.

The cook, when I entered the galley, was kneading dough for bread and turned the work over to me. When I had finished I put the dough into the baking pans, and before thus depositing the last batch I worked my diamond into it and made an indentation by which I should know the loaf after it was baked.

I was then put to scouring knives, and while doing so who should come to the galley but the captain, accompanied by Saunders. I was told that Saunders had represented himself as a detective of the diamond mining company and had been sent abroad to secure a diamond I had purloined and was trying to get away with. They took me to Saunders' stateroom and searched me thoroughly, even giving me an emetic in order to force it out of my stomach in case I had swallowed it.

Since I had no baggage and the captain did not believe that I could have got rid of the stone in so short a time, he declined to turn me over to Saunders. I went back to my work in the galley in time to take the loaves from the oven, and when the cook went out for a moment I thrust the marked loaf into a pantry drawer, where it was not noticed. There I left it safely till just before we reached port. I knew Saunders would try to get my treasure when I went ashore, so the night we sailed up New York bay on passing near the land I jumped into the water with the diamond and swam ashore.

I never saw Saunders again. My stone I sold for $60,000 and, having dressed myself like a gentleman took a train for Helen's home.

I shall never get over the delight of that meeting. When I told her that I possessed a fortune she fairly bubbled over with joy. We were soon married and have lived in clover ever since.

Don't preach. Hand 'im a line of jolly. He's just a regular husband.

A TALENTED WOMAN

Mrs. J. W. F. Harrison Is Poet, Novelist, Musician and Editor.

Although a painter frequently finds in music a relaxation, the musician tries his amateur hand at sketching, and the poet may amuse himself at modelling, yet seldom does any one of these artists do serious work outside his own art. For this reason does Mrs. J. W. F. Harrison hold a distinct place among Canadian artists, for she is musician and musical composer, poet and novelist. Besides these, the lady has appeared on the platform, her recital lecture on "The Music of French Canada" having this great advantage, that the speaker can herself illustrate every phase of her subject as she traces the folk music back to primitive times or describes the music of New France. She can turn to the piano with a gay Normandy love song or give the chords of a Gregorian chant.

Long before Drummond or E. W. Thompson, Sir Gilbert Parker or Henry Vandyke, had exploited the French peasant of Canada, before Horatio Walker had discovered the picturesquesness of these Arcadians, Mrs. Harrison had heard the lilt of their "chansons," had echoed them in her poetry and set them to music. She had been keenly appreciative of the simplicity and dignity of the habitant, and of the courtliness and pride of the seigneurs, the last of a mediaeval feudal system that is so strange a contradiction in our times.

These impressions found expression in essays and short stories, but most adequately perhaps in her poetry, a book of which was published under the name, "Pine, Rose, and Fleur de Lis."

"Crowded Out" is a collection of short stories, all Canadian in subject, which appeared in different publications, other contributions appearing in Chicago, Philadelphia, and Toronto papers over the name "Seranus," a name strange to say, much more familiar to England and American readers than Canadian.

In those earlier writings Mrs. Harrison secured an apprenticeship for her important novel, "The Forest of Bourg Marie," which is a distinct revelation of power and mastery of material. It was a sympathetic study of patriarchal life among the French-Canadians, the solvent point of the situation grasped with artistic thrill, the plot enthralling in spite of the fact that it has no love "motif," no portrait of a woman.

A Canadian by birth, of British descent, Mrs. Harrison spent the impressionable years of her girlhood at school in Lower Canada, as it was then called. She claims that, going there from the more English Ontario, she was much more impressed by the French character and the historic setting and quaint surroundings than if she had always been familiar with them. Her musical education began early, and was continued along with her other studies. She later studied abroad under Bescovitz, becoming a pianist of such ability as to take part in ensemble duets with Jehin Prume, has appeared in Montreal as accompanist to Max Heinrich, Winch, and other solo vocalists, and was also for a time contralto soloist in Ottawa in her early married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, the former also a musician, the organist in St. Simon's Church, and one of the Conservatory staff, are at the centre of things artistic in Toronto, whether pertaining to music, letters, or paintings, and their friendships are cosmopolitan. Their home bears evidence of good taste, and its rooms have the charm of rooms lived in. A new picture on the walls is as welcome as a friend.

"Pat" as Teacher.

On the Sunday when Their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia were in Victoria, B.C., in September, the duke and the princess attended the morning service at Christ Church Cathedral, and, upon leaving, Princess Patricia promised Dean Doull that she would return in the afternoon and take one of the classes in the Sunday school. She did so, and was given charge of a class of young girls from six years upwards. The topic was the first verse of Hymn 417 of the Hymn Book, well known to all English Church people by its first line, "Brightest and best of the sons of the morning." There are four lines to the first verse of the hymn, the last one reading "Guide where our infant Redeemer is laid."

Princess Patricia managed to secure answers from the children as to the meaning of the first three lines of the verse, but when she asked what was the meaning of the words, "Our infant Redeemer," there was an absolute silence on the part of the pupils.

"Surely," said the princess, "some of you know what these words mean."

"Yes," came the answer from one of the children. "I know, it means our Bishop."

And it is said that Princess Patricia is telling the story herself as an illustration of the influence of Bishop Roper in his diocese.

Will You Join the St. Nicholas Club?

Every Lady in Peterborough is Eligible For Membership.

Christmas less than a month away and many children are wondering what Santa Claus is going to bring them. Some have made up their minds as to what they want, and are already wishing hard. Some, no doubt, will wish in vain, for the reason that older persons know, but little ones not aware of. That the number of children who will be disappointed on Christmas may be reduced to a minimum, the Review suggests the organization of a St. Nicholas Club, which every woman and girl in the city may join by sending her name to the Review office on a post card.

What will the cost be? Just whatever you want it to cost you—nothing more. The Review's St. Nicholas Girl will send you the name of a little boy or girl who has a wish. You can go and see the little one, and find out his or her hopes or needs to make Christmas happy, and fulfil them according to your purse and the feeling of your heart.

The greatest joy at Christmas comes from giving.

A CRISIS

The Remedy Applied Was Successful

By ELLEN T. ARMSTRONG

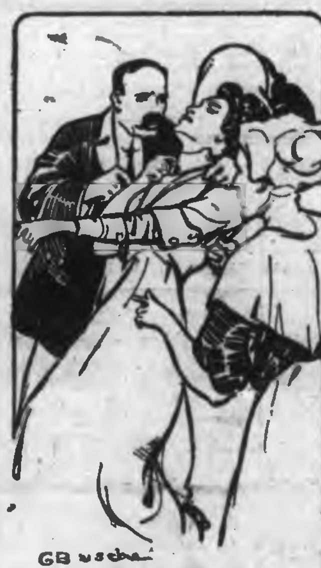
Edward Ingersoll married when he was twenty-two and lived happily with his wife for eleven years, when she died without having borne him children. In three years he married a second wife, who was the same age as his first at the time of his first marriage.

Whether the second Mrs. Ingersoll was more wayward than the first had been at the time of the first marriage is a question. Perhaps if Ingersoll had remained twenty-two he would have got on more easily with the second. As it was, she seemed very restive to him. He realized that she was young and needed to be carefully handled. But with all his patience and gentleness she showed an increased disposition to be fretful. This led to occasional upbraidings on her part, which were met with efforts to soothe her on her husband's part.

He came home one evening from business to find her gone. He was astonished, disappointed.

After the first shock he began to consider what course to pursue in the premises. He had little faith in severity, realizing that it would be more likely to widen the breach than to heal it. On the other hand, if he begged his wife to return to him he would probably be obliged to continue to be a beggar. And yet there did not seem to be any middle course unless he should leave her to see her error and return to him of her own accord. This last course he determined upon, but resolved to take advantage of any current they might drift into whereby he might facilitate their reunion. He waited a few days for her to return, or at least communicate with him, but she did neither. He knew she was at her former home, in which she had been born and was now petted and sympathized with by all her family, being admirably situated to stand a long siege.

He wrote her that in consequence of her having left him with no housekeeper it would be necessary for him to procure one. Since she would doubtless not care to have a woman come into the house to find her effects exposed he suggested that she come and put away such articles as she would prefer should not fall into other hands. If she did not care to come herself she might send some one to act for her.



GAVE A SHRIEK AND FELL INTO HER FATHER'S ARMS.

If Ingersoll intended to get her back with a view to keeping her the ruse failed. She wrote him that she would send her sister Edith and asked when it would be convenient for him to have her come. He replied that as soon as he could find a housekeeper he would let her know. Then Edith might come, put away such things as were to be put away and turn over the house to the new manager.

The words new manager had an unpleasant sound to Mrs. Ingersoll, but as she pictured some elderly woman of low degree taking care of the house of which she had been the mistress she managed to swallow the pill. In due time a note came stating that a housekeeper had been engaged and would enter upon her duties the next evening. Mrs. Ingersoll sent her sister during the afternoon of the day mentioned in order that after she had put the things away she might have a look at the housekeeper and report.

When Miss Edith Martin had locked up everything according to her sister's instructions she sat down and waited for the new housekeeper, ostensibly to give her certain information, but really to see what kind of a creature she might be. Presently she heard a latchkey at work in the front door and going into the hall met a woman.

"Pardon me," said Edith. "I thought it was the new housekeeper."

"I am the new housekeeper."

"You?"

"Yes. You are Miss Martin, I suppose. Mr. Ingersoll told me I would probably find you here."

Miss Martin gasped for breath. The housekeeper was about twenty-eight years old and a very beautiful woman. Her hair was a soft glossy chestnut; her eyes were large liquid ones; her mouth is best described as kissable. Her manner was fully as attractive as her person. She smiled sweetly on Miss Martin and said that if she had not finished her work she would gladly help her and if she found anything left out that should be locked up she would notify her or Mrs. Ingersoll. In short, she sent Miss Martin away charmed with her in spite of the lady's disposition to quarrel with her on her sister's account.

When Mrs. Ingersoll was informed that the housekeeper was an attractive woman she sank down in a heap, as if she had been shot. The family gathered round her to brace her up, the stimulant used being reproaches cast upon her husband. "Brute, monster, villain," and similar epithets rattled about the room like pistol balls. The patient did not respond for a time, then suddenly straightened up and called for her hat and coat.

"Where are you going, dear?" asked mamma in astonishment.

"I'm going to turn that woman out of my house."

"For heaven's sake don't. You will meet your brute of a husband, and there will be a dreadful scene," said the mother.

"You'll make a goose of yourself," put in Miss Edith. "She's very ladylike, and your quarrel is not with her; it's with Edward."

"Well, I'll tell him just what I think of him."

"You can do that here," said papa, "and avoid an altercation with the housekeeper."

"What the dickens do you care who takes care of his house," put in Jimmie, Mrs. Ingersoll's younger and favorite brother, "since you don't wish to do it yourself?"

"Shut up, Jim. You talk like a fool," retorted Mrs. Ingersoll.

"It seems to me," said papa, "that you are the illogical one. My recommendation is for you to either let Edward alone or go back and assume your position as head of his house."

"My dear," interposed Mrs. Martin to her husband, "how can you expect that such a brute will take her back? He has doubtless treated her as he has in order to get her out of the way to make room for this vile woman."

At this Mrs. Ingersoll threw up her hands, gave a piercing shriek and fell into her father's arms. This finished the family conclave for the evening. Mrs. Ingersoll was put to bed and a sedative administered. She tossed about feverishly till morning, when she went to sleep, and the household walked about on tiptoe till 10 o'clock, when she awoke to a renewal of her misery. There was another family consultation, and she finally determined to go home and find out the worst. This meant that she wished to know what the introduction of a pretty young woman into her husband's home in lieu of a housekeeper meant. She sent a note to her husband stating that she would meet him at their former home when he returned after business, and she requested that his housekeeper be not present. She had so far recovered her equanimity as to make an excuse for the meeting and did not give away the fact that in case there was nothing in the way involving the housekeeper she was ready to come down from her high horse and be good.

Receiving a favorable reply at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, she went home and found her husband there. Her first words were:

"Who is this creature who has disgraced herself by"—

"Please do not speak so of an estimable woman," interrupted Ingersoll.

"Is there anything between you and her?"

"Anything what?"

"Anything wrong."

"No; she is my housekeeper."

There was a short silence, at the end of which Mrs. Ingersoll said:

"Edward, I have acted hastily."

"You certainly have."

"I'm sorry."

"That's quite sufficient, sweetheart. I have no desire to humiliate you, but let me tell you that you took a step which in most cases would have led to crimination, and this would have drawn forth recrimination. I chose an entirely different course to show you the folly of your act. In doing so I was obliged to take a risk, but must take the chances of our permanent separation"—

"Oh, heaven!" she gasped.

"Whatever course I might pursue was fraught with danger."

By this time she was nestling in his arms, and the danger they had incurred had passed. It had been more than danger; it had been a crisis. But the crisis once passed the disease was broken.

Mr. Ingersoll informed her that his housekeeper was the wife of one of his intimate friends, who with her husband's consent had played the part for her—or rather their—benefit. She had only been in the house when she had come there to meet Miss Martin, and her husband was waiting for her outside.

Mrs. Ingersoll went to the telephone and called up her mother. This is what she said to her:

"My husband is the noblest man that ever lived. He has saved us from the horror of a permanent separation, and I love him far better than ever before."

"For heaven's sake!" interposed the husband. "Can't you wait till you see your mother without informing the world of my virtues through a telephone?"

While after this crisis Mr. and Mrs. Ingersoll had their disagreements, the lady was more cautious and never again "took the bit in her mouth." Indeed, as she gained in experience she realized and shuddered at the danger through which they had passed. She came also to admire the course her husband had pursued with her and admitted that leaving her to infer that her place was or might be supplied was an efficient remedy.

The Famous Peter Dunlevy.

Among the earliest gold-seekers in the Yale district of British Columbia was a young man named Peter Dunlevy, who was not only an early miner, but became one of the pioneer settlers of that part of the interior. When he arrived there was trouble in the vicinity of Fort Yale, where the Indians had massacred a number of whites, among whom was a woman. Dunlevy was warned not to visit the disaffected district, but he did not heed the warning and went right into the midst of the Indians without being molested. He used to say years after that "the whites never had any trouble with the Indians until the latter got whisky."

To Have Colleges.

It is the intention of the New Brunswick Government to establish two agricultural colleges in the province, one at Woodstock and the other at Sussex.

A Capful of Wind.

The origin of the phrase "a capful of wind" can be traced to a Norse king, Eric VI., who died in 907 A. D. He was credited with the useful power of directing the wind to blow where he wished by the simple method of turning his cap to that point of the compass. His powers were much appreciated and trusted and resulted in his being known as "windy cap." There is no evidence as to whether he could regulate the force of the wind as well as the direction. Presumably he could, or his faithful believers would not have been so many. A "bagful of wind" is another common expression and indicates something like a gale. This has been traced down to the classical legend of Aeolus and his captive winds confined in bags.

He Ought to Get It.

"On what grounds do you seek a divorce from your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Simply because of a pun," replied the long suffering husband. "You see, she's a sculptress, and it gets on my nerves to hear her remark twenty times a day, 'Will you love me when I mold?'"—New York Times.

Most of us are fully convinced that our wrongs trample on our rights.

WESTERNER CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

A Stubborn Case of This Painful Disease Cured After the Patient Had Suffered for Years by a Few Bottles of Sanol.

Slowly but surely it has come to be a recognized fact by both the people of Canada and the Medical profession that SANOL is the one remedy that may be relied on in cases of kidney disease, gravel, stones in the bladder, gall stones, kidney stones and all diseases and ailments due to the presence of uric acid in the system. This remedy has great numbers of cures to its credit and its makes have received many strong testimonials as to its powers. One of these testimonials was recently received from a gentleman who resides in Winnipeg, and who is well-known as a most reputable citizen. This letter reads in part as follows:

"For some years past I had suffered from my kidneys. About 18 months ago I had acute inflamation of those organs, when I was ordered to bed by the medical man attending me. I received considerable relief, but after a few months the trouble started again. It was then that I decided to try SANOL, of which I had both read and heard. After taking two bottles I felt very much better, and my condition rapidly improved. When I had taken the contents of eight bottles, I felt better than I had done for years, for my kidney trouble had entirely left me. It is now about three months since I finished with the medicine and I am enjoying the best of health."

The address of the gentleman who wrote the above will be given to any who may inquire. The makers of SANOL are able to give a large number of addresses of people who will give to inquirers similar testimony as to the benefits they have derived from the use of this remedy.

SANOL is manufactured only by the SANOL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD. 977 Main street, Winnipeg. It may be purchased from The Warne Drug Co., Limited, 351 George st., Peterboro, Ont.

IT WAS CREDITABLE TO WORKINGMEN

That so many working men were willing to pay 25 cents to attend the Trades and Labor Council's meeting last night to hear the Labor member of the Legislature speak on the Whitney Government's power policy, speaks well for the artisans of Peterborough. It shows that the laboring classes are taking an interest in the city's welfare and that there is a large progressive element in the ranks of labor here. At the same time it is to be hoped that future meetings in regard to the power question should be public in the truest sense of the word—free.

As was expected Mr. Studholme endorsed the Hydro-Electric scheme in general and urged the city to take advantage of it.

TRENT CANAL COMPLETION

The Peterborough deputation to interview Premier Borden and the Minister of Railways and Canals ought to have as strong a personnel as possible. The completion of the Trent Canal is a matter of first importance to Peterborough, since it is the lack of adequate water transportation that holds back the industrial progress of this city. Not only in the benefit to the Quaker Oats company, but because the importation of coal by water would be possible, ought the builders of a greater Peterborough be anxious that the Trent canal system should be extended at both ends as rapidly as possible. The present canal is of very limited service, because it is not deep enough for boats of sufficiently large tonnage to make the shipment of large cargoes possible.

As was pointed out by several speakers at the Board of Trade meeting, the early completion of the canal system would be the greatest boon to Central Ontario the Government could give. It is not a Peterborough question alone. All the way from Georgian Bay to Trenton there are municipalities vitally interested in the enlargement of the canal system. If the country is to spend $50,000,000 on the Welland canal, which will be used more by United States boats than Canadian, if it is to spend $100,000,000 on the Georgian Bay canal, $5,000,000 on Toronto Harbor, $5,000,000 on Halifax harbor, and make expenditures on a similar scale in other parts of the country, is not Central Ontario entitled at least to the completion of the Trent canal? The cost would be much less than any of these projects. The deputation ought to be composed of the most representative men of the community, be joined by deputations from every other place along the route, and insist with a firmness quite unmistakable that this part of the province will no be satisfied with anything less than prompt and thorough action. The Borden Government is willing to do what is reasonable in all cases of public improvement, and in this there is splendid opportunity for obtaining what is desired.

SENATOR ROSS's VIEWS

Though speaking at the Empire Club in Toronto, last September, Sir George Ross declared that Canada would not hesitate to do its utmost to aid Britain in keeping the navy paramount and though he at other times and places uttered very strongly imperial views on the navy question as Liberal leader in the Senate Mr. Ross seems in duty bound to get from under. It was thought a few days ago that he would stick squarely by his opinions on this and other matters, but apparently those who thought so—and we were to some extent in that number—must amend that view. Sir George Ross is going to try to square his own imperialistic talk with the narrow Laurier policy. He will obey the party instinct sufficiently to make his line of action little less than swallowing himself.

In speaking on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, Sir George said that a contribution was like throwing a penny in a beggar's box. Canada had the maritime people to man a navy the steel with which to build and the spirit with which to maintain a navy. Much of what be had to say was florid buncombe so often used upon the hustings, about the grandness of the flag and the greatness of the people who lived under it.

In actual argument, there was little meat. But if in that little what the new Senate leader says, means that he thinks Canada would be best serving the Empire and herself in naval defence by adopting the Laurier separatist navy, then it can only be said that he has stultified himself in a manner little expected. If he quails under the whip of partisan necessity in the reciprocity business in the Highway Bill, the T. and N. O. Subsidy Bill matters, then there will be ample reason for thinking that he has not entirely recovered from the habits that made him as Premier of Ontario a by-word for political shiftiness, and that led to his speedy and permanent undoing.

THE FRENCH PROTEST

The French Canadian protest against the new bi-lingual school regulations of the Ontario Department of Education is somewhat similar to the Ulster protest against Irish Home Rule. In neither case is there much expectation that the Government's course will be changed but the noise is being kept up in the hope of obtaining concessions. The French Canadians protest against the restriction of the use of French in the schools to the first and second forms. The regulations provide that as soon as the pupil has had the opportunity to acquire a knowledge of English instruction shall be given in that language. Not only to remove any chance that there shall be favoritism to bilingual schools, but also as a guarantee that the spirit of the regulations shall be observed, the Government has appointed English speaking inspectors in the French or semi-French districts. All this must commend itself to British Canadians as wise and fair. To the French children themselves it is doubly important that they shall be drilled in the use of English in the schools. Were it possible to be sure that this were done there would be no necessity of excluding French from the higher forms. But there is not. Therefore, the object must be obtained by making English the language of instruction preventing the use of French. But the reasons advanced by the French-Canadians against this, are surely not to be justified by reason or precedent. They have passed this resolution—

"Considering that we have the right to speak and to teach French in this province, by the natural right of any man to speak his own language, by the constant use of French in this province since its first discovery, by the resolutions, statutes, provincial regulations previous to circular 17, officially recognizing French in Ontario for no less than fifty years past and appointing of French textbooks to that end by the spirit and letter of the British North American Act, which recognized French as an official language in Canada."

That the educational regulations permitted the use of French collaterally with the use of English, gives the French a vested right to the use of that language in the schools cannot be admitted. The British North American Act provides that for national purposes French shall be an official language, but there is no implication, however remote, that French has any standing in Ontario as an official language. It is just as much subject to regulation in the schools as German, or Italian or Spanish.

Even if this were not so, there would be complete justification for the Whitney Government's actions. The good of the pupils themselves must be the supreme consideration, and under the old system, the French speaking pupils were not deriving the benefit of public instruction that might have been looked for. We hope the Whitney Government will stick to its guns, as it has the British section of Ontario completely in accord with its attitude.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It was quite appropriate for the Trades and Labor Council to present a firey speaker like Studholme at its smoker.

The best thing in Mr. Studholme's address last night was: "Don't entangle yourselves any more with corporations."

Allan Studholme said in his address last night that after learning the history of the power matter in Peterborough that the Seymour Power Co. was well named. It evidently could "see more" than the majority of the people.

BOYS TO ATTEND COUNCIL MEETING

Y.M.C.A. Legislators to Hear the City Fathers

Among the most interesting as well as the most interested visitors who will attend the regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough City Council will be the members of the City Council of the "Model City" in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Boys' Department. The boys will be accompanied by the Boys' Secretary, and will undoubtedly receive impression that will help to shape the course of their subsequent lives.

GAME TOURNAMENTS.

The game tournaments in pocket billiards, billiards and checkers, which are now being played off in the Boys' Department of the Y. are getting more interesting all the time. Enthusiasm among the boys is running high, and the friendly rivalry that exists among them is wholesome.

Ribbon Centerpiece Makes a Smart Gift This Season

If you are in doubt as to what to give the hostess who is fond of pretty things for her table, buy or, better still, make her a ribbon centerpiece.

To make the centerpiece purchase a wire basket of suitable size from a florist and wrap the frame with handsome satin ribbon of any suitable shade. This being accomplished, thread the ribbon in and out of the wire interstices, finishing the weaving at one side of the basket in a big bow formed of ribbon loops.

THE DE LAVAL OPERATIONS

Over One Hundred Men Are Being Employed

Two Other Buildings to go up Next Spring

The first of the De Laval buildings is progressing rapidly, so that the first storey is almost completed, and it is estimated that the entire structure will be completed about January 15th, 1913. One hundred and twenty men are working at the present time, the majority being bricklayers, helpers and carpenters.

Half a million of white brick is being put into this building, and more will be used on two other structures which are to be erected next spring, although it is not definitely known how large they will be. The present factory is composed of four rooms, and the plans for the others show the same number on a larger scale. The G.T.R. engineer has been staking the last few days for two sidings, off the Port Hope line, to run on either side of the building, and as soon as permission is granted, to cross Lansdowne street the tracks will be laid.

The De Laval construction construction work has given an impetus to building operations in the south end, and next year a big change will have been brought about.

BAZAAR IS WELL PATRONIZED

St. Andrew's Ladies Aid Meeting With Success

Splendid patronage rewarded the St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid Bazaar last night in the Market Hall, a constant stream of people passing in and out of the building all evening. A very large sale of the articles which stocked the various booths was experienced, and the Bazaar realized well financially. There are six artistically arranged booths and a tea booth on one side of the hall, the other section being partitioned off for a dining room.

The various booths with those in charge are:

Handkerchief Booth — Mesdames Waram, Weir and Miller.

Fancy Booth—Miss Mowatt, Mesdames McFarlane, Thompson and Gilman.

Farmers' Booth—Masters Cann and Dixon.

Fish Pond and Notion Booth—Mesdames Packenham, Harper and Chisholm.

WATER COMMISSIONERS ARE THREATENED WITH ACTION

John McDougall Co. Want Settlement of Account for Pump—Commissioners Claim Machine Proved Unsatisfactory and Are Not Disposed to Meet the Account.

City Solicitor Hall notified the Water Commissioners yesterday afternoon that he had received a letter from the Aylesworth legal firm, threatening to take action against the Commissioners on behalf of their clients, the John McDougall Company, to secure a settlement of their claim against the Commissioners for machinery installed at the pumping station. The City Solicitor was requested to write Mr. Kennedy, the engineer, who had charge of the work, asking him to put in writing certain statements which he made to the Commissioners about the noise created by the pumping unit and also to write the McDougall Company.

Mr. Barnard and Mr. La Plante waited on the Commissioners, asking asking for remission of rates, one for vacancy reasons, and the other on the ground that he was paying full charges when he only used a lawn service. The Commissioners reduced the amount of Mr. Barnard's charge. The secretary was instructed to notify Mr. La Plante that they could take no action regarding his complaint.

Mr. Cook, the Waterworks Department draughtsman, who is preparing a map of the city, showing the location of all hydrants, will be asked to hurry along the plan to a speedy conclusion.

Police Arrested Two Men Who Came in on Freight

Two Toronto young men giving their names as James Levack and Albert Greene, came into the city last evening by C.P.R. and were arrested soon after charged with vagrancy.

Levack claimed he was a steamfitter by trade, and that he had a home in Toronto.

Greene's story was that he and his friend left Toronto while drunk and their escapade was the result of one "stumping" the other to board a train.

Greene professed to be a steady man and said he had a wife and family to support at home. He is a house painter.

Both men were discharged with a warning to leave the city as expeditiously as possible.

SIX MONTHS.

"They need two or three men at the gaol" remarked Chief Thompson when the Magistrate hesitated over what to do with Bruce Roddy, up for being drunk.

Roddy has slept in the police station for the last two nights. The Magistrate thought six months on the hill would tide him over the winter nicely.

Y.M.C.A. DOES REACH DOWN AFTER THE POOR BOY

... the topics which was under ... at the Y.M.C.A. Boys' ... in Galt, was, whether ...C.A. failed to reach down ... the poor boys who were not ... with sufficient material ... to come with its influence.

... conversation with A. T. Nash, ... Secretary of the local Y.M. ... who has had much experience ... boy-life, he stated that Y.M. ...A. institutions did reach down after boys in the larger cities who were not as well fixed as their brothers in worldly goods or position and who could ill afford to join the Y.M.C.A. Many Y.M.C.A. institutions carried on newsboys' departments in conjunction with their other work and such worked out splendidly and to the great benefit of the boys.

In Peterborough, owing to the fact that the city was not large enough to require such a department, Mr. Nash did not feel that it would be a success. He advocated the co-operation of the churches with Y.M.C.A.'s in carrying on boys' work, each mutually assisting the other.

The Y.M.C.A. here has also received word from benevolently disposed and kindly citizens offering to buy tickets for any boys who were unable to secure them, but who desired to enjoy the privileges of the institution.

In Peterborough there are no boys who are not fairly well provided for and as a whole they are a jolly well contented lot.

WORKMAN HAD HAND CRUSHED

Hand Was Badly Lacerated—Was Taken To Hospital.

John Williams, of 339 Burnham street, had his left hand severely crushed while working at the C.G.E. this morning. Dr. Young was called and he was removed to the Nicholls Hospital. The hand was badly lacerated and some tenders were cut.

Some time ago the unfortunate man had the little finger on his right hand crushed, and it was found necessary to amputate the finger this morning.

Explosion Cost $300.

Indianapolis, Nov. 29.—Frank Higgins, of Boston, was accused of having admitted that the blowing up of the tower of the municipal buildings at Springfield, Mass., on April 4, 1911, had cost $300, by a witness at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial yesterday.

Daniel Gallagher also testified that after the explosion, Higgins admitted he had gone to Hartford, Conn., to establish an alibi.

Judge Anderson declined to suspend court on account of the holiday.

No One Is Blamed.

Montreal, Nov. 29.—That the sinking of the Cecilia L., the Lake St. Louis steamer, which went down on Nov. 1, twelve lives being lost, was due to the shifting of the cargo which had been properly secured, was the decision given yesterday by Wreck Commissioner H. St. G. Lindsay.

In his judgment the commissioner says the boat listed in the gale and even if the cargo had not shifted, would have capsized. No blame is attached to anybody.

Poured Acid Into Letter Boxes.

London, Nov. 29.—Another series of letter box outrages, supposed to be the work of militant suffragettes, was committed in the centre of London last evening. Acid was poured into letter boxes throughout the financial district, including Threadneedle street, the Stock Exchange and the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor of London.

Many letters were destroyed and much inconvenience was caused.

If you ever lose faith in human nature, just watch the faces of men and women light up when they look at a little child.

ART IN WAXWORK

Figures Made Nowadays That Are Really True to Life.

A SCULPTOR AND HIS MODEL.

When the Artist Cannot Get a Sitting From His Subject He Works From a Photograph or a Description—The Way the Effigies Are Made.

Dickens described Mrs. Jarley's famous waxworks as being "divers sprightly effigies of celebrated characters that stood more or less unsteadily upon their legs, with their eyes very wide open and their nostrils very much inflated and all staring with extraordinary eagnestness at nothing." But Mrs. Jarley was sure they were "so like life that if waxworks only spoke and moved about you'd hardly know the difference."

"I won't go so far as to say," ventured that estimable showwoman, "that I've seen waxworks quite like life, but I've certainly seen some life that was exactly like waxworks."

If Mrs. Jarley were with us today she could find plenty of wax figures that are altogether "quite like life," for the art of counterfeiting humanity has made great advances since the days of Mrs. Jarley.

Today waxworks are used for a variety of purposes. The United States army, navy and medical departments make extensive use of them. Wax figures form part of the outfit of many recruiting stations. The quartermaster's department uses them to show army costumes. The hospital service employs them to depict surgical operations. Museums use wax figures. Shopkeepers use them for displaying garments. Various waxworks exhibitions are still popular. And in every exposition nowadays hundreds of wax figures are used to portray life in distant times and climes.

Like any other commodity, wax figures can be had "ready made" or constructed "to order." The ready made kind are used principally in shop windows. The wax heads, arms and hands of these—the bodies are made of papier mache—are cast in stock molds, just as ready made coats are cut after stock patterns. They sell by the dozen and cost only $6 or $7 apiece.

The made to order wax figure is cast in a specially made mold, accurately fashioned after the given model and as carefully finished as a piece of statuary, which indeed it is. The very lowest cost for such a wax figure is $25, and from that sum the price runs as high as $200. It all depends upon the amount of time and labor expended by the artist.

The sculptor in wax begins a new figure by making a sketch of his subject. When he cannot get a sitting from his subject he makes use of a photograph or a written description. Skillful photographers can give descriptions of people they have photographed that are amazing for accuracy of detail. From this sketch a clay model is made. When this has hardened it is covered with plaster to form a mold. Imbedded in the plaster are strings, which, being pulled out just before the plaster is fully dry, cut the hardening mold in half, so that when firm it can be lifted off in sections.

Into this mold is poured in due time the wax, which it takes half a day to prepare. This wax must be melted and worked over and colored to match the complexion of the subject. Finally it is poured into the mold and allowed to harden.

The cast is first "trimmed up," all roughness and irregularities being smoothed off. Then the eyes are inserted. These are glass eyes that match exactly the shade of the subject's eyes.

Lastly the hair is put on. Strangely enough, this is a most difficult operation, for the hair of a wax image is not, as one might think, merely a wig laid on. To be sure, it is a wig, and it matches exactly the subject's hair, but it must be made to "grow." That is, it must seem to spring from the scalp and grow at various angles just as real hair does. So it must be put in and not on the scalp. The hair is inserted with needles, numbers of which are imbedded in a wooden handle so that the hair ends can be forced into the wax several at a time.

The most difficult task of all is to make whiskers look natural. To make the beard grow naturally with the correct "grain" every one of the thousands of hairs, each one-quarter of an inch long, has to be inserted separately—a labor that occupies many hours.

Mme. Tussaud was the originator of the waxworks exhibition. She was born in Switzerland in 1760 and when six years old was sent to Paris to be placed under the care of her uncle, M. Curius, artist to Louis XVI. Under him she studied drawing and modeling. In 1772 she opened the first waxworks in the Palais Royal. Figures of royalty comprise the principal exhibits of the waxworks of Europe. In this country the waxworks are more diversified. Any one who catches the public eye, be he murderer or president, is deemed a fitting subject for display. As interest in one character dwindles another figure must take its place, so that there is a constant changing of exhibits. It is interesting to note that in the leading American waxworks more than 2,000 different figures were exhibited in twenty-five years.—Harper's.

In the true life of the individual each day is the beginning of a new year.—Jordon.

He married a city girl and now they have napkins at every meal.

ADVOCATE OF OUTDOOR SCHOOLS

Galt, Nov. 29.—In a report of wide range evidencing much research, Dr. Vardon, medical health officer, advocates outdoor schools and medical inspection of pupils, and urges on the council to adopt such measures in the interest of the rising generation, 25 per cent. of whom, he declares, are mentally or physically defective.

Dr. Vardon strongly affirms the necessity of laws providing for medical examination of all candidates for matrimony and granting licenses only to couples absolutely fit in mind and body to contract marriage.

WILL CONFER WITH BRYAN

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 29.—Woodrow Wilson has written a letter to William Jennings Bryan, inviting him to a conference after Mr. Wilson's return from Bermuda. The President-elect wishes to consult with Mr. Bryan as one of the leaders of the Democratic party, but he will take counsel with a number of the other Democratic leaders also on his future program.

It is definitely announced, however, that Mr. Bryan is not coming to Bermuda, and that he has not been invited to do so.

Roosevelt Beat Taft.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 29.—The popular vote for President in the election of 1912 shows that Wilson polled throughout the country a total of 6,156,748 votes, Roosevelt 3,928,140, and Taft 3,376,422. The socialist vote for Debs was 678,783, with the socialist count lacking in seven states. Chafin, the prohibitionist candidate, received 160,644 votes.

The combined vote for Taft and Roosevelt, therefore, exceeded that for Wilson by 1,147,814. Roosevelt led Taft by 551,718.

In 1908 Bryan's popular vote was 6,393,182, and that of Taft 7,637,676. This shows that the Democrats lost 236,434 votes, while the Republicans and Progressives together polled 333,114 less than Taft in 1908.

C.P.R.'s New Cars.

Montreal, Nov. 29.—Forty-eight million dollars' worth of rolling stock has been ordered this year by the Canadian Pacific Railway according to a statement issued yesterday.

It is double the amount ever ordered by any other railway system in North America in the same period.

The new equipment ordered during 1912, includes 467 locomotives, 26,053 box cars, 626 flat cars, 401 coal cars, 300 stock cars, 227 refrigerator cars, 94 first-class sleepers, three compartment cars, 20 observation cars, 25 diners, 57 tourist cars, 117 first-class and suburban cars, 4 motor mountain climbing cars, 138 baggage, mail and express cars.

States Case Ends.

Indianapolis, Nov. 29.—The Government has almost completed its presentation of testimony at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial.

District Attorney Charles W. Miller announced yesterday the Government would end to-day or to-morrow. Then the defence will begin its case in denial of the charges that the 45 men on trial aided in the McNamara dynamite plots by illegally transporting explosives on passenger trains.

Mr. Miller also served notice that to-day he would insist on a prompt enforcement of the court's ruling that the bonds of fourteen of the defendants are invalid because they are indemnified.

ALLAN STUDHOLME URGES AGAINST

the danger from watered stock.

"It's the people who use the power who foot the bill. My advice is to have nothing to do with the company but vote when the by-law comes up, your money for a supply of power from the Hydro-Electric, to show what can be done. You are most favorably situated. Right at your door stands your power. It's up to the people to play the first game. You borrow the money and the Government stands at the back of it. You are playing our own cards and getting the benefit of it."

BRANTFORD'S CASE

Mr. Studholme cited the recent vote in Brantford, where the Cataract Company had come out with the statement that if the city would secure the Hydro prices, the company would go 10 per cent. lower.

"What did the people say?"

Brantford voted in favor of Hydro Electric and gave a majority of 800. The 10 per cent, the speaker held, was only a fairy tale. It was as in other agreements, what he termed "the joker." It meant a fight in the courts.

Seymour, he remarked, was rather appropriate for the company. They had looked ahead; they knew where the power was, and while the people of Peterborough were asleep, the Seymour company had secured possession of things. The joker in regard to the company's proposition was in the signing of the agreement to take a supply of power for 30 years.

Mr. Studholme referred to the position in which Hamilton found itself in regard to street lighting, before the Hydro-Electric Commission took up the fight.

Hamilton was paying $82.52 for a miserable little light in the street corner, that was turned out when the moon shone.

What happened?

The people commenced to talk Hydro-Electric, the price came down to $47.50.

LONDON'S LOW RATE

Another case given by the speaker was that of the city of London, where the people, through the efforts of the Hydro-Electric, had a rate of 4 cents per killowat per hour, and public ownership there showed profits of $20,000. And London was 200 miles distant from the source of supply!

Speaking generally of the work of the Commission, Mr. Studholme told of the wonders being brought about by the adoption of electricity on farms. The farmer was using Hydro-Electric to operate his farm machinery—the farmer's wife to do her household and other duties. He also touched on the latest scheme of Hon Adam Beck, the electrification of the railway, by which the country, from Cornwall to Windsor could be served with radial railways operated by Hydro-Electric power.

At the close of Mr. Studholme's address, Mayor Bardburn, and E. A. Peck, M.P.P., were asked to speak,

LOWER PRICES

Mayor Bradburn said that Mr. Beck was doing a work in Ontario that made the people proud of him. In a few days, he said, the people would be informed of some prices, which were lower, considerably lower, than those now being paid.

But even then, suppose the prices were not lower, Mr. Beck would supply interest and sinking fund, and in 29 years, the power would belong to Peterborough. He urged every voter to give his support to the by-law, when placed before the people next January.

Mr. Peck followed with an enthusiastic reference to the work of the Hydro-Electric Commission. He pointed out that the ultimate issue for Peterborough was public ownership.

Mr. David Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Council, presided. Assisting in the program were the Harmony Quartette, of Messrs. Callander, Greene, Pratt and Thornton and Messrs. "Dave" Quinlan and "Teddy" Andrews. Mr. Asa Huycke supplied the accompaniments.

Now that the ball had been started rolling by the Trades and Labor Council, president Moore stated that an effort would be made by the Council to bring other speakers here who would thoroughly discuss the subject of Hydro, at public meetings.

President Moore hopes to launch a Citizen's Committee, which would co-operate with the city council, in an endeavor to provide Hydro-Electric for Peterborough.

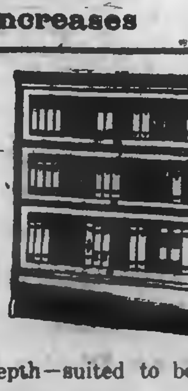
CONCERNING THE HOME LIBRARY

Bookcases That May Be Added, Section By Section, As The Number Of Volumes Increases



IN SOME HOUSEHOLDS books are more of a burden than a benefit. Children are admonished as to the inestimable value of reading, and perhaps upbraided in the same breath for strewing the tables and chairs with their books. But when the small boy and small girl are provided with shelves of their own in the living-room all such trouble is happlily obviated. The sectional bookcase that takes up so little room, that conforms so harmoniously to the general furnishing scheme of the room, and that protects its books from the dust that settles on shelves and bindings—this is the foundation stone of the home library.

The GLOBE-WERNICKE CASES, as embodying all these qualities, merits emphatic notice.

They are obtainable in sections of similar width and different depth—suited to books of different sizes—with top and base, prices being as follows:

	Plain Oak	Quartered Oak or Imitation Mahogany	Genuine Mahogany
Top	$1.75	$2.00	$3.00
8½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.50	3.00	4.25
8½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	3.75	4.25	5.50
10½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.75	3.25	4.50
10½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.15	4.65	5.90
12½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	3.00	3.60	4.75
12½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.60	5.20	6.35
Base	1.75	2.00	3.00
Drawer Base	2.80	3.10	4.25

The oak cases are procurable in golden, fumed or early English finish.

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

PATRICKS TO TAKE B.C. STARS ON TRIP TO AUSTRALIA

Vancouver, Nov. 29.—The proposed Australian trip of the British Columbia hockey stars has not been abandoned, as reported. Instead Frank Patrick has received a letter from the Australian promoters, asking what guarantee he would ask to take two teams on a barnstorming series to the Antipodes next summer. They have artificial ice rinks in several cities there and would welcome some exhibitions by Canadian teams. The Patricks expect to close arrangements for the tour, which would be the greatest ever undertaken by a hockey party.

Negotiations are also under way for a couple of games at the new Los Angeles rink. They will take place about the latter part of next March. The Pacific coast champions will challenge for the Stanley Cup, while the other two teams will travel in style to Los Angeles.

STARTER SMITH

His Death Follows Operation For Cancer

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 29.—Frank G. Smith, veteran trainer-owner of light harness race horses, is dead here, following an operation for cancer. Smith had acted as a starter at practically every track in the United States and Canada, and for many years was the official starter of the Canadian racing circuit. He was a regular contributor to light harness horse journals under the name of "Judge" Smith.

Couldn't Wed In Sarnia.

Sarnia, Nov. 29.—Being granted a decree of divorce in Michigan Tuesday morning, Azara Whitacre Finley and May Helen Crakel, came to Sarnia the same day and secured a license for marriage. They proceeded to a local minister's house, where they were acquainted with the fact that it was against the rules to marry a couple under such circumstances, a resolution having been agreed on last year by the Ministerial Association not to marry divorced couples other than those divorced under Canadian laws.

Woodstock's Civic Reform.

Woodstock, Nov. 29.—There is a strong feeling in this city for Government by commission, and when the Legislature gives the necessary powers it is likely that Woodstock will be among the first to try this form of Government. In the meantime a more progressive, energetic and capable council is wanted, and municipal elections will likely see a hot fight.

COLORED RAIN AND SNOW.

And in Volcanic Regions Gray Hail Is Relatively Common

In certain parts of Spain during last winter red and black snow fell. The phenomenon is explained as being due to the presence in the atmosphere in unusual quantities of certain mineral salts. History mentions a day when "the heavens rained blood." In the middle ages such an occurrence was accepted as predicting war or famine, or, at any rate, shedding of blood.

The presence of a micro-organism seems always to accompany red rain. In volcanic regions gray hail is relatively common. In Sicily this has been observed very often, because the higher layers of the atmosphere are filled with ashes from Mount Etna. During the past century there have been black rains in England twice, and on both occasions the color was due to the presence of micro-organisms.

A curious fall of red snow is observed sometimes in the Alps in spring, but black snow is a rarity. Last spring in the mountains that surround the valley of Emmen snow of a dirty grayish black has been noticed. It formed a crust of some centimeters in thickness and extended over the white snow which had fallen on previous days. This strange occurrence has not been satisfactorily explained, but it is supposed that the volcanic ashes from Etna were carried by the winds and precipitated by the dampness of the air.—Harper's Weekly.

Autos Barred Out.

That there exists a thickly populated, wealthy, civilized and progressive part of Canada rigidly closed to automobiles is a fact of which the average motorist is probably unaware. Such is the case however. In the rich agricultural province of Prince Edward Island motor cars remain legally listed with wild animals of destructive tastes, riots, revolutions and similar disturbances. Should one appear on the street the peaceful islanders would probably call out the militia. This condition is due to two factors—the conservatism of the islanders and the presence in the early history of motoring of a number of reckless drivers who visited the island during the summer touring season.

"We are essentially a farming province," says a prominent resident in explaining the matter, and nearly all of us own well-bred horses. The first autos caused a lot of runaways and one or two tragic ends. Our legislators refused to wait until our horses could be schooled to the motor car, but went ahead and barred cars from the island. Now, though Charlottetown and the other cities strongly favor repealing the law, the country influence is always strong enough to sustain it. It's a shame, too, for there isn't a finer land for motoring in the world. The island is the most thickly populated as well as the wealthiest per capita province of Canada, and is traversed everywhere in its 130 miles of length by fine post roads. A prettier stretch of farm, woodland, sea and river doesn't exist anywhere on earth.

"Incidentally, although families average nearly six members each, the population of the island is steadily decreasing—a fact which may or may not be connected with the embargo on automobiles."

There are only two kinds of Clothing made to-day—"SOVEREIGN BRAND" and the ORDINARY KIND.

To the man who has worn "SOVEREIGN BRAND" CLOTHING we need say nothing. He is already acquainted with the best.

To the man who wears the ordinary kind we may say: He is missing real Clothing value.

We have a fine range of "SOVEREIGN BRAND" SUITS and OVERCOATS ranging from $10.00 to $20.00, and a nice lot for the man who wants a cheaper Suit from $5.00 to $9.00.

Remember, we manufacture every garment sold in our ten branches, besides for 2100 smaller dealers throughout Canada.

Don't it stand to reason, with the purchasing powers we have, that we can sell at a closer profit.

Think it over, and when you are in need of a Suit or Overcoat, let it be a "SOVEREIGN BRAND."

BORING A MOUNTAIN.

The New Montreal Tunnel Is Without a Parallel In America.

Boring the great passenger and freight tunnel through Montreal mountain is now proceeding at the rate of a hundred feet a week from one heading back of the mountain. This tremendous work of engineering, under the direction of Managing Engineer S. P. Brown, has been progressing now for several weeks. The distance from the entrance behind the mountain to the south terminus at Montreal Harbor is three and a half miles. For nearly three miles of the distance the new transurban track of the Canadian Northern will be underground. The passenger terminal will be at Dorchester street, where already another heading has been started working at 90 feet a week towards the mountain. Near the south side of the mountain a shaft has been sunk 240 feet, from which in both directions new headings will be started to meet that from the rear and the other from Dorchester street. When these four headings are under way at once the progress of the great tunnel will be at the rate of more than 300 feet a week. Up to the present about 1,800 feet of the tunnel has been driven from the west portal behind the mountain. During the early weeks of operation much trouble was experienced from clay which necessitated heavy and slow crib-work. The probabilities are that from now on the work will be solid rock. With the present rate of progress maintained the entire bore should be finished within the two years' schedule time. When the tunnel is completed the freight transit from the terminal at Dorchester street will be across the low levels by overhead tracks to the harbor.

This is the most impressive engineering work ever carried on in Canada, except, perhaps the C.P.R. route through the Rockies. In all America there is no other instance of a mountain having to be bored in order to get room for a city's population.

Half as Much Again.

Figures issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce show that for the week ending Oct. 25, 12,746,755 bushels of wheat were in store at terminal and eastern elevators, as compared with 3,265,380 last year. These figures indicate that the eastward movement of wheat is 50 per cent. heavier than it was at the same period last year.

Other grains to the amount of 3,424,110 bushels, were in store on Oct. 25, as against 3,609,482 bushels on the same date last year.

Free Land Yet.

A free grant of 100 or 200 acres of forest land is made by the Canadian Government, on the simple conditions of residence and cultivation, to any settler over eighteen years of age, in the provinces of New Brunswick and Ontario, and 160 acres of land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Yukon, and some parts of British Columbia.

WOMAN DIED FROM EXPOSURE

Was Found In Field Clothed Only In Night Dress.

Brockville, Nov. 29.—Miss Louise Moore, daughter of F. L. Moore, justice of the peace, residing near Addison, was found dead in a field twenty rods from her father's home, clothed only in her night dress.

She had been ill for some time, and it is supposed that during the night, unnoticed to the other members of the family, she walked from the house and perished from exposure. She was about 40 years of age. No inquest will be held.

Indian Gets Liberty.

Sarnia, Nov. 29.—Stephen Kiyoshk, the Indian who was held for re-trial in the case of Adam Johns of Walpole Island, who was murdered, has been released on bail, under order of Justice Middleton. Rev. John Morrison and Rev. Walter Rigsby are his bondsmen. He is bound over to appear at the next spring assizes for re-trial.

Changed Auto Licenes.

Toronto, Nov. 29.—Magistrate Denison meted out a stiff sentence to Henry H. Hackett, of the Hackett Automobile Co., yesterday, when he sentenced the man to fifteen days in jail for transferring the license number from Reuben Hobson's car to his own and placing the number of his own machine on Mr. Hobson's car, while it was in the Hackett garage. Hackett pleaded not guilty, but one of the employes testified that the accused had ordered him to change the numbers. The magistrate refused the option of a fine to Hackett, although the latter asked for one for his family's sake.

The Greek Symposium.

The Greek symposium was literally "drinking together," but before the drinking fully began there was a banquet, more or less elaborate, as the wealth and taste of the host might dictate. The guests came in their best. Even old Socrates, Plato tells us in his "Dialogue" on the subject, was not above taking a little extra pains when he was invited out. Some one met him one day in the market place, "fresh from the bath and sandaled," and as the sight of the sandals was unusual he asked him whither he was going that he was so fine. "To a banquet at Agathon's," he replied, "and I have put on my finery because he is a fine creature. What say you to going with me unbidden?"

A Joke on His Clerical Brother.

Two brothers named Chalmers, one a minister and the other a physician, lived together in a western town. One day a man called at the house and asked for Mr. Chalmers. The physician, who answered the door, replied:

"I am he."

"You've changed considerably since I last heard you preach," said the man who appeared greatly astonished.

"Oh, it's my brother you want to see. He preaches and I practice."—Kansas City Star.

Sir James Waited.

Is a dentist ever justified in keeping such an important personage as Sir James Whitney kicking his heels in the waiting-room, while he attends to some one else's needs in the operating-room?

Whether it is proper or not it occurred quite recently, and the man who kept him waiting was Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Sir Wilfrid was recommended to the dentist in question as a specialist on pyorrhea and during his last trip to Toronto spent several hours in the chair.

With such a distinguished patient the dentist can be forgiven for forgetting that he had made an appointment with Sir James. Time sped slowly for both the politicians, but for Sir James it seemed that the half-hour wait was really half a day.

At the end Sir James and Sir Wilfrid met in the waiting-room. They courteously shook hands, and with a laugh Sir Wilfrid expressed his sorrow for having kept Sir James waiting.

"Oh, I don't mind it a bit," Sir James is reported to have said as he prepared to enter the inner room, while the dentist helped Sir Wilfrid on with his overcoat.—Star Weekly.

BUCKHORN BRIDGE BUNGLE.

To the Editor—There is a pathetic article in the Examiner of Nov. 27th, in which Mr. Peck and I are implored to relieve the County Council of the payment of the sum of $3,000 required by the contract and agreement entered into between the late Government and the County Council herein. It was stated by Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. J. H. McClellan on January 22nd, 1911, to the County Council that the former had secured the cancellation of this debt. When the present Government came in they found however, that the debt had not been cancelled. The Government, therefore, was and is in duty bound to collect it. The late Minister of Railways and Canals has refused time and again to say any thing that would justify the department in cancelling that debt. He emphatically denies the cancellation. Mr. Shaw, of Harvey, has, in my opinion, only himself to thank for the bungle made of this matter. I believe that if prompt action had been taken the true state of affairs regarding that bridge would have been ascertained. If the amount was appropriated for that bridge by the County Council, it will be, I admit, against the law for the Council to appropriate it again, even if the money has been otherwise spent in good works. The men who brought about this bungle are in my opinion, presumably liable, not the county, and not the present Government. Mr. Peck, or myself. The present Government has done all in its power to help the Council out. I saw the Minister of Railways and Canals, and the Minister of Justice, and they have agreed that it is possible to forego the interest (some $500), and this has been done. I do not blame anybody for trying to have the amount forgiven but I do say that it is useless for the Examiner to blame me or Mr. Peck, or the Government. Mr. Shaw and Mr. Stratton are, so far as I know, alone to blame.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

GATTY SELLARS

Queen's Hall Concert Organist to Play Here

The world-famed organist of the Queen's Hall, London, England, concerts, and the Crystal Palace Musical Festival, Gatty Sellars, passed through the city this morning. It is understood he is to play on the new Murray street Baptist church oragn here shortly. It will be remembered Mr. Sellars played at St Paul's church twelve months ago.

ANOTHER BIG SUCCESS FOR THE LADIES

Charlotte Street Society Had Attendance of Nearly 300

The members of the Ladies' Aid of Charlotte street Methodist church scored another decided success in their entertainment, entitled An Olde Tyme Ladies' Aide Meetying, at Mohawk Crossroads, which was repeated last night. The stage scenery which represented an old-time parlor in the Victorian era, was very appropriately arranged. The open grate, brass candlesticks, mottoes reeds and other things considered artistic in that age, brought back thoughts of old times to many present.

The role of hostess was in very capable hands, being taken by Mrs. (Dr.) M. A. Morrison, who acted the part admirably. Mrs. Bookhout, as Mrs. De Loid Fitz Hammond, from Boston, enacted her part to perfection, being extremely literary and cultured, and very much shocked at country ways and habits, and inclined to be sarcastic.

Mrs. Lyle essayed the part of Mrs Kindly, from Boston, with professional skill. Mrs. Wolstenholm as Mrs. Growler, and Mrs. Lillico as Miss Harper, a very crotchety maiden lady, kept the audience in laughter all the time. Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, as a nervous, hysterical lady, was fine, and Mrs. T. B. Wright as Mrs. Wise, Mrs. Cornell as Mrs. Kane and Mrs. George Hall as Mrs. Scott proved excellent entertainers, and literally speaking, brought down the house. Mrs. Lightfoot made a splendid old time president.

Mrs. A. F. Lane, as Mrs. Hayt, kept up the humor with original sayings. The local hits were new and original and produced hearty laughter. Mrs. R. E. McKee, as the suffraggette was most aggressive and took the difficult part well.

Miss Ida Sanderson's singing was greatly enjoyed and also two readings by Mrs. Christie, a solo by Mr. Fleming and piano selections by Miss Clarry.

The services of Miss Rochester of the Y. W. C. A. were also much appreciated in training the ladies for the sketch, also donations from Cressman's.

Nearly three hundred were present. The total proceeds will not be known until next Tuesday.

The officers of the Ladies' Aid are—

President— Mrs. Walter Stocker.
Vice-President— Mrs. Lightfoot.
Treasurer— Mrs. Lyle.
Secretary— Mrs. A. F. Lane.

MAYOR BRADBURN EXPLAINS HYDRO PROPOSITION IN GIVING RESUME OF THE POWER SITUATION

City Does Not Enter into Contract for Purchase of Power in the Ordinary Sense, for the Commission will be Practically Trustees for the City, and the Benefit of Any Advantages It May Secure By Improvements in Means of Production or In Any Other Way. Will Come to the City Just As Much As If the City Directly Owned the Power.

Ald. Johnston introduced the by-law, last evening at Council meeting, to authorize the borrowing of $120,000 for the distribution of electricity in Peterborough. The by-law was passed.

Immediately after the introduction of the by-law, Mayor Bradburn gave the following resume of the power question which is given herewith:

Gentlemen,—Before putting this motion, I wish to make some observations regarding it.

When the vote was taken nearly a year ago to ascertain whether the ratepayers were in favor of obtaining electric power from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, the remarkable majority in the affirmative was a mandate to the Council to take steps to obtain power from that Commission. The Council obeyed that mandate and steadily pursued that course, without turning aside from it in any direction. When urged to ask the Electric Power Co. to state at what price it would furnish power to the city that action was not taken, for one reason because doing so would be going contrary to the directions the Council had received from the ratepayers.

We now have the estimates from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission required to submit to the ratepayers this by-law providing for raising money for a distributing system. The first estimate given by the Commission covered the acquiring of the street plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and the extension and improvement of the system, and the estimated sum required for this qurpose was $88,000. The Electric Power Co., which controls the Peterborough Light and Power Co., informed us that if the city did take over their street plant, they would erect another and continue in business, and it looked as if this course might result in the city acquiring an old plant and the company having a new one. The Commission was asked for an estimate of the amount that would be required to construct a new distributing system, including modern methods of lighting and underground work, and the Commission has been ever ready to give information without expense to the city, said that such a system covering the whole city could be constructed for $120,000. This is the amount that this by-law, if carried, will authorize to be expended.

This course has been followed because with the passing of this by-law the city will be in a position to acquire the Peterborough Light and Power Company's plant, or to construct a new one, as may be found best for the city.

Last year the ratepayers were told that they would be given information as to what the cost of power would be if obtained from the Commission before being asked to vote on a money by-law to authorize expenditure on a distributing system. That information they now have. The Commission purposes acquiring the power developed of the Otonabee Power Co. and, if needed, to add the power from No. 4 dam to it. In 1911 the Commission made a report on this, and in that report estimated that the city could deliver power to users, after paying all fixed charges and operating expenses, at the following rates:

Continual 24 Hour Service.

Average cost on basis of 2500 h.p. delivered—$17.55 per h.p.

Average cost on basis of 2750 h.p. delivered (10 per cent overload)—$15.95 per h.p.

Limited Hour and 10 Hour Service.

Average cost on basis of 3000 h.p. connected load—$14.65 per h.p.

Average cost on basis of 3500 h.p. connected load—$12.55 per h.p.

The present plan of the Commission taking over the power property and plant and transmitting it, and the city looking after the distribution does not change these estimates. The City Council has been given a letter from the Commission, which has been published, saying that these estimates are the estimates of the cost of power delivered that we should count upon now. The estimates of the Commission have always been careful and cautious, and the probabilities therefore are that the city will be able to deliver power at rates even less than these. We have the further guarantee as to the price of

OLD ANTAGONISTS HAVE TILT IN HOUSE DEBATE

Member For King's Sharply Resents the ex-Minister's Attack on Sir Rodolphe Forget in the Latter's Absence—Pugsley Does Not Believe There is a Naval Crisis.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—There was a lively time in the House yesterday between Hon. Wm. Pugsley and G. W. Fowler, the Conservative member for King's, N.B. They have met on many a field in New Brunswick, and Mr. Fowler has more than once entertained the House with his version of Mr. Pugsley's somewhat kaleidoscopic political career. Yesterday he followed the ex-Minister and challenged sharply many of the statements made by Mr. Pugsley in a long speech, which touched upon reciprocity, the navy and the bye-elections in Macdonald and Richelieu. Mr. Fowler succeeded where others failed in procuring a re-affirmation of their belief in reciprocity from prominent Liberal members, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Wm. Pugsley and Hugh Guthrie. Mr. Pugsley, following the lead of Mr. Carvell, also declared for an increase in the British preference, and for the new Liberal platform, and declared the party's mission to be "to alleviate the burdens now imposed on the great masses of the people, and reduce the steadily increasing cost of living."

Mr. Pugsley said he favored a Canadian navy. Mr. Borden and colleagues had gone to England to find an emergency, and, from what we can learn they were disappointed.

Mr. Pugsley described the part which Sir Rodolphe Forget played in the Richelieu bye-election. Sir Rodolphe, in the presence of Mr. Lemieux and another M.P., and also as reported in La Patrie and The Montreal Star newspapers, told the electors at Sorel that he was authorized by Hon. Mr. Rogers to promise a subsidy for the marine railway in case a Conservative candidate was returned at the bye-election. Now Mr. Rogers having denied that he ever heard of the marine railway, or in any way authorized Sir Rodolphe to make this announcement, the latter, according to Mr. Pugsley, was guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of Parliament.

A statement made by Mr. Pugsley in reference to the naval question was to the effect that the present Government had refused to award the contract for dredging and other works at the harbor of St. John, N.B., to Cammel, Laird & Co., the British shipbuilding firm, who coupled with their tender for the work an undertaking to establish a shipyard at St. John for the construction of war vessels. Had the contract been awarded to this firm Canada by this time would have had at least one warship ready for service.

The Borden Government, he said, had turned down this tender for the express purpose of destroying the prospects for Canadian-built ships for service in naval defence.

Mr. Fowler declared that since the member for Charlevoix (Sir Rodolphe Forget) was not in his seat, he was therefore being stabbed in the back. He assured the House that a satisfactory explanation would be forthcoming.

Mr. Fowler, referring to the navy question, said that Canada should be as patriotic as the Malays and the Hindus.

He dealt with the economic arguments of Messrs. Carvell and Pugsley. These gentlemen, he said, could not agree, whether it was the producer or the consumer who paid the tariff tax. In this connection, he read a telegram to the effect that the price of potatoes was practically the same in Maine and New Brunswick. Mr. Carvell had told the House that there was a spread of 45 cents a barrel in favor of the Maine potato grower.

Mr. McKay, the Conservative member for Prince Albert, opened the debate upon the address yesterday afternoon, dealing principally with the cut in the cement duty, which he said had been demanded by the entire west.

Hon. Mr. Coderre, Secretary of State, was introduced by the Prime Minister as the member-elect for Hochelaga, and the Conservatives gave him a great ovation. Applause greeted Hon. George E. Foster when he entered the chamber for the first time this session.

The debate upon the address will be resumed on Monday by Mr. Wilson of Wentworth.

The debate on the address was closed yesterday in the Senate, which is now ready to receive any naval bill or any business which may be brought before it. The address was adopted.

A resolution was adopted declaring vacant the seat of Michael Sullivan (Conservative) of Kingston, who had failed to his attendance in the Senate during two consecutive sessions.

The debate was closed by the adoption of the address.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday

Of Toronto University, Who Gave the address at the Student Volunteer Conference, last-night.

BASIS OF AGREEMENT BY WHICH PEACE WOULD COME

Bulgarian Demand for War Indemnity Alone Stands in the Path of Treaty.

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, N.Y., Nov. 30—A London cable says the Chronicle correspondent wires from Constantinople that the Turks and Allies have reached a basis of agreement with the four following articles—Adrianople to remain Turkish territory with certain conditions, including the destruction of the fortifications. Autonomy for Albania under control of the Allies, Moslems of Macedonia to receive certain privileges in any territories annexed by Allies, and Turkey to enter the Balkan confederation for customs purposes.

The correspondent also says that only the Bulgarian demand for one hundred million dollars war indemnity stands in the way of signing a peace treaty, and that in fifteen days an armistice will be signed, probably to-day.

London, Nov. 30.—Constantinople last night reported the probability of a fortnight's armistice being signed by Sunday by the peace plenipotentiaries, who are negotiating for a cessation of hostilities between the Turks and the allies. From the Bulgarian side there has been no news concerning the peace negotiations except the vague statement that they are making satisfactory progress.

Nothing has transpired as to whether the proposed armistice will effect the whole field of war operations or only the Tchatalja lines.

The news received yesterday of the surrender of two entire divisions of Turkish reserves to the Bulgarians, in the neighborhood of Demotica, a short distance south of Adrianople, after severe fighting, shows there are still isolated bodies of Turkish troops unaccounted for and which must be considered in arranging an armistice.

The allies are said to have large numbers of men who are proceeding in Greek transports from the Gulf of Saloniki either for Gallipoli Peninsula, which separates the Dardanelles from the Aegean Sea, or to join the allied army at Tchatalja. No news has been received concerning these transports as yet, and the disposal of the men they carry, in the event of an armistice being arranged, would present some difficulty.

Although it is not safe to assume that the armistice is in sight, the fact that the negotiations continue at Baghtche and that apparently no definite time limit has been fixed as to the duration of the existing suspension of hostilities, tends toward the belief that a peaceful solution of the trouble is approaching.

There were no fresh developments yesterday concerning the proposed conference between the powers on the Balkan situation, or concerning the dispute between Austria and Servia as to the occupation by the latter country of a port on the Adriatic.

Germany Ready For War.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—The German Minister of War, Gen. Josias Von Heringen, declared yesterday in the imperial parliament:

"I can give the positive assurance that everything necessary for the eventuality of war has been done."

He made this statement in answering an enquiry as to whether the 114 new machine gun companies provided for in the law of 1912 could be organized without delay.

French Army Fading.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The number of recruits available for the French army has been reduced from 238,000 in 1906 to 215,000 in 1911, owing to the diminution of the birth rate in France, according to Joseph Reinach, who made this startling assertion in the course of a debate in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday on the bill relating to infantry enrollment.

IS AN ACT OF MADNESS

Churchill Thus Characterizes the Threatened War

London, Nov. 30.—In a speech at a banquet given in his honor here last night, Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said that while a strong feeling naturally existed between Russia and Austria over the Balkan question, a resort to war by them would be a horror utterly disproportionate to any cause existing or any compensation that might be achieved.

"Christian civilization," continued Mr. Churchill, "looks across the tangles of diplomacy to the sovereigns of those august empires and asks whether kingship might not in these modern democratic days win for itself new lustre and proclaim to the multitudes of enfranchised toilers in whose hands power is being increasingly reposed the fact that the monarchy is the bulwark of European peace."

A great gulf, Mr. Churchill said, separated the affairs of Russia and Austria from those of the other European powers and they had only to pursue the policy of trusting one another which they had been pursuing and nothing could drive them from the path of sanity and honor. A general war might plunge Europe almost into the desolation of the middle age. "The only epitaph history could write upon such a catastrophe," Mr. Churchill declared, "would be this, that a whole generation of men went mad and tore themselves to pieces."

CHURCH WOULD MAKE USE OF FRENCH CANADIANS

In the Proposed Conquest of Canada to the True Faith?

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 30— J.H. Burnham M. P. of West Peterborough, gave out a warm interview to-day, following up his recent remarks in the Commons to the effect that conspiracy exists for depriving the French race in Canada of their language. "Does any ecclesiast of the Church of Rome," Mr. Burnham asks, "deny that the Church, through Cardinal Bourne, has commanded and directed French-Canadians to give up their mother tongue and to adopt English, in order that the Church may make full use of the French race in its proposed conquest of Canada to the true faith? Does anybody deny that the Government began a crusade by investigation, at the dictation of Bishop Fallen? The French are willing to conform to the law but are resisting the Church. With which side do Protestants of Canada propose to ally themselves?"

Ottawa, Nov. 30— The French Canadians of the city will hold a public meeting on Monday at which they will approve of the stand taken by Mr. Burnham. They are much pleased at what he said in the House on their behalf. "Mr. Burnham is following the example of Queen Victoria and trying to unify all parties of the Empire," said trustee Geneat, of the Separate School Board this afternoon.

IMMIGRATION MEN URGE BETTER CONDITIONS FOR MEN

Major McGillivray of the Salvation Army and Supt Clark of the Federal Service Declare That Higher Pay, Better Housing and Less Work Are Necessary, if Farmers Wish to Keep Their Hired Men.

Galt, Nov. 30.—In vigorous addresses before the Waterloo County Board of Agriculture, Major McGillivray, representing the Salvation Army immigration work, and J. M. Clark, superintendent of the Dominion immigration department, united in plainly telling a large gathering of farmers in one of the notable agricultural sections in Canada, the causes of the shortage of farm help.

The keynote of the speeches was "The laborer is worthy of his hire." The labor problem in this province would never be solved until better wages were paid and conditions made reasonable for the newcomer.

As a man improved, so should his wages increase. Everlasting work from day break to sunset was the cause for a good deal of the difficulty. In many farming communities there was lack of house accommodation for help. The demand for labor was greater yesterday than ever before, and while justice was due to the farmer, justice was also due to the men. From experience the success of the farm laborer is due to his first employer.

Three thousand old country laborers had been placed in Ontario this year, or 2,000 short of the demand. Scarcity of farm help existed in the old land, and other countries besides Canada were seeking such labor. Said Mr. Clark: Here is a question I would like you farmers to solve in your farmers' clubs. If seven years ago unskilled labor received $1.50 a day in Toronto, four years ago the same labor $1.75, and to-day $2.25, how are you going to compete with this? The ambition of the farmers should be to try to keep the men on the farm and not let them get into town to work. One thing is necessary for the farmer to make these men valuable to them and that is kind treatment."

SUFFRAGETTES THREW SHOES AT MAGISTRATE AND CLERK

Another Took Clergyman for Lloyd George and Used Horse Whip on His Face.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Nov. 30 — After the Magistrate, this morning, had heard evidence and remanded Joyce Locke, Fannie Parker and Mary Pollock, suffragettes, were found with explosives in their possession in the Music Hall, where Lloyd George was to speak last night Miss Locke removed her shoes and hurled one at the head of the Magistrate and the other at the head of the Court Clerk.

Members of the Suffragette party also waited at the railway station for the Chancellor, and mistaking the Rev. Forbes Jackson for him one woman lashed the Reverend gentleman across the face with a horsewhip and was arrested.

HAVE YOU JOINED THE ST. NICHOLAS CLUB?

Already a goodly number of ladies have responded to the Review's call for membership in the St. Nicholas Club and the names will be published in these columns next week.

Christmas less than a month away and many children are wondering what Santa Claus is going to bring them. Some have made up their minds as to what they want, and are already wishing hard. Some, no doubt, will wish in vain, for the reason that older persons know, but little ones not aware of. That the number of children who will be disappointed on Christmas may be reduced to a minimum, the Review suggests the organisation of a St. Nicholas Club, which every woman and girl in the city may join by sending her name to the Review office on a post card.

What will the cost be? Just whatever you want it to cost you—nothing more. The Review's St. Nichola Girl will send you the name of a little boy or girl who has a wish. You can go and see the little one, and find out his or her hopes or needs to make Christmas happy, and fulfil them according to your purse and the feeling of your heart.

The greatest joy at Christmas comes from giving.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED By HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT 1911 By H. K. FLY CO.

She began to pound Mallory's shoulders and shook him frantically. He had never seen her this way either. He was getting his education in advance. He tried to calm her with inexpert words: "How can I stop the train? Now, dearie, he was a nice dog, but after all, he was only a dog."

She rounded on him like a panther: "Only a dog! He was worth a dozen men like you. You find the conductor at once, command him to stop this train—and back up! I don't care if he has to go back ten miles. Run, tell him at once. Now, you run!"

Mallory stared at her as if she had gone mad, but he set out to run somewhere, anywhere. Marjorie paced up and down distractedly, tearing her hair and moaning, "Snoozleums, Snoozleums! My child. My poor child!" At length her wildly roving eyes noted the bell rope. She stared, pondered, nodded her head, clutched at it, could not reach it, jumped for it several times in vain, then seized a chair, swung it into place, stood up in it, gripped the rope, and came down on it with all her weight, dropping to the floor and jumping up and down in a frenzied dance. In the distance the engine could be heard faintly whistling, whistling for every pull.

The engineer, far ahead, could not imagine what unheard-of crisis could bring about such mad signals. The fireman yelled:

"I bet that crazy conductor is attacked with an epilettic fit."

But there was no disputing the command. The engine was reversed, the air brakes set, the sand run out and every effort made to pull the iron horse, as it were, back on its haunches.

The grinding, squealing, jolting, shook the train like an earthquake. The shrieking of the whistle froze the blood like a woman's cry of "Murder!" in the night. The women among the passengers echoed the screams. The men turned pale and braced themselves for the shock of collision. Some of them were mumbling prayers. Dr. Temple and Jimmie Wellington, with one idea in their dissimilar souls, dashed from the smoking room to go to their wives.

Ashton and Wedgewood, with no one to care for but themselves, seized windows and tried to fight them open. At last they budged a sash and knelt down to thrust their heads out.

"I don't see a beastly thing ahead," said Wedgewood, "except the heads of other fools."

"We're slowing down though," said Ashton, "she stops! We're safe. Thank God!" And he collapsed into a chair. Wedgewood collapsed into another, gasping: "Whatevah are we safe from, I wondah?"

The train-crew and various passengers descended and ran alongside the train asking questions. Panic gave way to mystery. Even Dr. Temple came back into the smoking room to finish a precious cigar he had been at work on. He was followed by Little Jimmie, who had not quite reached his wife when the stopping of the train put an end to his excuse for chivalry. He was regretfully mumbling:

"It would have been such a good shansh to shave my life's wife—I mean my—I don't know what I mean." He sank into a chair and ordered a drink; then suddenly remembered his vow, and with great heroism, rescinded the order.

Mallory, finding that the train was checked just before he reached the conductor, saw that official's bewildered wrath at the stoppage and had a fearsome intuition that Marjorie had somehow done the deed. He hurried back to the observation room, where he found her charging up and down, still distraught. He paused at a safe distance and said:

"The train has stopped, my dear. Somebody rang the bell."

"I guess somebody did!" Marjorie answered, with a proud toss of the head. "Where's the conductor?"

"He's looking for the fellow that pulled the rope."

"You go tell him to back up—and slowly, too."

"No, thank you!" said Mallory. He was a brave young man, but he was not bearding the conductors of stopped expresses. Already the conductor's voice was heard in the smoking room, where he appeared with the rush and roar of a Bashan bull. "Well!" he bellowed, "which one of you guys pulled that rope?"

"It was nobody here, sir," Dr. Temple meekly explained. The conductor transfixed him with a baleful glare: "I wouldn't believe a gambler on oath. I bet you did it."

"I assure you, sir," Wedgewood interposed, "he didn't touch it. I was heah."

The conductor waved him aside and charged into the observation room, followed by all the passengers in an awe-struck rabble. Here, too, the conductor thundered: "Who pulled that rope? Speak up somebody."

Mallory was about to sacrifice himself to save Marjorie, but she met the conductor's black rage with the withering contempt of a young queen: "I pulled the old rope. Whom did you suppose?"

The conductor almost dropped with apoplexy at finding himself with nobody to vent his immense rage on, but this pink and white slip. "You!" he gulped, "well, what in— Say, in the name of—why, don't you know it's a penitentiary offense to stop a train this way?"

Marjorie tossed her head a little higher, grew a little calmer: "What do I care? I want you to back up."

The conductor was reduced to a wet rag, a feeble echo: "Back up—the train up?"

"Yes, back the train up," Marjorie answered, resolutely, "and go slowly till I tell you to stop."

The conductor stared at her a moment, then whirled on Mallory: "Say, what in hell's the matter with your wife?"

Mallory was saved from the problem of answering by Marjorie's abrupt change from a young Tsarina rebuking a serf, to a terrified mother. She flung out imploring palms and with a gush of tears pleaded: "Won't you please back up? My darling child fell off the train."

The conductor's rage fell away in an instant. "Your child fell off the train!" he gasped. "Good Lord! How old was he?"

With one hand he was groping for the bell cord to give the signal, with the other he opened the door to look back along the track.

THE MARTYRS TO DIABETES

There are hundreds of martyrs to diabetes walking the streets of our cities and towns. They are found in every walk of life. They will be found principally among the business men, the men who have worked and eaten and drank, not wisely, but too well, who, in the frensied pursuit of success and wealth, have neglected to take proper rest and proper exercise. These men are daily suffering untold mental and physical agonies. They are paying the price of neglect and heedlessness. They need their ability now more than ever, need to be fit and well. Instead they are in the grip of the dread malady, Diabetes-mellitus.

While they were piling up their wealth or working indefatigably toward some goal of political or professional success, a scientist in far-off Germany was working in their behalf—working patiently, industriously to provide a means of saving for them their health, the greatest boon of life. He succeeded. They—the martyrs—may now enjoy the benefits of his research and work. He has given it to the world in the form of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES (in the United States EXPURGO-ANTI-DIABETES), which remedy has already made some wonderful cures in Winnipeg and other Canadian cities. The makers have strong testimonials from residents of various cities. A post-card will bring these addresses. The formula for this remedy has been secured for the exclusive use of the SANOL MANUFACTURING COMPANY OF CANADA LTD., 977 Main street, Winnipeg, Man. The remedy is for sale by McDermid & Jury Peterborough. Price $2.00 per bottle.

Kingston, Nov. 30.—Jos. Lamonde, aged 70 years, employed as a sweeper at Wormwith's piano works, was crushed by an elevator just before quitting time last night, and received probably fatal injuries. Doctors say he has but slight chance of recovery. He was sweeping under the elevator and did not see nor hear it coming down. His left hip was dislocated, right leg broken in two pieces, and head crushed.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDIES

ALL THINGS ARE POSSIBLE.

—Dec. 1.—Mark 9:14-29.—

"And Jesus said unto Him, if thou canst believe, all things are possib'e to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23.

WHEN Jesus and the three favored Apostles came down from the Mount of Transfiguration, where they had been enjoying the vision of the coming glory, they found the other nine Apostles at the foot of the mountain surrounded by a multitude. They had made several inefficacious attempts to cast out a demon from a boy whose father had brought him for the purpose.

The multitude hailed Jesus and flocked to Him, but He came promptly to the relief of the Apostles and inquired the nature of their trouble. The father interposed and explained: "I have brought my son, who is possessed of a dumb spirit; and whenever it takes hold upon him it dashes him down and he foameth and grindeth his teeth and pineth away and I spake to Thy disciples that they should cast it out, and they were not able."

And Jesus answered, "O faithless generation! How long shall I be with you and bear with you? Bring him to Me." And they brought him, and immediately the spirit caused him to fall to the ground, wallowing and foaming. Jesus questioned how long it had been thus. The father answered, "From a child," and that often the spirit attempted to cast the boy into the fire or into the water to destroy him. "But if Thou canst do anything, have compassion on us and help us."

"To Him That Believeth."

Jesus replied, "If thou canst believe; all things are possible to him that believeth."

How great stress the Lord lays everywhere upon the exercise of faith in the Divine Power! "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Those who cannot exercise the faith cannot have the blessing which others may have who do exercise faith; and our blessings increase in proportion as we will exercise faith.

"My son is possessed of a dumb spirit."

This does not imply that people who cannot now exercise faith will never get any blessing. On the contrary, while the Lord has given certain exceeding great and precious promises to those who can and do believe, and who follow their belief with obedience to the extent of their ability, He has also promised that by and by, during the Messiah's Kingdom, the way of faith and obedience will be made so plain, so simple, that all will be able to follow it and to gain a reward—but a lesser reward than that now extended to those who can and do exercise faith and obedience.

The reason for this is manifest. God is now seeking a special class of specially faithful and obedient children, to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus in His glorious Messianic Kingdom, and whom by and by He will use in bestowing His blessing world-wide; and He desires that in this class shall be only such as can exercise absolute faith in Him. In this and other miracles the Lord required faith seemingly as the condition of the healing. He thus manifested forth His coming glory and the power of His Kingdom. During the Kingdom reign there will be such manifestations of Divine Power, and such assistance given to those willing to exercise faith, that all may profit thereby and experience the healings of their flesh and the casting out of every power of Satan and sin.

The poor father realized from Jesus' words that he must exercise faith else his son could not be recovered. With tears he cried out, "Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief!" His faith got its reward. Jesus commanded the evil spirit to come out of the boy, and enter no more into him.

"Jesus took him by the hand."

It may be wondered why the Master permitted the evil spirit to tear the boy and cause him pain in leaving him. If He had power to cast out, He also undoubtedly had power to control the manner of his coming out. We can only surmise, therefore, that Jesus allowed the evil spirit a measure of liberty in the method of leaving, and that this was for the very purpose of demonstrating how malicious and evil the spirit was which had control; and thus the miracle was the more clearly seen, and thus the more would the Lord be praised by those interested.

"Many Said, 'He Is Dead.'"

The boy was left in an apparently dead condition, but Jesus took him by the hand and raised him up. The lesson for us in this is that it is not only that the Adversary and his power be cast out of humanity and from control that the poor world needs, but they need the hand of Divine Power for their uplift out of the mire of sin and death. According to the Scriptures we are near the time when Satan will be bound, when all the influences of evil amongst humanity will be restrained. According to the Scriptures, also, this binding of Satan will be accomplished in a great "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation," and humanity will be left in an almost dead condition. The pride, the hopes, the ambition of men will perish in that awful trouble time, but the Master will be present in Kingdom power to uplift them.

Alberta Bye-Election Charges.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 30.—Particulars of charges of corruption upon which the petition protesting the election of Hon. C. W. Cross are based, have been filed in the Supreme Court by C. F. Newell, counsel for Lt.-Col. Carstairs, the petitioner. This election was held last spring when the Cabinet was reorganized by Mr. Sifton.

The documents consist of 39 pages of typewritten matter and contains a list of names of all persons who are accused of irregularity in connection with the election. Included in this list are nearly all the Liberals who took an active part in the provincial bye-election.

With regard to the much-talked-of railroad vote, it is alleged James McGregor was paid $50,000 to be used in contravention of the election act. It is alleged that many persons were brought to Edmonton on election day on free fares. W. P. Hinton, general passenger agent of the G.T.R., is named as one of the parties to this arrangement.

Bribery is also alleged.

CHANGE OF CLIMATE DID NOT HELP

But GIN PILLS Conquered His Rheumatism

THE fact that men of standing and responsibility do not hesitate to come out and state frankly how much good GIN PILLS have done them, speaks volumes for this good old remedy.

Mr. W. G. Reid, of Hamilton, whose statement we publish below, with his permission, is one of the best known commercial men in Canada. His many friends throughout the country will be delighted to learn that he is quite himself again. He says:

"I have been for the last two years a cripple with Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I have tried almost everything known to medical science to relieve me of the intense pain and inflammation. I sought change of climate in Kentucky and other Southern points without relief. Your manager in this city recommended GIN PILLS and I have since taken eight boxes and am now cured. I consider GIN PILLS the conqueror of Rheumatism and Kidney Disease".

(Signed) W. G. REID.

Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica and all other troubles arising from weak, inactive or diseased kidneys, have little chance against GIN PILLS.

The curative properties in these pills go straight to the root of the trouble—the failure of the kidneys to keep the blood free from the irritating Uric Acid which is continually being formed in the body. GIN PILLS help the Kidneys to perform this function properly, and the train of troubles vanish.

Just try it and prove it to your own satisfaction. There is no risk—money back if GIN PILLS do not help you.

WESTERNER CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

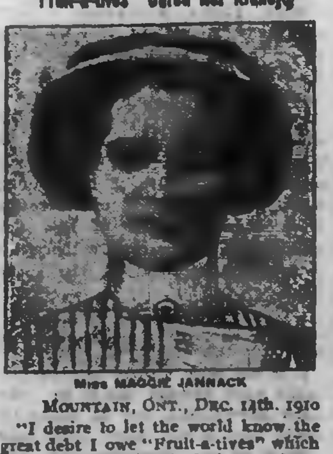
A Stubborn Case of This Painful Disease Cured After the Patient Had Suffered for Years by a Few Bottles of Sanol.

Slowly but surely it has come to be a recognized fact by both the people of Canada and the Medical profession that SANOL is the one remedy that may be relied on in cases of kidney disease, gravel, stones in the bladder, gall stones, kidney stones and all diseases and ailments due to the presence of uric acid in the system. This remedy has great numbers of cures to its credit and its makes have received many strong testimonials as to its powers. One of these testimonials was recently received from a gentleman who resides in Winnipeg, and who is well-known as a most reputable citizen. This letter reads in part as follows:

"For some years past I had suffered from my kidneys. About 18 months ago I had acute inflamation of these organs, when I was ordered to bed by the medical man attending me. I received considerable relief, but after a few months the trouble started again. It was then that I decided to try SANOL, of which I had both read and heard. After taking two bottles I felt very much better, and my condition rapidly improved. When I had taken the contents of eight bottles, I felt better than I had done for years, for my kidney trouble had entirely left me. It is now about three months since I finished with the medicine and I am enjoying the best of health."

The address of the gentleman who wrote the above will be given to any who may inquire. The makers of SANOL are able to give a large number of addresses of people who will give to inquirers similar testimony as to the benefits they have derived from the use of this remedy.

SANOL is manufactured only by the SANOL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD. 977 Main street, Winnipeg. It may be purchased from The Warne Drug Co. Limited, 361 George st., Peterboro, Ont.



SHE FAINTED WITH THE AGONY

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her Kidneys

MISS MAGGIE JANNACK

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14th. 1910

"I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe "Fruit-a-tives" which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again.

For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony.

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well.

A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took "Fruit-a-tives" and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well.

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c.—or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8¼ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

DAY, NOV. 30, 1912.

LIBERALS AND THE NAVY

The Liberals at Ottawa have held a caucus but they did not apparently reach much of a decision as to what attitude they would take on the navy question. That is not to be wondered at since until Premier Borden makes the announcement of what he wants to do there is not much use of deciding on any particular line of policy. The Liberals are in a peculiarly tight position. They have the Laurier policy to which they must for consistency's sake adhere. They have Sir Wilfrid Laurier's denials that any emergency exists to justify a special contribution by Canada toward the strength of the Imperial navy. Therefore if the Liberal members of the House of Commons obey the dictates of their party leader, they will refuse to consider that there is an emergency warranting special aid, and will continue to object to an enlargement of the Laurier scheme. But if the British Liberals insist that Canadian aid in the naval defence of the Empire shall be confined to the "tin-pot" scheme, what will their constituents say? That is the question. Is the strength of patriotic feeling in Canada enough to make clear to these Liberals that to oppose a special contribution would be a big political mistake? The signs undoubtedly point to the unity of Canada upon this matter. There must be more done for Britain than the tinkering which Laurier thought was good enough.

If the Liberals vote against the Borden proposals they will give themselves a black eye as regards their constituents. If they vote with the Government, they belie their leader's declaration that there is no emergency and that therefore there is no justification of any extension of the Laurier naval scheme upon a contribution basis. The prospects are that there will be more than one caucus before the Liberals will be able to swallow their various divergent attitudes and unite on one decisive line of policy.

A BANK ACT AMENDMENT

The assurance given by the Minister of Finance, Hon. W. T. White that in the Bank Act revision the Government would introduce clauses allowing banks to lend money to farmers on the security of their grain in store, or cattle, is most welcome. This has been agitated in Ontario and the West, particularly the latter, for some time. The only objection is that the soundness of banking might become imperiled if there were too extensive advances upon these securities in a retail way, and anything were to happen to destroy them. But there is really no good basis for any such objection. The banks are empowered now to lend money on grain in elevator or in transit, or cattle in transit, to the wholesaler. There is just as much security attached to these things when they are in the hands of the original producer. The convenience it would be, if the farmers were not compelled to get their grain either into an elevator, or shipped forward on a train to procure money would be inestimable in the West. The farmers would be able to get from the banks advances on these securities and would thus have ready money to meet their obligations, even though their grain or cattle had not been marketed.

The banks are a sort of public utility that must be carefully watched. They belong to their stockholders only insofar as the earnings from their operations give dividends upon the invested capital. The huge bulk of the money that the banks handle is public money and ought to be handled to the utmost public advantage. That advantage is not in lending huge sums to big speculators to swing deals in the stock market, to put through mergers, or to complete financial traps for the public. The small man, the manufacturer of modest pretensions, the farmer who produces the wealth of the country must get first class consideration. That is the purpose of the new amendment, and certainly there will be general approval of the movement.

QUEEN MARY AND DIVORCE

It is not wise always to place reliance upon London cables to New York newspapers, but at times the gossip they detail, being quite independent of the considerations that induce British newspapers to be discreet is highly interesting. The dispatch which says that Queen Mary is actively interesting herself in rousing antagonism to the report of the majority of the Divorce Commission, which would widen considerably the present grounds for divorce, besides cheapening the facilities for procuring it, may have some foundation. Queen Mary is noted for her rigidly old-fashioned and Puritanic ideas on the question of divorce. She is not alone in this matter, for the Church of England which is still a very powerful secular organization, in spite of all the talk of disestablishment, is heart and soul in opposition. The Unionists as a body being the Church party, also hold out for conservatism in the matter of changes. So that Queen Mary was not fighting a lone battle by any means when she undertook to wield some personal influence to prevent a bill embodying the views of the Royal Commission majority from being brought out. It is stated that the Queen got Lord Northcliffe, who owns the London Daily Mail and has a controlling interest in the Times to help her out with his powerful journalistic aid, with such effect that all idea of proceeding with the divorce matter has been abandoned. There is a woman at the bottom of everything, so it is said and in this case, the old saw seems no less true than in others.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Hamilton Spectator.—The action of the Bank of Montreal in increasing the salaries of their clerks is most commendable. Judging by the size of their dividends, there seems no valid excuse why every other similar institution should not follow this initiative. Juniors have to live as well as seniors.

Those who are now agitating for the compulsory school age to be raised from 14 to 16 are reminded of the fact that many of the millionaires of the present day started in life without even a good public school education. Carnegie and Rockefeller are among the number.

A Winnipeg man paid $5.25 for a barrel of apples and found among the fruit a note from the Ontario farmer who grew them saying that he had been paid 75 cents for the contents of the barrel and asking the consumer to write and tell him what he paid for them. The barrel would cost about 50 cents. This left $4.00 for freight and dealers' profits.

MASS MEETING ON HYDRO BY-LAW

Ald Johnston's Suggestion is Favored By Council

In view of the Council's decision to submit the Hydro-Electric by-law, Ald. Johnston suggests that mass meetings be arranged, by which the public might be given opportunity to familiarize themselves with what they will vote on in January. He also reminded the Council of Hon Adam Beck's offer to come to Peterborough and address a mass meeting on the power topics.

The Council agreed to the proposal and mass meetings will be arranged on dates which will be announced later.

DIFFERENCE IN REPORT

Police Give Greater Number of Outrages Than Fire Chief

The Fire, Water and Light Committee delved into complaints over light outages last night, and endeavored to reconcile the conflicting reports of the Fire Chief and the Police Department.

Chief Howard's report of the number of outages for one quarter placed them at twenty-five. The police reported fifty-four. The committee tried to obtain the reason for the difference in the reports. The Fire Chief commented on the practice of small boys throwing stones at arc and incandescent lights and shattering many of them.

After much discussion, Ald. Gordon moved,

"That when the adjustments are made, the reports of the Fire Chief and the Chief of Police, be considered. Carried.

COUNCIL PASSES REPORT

HOUR REMAINS AT 10 A.M.

ON MARKET QUESTION

All the members were in their places last night at a regular meeting of the City Council.

When Ald. Duncan moved the adoption of the Property Committee report, the Finance chairman, Ald. Anderson, objected to the market hour clause on the ground that something should be done to protect the local householders from outside buyers.

"I think that the general public who buy on the market want to buy directly from the producer," he remarked; "while I would not like to move in any way against the merchants. I still feel that the market hour should be changed to eleven o'clock."

Alderman Anderson said he had been in conversation with market clerk Girvin, and he had said he would not be opposed to the change. He felt that the great majority of buyers could not get to the market before eleven o'clock. The adoption of the report however, went through Alderman Anderson recognizing the uselessness of introducing any amendment to the clause.

The reports of the Legal and Finance Committees were read and adopted.

A by-law to authorize the Peterborough City Trust to purchase the land necessary for the widening of Bobbs Lane, passed its three readings.

There was a murmur of approbation when Ald. Duncan introduced a by-law to authorize the issuing of $10,000 in debentures for the purchase and installation of an incinerator plant.

The by-law will be voted upon on January 6th, the same day as the municipal elections.

A by-law to name polling places poll clerks and deputy returning officers for the municipal elections on January 6th, passed its several readings.

PRICES ON MARKET AND RETAIL STORES THE SAME

Best Quality Butter Quoated at 30 Cents and Eggs at 40 Cents

Butter and eggs sold on the market to-day at prices which remained fixed all morning. At ten o'clock butter was selling at 28 and 30 cents, and at eleven-thirty the prices had not dropped or changed. The best quality of dairy butter was bought at 30 cents. It was the same with eggs. They opened up strong at 40 cents a dozen, and many inquiries failed to find a lower price. There were no eggs for sale to speak of on the market at any time, and those who had them for sale held out stoutly for 40 cents a dozen, and they got what they demanded.

Chickens sold at prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.00 per pair, and some extra choice pairs at $1.25. Numbers were bought up at 75 and 80 cents, and one out of every two persons who visited the market carried off a brace. The sale of geese and turkeys was not quite so brisk.

In view of recent statements that produce retailed in the stores cheaper than on the market, a Review representative endeavored to ascertain if such was the case to-day. He found that eggs, butter and chickens, three of the standard market offerings, were selling at identically the same prices in the stores as on the market. There may have been exceptions, but the same prices were being received at the stores from which the Review inquired.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW OF MONTREAL

The Montreal Star says in a paragraph in a recent issue, that the building by-law of the city is at last finished and submitted to the City Council for approval and adds:

"After nearly two years of work on the new city building by-law, the proposed code has at last been drafted in full and a final copy was yesterday sent to Ald. Clement, the city's representative on the board, appointed to draft the law. The proposed by-law comprises a large book of 215 pages, bound in leather and forwarded with the compliments of Messrs. Walter G. Francis and Joseph Venne, the experts appointed to draft the by-law, from the technical standpoint. Ald. Clement expressed himself this morning as being delighted that the immense work had been completed. The by-law will now be submitted to the Controllers, who in turn will submit it to Council for discussion.

Mr. Francis is of course, well known in Peterborough and it is a credit to him that his services have been retained to carry out so important a work.

A professional polish should be put on tan shoes before they are worn. If this is done, they will not be scratched below the surface.

CHIMNEY FIRE

Excitement Was Too Much for Rheumatism Sufferer

The Fire Department had a call to Chamberlain Street at 11.30 this morning, where trouble was experienced from a chimney fire. Damage was not occasioned, but the excitement had a curious effect on Mr Samuel Stinson, the tenant, who is suffering from rheumatism, and a physician had to be called. Mr. Stinson was one of the first firemen under Chief Howard, but had to resign on account of his ailment.

Poles Are Excited.

London, Nov. 30.—Pamphlets have been distributed in the streets of Warsaw, calling upon the people to celebrate the anniversary of the Polish revolution of 1830, by declaring that the Polish nation must take active measures against Russia, says a special despatch received here from Warsaw.

Troops patrol the city, the despatch continues, and there have been numerous arrests of students and workmen. The managers of the Polish schools have been informed that their institutions will be closed if the students attend church services commemorating the revolution.

Winnipeg Fair Mismanaged?

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—The exhibition association at its annual meeting yesterday heard some surprising attacks made on alleged lax financial administration in recent years.

A committee was appointed to go over the accounts for the past five years.

Allegations of irregularities were made by some speakers.

Congress Opens Monday.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 30.—No legislation of importance outside of appropriation bills will be passed at the short session of Congress opening Monday, in the opinion of Republican Leader Mann of the House, who returned yesterday after a trip to the Panama Canal with the House appropriation committee.

RAILWAY SIDE OF THE ARGUMENT

MANY ABUSES TO FACE

Merchants Using Cars for Warehouse and Refrigeration Purposes One of the Worst.

(Montreal Gazette.)

A commentator on one phase of the railway situation remarks that while it is a fact that the newspapers especially in the west, appear to have taken a brief for the shippers as against the railways, there is a growing disposition on the part of the press as a whole to print both sides of the argument. This fact, he adds, encourages me to write you to-day.

The press of Canada is an important factor in the work of nation building above the international boundary. The transportation companies are equally important in this national development, and equally anxious to play their part fairly and openly. They realize that they can prosper best in a prosperous community, and they believe that if the railways as a business industry were accorded treatment a little more akin to that accorded other enterprises, it would work to the advantage of the railway and the public which it serves.

One of the many abuses with which the railroad has to contend is the habit of using cars and terminal facilities for storage warehouses. If the present demurrage charges, lately increased to one dollar a day, were doubled, there would be little complaint on the part of the shippers; but the railroad would still be losing money by providnig storage even at $2 a day. To illustrate:

The average delay beyond the free time on car loads of fruit in a certain city terminal, which is a fair example of the average in Canada, is seventeen days. For this the railroad company receives $17 in money, at the same time losing the use of the car for seventeen days, and the use of $2,600 worth of terminal property for the same length of time. The interest on the land amounts to $156 per year, the taxes to $30, and the interest on the car $22.50, which for the seventeen days amounts to $10.92. The actual cash outlay by the company for the seventeen days is 20.92 for which the shipper pays $17, the company being out $3.92. In addition to this the company is short this class of equipment and is unable to supply the demand and loses business which this car might handle. Furthermore, this car takes up track space and prevents cars from other shippers have placed promptly. The shippers have been approached from time to time and shown the necessity for releasing these cars more promptly, and are very frank to state that to build their own cold storage warehouse would cost infinitly more, and as long as the railroads would give them refrigeration at $1 a day, including storage, and prevent double handling of the fruit, they have no intention of building such warehouses.

The habit of holding cars arbitrarily for warehouse and refrigerating purposes is growing more general every day. Canada is developing so rapidly that rents, including the hire of money, are constantly increasing. The merchants' business swamps him, but nobody blames the merchant and yet how quickly the public will criticize a transportatoin company failing to provide not only equipment, but the very best class of equipment for the "peak of the load." Everybody's business in Canada has outgrown the facilities. If a railway in the "rush hour" puts on a coach a little lighter and older than the newest equipment, and it meets with an accident, the road is railed at and accused of criminal carelessness. Instead of encouraging the railroads to make a showing, which would make easier the work of securing new capital for new equipment and extensions, the tendency is to reduce rates, raise taxes, and impose operating conditions, that that render the production of transportation still more difficult and expensive. At this moment whole trains of cars in western terminals are held not only for days and weeks, but sometimes for months, by merchants who refuse to provide themselves with warehouse room. It seems to me that the best results could be obtained by honest, earnest, friendly co-opearation between the transportation companies and the shippers of Canada.

COUNTY COUNCIL FINISH BUSINESS

The business of the County Council was concluded this morning and the majority of the members have returned to their homes. A very large amount of committee work was taken up during the sessions and a number of resolutions of more or less importance were put through. The biggest matter dealt with was a discussion in reference to the Buckhorn bridge, and what action should be taken by the Council to stave off the threatened writ for $3,000. The whole circumstances leading up to the construction of the bridge were reviewed. A resolution finally passed council, recommending that action be deferred in regard to settlement of the Government's claim until the Council had presented their view of the matter to the Department. This will probably be performed when the County Council accompany the deputation to Ottawa, regarding the Trent Valley Canal completion. At the same time the Council will bring up the matter of the Pigeon Creek bridge.

Among the last of this year's productions will be The Money Burners, [illegible] McDonough and Raymond [illegible] ll.

According to recent announcements [illegible] Henry Bernstein, author of [illegible] thief, and Haddon Chambers [illegible] written plays for Ethel Barrymore.

A. H. Woods has added Sallie Fisher to the cast of The Woman Haters' Club, to play the principal role of the widow. Later Miss Fisher may be seen in one of three musical plays Mr. Woods has in mind, The Lady in the Limousine, The Purple Domino, or The Lady in Red, all of which he hopes to produce this season.

Three youngsters with the Bernard Dolf Company, namely Edith, Grace and Willie Norman visited Peterborough some few years ago with J. H. Stoddard in the "Bonnie Briar Bush." They made many friends at the time, and hope to renew old acquaintances. The mother of the children, Mrs. Mart Norman is an English woman, and the mother of sixteen children, the majority of whom are on the stage in the United States.

That he was an eye witness of the Rosenthal murder in New York, and that he could throw new light on the subject, were he so disposed, was the startling statement to the Review, of Mr. Starr L. Pixley, advance agent of the Bernard Daly production "Dion O'Dare. Mr. Pixley was willing to take out an affidavit before a lawyer to the effect that his story was true in every respect. Mr. Pixley is a member of the Elks Club, in New York with quarters not half a block from the Metropole Hotel, where the shooting occurred, and he was returning from the club when he witnessed the murder.

English actors apparently never become millionaires, if inferences are to be drawn from a newspaper paragraph which says that the estate of an English actor, recently deceased, amounted to $220,280, and that it is "the largest theatrical estate left since that of Toole, the famous comedian, which amounted to $339,926." Perhaps American actors are more fortunate; at any rate, we notice that the widow of an American actor has just left $75,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which places her quite in the class of some millionaires so far as charitable bequests are concerned.

Toronto Nov. 30.—Frank, Heffernan, the Toronto Rugby Club's star wing man, was this afternoon fined $50 and costs or 30 days in the Police Court for contravening the quarantine regulations of the Health Act. The magistrate, in imposing this penalty made it clear that the law in any case demanded compliance and that notwithstanding that the claims of Controller T. L. TRIBUTE TO HON. PATERSON

Veteran Liberal Honored by Brant Electors.

Brantford, Nov 30.—The Liberals of Brant, together with many Conservative friends, last night presented Hon. William Paterson with an illuminated address, enclosed in a case of birdseye maple, embellished with oxidized silver. The veteran Parliamentarian, who has served 38 years all told at Ottawa, was in such a precarious state of health, that he was unable to be present at the Liberal club rooms where the address was read. Signatures to the number of 800 from both ridings of Brant was appeneded.

T. H. Preston, Frank Cockshutt, J. R. Layton and Dr. Addison, tendered the presentation to Mr. Paterson at his home, after which the address and Mr. Paterson's reply were read to a large gathering at the Liberal club rooms.

The ex-Minister of Customs leaves next week to sojourn in California for the winter and the best wishes of both Brants were last night tendered him.

Letters were read from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier Borden, Senator Ross, Hon. W. S. Fielding and others, all extolling the high character of the veteran campaigner, both in private and public life.

The casket enclosing the address was a work of art. It carried as a crest the Dominion coat of arms upheld on each side by a beaver. On the front was a portrait in a wreath of laurels of Hon. William Paterson, and on the reverse side a portrait of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The exterior of the casket was of royal purple plush.

PATRICK ISSUES LONG STATEMENT

Will Fight Vigorously For His Vindication.

New York, Nov. 30.—Albert Patrick, who was released from Sing Sing on Thursday, issued a long statement yesterday, in which he went into the details of the two wills left by William Marsh Rice. He said, however, that while he intended to "fight vigorously for his vindication," he had not decided whether he would contest the will probated, which left the Rice millions to the Rice Institute at Houston, Texas.

"Whatever action is taken," he said, "must be formal, and must only be taken after long consideration." He added that in any event he was never a direct beneficiary under the disputed will, merely a trustee.

Peonage Is Charged.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—If the request made from Washington, through U. S. Consul Jones here, be granted by the Ottawa authorities and a rigid enquiry be instituted into alleged conditions in the construction camps of the Foley, Welch and Stewart Construction Co. on the Grand Trunk Pacific throughout the west, sensations are promised, if the complaining laborers substantiate their charges.

Conditions of virtual slavery are alleged to exist once the men get into these camps. It is too far in the wilderness to get out readily, and those leaving are forbidden, they say, under penalty to be given food or shelter at other camps on the long tramp out. If the men quit, a series of deductions are made from their pay checks for all sorts of things, and it is usual for the men to get no pay until after they have worked a month or six weeks.

Royal George Crew Pacified.

Quebec, Nov. 30.—The enquiry into the stranding of the Royal George will begin in the court house here on Tuesday. The liner, it is expected, will be able to sail at the end of next week.

The trouble with the stokers has been settled by the payment of double wages. This increase is granted to all the crew.

Berlin's Fine Park Plans.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—An important deal was consummated by the parks commission last night whereby the parks system will be greatly enlarged. They have secured about 70 acres of the best wooded land to be had, part of which is in the city, while the balance is just adjoining. To begin with, through the generosity of the executors of the Louis Breithaupt estate, they were donated ten acres, and Messrs. Louis and E. O. Weber also donated ten acres and the balance was purchased to complete the park.

Artificial lakes will be laid out, sanitary drinking fountains put in and roadways and walks laid out.

The whole scheme is a part of the boom for city planning. Mayor Schmalz is a strong advocate of an enlarged parks system. The purchase prices will be about $10,000.

MAYOR BRADBURN EXPLAINS HYDRO

the power that the Commission has stated in a letter which has been read in the Council "that if it should be found later that the Commission cannot supply power in accordance with that estimate, the commission will not enter into a contract with the municipality without the ratepayers having an opportunity to give the matter further consideration. And further, "that the power will be developed as the city's requirements call for."

If the by-law is carried and the scheme carried out, the result will be that the Commission will secure the power and transmit it to the city and the city will receive it and sell and distribute it to the users. The Province will provide the money required for the work to be done by the Commission, and the city will raise the funds for the distributing system. Then the city will pay to the Commission for the power it takes, sufficient to provide interest and sinking fund on the expenditure made by the Commission, and the operating expenses of the generating and transmission plant. The rates named are estimated to provide this and also to provide interest and sinking fund and operating expenses of the city's distributing system. At the end of the debenture period the system will be paid for, and the city will be able to reduce the rates by the amounts that were required for the interest and sinking fund debentures. The city will not only have this advantage with respect to the distributing system, but also the advantage of the initial expenditure by the Commission having been paid off for the full benefit of this will come to the municipality in the reduction of the cost to it of power.

It must be remembered, and I would like to impress this upon the minds of all, that the city does not enter into a contract for the purchase of power in the ordinary sense, for the Hydro-Electric Commission will be practically trustees for the municipality, and the benefits of any advantages it may secure by improvements in means of production or in any other way will come to the city just as much as if the city directly owned the power. This is a proposition for the city to own and control power for the benefit of citizens, but, for the purpose of assisting the city, the Commission undertakes the work of purchasing and producing the power and transmitting it to the city. By this method we obtain the services of the Commission and its engineers and the use of the credit of the Province to help us in that very important part of the project.

This is how the proposition we now have before us differs essentially from others. This is one reason why we did not ask the Electric Power Co. for a price at which it would supply power. By purchasing from a company the power would still be in the hands of private interests, by the carrying out of the proposals now being considered we will have municipal power, freed from the private interests and profits, and delivered to the people for light, heat and power at cost.

Permit me to refer very briefly to the propositions of the Electric Power Company. They said they would sell us a portion of their distributing plant for $100,000, but the Commission tells us we can construct a new and complete distributing plant, including underground work, or $120,000.

They also said they would sell the city the electric distributing plants, the gas plant, and the street railway for $675,000, but the figures they put upon the Light & Power Co.'s distributing system is an indication of how they put prices on their properties. Besides, tacked to this proposal was a condition that the city must take the power from them, thus shutting out the city from owning power and leaving in the company's hands the sources of power in the district.

There was the further proposal from the company that they would take the city into partnership in the operation of their utilities using the streets (but not, mark you, in the production of power) and give the city 40 per cent of the profits, after paying fixed charges, operating expenses and depreciation. Upon the Board of Directors, the city was to have two representatives out of five, probably a fair enough proportion under the circumstances, but the company by having the majority would retain full control. Then the revenue of the utilities—the light, power and gas plants and street railway—would have to provide interest on a heavy bonded indebtedness, depreciation, operating expenses and dividends on the stock, and in addition to all these provide a surplus to be paid to the city. The rates to be charged the citizens would have to be kept up to figures sufficient to produce this revenue. Ordinarily the profits (over the fixed and operating charges) are expected to be sufficient to pay dividends on the stock, under this proposition they would be expected to be so large that 60 per cent of the profits would pay the dividends and allow 40 per cent to be paid to the city, and the users would have to furnish the money. This proposal included a provision that the city would be for all time to come excluded from entering into competition with the company—that it could never at any time enter into the light, power, gas or street railway business, unless it first purchased from the company these utilities at a value, to be fixed by arbitration, of the utilities "as going concerns," but without anything for franchise rights. "As going concerns" is a wide and elastic term, for have we not heard the company stating that the exclusion of "prospective profits and franchises" does not include compensation for damages? And again, as in the other proposal, the city would not own power and would not have any interest in any dam or producing plant from which the power would come to operate the utilities. It would entirely preclude municipal ownership of power.

With respect to the Otonabee Power Co., its franchise expires at the end of next year. It has been said that unless the Council renews that franchise it will be doing an injustice to that company. In the first place the city gave the company a right to use the streets for ten years and it has not tried to interfere with that right. Then the city tried in the early part of last year to purchase the property of the company, but the company replied in a letter to the Mayor saying, "we have decided not to offer our property for sale." Yet although the company gave this refusal to the city, about that time control of the company was sold to the Electric Power Co. If any interests connected with the Otonabee company are afraid of injury, it is not the fault of the city or the Commission, and if any of its property is taken for the public, it will be paid for at a fair price.

The city has made efforts in recent years to get control of power. In 1907 it tried to buy out the Peterborough Light & Power Co., but the company broke off the negotiations. This company is now controlled by the Electric Power Co. The city also endeavored to buy the Burleigh Falls power and made an offer for it. That property is now also controlled by the Electric Power Co. It tried to open negotiations with the Otonabee Power Co. and was rebuffed. That company is now controlled by the Electric Power Co. It got an option from the Dickson Co. of the Lakefield power property, but was advised by competent engineers that the project was not feasible at the price given. The Auburn Power Co. is another that has been brought under the control of the Electric Power Co.

There does not seem to be any way for the city to obtain control of power except through the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and the Commission is willing to give its services to the city and secure power for it. By this means the city will have municipally controlled power, and if advantage is not taken of this offer and opportunity, there may not be another.

If the ratepayers want municipal power, by passing this by-law they will secure the aid of the Commission, with all its powers backed by the credit of the Province, and by this means will procure power owned and controlled by the people, and which will be delivered to the users at cost.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

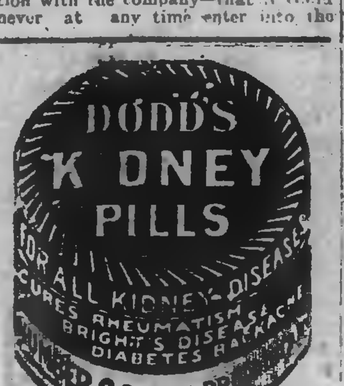
When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney ills as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14



SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

The mother weighs 400 pounds.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline Is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

SOME ARGUMENTS HEARD ON MISSIONARY PROBLEM

Dr. Falconer, of Toronto, Gave Opening Address to Students.

People of Slums Not to be Redeemed by Money and Preaching.

The opening meeting of the Student's Volunteer Conference was held in the Murray Street Baptist Church last night.

The beautiful new church was thronged with the students from various colleges of Ontario and Quebec as well as a goodly sprinkling of local people.

Mr. H. D. Robertson presided as chairman, and a brief speech, welcoming the students, was made by Rev. Isaac Couch. Mr. J. Lovell Murray, Educational Secretary of the Student's Volunteer Movement New York, in a few words responded to the cordial welcome.

The event of the evening, however, was the address given by President Falconer, of Toronto University, who took as his subject the arguments given by people as to whether missionaries and money were needed more at home than in the heathen countries.

Those of us at home, doubt the more stringent need for missionaries but those in contact with the heathen countries were met with concrete facts. He had no hesitation in saying that the Christian was not so far advanced in the Anglo-Saxon western world as in the heathen eastern countries. Another argument used was that the money sent out to the foreign missionaries was needed more in the slums of our large cities.

The speaker, however, pointed out that the poor and degraded people are not to be redeemed by money and preaching, but by getting the people who are at home, to live up to their ideas of Christianity and in so way change those around them.

Professor J. L. Gilmour, D.D., of McMaster University, Toronto, who conducted the devotional exercises, closed the evening with prayer.

ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY WILL NOT OPPOSE BY-LAW

Hydro Proposal of the Council Will be Given Friendly Support.

That the Electric Power Company entertain no ill-feeling towards the city because of the decision not to consider their power proposition is proven by the following letter which Mayor Bradburn read to the Council last evening:

W. H. Bradburn.
Mayor,
Peterborough,

Having noticed in the Peterborough papers that a resolution had been passed by your Council approving the submission to the electors of a by-law to raise $120,000, to be used in the construction of an independent lighting system, we conclude that your Council will not further consider the proposition which we submitted to you on the 29th inst.

We now wish to assure you that our company and the interests that we represent will not in any way oppose the passing of the proposed money by-law for an independent lighting system. I am instructed to say that our company regards the project which we are advised the council will recommend to the electors as being in no way in contravention of the terms of the franchise granted to us by your city, and in appreciation of the good faith you are showing towards our company, we beg to assure you that your proposal will be given friendly support by all voters who may in any way be guided by our advice. I remain,

Yours respectfully,
The Electric Power Company, Limited.

President.

LARGE REPRESENTATION FOR OTTAWA DEPUTATION

Board of Trade Has Much Work to do on Short Notice—Citizens Are Asked to Co-operate.

The members of the Board of Trade are doing their best to make the deputation for Ottawa on the Trent Canal question as large and representative as possible. A committee of Messrs. T. H. G. Denne, W. H. Munro, W. H. Dunsford and J. C. Shook, with the co-operation of other members, are in the missionary field, with the object of interviewing citizens to join the deputation.

The early completion of the Trent Canal is of vital import to Peterborough. The present proposal relating to the deputation is worth a sacrifice on the part of any citizen and it is hoped that the call for a large deputation will not pass unanswered.

With President Eastwood in the chair last night, the Board of Trade discussed the situation as brought about by the receipt of information that the date set for the hearing of the deputation was next Tuesday—very short notice.

What perplexed the meeting last night was the question of speakers for the deputation. The telegrams received were indefinite on this point. It was presumed, however, that Mr. Burnham had not overlooked this very important matter. It also had to be taken for granted that all other municipal representatives interested in the movement had been informed. Some doubt existed in this point, when the secretary read a letter from the Orillia Board of Trade, stating that the Board would be glad to co-operate and asking to be advised regarding the arrangements.

It was decided that the chairman send a night lettergram to Mr. Burnham telling him that the Board had decided to send representatives to Ottawa, and that it was understood that he and other members had notified the other municipalities, and had arranged for speakers to address the members on behalf of the deputation.

"I'd like to see 100 citizens go to Ottawa," said Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr. "All eyes are on Peterborough."

Mr. Pennefather did not think it would be a difficult matter to get a large deputation. "It means money in their pocket if they look at it in the right light," he remarked.

COUNCILS TO GO.

It was further decided that the chairman and Mr. Shook wait on the council to learn their plans.

Action by the council was that all the members of that body would go to Ottawa. Ten members of the County Council will also make the trip.

The railway rate will be fare and a third.

President Eastwood has received another wire stating that all arrangements have been made and it is inferred that these include speakers.

Those present at the meeting were the President and Secretary and Messrs. Pennefather, Shook, Campbell, Austin, Munro, Denne, Moore, Turner and Dunsford.

BROTHERHOOD AT ST. JOHN'S

New Officers are Elected and good Results are Anticipated

The annual meeting of the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew of St. John's church was held in the Guild room last evening, and officers for the coming year were elected.

Honorary Director—Mr. J. S. Bell.
President—E. Glover.
Vice-President—F. Pigeon.
Secretary-Treasurer—Arthur Horsfield.
Chairman of Scripture Union Committee—Frank Pigeon.

At one time the Junior Chapter of St. John's had a large membership and was doing good work for the church, but for the last year or more it has dropped out of existence, as Mr. Bell, the director, left for the West. Mr. Bell returned a few weeks ago for a short stay in the city, and the chapter has been reorganized through his efforts, and from present indications it will no doubt live well up to its former high standard of efficiency. Mr. Bell's efforts on behalf of the Brotherhood are warmly appreciated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor,—Your article on the proposed increase of the members' sessional indemnity is timely and right. There is no room for members to complain. If they think the pay too small they are at liberty to stay at home. Kindly acquit me of any intention of supporting or accepting any increased sessional indemnity; Others may think differently of both sides of politics, but these are my views. A majority of the House is more powerful than any government, and Mr. Borden or Sir Wilfrid Laurier are in no way responsible so far as I know, for any proposition.

AID FOR THE WEAK-MINDED

Mr. Peck Says Government Realizes Importance of Providing Proper Institutions.

The Police Commissioners held a meeting last evening at four o'clock at which Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., was present.

Magistrate D. W. Dumble asked the provincial member to support any measure in parliament that would tend to provide a home of detention for partially insane or weak-minded people. Mr. Dumble referred to the difficulty with committing such parties to a suitable place of refuge. They were not insane enough to be dangerous, and the hospitals refused to accept them and the gaol was plainly not the proper place for them.

Mr. Peck was of the opinion that it should be the duty of children wherever possible to care for their parents. If a person is really hopelessly insane, said the Ontario member, they, of course, are sent to the regular Provincial institutions. He admitted that the problem of a refuge for the weak-minded was a serious and imminent one for the Government to deal with. The number of such deficient minded people was increasing so rapidly that the Government realized the importance of providing proper institutions to house and care for them. A new institution under construction at Whitby would afford more accommodation when completed.

Mr. Peck, however, said he would be glad to back up any measure that was brought up in the House with such a worthy and necessary object in view.

A recommendation was introduced by Police Magistrate Dumble in the form of a motion that a resolution be prepared and forwarded to Mr. Peck to be presented to the House advocating adequate provision for caring for the weak-minded and partially insane.

Chief Thompson was given authority to purchase uniform gauntlets for the use of the police force this winter, also fur caps.

Some minor items of business were transacted and the accounts passed.

Judge Huycke Magistrate D. W. Dumble, Mayor Bradburn and Chief Thompson were present.

FIRE BROKE OUT IN THE CELLAR

Homewood Family Was Awakened Earlier than Usual

Fire broke out in a cellar of a house at 573 Homewood Avenue, about 3 o'clock this morning. The pipe from the furnace had become clogged with soot, so that the heat became congested and set fire to the soot. One of the family was awakened by the smoke and ran to a neighbor's and telephoned for the firemen.

A line of hose was laid and the fire was extinguished, but not before a portion of the back of the house and the cellar was burned.

The damage was about $300.

CONCERNING THE HOME LIBRARY

Bookcases That May Be Added, Section By Section, As The Number Of Volumes Increases

IN SOME HOUSEHOLDS books are more of a burden than a benefit. Children are admonished as to the inestimable value of reading, and perhaps upbraided in the same breath for strewing the tables and chairs with their books. But when the small boy and small girl are provided with shelves of their own in the living-room all such trouble is happlily obviated. The sectional bookcase that takes up so little room, that conforms so harmoniously to the general furnishing scheme of the room, and that protects its books from the dust that settles on shelves and bindings—this is the foundation stone of the home library.

The GLOBE-WERNICKE CASES, as embodying all these qualities, merits emphatic notice.

They are obtainable in sections of similar width and different depth—suited to books of different sizes—with top and base, prices being as follows:

	Plain Oak	Quartered Oak or Imitation Mahogany	Genuine Mahogany
Top	$1.75	$2.00	$3.00
8½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.50	3.00	4.25
8½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	3.75	4.25	5.50
10½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.75	3.25	4.50
10½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.15	4.65	5.90
12½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	3.00	3.60	4.75
12½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.60	5.20	6.35
Base	1.75	2.00	3.00
Drawer Base	2.80	3.10	4.25

The oak cases are procurable in golden, fumed or early English finish.

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, MONDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1912

TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

THE TURKISH SOLDIERS, BEATEN ON ALL SIDES, ARE PICTURED FLEEING FROM THEIR ENEMIES

THE RETREAT OF TURKS FROM LULE BURGAS OVER BRIDGE OF KARISTRAN TO CHATALJA FROM THE SPHERE.

MR. BURNHAM'S EXPLANATION

What Peterboro[illegible] M.P. Mean[illegible] by a Co[illegible]spiracy.

Ottawa, [illegible]. [illegible]. H. Burnham, M.P. for [illegible]erboro, gave out a warm intervi[illegible] Saturday following up his recent [illegible]marks in the Commons to the e[illegible] that a conspiracy exists for d[illegible] the French race in Cana[illegible] of their language.

"D[illegible] any ecclesiastic of the Church of R[illegible]e," Mr. Burnham asks, "deny that [illegible]e church, through Cardinal Bourne, has commanded and directed the French-Canadians to give up their mother tongue and to adopt English in order that the church may make full use of the French race in its proposed conquest of Canada to the true faith? Does anybody deny that a government began the crusade by an investigation at the dictation of Bishop Fallon? The French are willing to conform to the law, but are resisting the chusch. With which side do the Protestants of Canada propose to ally themselves?"

A protest against the pledges being demanded of bilingual teachers by the Ontario Government that they carry out the regulations of the Provincial Department of Education relating to English-French schools will be the principal note struck at a public meeting to be held by the separate school board here to-night.

A special meeting of the board will also be held this week at which the matter will be taken up and preparation will be commenced for the organization of the big deputation which is to go to Toronto this month to interview the Government.

The teachers have everywhere refused to sign the pledges, according to a statement of Trustee Genest on Saturday. "The Government, which cannot reach us, is striking at the children and the teachers, both defenceless," he said.

Langevin's Joy.

Winnipeg, Dec. 2.—Speaking before the Association of Bilingual Teachers of Manitoba, in session at St. Boniface, Archbishop Langevin said:

"We insist upon teaching the English language because it is commonsense and because it is our duty to do so. Our church opens its heart to all nationalities and languages. There's not even need of an apology for this study.

"But meanwhile we want a thorough knowledge of the French language and the study of the latter must come first. Our children must know and realize the glory of the French-Canadian nation, therefore bilingual schools are my joy," concluded the archbishop.

LUNACY BOARD IS FAVORED

Winnipeg, Dec. 2.—Public Utilities Commissioner Robon's report on the Selkirk Asylum enquiry, given out yesterday, approves the suggestion of a lunacy commission to be a permanent supervisoral body, composed largely of medical men, including, if possible, an alienist. Such a board would obviate heavy legal expenses connected with the applications for liberation of some patients. "Judging from conditions at Selkirk," the report says, "there is reason to suppose that there is some undue detention in these asylums."

To Go to Mount Clemens.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2.—The ten Detroit aldermen charged with conspiracy to accept a bribe and receiving a bribe in connection with a Wabash railroad street closing case and former councilmanic clerk Edward Schreiter, also charged with conspiracy to accept a bribe, will be tried in Mount Clemens, as the result of a decision handed down Saturday by Judge Phelan of the recorder's court. Judge Phelan granted a change of venue upon application of Prosecutor Shepherd, who charged that it would be impossible to obtain a fair trial in Wayne County, because of the publicity of the cases and the evidence disclosed at the police court examinations of the defendants.

MR. GORDON C. WILSON SOUNDS NOTE OF WARNING

Mr. Gordon C. Wilson, M. P. for Wentworth, passed through this city early this morning, en route from his home to Ottawa. To a Review representative, he said he wished to sound a note of warning to power and light users in Peterborough. "Tell them," he said, "to sign no contracts with existing companies till the Hydro commission's representatives come and tell them just how cheap power and light can be supplied to them. I have been informed that Mr. Glenn Marsden, of Chicago, advertising expert, who is considered the best corporation ad writer in America, will arrive in Peterborough in a few days to commence a newspaper campaign in the interest of the electrical ring. Mr. Marsden has been in North Bay or Orillia for the Seymour Company, and he spent several weeks in Hamilton for the Cataract Power and Transmission Co., about a year ago."

It is likely that Mr. Wilson will be invited to speak here on the power question by the Trades and Labor Council.

UNION LEADERS ARE DISMISSED

Fourty-One Officials are Still on Trial For Conspiracy

Canadian Press Despatch.

Indianapolis, Dec. 2.—W. K. Benson East Galloway, New York, a former president of the Detroit Federation of Labor Moulton H. Davis, Westchester, Pa., a former member of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Executive; Jas. Carrol, Syracuse, Ny., a former official of the local Iron Workers' Union, and Spurgeon P. Meadows, Business Agent for the local council of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, were dismissed as defendants in the Dynamiters conspiracy trial at the conclusion of the presentation of the Government's evidence this morning, the request of Charles W. Miller, U.S. District Attorney. This leaves forty-one union officials still on trial.

"Rubbish," Says Argyll.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—In an effort to clear up the point as to whether Sir John A. Macdonald insulted the Princess Louise, The Montreal Star addressed the following cable to the Duke of Argyll, the husband of the princess:

"Cartwright's memoirs, just out, say Sir John A. Macdonald on unfriendly terms Princess Louise last two years her stay, owing affront put on her by Macdonald."

The duke cabled back:

"Rubbish."

This reply, says The Star, should give the story its quietus.

SILENT FOR ELEVEN YEARS

Had Quarrel After Happy Life of Thirteen Years

New York, Dec. 2.—The story of eleven years of married life during which not a word was exchanged between husband and wife is told in papers on file here in a separation suit in the state supreme court. The pair, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mintz, were married in 1884. For thirteen years they lived happily together with their four children. Eleven years ago they quarreled. The dispute was over some trivial matter, it is said, but the wife declared that she would never address another word to her husband so long as she lived. He declared that the arrangement was satisfactory to him. Mrs. Mintz asserts that both adhered to the agreement. Seven years ago their daughter Dorothy died, but even at the funeral services the vow of silence was not broken. Mr. Mintz is now seeking a separation.

TWO OTTAWA BOYS ARE DROWNED

Ice on the Canal Failed to Hold Them.

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—Harold and Albert Turner, aged 5 and 3 respectively, sons of a Grand Trunk engineer, broke through the ice and drowned in the Rideau Canal, Saturday afternoon. They had been allowed out to play, by their mother, who was engaged with her house work, and wandered down to the canal, a short distance away from home. Their absence was not noticed until an hour later, when a search was immediately made, the finding of a hole in the thin ice near the bank of the canal, confirming the mother's worst fears.

HE DID NOT RAISE RENTS

Ideal Landlord at Hamilton Passes Away.

Hamilton, Dec. 2.—Hamilton's ideal landlord is dead, a man who never raised his rents in fifteen years and still died wealthy has passed away to be mourned by a long line of grateful tenants, who will search in vain for his like.

John Thompson is the man who has left this unique monument behind him and his death came peacefully Saturday afternoon at his home at 137 East Cannon street.

Despite his unique stand in the matter of his rents, he did not die poor, and his estate is estimated at $200,000, much of which is in these houses of the stationary rentals. These properties were purchased years ago at low figures and to-day tenants of this ideal landlord are paying only $5 and $6 per month for houses the like of which are bringing $15 and $20 to others. His tenants are all workingmen and thus Mr. Thomson's unusual form of generosity has found a blessing all its own.

It was his boast, in a quiet way, that he chose to take his profits from the properties and not from the people who lived in them. They paid him profits upon his original investment and the growing prosperity of the city made him rich, steadily and substantially, and he was content to have it so.

Mr. Thomson was 78 years of age. For thirty years or more he was chief appraiser for His Majesty's customs for the port of Hamilton, and was also a Dominion appraiser, and was often sent to distant parts of the country to do special work for the Government. About three years ago he was superannuated and had lived a quiet retired life. He was considered one of the most capable and efficient officials ever employed at the local customs offices.

FRENCH AIRMEN ARE KILLED

Paris, Dec. 2.—Another French airman, Paul Arondel, was killed Saturday at Juvisy-Sur-Orge, about 25 miles from Paris. He was flying around the aerodrome in his mono plane when he took a turn too sharply, and the machine lost its equilibrium, causing him to fall a distance of 180 feet. He received his pilot's certificate as recently as April 5 this year.

MAY WRITE KING GEORGE TO PAY CANADA A VISIT

For National Peace Celebra[illegible]tion to be Held in [illegible]

Toronto, Dec. 2.—"It is highly probable that King George V. will be invited to attend the great National Peace Celebration in the fall of 1914." This was the statement made yesterday by John G. Kent, who, with Hon. Dr. Reaume, Hon. J. S. Duff, George Gooderham, M.P.P., and Dr. J. O. Orr, formed the deputation which was in conference on Friday at Quebec, with the Ministers of that province, to make plans for the peace celebration, inasmuch as only Ontario and Quebec were actually engaged in the war of 1812-14.

The conference was of a general nature, and no definite plans were outlined. Dr. Orr and Mr. Kent returned to Toronto on Friday night.

All that could be learned was that, at the close of the present European hostilities, His Majesty King George V., would probably be invited to attend the celebration more particularly in view of the fact when Prince of Wales he endeared himself to the people of both the leading races of the Dominion during the Quebec tercentenary.

Fall Kills Child.

[illegible] Dec. 2.—A peculiar accident resulted in the death of [illegible] the four-year-old son of Mr. William Billings of Guelph Township. He was proceeding with his father across some fields to a turnip pit and while getting over a fence was precipitated to the ground. The fall was only about three feet, but the child's head coming in contact with the frozen ground, his skull was fractured and he expired shortly afterwards.

FATAL SHOOTING OF DEER HUNTER

Was Shot and Bled to Death Before Doctor Arrived

Canadian Press Despatch.

Dauphin, Man., Dec. 2—Word has just reached here of the accidental shooting on Thursday last, of John Lavoix, who was killed in mistake for a deer, by Jas. Parineau, a member of another hunting party. Lavoix bled to death before the arrival of a doctor.

THIEVING FROM C.P.R. CARS FOLLOWED BY BIG ROUND-UP

Employees of Every Department Connected With the Thefts—"Fences" to be Raided.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Saskatoon, Sask., Dec. 2.—As the result of the investigation of H. S. Shea, a private detective from New York, the biggest round-up in the history of the West, is being undertaken at Sutherland, near here, which C.P.R. officials claim will connect employes of every department with thefts of goods from cars in transit amounting to thousands of dollars in value. Two arrests have already been made and a number of "fences" spotted will be raided in twenty-four hours. Many arrests are expected.

Crew Saved From Ship.

Halifax, Dec. 2.—The steamer River Meander, bound from New York to Mediterranean ports, was abandoned three hundred miles east of Halifax, where her crew was taken off by the steamer Ikbal, bound from Newport to Liverpool. The River Meander, which was formerly the Bordistan, left New York last Tuesday. She ran into Thursday's northeast gale, which blew seventy miles an hour, and she sprang a leak. On Friday the Ikbal saw their plight.

Boats were launched and in the high sea the crew of the sinking steamer were rescued with difficulty. When the last of them was off the River Meander was lurching heavily, and it is believed she foundered soon afterward. The rescued crew, numbering thirty-one, were brought to this city last night. Captain MacGregor was in command of the steamer.

ALLIES NOT READY TO SIGN PROTOCAL TILL TUESDAY

Greek Delegates to Peace Conference Have Not Yet Received Authority to Act, But When They Do it is Believed That the War Will be Virtually Ended—Peace Negotiations Will be Long.

London, Dec. 2.—The signing of the protocal of the armistice between the Balkan allies and Turkey, which was expected yesterday, has been postponed until to-morrow, as the Greek delegate has not yet received the necessary authority from his Government.

It is rumored that in addition to the Bulgarian troops just landed at Dedeaghatch, another large force of Greek troops from Saloniki is at sea, and it is suggested that Greece may delay signing the armistice in order to enable these troops to arrive at their destination, which is supposed to be the Gulf of Saros, in Gallipoli.

It is understood that the armistice will extend for about a fortnight if necessary and cover the whole field of operations. The difficulty with respect to the beleaguered garrisons of Adrianople and Scutari is being surmounted by permitting them to receive daily rations during the armistice.

The plenipotentiaries appear to have been concerned so far solely in arranging the armistice, but a peace conference is expected to commence immediately, probably at Sofia, and as Bulgaria has already shown greater forbearance than has been looked for in waiving her demand for the surrender of Adrianople, while at the same time Turkey cannot hope to secure better conditions by continuing the war, a strong feeling is entertained that the last shot in the war will have been fired when the armistice is signed.

There is little doubt, however, that the peace negotiations will be difficult and protracted. The question of holding a European ambassadorial conference is still undecided, but the international situation is much more peaceful. The Servian Government denies the reported preparations for a conflict with Austria, while the Austrian press is much less bellicose.

Allies Will Divide.

Paris, Dec. 2.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Temps gives under reserve, the main lines of a peace scheme as outlined by Turkish semi-official sources. According to this scheme, Greece gets Epirus; Servia gets Old Servia and Novipazar, and Bulgaria gets Thrace, following the frontier from Midia to Dedeaghatch or Kavala, but excluding Adrianople, which remains connected with Constantinople and the Dardanelles.

Autonomy is to be granted to Macedonia, with Saloniki as the capital. Albania, minus the part ceded to Montenegro, and also the provinces are placed under the suzereignty of the Balkans.

The final condition is the admission of Turkey to the Balkan League.

Want Big Indemnity.

London, Dec. 2.—Telegraphing from Sofia, The Daily Mail correspondent asserts that the allies will demand from Turkey as a war indemnity $240,000,000.

The correspondent at Constantinople of the same newspaper says:

"After the armistice is signed an interval of a week will elapse for the appointment of plenipotentiaries to negotiate peace. The Bulgarians have shown considerable conciliation in the last few days. They are beginning to realise they are too exhausted ever to break the Tchatalja lines. Also, the allies are beginning to dispute among themselves, which is an additional reason for wishing to finish the war quickly."

Italy Not In Yet.

Rome, Dec. 2.—While a conference of ambassadors as proposed by the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, is under consideration, the assertion that Italy has already adhered to the plan is incorrect.

A semi-official communication says: "Sir Edward Grey's proposal has not even been formally submitted as yet. If it were submitted, Italy would not reply without first hearing the opinions of the other powers and also having an understanding with the allies."

The occupation of the small Island of Saseno at the entrance of the Gulf of Avlona by the Greeks is interpreted to mean that Greece intends to occupy Southern Albania, including Avlona. This would cause a complication, as Italy and Austria are in perfect accord in the policy of preventing, by force, if necessary, the holding of Avlona by Greece and the establishment there of a naval base.

Albanians throughout Italy continue to hold meetings and send addresses to the Italian Government, seeking Italian protection for Albania and the exclusion from that territory of the Balkan states.

A WARNING TO RUSSIA

Canadian Press Despatch.

Berlin, Dec. 2—In a speech before the Reichstag this morning, Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg, uttered a plain warning to Russia that in case hostilities arose out of the Austro-Hungarian difficulties, Germany would draw her sword to assist the allies.

Oh, yes, we're the best of friends; I never have to talk to him unless I want to.

THE TIP WAS NOT NEEDED

Detectives Burns Was on the Trail Long Before.

Indianapolis, Dec. 2.—William J. Burns' story of his pursuit of the McNamaras and McManigal, after The Los Angeles' Times explosion, was told by him at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial Saturday.

At the time of the explosion, on Oct. 1, 1910, he said, he was on a train from San Francisco to Los Angeles, and the next day he, as a detective, was employed by Mayor Alexander of Los Angeles, to run down the dynamiters. He remained on the Pacific coast until the latter part of December, when he returned to Chicago. In Chicago, he said, he met Herbert S Hockin, now secretary of the Ironworkers' Union. Hockin is accused by the Government of having betrayed the dynamiters while he himself was a dynamiter.

Mr. Burns, in substance, testified:

"Hockin told me he would not have met me if it were not for the fact that the dynamiters were going to do a lot of killing. He said J. J. McNamara, then secretary of the union, had employed James B. McNamara, and McManigal to kill as many people as possible, to bring about the result he hoped for. I told Hockin he was late with his information, as I knew all the facts already. Then I asked him where he got his information that people on the Pacific coast were going to blow me up?

"He said Olaf A. Tveitmore of San Francisco was looking after the plot. I told him I believed Tveitmoe would do it if he had a chance, for I had opposed Tveitmoe in the San Francisco graft investigation, and I had sent my son Raymond to Minnesota to get a photograph of Tveitmoe in the penitentiary uniform, and had it published in San Francisco.

"I asked Hockin if it was not true that every member of the ironworkers' executive board knew about the explosions. He said neither they nor President M. Ryan knew what J. J. McNamara and probably Eugene A. Clancy of San Francisco were doing.

"I told Hockin I proposed to get the men higher up. I didn't want merely local men. I said John J. was the man I wanted.

"I offered to pay Hockin to come into my employ, but he said he would accept only his expenses. I told him at that time Los Angeles had ceased to pay me, and now I had not only to fight dynamiters, but also a class of men opposed to civic decency in San Francisco."

Two Drowned at Sarnia.

Sarnia, Dec. 2.—Capt. Albert Nicholson and his brother-in-law, John Presious, were drowned Friday when the sand scow Hustler, which they were on, was struck by the scow Chinook and sent to the bottom. The Hustler was in tow of the tug Annie Moiles and the Chinook in tow of the tuge Annie Smith. In some manner the scows collided, with fatal results. The accident occurred opposite Port Lambton, in the St. Clair River. Both victims resided in Port Huron, Mich.

NAVY BILL INTRODUCED WEDNESDAY OR THURSDAY

Length of Present Debate Depends on the Opposition

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—The debate on the address according to present indications will close Wednesday. Premier Borden stated at the close of Saturday's Cabinet session that there would be a division on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's amendment Tuesday. There is no expectation of a long discussion on the Mondou amendment, and there is even a probability that it will not be pressed. It is thought likely that the Government, while agreeing in some degree to the principle, will ask that the amendment be withdrawn on the ground that a motion to amend the speech from the throne can only be regarded as a vote of want of confidence in the Government.

Should Mr. Mondou consent to this it will clear the way for the introduction of the naval emergency bill on Wednesday or Thursday.

Whether or not this will allow a division on the naval measure before Christmas adjournment, depends entirely upon the attitude to be adopted by the Opposition and is a question which nobody on Parliament Hill, least of all Liberal members can answer in advance. Everything will depend upon the bill itself and upon the attitude, which the Opposition will take. Every effort is being made by the party whips to keep the members in Ottawa, with a view to as big a showing as possible in the vote on the Laurier amendment on Tuesday.

There was a lengthy session of the Cabinet on Saturday to consider, it is understood, the additional naval memoranda which Hon. George E. Foster is supposed to have brought from the British Admiralty.

Premier Borden, Hon. J. D. Hazen and Hon. George E. Foster will, it is announced, be the three first Government speakers in the above named order, on the naval bill.

It is understood that the Christmas recess will begin on Dec. 17.

The Dominion Senate will this coming week take up the effect which the Panama Canal administration bill will have particularly upon Canadian shipping. Sir George W. Ross, who heard the question debated in the United States Senate, will bring up the matter and has, it is understood, prepared an elaborate speech on the question.

Johnson Still Charms.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—That Jack Johnson and Miss Lucille Cameron had been in communication since she left her mother is admitted by the pugilist, who says that he had received two letters from her Friday morning and later talked with her over the telephone.

"She said that she was going west and that after she reached her destination, she would write me," Johnson said, adding that he was ready to marry her at any time she would accept him.

Inland Revenue Goes Up.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—The inland revenue returns for November, 1912, show an increase of $64,000 over those for November, 1911, the figures being $91,20[illegible] for the past month as against $827,0[illegible] for November, 1911.

LIFE WAS SAVED BY PROMOTION

Good News had Stimulating Effect on Detective.

New York, Dec. 2.—Surgeons are marvelling at the vitality displayed by Martin Fay, a detective, who is convalescing in a hospital from seven bullet wounds in the abdomen. He was shot during the fusillade at the Bronx Roadhouse two weeks ago, when he and other detectives attempted to arrest James Vogel, a notorious thief and "Fagin" and his wife, who fought desperately when brought to bay. Two detectives and the [illegible] died from the wounds received, but it was announced definitely for the first time yesterday that Fay would recover.

Mr. Fay was told that he would probably be home by Christmas, bearing papers of promotion to the rank of first-grade detective, which Police Commissioner Waldo recently sent him.

Surgeons attribute Fay's recovery to the fact that all of the wounds were made by steel bullets, and to the fact that his promotion has had a wonderfully stimulating effect upon his vitality.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED By HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT 19 by R.H.CO.

"He was two years old," Marjorie sobbed.

"Oh, that's too bad!" the conductor groaned. "What did he look like?"

"He had a pink ribbon round his neck."

"A pink ribbon—oh, the poor little fellow! the poor little fellow!"

"And a long curly tail."

The conductor swung round with a yell: "A curly tail!—your son?"

"My dog!" Marjorie roared back at him.

The conductor's voice cracked weakly as he shrieked: "Your dog! You stopped this train for a fool dog?"

"He wasn't a fool dog," Marjorie retorted, facing him down, "he knows more than you do."

The conductor threw up his hands: "Well, don't you women beat—" He studied Marjorie as if she were some curious freak of nature. Suddenly an idea struck into his daze: "Say, what kind of a dog was it?—a measly little cheese-hound?"

"He was a noble, beautiful soul with wonderful eyes and adorable ears."

The conductor was growing weaker and weaker: "Well, don't worry. I got him. He's in the baggage car."

Marjorie stared at him unbelievingly. The news seemed too gloriously beautiful to be true. "He isn't dead—Snoozleums is not dead!" she cried, "he lives! He lives! You have saved him." And once more she flung herself upon the conductor. He tried to bat her off like a gnat, and Mallory came to his rescue by dragging her away and shoving her into a chair. But she saw only the noble conductor: "Oh, you dear, good, kind angel. Get him at once."

"He stays in the baggage car," the conductor answered, firmly and as he supposed, finally.

"But Snoozleums doesn't like baggage cars," Marjorie smiled. "He won't ride in one."

"He'll ride in this one or I'll wring his neck."

"You fiend in human flesh!" Marjorie shrank away from him in horror, and he found courage to seize the bell rope and yank it viciously with a sardonic: "Please, may I start this train?"

The whistle tooted faintly. The bell began to hammer, the train to creak and writhe and click. The conductor pulled his cap down hard and started forward. Marjorie seized his sleeve: "Oh, I implore you, don't consign that poor sweet child to the horrid baggage car. If you have a human heart in your breast, hear my prayer."

The conductor surrendered unconditionally: "Oh, Lord, all right, all right. I'll lose my job, but if you'll keep quiet, I'll bring him to you." And he slunk out meekly, followed by the passengers, who were shaking their heads in wonderment at this most amazing feat of this most amazing bride.

When they were alone once more Marjorie, as radiant as April after a storm, turned her sunshiny smile on Mallory:

"Isn't it glorious to have our little Snoozleums alive and well?"

But Mallory was feeling like a March day. He answered with a sleety chill: "You care more for the dog than you do for me."

"Why shouldn't I?" Marjorie answered with wide eyes, "Snoozleums never would have brought me on a wild goose elopement like this. Heaven knows he didn't want to come."

Mallory repeated the indictment: "You love a dog better than you love your husband."

"My what?" Marjorie laughed, then she spoke with lofty condescension: "Harry Mallory, if you're going to be jealous of that dog, I'll never marry you the longest day I live."

"So you'll let a dog come between us?" he demanded.

"I wouldn't give up Snoozleums for a hundred husbands," she retorted.

"I'm glad to know it in time," Mallory said. "You'd better give me back that wedding ring."

Marjorie's heart stopped at this, but her pride was in arms. She drew herself up, slid the ring from her finger, and held it out as if she scorned it: "With pleasure. Good afternoon, Mr. Mallory."

Mallory took it as if it were the merest trifle, bowed and murmured: "Good afternoon, Miss Newton."

He stalked out and she turned her back on him. A casual witness would have said that they were too indifferent to each other even to feel anger. As a matter of romantic fact, each was on fire with love, and aching madly with regret. Each longed for strength to whirl round with outflung arms of reconciliation, and neither could be so brave. And so they parted, each harking back fiercely for one word of recall from the other. But neither spoke, and Marjorie sat staring at nothing through raining eyes, while Mallory strode into the Men's Room as melancholy as Hamlet with Yorick's skull in his hands.

It was their first great quarrel, and they were convinced that the world might as well come to an end.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Woman-Hater's Relapse.

The observation room was as lonely as a deserted battlefield and Marjorie as doleful as a wounded soldier left behind, and perishing of ennui when the conductor came back with Snoozleums in his arms.

He regarded with contemptuous awe the petty cause of so great an event as the stopping of the Trans-American. He expected to see Marjorie receive the returned prodigal with wild rapture; but she didn't even smile when he said:

"Here's your powder-puff."

She just took Snoozleums on her lap, and, looking up with wet eyes and a sad smile, murmured:

"Thank you very much. You're the nicest conductor I ever met. If you ever want another position, I'll see that my father gets you one."

It was like offering the kaiser a new job, but the conductor swallowed the insult and sought to repay it with irony.

"Thanks. And if you ever want to run this road for a couple of weeks, just let me know."

Marjorie nodded appreciatively and said: "I will. You're very kind."

And that completed the rout of that conductor. He retired in disorder, leaving Marjorie to fondle Snoozleums with a neglectful indifference that would have greatly flattered Mallory, if he could have seen through the partition that divided them.

But he was witnessing with the cynical superiority of an aged and disillusioned man the, to him, childish behavior of Ira Lathrop, an eleventh-hour Orlando.

For just as Mallory moped into the smoking-room at one door, Ira Lathrop swept in at the other, his face rubicund with embarrassment and ecstasy. He had donned an old frock coat with creases like ruts from long exile in his trunk. But he was feeling like an heir apparent; and he startled everybody by his jovial hail:

"Well, boys—er—gentlemen — the drinks are on me. Waiter, take the orders."

Little Jimmie woke with a start, rose hastily to his feet and saluted, saying: "Present! Who said take the orders?"

"I did," said Lathrop, "I'm giving a party. Waiter, take the orders."

"Sarsaparilla," said Dr. Temple, but they howled him down and ordered other things. The porter shook his head sadly: "Nothin' but sof' drinks in Utah, gemmen."

A groan went up from the club-members, and Lathrop groaned loudest of all:

"Well, we've got to drink something. Take the orders. We'll all have sarsaparilla."

Little Jimmie Wellington came to the rescue.

"Don't do anything desperate, gentlemen," he said, with a look of divine philanthropy. "The bar's closed but Little Jimmie Wellington is here with the life preserver." From his hip-pocket he produced a silver flask that looked to be big enough to carry a regiment through the Alps. It was greeted with a salvo, and Lathrop said to Jimmie: "I apologize for everything I have said—and thought—about you." He turned to the porter. "There ain't any law against giving this way, is there?"

The porter grinned: "Not if yo'all bribe the exercise-inspector." And he held out a glass for the bribe, murmuring, "Don't git tired," as it was poured. He set it inside his sanctum and then bustled round with ice-filled glasses and a siphon.

When Little Jimmie offered of the flask to Dr. Temple, the clergyman put out his hand with a politely horrified: "No, thank you."

Lathrop frightened him with a sudden comment: "Look at that gesture! Doc, I'd almost swear you were a parson."

Mallory whirled on him with the eyes of a hawk about to pounce, and "The very idea!" was the best disclaimer Dr. Temple could manage, suddenly finding himself suspected. Ashton put in with, "The only way to disprove it, Doc, is to join us."

The poor old clergyman, too deeply involved in his deception to brave confession now, decided to do and dare all. He stammered, "Er—ah—certainly," and held out his hand for his share of the poison. Little Jimmie winked at the others and almost filled the glass. The innocent doctor bowed his thanks. When the porter reached him and prepared to fill the remainder of the glass from the siphon, the parson waved him aside with a misguided caution:

"No, thanks. I'll not mix them."

Mallory turned away with a sigh: "He takes his straight. He's no parson."

Then they forgot the doctor in curiosity as to Lathrop's sudden spasm of generosity—with Wellington's liquor. Wedgewood voiced the general curiosity when he said:

"What's the old woman-hater up to now?"

"Woman-hater?" laughed Ira. "It's the old story. I'm going to follow Mallory's example—marriage."

"I hope you succeed," said Mallory.

"Wherever did you pick up the bride?" said Wedgewood, mellowing with the long glass in his hand.

"Brides are easy," said Mallory, with surprising cynicism. "Where do you get the parson?"

"Hang the parson," Wedgewood repeated, "Who's the girl?"

"I'll bet I know who she is," Ashton interposed; "it's that nectarine of a damsel who got on at Green River."

"Not the same!" Lathrop roared. "I found my bride blooming here all the while. Girl I used to spark back in Brattleboro, Vt. I've been vowing for years that I'd live and die an old maid. I've kept my head out of the noose all this time—till I struck this train and met up with Anne. We got to talking over old times—waking up old sentiments. She got on my nerves. I got on hers. Finally I said, 'Aw, hell, let's get married. Save price of one stateroom to China anyway.' She says, 'Damned if I don't!'—or words to that effect.'"

A PERSISTENT ABBE.

Romance of Mountain Road Building in the Pyrenees.

C. L. Freeston in "The Passes of the Pyrenees" quotes the story of Felix Armand, cure of St. Martin-Lys, who pierced a road through the magnificent Gorge de Pierre-Lys in order to bring prosperity to his poverty stricken village. The cure himself marked out the route, "hanging like a spider from the end of a rope over the awful precipices of the Pierre-Lys. After five years' incessant toil the workmen reached the huge mass of rock which blocks the gorge near Belvianes." Still he bravely incited his parishioners to persevere until in 1781 the tunnel was pierced which still bears the name of "Le Trou du Cure." The revolution stopped the work, but after the reign of terror the cure set to work anew.

"A pity the man should be a priest," said Napoleon when he heard of Armand's heroic efforts. "I would have made him a general in my army."

The cure's personal bravery was great. Once when a mine was about to explode a muleteer was seen riding round a corner. The priest instantly sprang out and extinguished a slow match just at its last inch. Armand was made an abbe, but he declined to leave his flock and was buried at St. Martin-Lys with the cross of the Legion of Honor on his breast.

Good Intentions.

"I do my best," said Mr. Clumzie, "to scatter sunshine and encourage a spirit of patience and cheerfulness, but somehow I always go wrong."

"What has happened?"

"I met a friend who looked a little gloomy, so I said to him: 'Cheer up! Nothing is as bad as it might be. Every cloud has a silver lining, and you only make trouble worse by thinking about it.'"

"Didn't he respond?"

"No. He simply said: 'Don't bother me. I've got the toothache.'"—Washington Star.

Heredity.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments

The Public are Warned to Be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analysed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white, ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache, and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

LEGENDS ABOUT DEW.

Curious Beliefs as to Its Origin and Varied Powers.

In many places dew is looked upon as tears of the angels and of the souls in purgatory shed on account of the sins of human beings upon earth, and dew is collected to be used to cure certain diseases, especially those of the eyes, freckles, baldness, cramps, open wounds and cuts, rheumatism, skin diseases, burns, etc.

The virtues of dew as a beauty wash are also well known, remarks the Journal of Religious Psychology. One legend tells how by licking the dew off the plants on a certain morning when all the birds drink it one can learn their language.

Another folk belief is that "naked or with only their shirts on the witches at the time of the new moon collect the dew from the grass with bark sieves. By this means they deprive of their milk the cows that have been pastured on the grass, and as soon as their sieves are full of dew they know that their pots at home are full of milk.

The Polish people of Wongrowitz call the dew on which the birds are supposed to feed patasie mleko—i. e., "birds' milk."

A GUILTLESS CONSCIENCE

Sometimes Needs No Accuser.

By G. B. TARLETON

I was brought up on adages. An aunt of mine was continually dinging them at me, and as luck would have it they always worked the wrong way with me. One day when I was hesitating as to the date of going to a neighboring town for a certain purpose she said to me, "Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today." I started immediately, and while I was gone a man came to buy of me a piece of property I was very anxious to sell. I missed him and lost the sale.

A favorite saying of my aunt's was, "A guilty conscience needs no accuser." I have always been a very sensitive person with too tender a conscience already; consequently I had no occasion for this special adage. Indeed, it was the source of a great deal of trouble to me. Not that I suffered in any way under a guilty conscience, but I had heard so often that a criminal is bound to betray himself that—

But I'll not begin with the denouement of my story. I'll save that for the end. I was engaged to be married to Martha Ellison, a girl of very high principle. Indeed, so noble were her conceptions—and so far as I knew she lived up to them—that from the moment I became engaged to her I was in constant dread of doing something that would appear ignoble in her sight.

One day while walking on the street I saw a gold watch with a chain lying at my feet. I stooped and picked it up. It had fallen on grass beside the flags and was apparently uninjured. At any rate, it was ticking merrily. I looked about me to see if any one was near who might have dropped it. I saw a policeman coming with a quick tread toward me. When he came up he eyed me sharply.

"There was a robbery committed near here a few minutes ago," he said. "Have you seen any one suspicious looking—any one running?"

It at once occurred to me that if I told him I had found the plundered property—or part of it—I would be arrested for the thief. I could not put off till tomorrow what must be done today. In other words, I had no time to think over what I had best do, so I simply replied in the negative.

Now, I hadn't seen any one who appeared to have been connected with the robbery, and I possessed a perfectly clear conscience. I had in my possession what was doubtless property that had been taken by the robber in question and either dropped or thrown away to avoid being caught with it on his person. Moreover, I was ready and willing to turn it over to either the owner or the authorities. But why should I stand in the position of the person who had likely considered that it was necessary to get rid of it?

Unquestionably I should have handed out the watch and chain to the policeman and told him that I had found them. If I could have put off my decision in the matter for even a few minutes probably I would have done this. But I couldn't put it off. And here is where that adage is lame. It takes no more account of cases where we can't put off doing things than of those in which we should put off doing them.

I told the policeman that I had seen no one who looked like a robber, but said nothing about the watch and chain. As I have already said, my conscience was clear, but I have no doubt I looked like a thief. It didn't matter that I intended to give up the property when I could do so without incriminating myself. I had stolen goods in my possession, and a policeman was looking at me suspiciously.

He seemed in doubt whether he should hold on to me or let me go. Possibly it was my respectable appearance that decided him to do the latter. But he had gone on only a few steps before he called to me and asked me my name and where I lived. I gave him both correctly, and he did not delay me further.

My not having produced the stolen property at once complicated the case for me very much. It occurred to me that I should handle the matter deliberately before coming to a decision as to what to do next. If I should go home I might not have an opportunity to think the matter out. I might be sent for by the police either for a witness or on suspicion. I dreaded being questioned further before having laid down the course I should pursue. I concluded to go to my fiancee, tell her of the situation and talk the matter over with her.

On the way I fell to thinking that my course thus far had not been such as to challenge admiration. Indeed, I realized that I should have had the courage to tell the policeman I had found a watch and chain. I knew that Martha was just the kind of a girl to blame me for not having done this. The consequence was that when I called on her at an unusual hour—it was 11 o'clock in the morning—and interrupted her in some work she was doing and she did not seem especially pleased to see me, my courage oozed out. Instead of coming right out with the matter in hand I stammered a trumped up excuse for my coming.

She said coldly that the reason I gave was not sufficient for my calling upon her when she was not presentable; besides, she was sorry to say that my demeanor warranted her in believing that it was not the real reason.

When I had got matters between her and me in the worst possible fix I told her the whole story. As I supposed she would do, she deprecated my not having turned over the property at once; and advised me to go to a police station and do so.

While talking with her I sat in a bay window from which I could see up the street for some distance. Martha had hardly made this recommendation when I saw the policeman I had met approaching with another officer whose uniform denoted a higher rank.

"There he comes now," I exclaimed. "He doubtless changed his mind about letting me go, followed me and having marked the house I entered, went to police headquarters and reported me as a suspicious character. And now he is bringing an inspector here to examine me, if not to arrest me. I shall be found with the goods on me."

It was now Martha's turn to show her strength of character, but to my surprise the suddenness with which she was called upon to do so threw her off her balance. She seemed quite unable to tell me what to do.

"It won't do for me to be found with the property on me," I said quickly. "Can't you hide it for me?"

"Suppose they search the house?"

"It won't matter to you. They will hold me to be the thief, since I was seen in the neighborhood of the robbery immediately after it occurred."

"But I shall be considered as harboring a criminal, and that would mean that I was in league with you."

It's mighty easy to be a hero on paper, but when it comes to putting it in practice it's a different matter. Martha's strength of character didn't pan out at being brought face to face with the real thing.

"You're not inclined to be very self-sacrificing. I'm disappointed," I said.

"Disappointed! It's I who should be disappointed. If you had had the manliness to hand out the property in the first place you wouldn't have got into such a fix."

"I'd have had to spend some time in jail and prove that I wasn't a robber."

By this time the officers were within a few yards of the house. Martha and I stood waiting for the blow to fall and in another moment heard the doorbell ring.

"It's all up with me," I said.

Martha also had become demoralized. She placed me in a closet the door of which was closed with a portiere, then went to answer the summons. I heard a man's voice ask if I were in the house, calling me by name. Martha, whose high principled nature I had always admired and stood in awe of, denied that I was in the house, thereby uttering a deliberate falsehood.

"Well, miss," I heard the man say, "he told this patrolman where he lived, but he was seen to come here." My legs trembled and my teeth chattered. "We must find him. He was seen walking today near where a robbery was committed, and a lady looking out through a window saw him pick up a watch and chain. The robber has been arrested, and the gentleman that was robbed would like to get his property. He's willing to pay a liberal reward."

There was silence for a few moments, which was broken by Martha, who said that she would send me word immediately and if I had the valuables she did not doubt that I would return them at once. With that the policeman withdrew, and I heard the door closed. As Martha returned to the room I stepped out of the closet. We looked at each other, both drawing a sigh of relief.

"Martha," I said, "I thank you very much for the lie."

"I don't think," she retorted, "that you have shown either good sense or moral courage."

"Rather I have shown that I labor under an excess of conscience."

"And I labor under an abnormal sympathy."

"We've made a mountain out of a molehill, haven't we?"

"You have."

I saw that she was relieved at the outcome, and I knew that I was. I kissed her, and it was all over.

As soon as I felt assured that I could leave the house without the officers seeing me I stepped boldly out and went to the nearest police office, where I delivered the stolen goods. The man at the desk didn't ask why I hadn't returned them before. He doubtless supposed I had intended to keep them, but since I had been seen to pick them up that was impossible. I was making a virtue of reciprocity.

"I will see that you get the reward," he said. "The owner of the watch will send it to you or leave it here. The watch is not only a valuable chronometer, but belonged to the mother of the gentleman who was robbed. He has offered $50 for its return."

"I don't wish any reward," I said with offended dignity. "I'm a gentleman and consider myself as such obliged to return anything I find provided I know the owner."

He looked up at me with surprise—in fact, with incredulity.

"What's the game?" he asked.

"No game at all. Why do you think I'm playing a game?"

"Why didn't you return the watch without trying to get away with it?"

I made no reply, but, turning, left the station.

Not having come out of the affair with any great eclat, I illustrated an adage, "Misery loves company," by rejoicing that Martha also had not shown that rigid regard for principle for which she was noted. We were married soon after, and ours is the only case I have ever known of lovers who were married neither being heroic to the other.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

TO THE PEOPLE OF ONTARIO

FOR The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor:—

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me in a few words, tell you of the steady growth of this Hospital.

In the year 1875 there were only six cots and beds, one nurse, 44 in-patients and 67 out-patients. In 1912 there were 250 cots and beds, 64 nurses, 1,294 in-patients and 17,862 out-patients.

During the 37 years of the Hospital's existence, 19,370 in-patients have been admitted, and 133,724 out-patients have been treated, a total of 153,094, or an average of 4,138 per year. Of the 19,370 in-patients, 5,465 were from places outside of Toronto, 9,644 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,711 were improved. This is a great record.

Of the 1,294 in-patients last year, 541 came from 218 places outside of Toronto, so that the Hospital is not a local, but a Provincial institution.

In the Orthopedic Department in 37 years, nearly 700 boys and girls have been treated for clubfeet, and about 600 were corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto, so surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

The Corporation of Toronto grants $25,000, not only for the city children, but towards the maintenance of all patients in the Hospital, and the citizens of Toronto donate an average of $15,000 annually to the funds of the Hospital.

Will you, kind reader, think of what your money will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.

Remember that your pocket-book must be the Hospital's friend, if the Hospital is to be the children's friend.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital, so that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Remember that your money can help the Hospital build a bridge over which the feet of little children may travel on the journey from sorrow to joy, from sickness to health—aye, from death to life.

Please send a dollar, or more if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

DUMAS AS A COOK.

His Friends Found Him Acting as Chef in a Trouville Inn.

The familiar story of the arrival of the great Dumas at Trouville on a May afternoon in the thirties is a cheerful anecdote. Laughing loudly, he crossed the Touques carried on the shoulders of a sturdy Norman peasant and entered the primitive little inn of those early days with all the clatter and excitement which usually distinguished his movements.

La Mere Oseraie, the good woman who kept it, told him flatly that she received none but painters. The Trouville of those days was a tiny fishing village which only a few artists had discovered. Dumas promptly alleged that he was a "painter in words" and even offered to paint—or write—her signboard, which the other clients—ungrateful dogs—had promised, but neglected to do. This handsome though confusing evidence of good faith mollified the good innkeeper, and she consented to receive Dumas at the amazing price of 2 francs a day, tout compris. Trouville was indeed then what the French term un petit trou pas cher—"a little hole not dear."

When the painters, friends whom Dumas had come to see in their remote corner, returned toward evening from the green woods and glades along the little river's valley they found the amiable giant filling the inn with his cries and laughter and brandishing a great spoon in the kitchen, where he was presiding personally over the preparation of an evening meal which promised to run his bill for extras into figures hitherto unknown in Trouville.—Harper's Magazine.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $782.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3% on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 4½% compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to state it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

ROCHE AND THE NAVY

Senator Roche, Liberal, of Halifax speaking on the navy question, said according to the Toronto Globe report:

"Something has been resolved upon but I will say this, that if my honorable friend the leader of the Government cannot come before the Senate and the other members of Government cannot come before the other branch of parliament without some definite stipulation or some guarantee that if we part with the material resources of this country in giving a money grant and cast aside forever the hope of building our own navy or constructing our own ships or defending our own shores—if we have not these substantial guarantees and stipulation that the augmented force shall be used, if necessary, for the defence of our own country, we ought to say, and back up the honorable gentleman in saying, and if he will not say it, say it ourselves: 'Millions for defence, but not a nickel for tribute.'"

The talk about Canada rendering "tribute" is absurd and childish. Surely it will not be disputed even by a school boy that Canada is an important part of the British Empire. It ought to be equally as plain that the British navy serves for the defence of Canada as well as the Motherland and other portions of the Empire. The question is not whether Canada shall aid in the naval defence of the Empire, but how best we can strengthen the naval defence of the Empire, and incidentally increase our own protection. The utter childishness of contending that the small fleet which Canada alone could maintain for her own defence would be of real value if a big foreign naval power were to set out to invade Canada ought to be apparent even to Senator Roche. It is true that Canada ought to make provision for local defence especially on the Pacific, but the great strategic point at which we have to concentrate for our defence is the North Sea, when occasion demands it. The North Sea has been declared by Winston Churchill to be the pivotal point of defence. A contribution to aid the British navy is the means adopted by New Zealand, the Malay States, and now the Princes of India are proposed to contribute a small fleet. The welding of the Empire together in this manner is certainly desirable from every Imperial standpoint. Canada as the greatest of the over-seas Dominions ought to be first in the process, not one of the last.

TWO CANADIAN STATESMEN

Toronto News

The proposal to mark the centenary of Sir John Macdonald's birth by the erection of a suitable monument on the site of his boyhood home at Adolphustown is one that must appeal to all classes of Canadians. In the light of history everyone must acknowledge the great part he played in bringing about confederation. It is doubtful if without his skill in handling men and harmonizing diverse elements the union of the four original Provinces could have been consummated.

For more than nineteen out of the first twenty-four years of confederation he presided over its development as Prime Minister, and when death caused him to lay down the reins he bequeathed to the Canadian people a strong commonwealth stretching from ocean to ocean and destined probably some day to take the hegemony of the whole British Empire.

His was the task of guiding the infant State until it reached its majority, his the opportunity of laying the national foundations strong and sure, and the Canada we see around us to-day is a giant monument to his memory. But the project of a lesser monument at his birth place should be proceeded with if only because it will recall his services to the present generation and establish another sacred place, to which future Canadians may make pilgrimages to their own edification and stimulation towards patriotic endeavor.

Mr. A. R. Davis has paved the way for the memorial by securing the title to the old Macdonald homestead and it is to be hoped that the press and the public may respond to his appeal. Canadians everywhere should count it a privilege to have a part, however small, in thus honoring the great dead. And while we propose to remember the first Prime Minister of Canada, why should the second Prime Minister be overlooked? The people of Sarnia and Lambton county would do themselves honor if they would inaugurate a movement to erect a fitting memorial to Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. His gifts differed from those with which nature endowed his chief protagonist, and fate did not allot him as high a niche in Canadian history, but he served the country faithfully, and we venture to hope his home county and city will undertake a movement in his honor.

A MISTAKE ABOUT SIR JOHN

The curious error which Sir Richard Cartwright made in his Reminiscences, about Sir John Macdonald and Princess Louise, is scarcely to be understood. Gossip had it at one time that Sir John and the Princess were not on good terms, owing to some familiarity by the former, but those who remember the circumstances well say that the gossip was an error, and that it was a Western senator, now dead, who received the snub from the Princess. Sir Richard evidently has repeated in his book the street corner version of the incident,—a version entirely wrong. Sir Wilfrid Laurier say that he had understood that it was not Sir John, but another who was the central figure in the episode. Lieut.-Col. Gordeau, ex-Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries, recollects the incident quite well, and says that the British Columbia senator that evening was somewhat too convivial.

The reflection cast upon the memory of Sir John is quite unjust and painful. Sir John himself passed through many political incidents of which he could not be at all proud, but they were made necessary to carry the larger scheme he had in mind for the building up of the great Dominion of Canada. It is not at all probable that Sir Richard Cartwright had any idea that he was doing an injustice to Sir John in relating to the incident, but the animus he otherwise showed to the great statesman does not help the matter.

ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES

Otonabee Council Deal With Claims Against Township

At the November meeting of the Otonabee Council, Michael Sullivan made application for damages for lost time caused by a culvert breaking when his threshing engine was passing over it. The clerk was instructed to ask him if he used planks under the engine to protect the culvert if not, he cannot claim damages but on the other hand, he would be liable to the township for damages done to the culvert.

Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry were retained by the township to institute and carry on proceedings in the High Court of Justice, to restrain the city of Peterborough from polluting the River Otonabee by the depositing of sewage therein. The Reeve and Clerk were authorized to sign the retainer.

The local Board of Health met on the same day and passed a resolution authorizing the chairman and secretary also to sign the retainer.

A communication was received from G. N. Gordon, that he had been instructed by Mr. Wm. Read to bring an action against the township for damages for permitting and maintaining a bridge in front of his lot, which has so small an opening that it backs the water upon this property.

The clerk was instructed to say in reply that the opening is sufficiently large enough to carry off all the water; that it is not any higher on his side of the bridge than on the lot on the other side.

The following accounts were passed:—Wm. Hanbidge, gravel, $6.20; Jas. Davidson, cedar, $1.15; R. Brown, cleaning and storing cement moulds, $1.00; George Clysdale, drawing culverts, $1.50; picking stones off road, $2.00; John Michales, drawing culverts, $1.50; Edward Fitzgerald, drawing culverts, $3.25; Wm. Renwick, cedar, $5.53; Wm. Wedlock, cedar, $155.04; Jas. McMartin, account, $1.85.

Council adjourned to 16th December.

W.A.B. PETERBORO ASKS QUESTION

He Now Wants to Know If He Can Sue the Lawyer

The following appeared in the Legal Column of the Mail and Empire:

W. A. B., Peterborough.—Qu. — (1) I was arrested by an officer in plain clothes and after passing a night in the cells was fined $2 for disorderly conduct. I received a letter from a lawyer advising me to bring an action against the city for illegal arrest. I wrote and wired him to go ahead with the action. My solicitor afterward settled the action with the City Solicitor and withdrew it without my consent. What redress have I?

(2) Can I sue the lawyer for damages or have him struck off the rolls?

Ans. — (1) A solicitor is the agent for his client in the conduct of the suit and he can exercise all the power which an agent possesses, both while proceeding with the action and in the settlement thereof.

(2) If your solicitor fraudulently settles the action in a manner to your detriment you may have a right of action against him for damages. A client has always the right to make a complaint to the Law Society in regard to the conduct of his solicitor.

MRS. SUTHERLAND RESTING EASILY

Is Bearing up Well Under Trying Experience

Miss Gertrude Reid, the nurse who is caring for Mrs. Sutherland, reports that the patient is resting easily to-day.

Miss Reid discovered the smoke, when she had occasion to go downstairs, and made haste to give out the alarm.

Mr. Sutherland was notified of the fire at Bethany Tabernacle.

FIREMEN DID GOOD WORK ALTHOUGH STORE WAS GUTTED

Prevented Blaze in Cameron's Premises From Spreading to Other Buildings—Real Fight Was Experienced in Narrow Stairway at the Rear—Mrs. Sutherland Was Rescued From Top Flat—Water Pressure Was Excellent.

Fire in the men's furnishing store of N. C. Cameron, at 325 George street, last evening, gutted these premises and more or less damage was done to the contents of adjoining property through smoke and water.

The department received the alarm a few minutes before eight o'clock, but according to reports the fire was in progress a considerable time before the firemen were notified. On their arrival the interior of the building was a mass of flame. It is said that people detected the odor of smoke in the late afternoon. It is possible that the fire was smouldering for some hours but it is likely that the actual cause will never be known.

SEVEN LINES USED.

Chief Howard soon had two lines of hose at work one from the front and the other at the rear. These were supplemented by two lines taken up the rear stairway in an endeavor to prevent the fire from spreading to the south. Another line was used overhead and altogether seven streams were in commission.

The heat blew out the large plate glass in Cameron's store and flames once freed made an awesome spectacle for the hundreds of people who were attracted to the fire.

RESCUE FROM THIRD STOREY.

The rooms above Cameron's store were not occupied but those over the store of Jas. Sutherland which is the next door south were used as living apartments by Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland. At the time Mrs. Sutherland used a room in the third storey. She had been sick for some time and under the care of a nurse. It was found impossible to take her to safety by using the stairway, so willing hands used the big extension ladder of the fire department. Mrs. Sutherland was wrapped in the quilts of the bed and brought down the ladder. Her nurse displayed considerable nerve by making the trip without assistance.

GOOD WORK DONE.

The fire department did their work well. On the north side was a brick wall but the second and third storeys to the south had only the ordinary plaster and lath partitions and it was here the firemen played the real game. Notwithstanding the terrific heat and dense smoke they gained positions on the second and third storeys by way of the rear entrance stairway and prevented the flames from spreading to the living apartments of Jas. Sutherland. Only in one corner of a small room was evidence of fire seen this morning when a Review representative inspected the damaged area. The damage from water will not be heavy.

WAS ONLY A LAMP.

One of the large crowd on George street thought he had better eyes than the firemen and proceeded to tell the men handling the hose that the fire had gained entrance to the room that had been used by Mrs. Sutherland. Fireman Ward ascended the ladder and entered the room. In a short time he re-appeared at the window with a lamp and calmly blew out the flame.

THE LOSERS.

Mr. Cameron's stock was completely destroyed. Mr. Hooper's store to the north is the worse only by water. Similar conditions prevail in Mr. Sutherland's store.

The "fire out" alarm rung about twelve o'clock, but fireman remained on guard till five o'clock this morning.

The property is owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Company.

Mr. Cameron is expected home from Montreal to-night.

WATER PRESSURE O K.

Chief Howard said this morning that the water pressure was excellent. "We had 115 pounds on seven lines of hose and the service was wonderfully good in fact the men would not have been able to handle any more."

Chairman Matthews of the Water Commissioners, reports that the recording gauge showed a pressure of 120 pounds during the fire.

ST. JOHN'S BIBLE CLASS MEETING

A very interesting meeting was held at St. John's church on Sunday afternoon, when a deputation from the newly formed Church Association visited the Bible Class, which has been carried on so very successfully for the last year. The room was filled and some very instructive and interesting remarks were made by the visitors and members.

A very hearty initation is accorded to everyone to pay a visit on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

Roman Masons' Tools.

The excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum have unearthed masons' tools much resembling those in use to day and demonstrated the freer use of large tiles, the employment of iron to tie together brick and stone work and the use of a kind of concrete of which lime was the binding medium and finely broken brick a favorite material. The dome of the Pantheon, built in the first century of the Christian era, still testifies to the enduring nature of the concrete superstructure, albeit bound with lime and not with cement.—National Magazine.

An Example of Daring.

During the hottest fighting in the Shipka pass the leading battalion of the Russian General Dragomiroff's division recoiled before a hailstorm of Turkish bullets. The general was a very stout person and had the appearance of a peaceful German professor. But when he saw his men recoil he dismounted and walked slowly to and fro along a ridge swept by the enemy's bullets. He was a hundred yards in advance of the men, occupying the position they had abandoned. After staying there for awhile without being touched he shouted back to the battalion: "What are you doing, you geese? Did you think there was danger here? I don't find any!" The men responded with a roar of cheers, doubled up to him and charged so fiercely that the Turks were forced to retreat.

LADIE'S AID CLEARED $430

St. Andrew's Society was Successful With the Bazaar

The tidy sum of $430, clear of all expenses was realized by the Ladie[illegible] St. Andrew's Church at their [illegible] bazaar. This sum, so President, Mrs Moore, 230 Aylmer street, told the Review, more than exceeded expectations.

DISARMING FATE

A Domestic Dial[illegible] That Made Old Deac[illegible]ood Wise.

"I notice Mrs. Simmons is having a new porch put on to her house," said Deacon Wood, polishing his glasses.

"Yes," said his wife; "she always wanted one clear across the front of the house, but Silas never would build one, so the first thing she did with the insurance money was to have one."

The deacon looked at his paper thoughtfully for a moment, then remarked:

"The Widder Davis is setting out a good many flowers, isn't she? She keeps getting seed catalogues at the post-office."

"Yes," replied his wife; "her heart's been set on a posy garden a good many years, but I should almost think 'twould make Jed Davis turn over in his grave. He always thought flowers was such a foolish waste of time and money."

For a time the deacon was silent; then he said, "Wasn't that a new rubber tired buggy I saw Prunella White in yesterday?"

"Yes," said his wife, with animation, "and I'm glad she's got it at last. She rode around for years in an old farm wagon, though Leander could well afford a decent buggy for her and the girls, but if he'd lived they'd never have had one."

For a time the deacon remained sunk in thought; then he asked:

"If you had a considerable sum of money to do just what you wanted with, Mandy, what would you get?"

"I'd have me a hardwood floor in that kitchen," his wife said firmly. "I never scrub that old floor but what I run my fingers full of slivers."

"Mandy," said her husband, with fervor, "you'll see the carpenters at work on that new floor tomorrow mornin'." And the deacon resumed his paper with a sigh of relief.—Youth's Companion.

NO ELECTION FOR SOME TIME YET

Is the Opinion of the Minister of Justice

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—That there will be no general election for three or four years was the opinion expressed by Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice this morning. The elaboration of a permanent naval policy would take up most of this time and no election would be possible until it is ready to submit to the people.

BALFOUR ON CANADA.

She Must Have Her Own National Sentiment, He Says.

London, Dec. 2.—There was a great gathering in the Holborn Restaurant on Saturday to celebrate St. Andrew's Day. The Rt. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, who presided, spoke on "Imperial Nationality." He referred to the great part his countrymen had played in reconciling the principle of nationality with that of ardent patriotism in various parts of the world. It was only by emulating that example that the future of the Empire as a whole could be secured. The people of Canada and other overseas Dominions must have and will have their own feeling of nationality. Every Canadian ought to want to feel that Canada has got its own principle of development, "and in future do not let us discourage that local patriotism," he said. "Let them cultivate their own feeling of nationality. 'Canada for the Canadians,' 'Australia for the Australians,' but the whole for the Empire. It was the misconception of this principle that led to the great disruption between the American colonies and the Mother Country a century and a half ago, and perhaps, after all, it required that lesson to teach us what we now know."

Offer Is Doubted.

London, Dec. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Times' Delhi correspondent wires that the Government knows nothing of the reported Indian offer to the navy. While it is certain no concerted action on the part of the chiefs has taken place, the offer of three Dreadnoughts and nine cruisers verges on the grotesque. The chiefs already contribute to imperial defence by maintaining special troops or transports at a heavy annual charge.

An Unexpected Conclusion.

A mistress was summoned in a London court for having dismissed a servant girl without due notice. The defendant pleaded that the servant was so voracious that she could not keep her in food. The judge after hearing the evidence inquired of the defendant, "Will four and sixpence a week keep her?" "Not nearly," replied the lady. "Will 6 shillings?" continued the judge. "No; that would not keep her," replied the defendant, feeling that in the judge's hands her case was gaining strength. "Now take care," said the judge, "and answer cautiously. Will 7 shillings?" "It takes 8," said the defendant. "Very well," said the judge. "Then you must pay her 8 shillings a week as board wages for one month."—London Mail.

Up spake the judge: "Go free, my son.
  You are forgiven for your crime."
For he was charged with slaying one
    Who sang "The Good Old Summer Time."

JUSTICE TEETZEL IS HOME AGAIN

Is Sick and in Charge of Trained Nurse.

New York, Dec. 2.—Justice Teetzel of Toronto, who arrived from Europe Saturday night on the steamship Minnewaska, left last night for Toronto, in charge of a trained nurse, who accompanied the judge from England.

The Ontario jurist left home some months ago with Mrs. Teetzel for a pleasure trip to England and the continent of Europe. He was stricken with a malady which rendered a surgical operation imperative, and the surgeons in London put him under the knife. He rallied sufficiently to allow him to start for home, but Mrs. Teetzel, as a matter of precaution, brought a trained nurse along.

The stormy nine-day trip caused a setback in the judge's condition, and when the Minnewaska arrived Saturday he was carried ashore on a stretcher and taken to the Hotel Manhattan. He recovered sufficiently during the day to resume his journey home.

Fluctuations of the Sun.

It would appear from the researches of the astronomers that the exact shape of the sun is not known. The generally accepted idea that the sun is a sphere is, some hold, at least open to question. Practically every series of measures shows departures from a spherical form. Of course the departures, considering the great size of the solar globe, are very minute. There seems to be a fluctuation in the shape of the sun corresponding in period with the sun spot cycle. There are also indications of a fluctuation having a period of about twenty-eight days.—Exchange.

A Misleading Sign.

She entered the grocery store with a jar of marmalade in her hand and fire in her eye. "See here," she said to the clerk, "I bought this stuff because the card in your window says it's an excellent substitute for butter."

"Yes, ma'am; so it is."

"Well, it's a grand substitute, I must say! I tried frying a bit of fish with it this morning, and the taste was so awful I had to throw the fish all away."—Boston Transcript.

A Bengalese Peculiarity.

A doctor remarks: "What strikes one most at a Bengal hospital is the lack of sense of proportion in the estimation of diseases. A man is gravely perturbed because he has not sneezed for three months, but he is comparatively indifferent to the fact that he exhibits the early signs of leprosy."

HEARD THE CALL HERE.

Twenty-eight years ago, Dr. McKellar, while boarding in this city, decided to be a missionary in a foreign field.

To illustrate the respective strength of the religious bodies in the world, Dr. McKellar gave the following striking and significant figures—

Number of Protestants	166,000,000
Number of Roman Catholics	272,000,000
Number of Greek Christians	120,000,000
Number of Jews	11,000,000
Number of Mohammedans	216,000,000

Remarking upon the enormous strength of the latter body, Dr. McKellar said that the reason was owing to the fact that every follower of Mohamet feels himself to be a missionary and under bounden obligation to bring others under the banner of his leader.

Even in India where there were 70,000,000 Mohammedans living under the British flag, "Mohammedanism," said Dr. McKellar," is the greatest anti-Christian church in the world and the one religion which will give Christianity the greatest trouble." One of the surest passports for a Mohammedan's entry into Heaven was to have his sword dripping with the blood of a Christian. The latter body recognized six great prophets, Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus and Mohamet.

Dr. McKellar then spoke interestingly of India and its vast numbers of heathen, idolatrous and ignorant millions.

"There are in the world to-day," she said, "836,000,000 heathen people and the immense work yet to be performed by the Christian Church can be readily grasped. To strengthen her illustration about India's population, she stated that the population of Canada, United States, South America and Africa combined would not equal the population of India. The latter country contains 315,000,000 people, and the four countries mentioned only 305,000,000. The country contains three and one quarter Christians and of that number, two and one quarter are Roman Catholics, leaving only one million Protestant Christians in 315,000,000 millions.

Dr. McKellar related the above facts in a manner that made her hearers sit and listen, and realize the immensity of the task which has yet to be accomplished in that land of heathendom and mystery.

One million of the people of India are yet bowed down to wood and stone and practice the offering up of sacrifices. The womanhood of the country are oppressed and ill-treated. A cow is considered of vastly more importance than a woman. Forty thousand women are shut in zenanas, throughout India. There are 22,000,000 widows in India and 3,000,000 of them are under the age of fifteen.

"Why should these poor women be forced to suffer this way? asked Dr. McKellar. What do they know of the beauties of God's earth, without a ray of hope for this world or the future? It is all because they are denied the religion of Jesus Christ."

"And yet," she concluded, with almost dramatic effect, "there are people who say they do not believe in foreign missions."

BETHANY TABERNACLE

At the Sunday morning service in Bethany Tabernacle, the Rev. B. V. Bingham, of the Soudan Interior Mission, preaching from the text, Revelations 2:4 "I have this against thee, that thou didst leave thy first love," told of the peculiar privileges which the Ephesian Church had enjoyed, and the fatal consequences of their spiritual decline, warning his hearers to take heed to themselves for to whom much is given, of him shall much be required.

In the evening service, the Rev. Walter Turnbull, missionary from India, spoke of "The Joy of Christian Service," from the text Romans 1:16, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to every one that believeth."

Relating some striking instances of God's power to save men, in India, and the home land, Mr. Turnbull spoke of the joy that comes to those who have yielded themselves to God for His service, and who see His work of transformation wrought in those for whom they labour. He urged all to full consecration to God and to His service, in whatever walk of life they might be placed.

STUDENTS AT ST. JOHN'S

Last night at St. John's by invitation of the rector, three members of the Students' Volunteer Conference gave addresses, thus bringing the convention in contact with the congregation.

Mr. Ryder, of Trinity College, Toronto, spoke mainly of the hospitality of the citizens of Peterborough which was a matter of general comment among the students. Never before had they received a more kindly welcome which they regarded as a realization of Christian brotherhood, and expressed Peterborough's interest in the great cause of missions.

He was followed by Mr. Park, of Wycliffe College, Toronto, who compared the different religions of India China and Japan, with their degrading associations, and showed the strong call was for introducing Christianity in these countries.

Mr. Buchanan, of McGill University, Montreal, urged that the cause of home and foreign missions was one that every Christian should have an active share in some department of the great work. He, had decided on the foreign missions, because fewer workers were available for it,

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

LONDON WOULD PASS UP THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Jinx in the London Advertiser says:

It has been learned by The Advertiser that the directors of the London Baseball Club would jump at a reasonable offer for the Canadian League franchise of this city. One of the directors stated last evening that the club could be purchased for a modest sum and that it would not take much persuasion to make a deal with the local management. According to this official, the present directors are somewhat eager to get out of the Canadian League. The fact that the withdrawal of the Berlin and Guelph clubs may put the league to the wall was hinted at, and this may be the reason why the local club would listen to an offer for the franchise.

The season just passed has not been an altogether successful one. When it was all counted up, the club found that a deficit had to be faced. Had not Hynes been drafted, the directors would have had to dig down pretty far in their pockets to put the books on the right side.

It is also hinted that a couple of the directors are heartily sick of the whole thing and are anxious to withdraw. The troubles over a manager and other trifling matters last summer did not help the club any, and from all appearances the same situation will have to be faced over again in the spring.

There is no doubt that several big changes are due in the Canadian League. Both the Berlin and Guelph franchises are up for sale, and rumors come from St. Thomas every day that the franchise of that city can be purchased very reasonably. The situation at Brantford and Peterborough is also shaky, and it seems only a question of time before these clubs will be flying distress signals.

HAMILTON ALERTS DOMINION CHAMPS

Hamilton, Dec. 2—The Alerts of Hamilton, champions of the O.R.F.U., provided the sensation of the Rugby season here Saturday when they not only defeated the Toronto Argos, winners of the Big Four, for the Canadian honors but also handed them a decisive defeat. The score of 11 to 4 is one that can not be called one-sided, nor one that would put a team on Easy Street in some Rugby games Saturday however this was different, as the Alerts had the edge all through and those who witnessed the exhibition will tell you that the O.R.F.U. gladiators gained a clean cut victory.

Rugby done at its best is only a shadow, but after last Saturday's exhibition with Varsity, the Argo supporters thought they had a team that would land the high honors. They acted against Varsity like a machine, working in unison—together. Perhaps this game gave them overconfidence or perhaps the loss of Whale on the line caused the workings to become disjointed. However, there was a screw loose somewhere, and a great team of a week ago was a wreck on Saturday against the O.R.F.U. champions. To use a baseball phrase, "they didn't have a thing, not even condition."

Lack of condition and over-confidence, coupled with Whale's absence and Lawson's inability to get going on the sticky ground caused the downfall of the Argos. Lawson was a marked man all afternoon, and with the exception of running back a couple of punts from behind the line gained very little ground. It was a case of being nailed in his tracks often. The soft going and Alert tackling made it a very bad day for the great Smirle. Argos perhaps were the heavier team, but the difference was more than offset by the aggressiveness of the Alerts. They were all human dynamos when it came to ginger, and if the Argos could have only been injected with some of the same medicine, their supporters would have had more occasions to cheer.

GEORGE MEMSIC DOWN AND OUT

The Flowing Bowl a Harder Proposition Than Joe Gans

George Memsic, at one time one of the greatest little battlers that ever donned a glove, face battered, hands trembling—altogether a very pathetic shadow of the good youngster who gave Joe Gans a hard fight—leaned against the desk sergeant's window of a Los Angeles police station the other day, and conceded himself unable to "come back."

"I guess I got a right to get soused. I'm a has been and lick-ed in piker fights, an' I'm clean, a nickel in my pocket. I had $1800 and they took me up to Oregon to fight an unknown kid. He knocekd em out in eight rounds. I'm All in" said Memsic.

The Guelph Maple Leafs will stay in Guelph for the baseball season of 1913. That is practically assured by the failure of President Mahon to get the franchise transferred to Toronto, where the team would play in the absence of the International League Leafs.—Guelph Mercury.

Amby Kane is slated to lead the Brantford Club in the Canadian League next season. It will be his third year. Kane helped his team a whole lot in the games here.

The hockey players are due for training to-night. There will no doubt a large turnout. The boys are enthusiastic and present indications predict a big season at Brock Street rink.

It is hoped Orme Cavanah will be permitted to play for the juniors. The executive has great faith in this younster, and the best of it is he would be eligible for Junior O.H.A. for the next four seasons.

The Collegiates are looking forward to a good season on the ice. Splendid material is available and the Central Park students expect to make the good showing.

DO YOU RIDE, WALK OR PUSH?

An Old Stage Coach Story From a Political Viewpoint.

The following story was told at a political banquet by a well known politician:

"I was going to the seashore, and the jerkwater railroad left me at a wretched station about ten miles from the resort. However, we were consoled by the information that the lumbering old stage made a daily trip, and I went to bargain for my fare.

"'Do you want to go first, second or third class?' asked the driver.

"True to my creed that nothing was too good for me, I chose a first class passage at 75 cents.

"'All right. Git in and choose your seat.'

"I watched the other passengers pay their quarters and half dollars, but when we started I found a twenty-five cent man on my left and a fifty cent man on my right. In fact, all passengers were sandwiched in regardless of financial benefits.

"I was mad clear through, but luckily did not boil over. We jogged along until we struck an awful piece of road, when the driver stopped, stuck the blacksnake whip into the socket, tied the lines round it, jumped off his seat, jerked open the door and shouted:

"'All you twenty-five cent men and you fifty cent men must get out and let the seventy-five cent gent stay where he is. The fifty cent men must walk and the twenty-five cent men must push or we'll never get the stage out of this goldarn sinkhole!'

"And, gentlemen, this is the political situation. The seventy-five cent men are riding, the fifty cent men are walking, and the poor twenty-five cent beggar is pushing the political machine. Are you riding or walking or pushing?"—St. Louis Republic.

THE WITHRINGTON MYSTERY

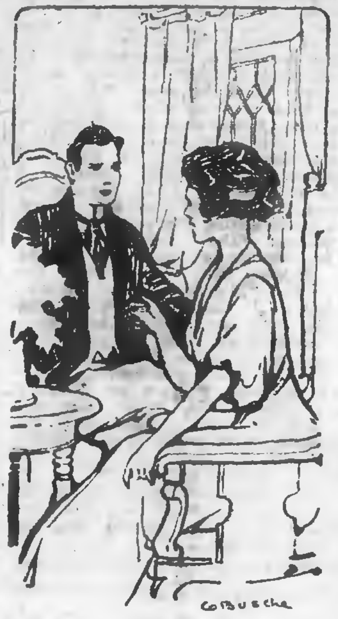
Was There Nothing In It, or Was It a Scientific Wonder?

By F. A. MITCHEL

At Newport, R. I., is a house which three-quarters of a century ago was the finest of all the "cottages," as the dwellings of summer residents were then called, in the town. Even then it was an old house and full of old furniture, such as four post bedsteads, tables with three legs and claw feet, high bureaus with small mirrors on top and other seventeenth and eighteenth century articles.

From the settlement of Newport the property had belonged to the Withrington family, the original Withrington having come out from England with a patent from the government of lands in Rhode Island.

There was one Withrington—he was the heir to the estate, including the Newport manor house—who went abroad and was never heard of afterward. This was in the year 1857 Ralph Withrington, the person referred to, had a passion for science and went to Germany to study under the then famous Professor Hickelschneider of the University of Bonn. Withrington was often seen by various persons entering and leaving the professor's laboratory. On the 10th of November, 1858, he was seen to make such entrance. He was not seen to depart at the usual time, nor was he ever seen again—at least in Bonn.



'PARDON WHAT MAY SEEM AN INTRUSION,' SAID THE VISITOR.

Samuel Withrington, a cousin in America, being informed that Ralph had disappeared, went to Germany to investigate the matter, but received no satisfaction. Professor Hickelschneider was so universally respected that no charge of his having made way with his pupil would be received by the authorities. Samuel Withrington returned to America and laid claim to Ralph's estate, but since nothing could be transferred to him without proof of the owner's death the courts retained charge of it. The Newport manor house remained vacant for many years, when it was purchased by a family of the name of Pushcarth. They used a crest on certain of their belongings, but the only crest to which they were entitled was a cart, with a handle to be grasped by a human being, for the founder of the family had in 1742 been a peddler in New York city and was called first the pushcart man, then Old Pushcart, and when his family came into possession of a large fortune which he had accumulated the name became Pushcart, and later, after the family had become respectable, it was changed to Pushcarth. A genius for accumulation had been the family talent, and they were now very rich. They were also very aristocratic and preferred the Withrington manor house with its old furniture, because they said it reminded them of the original Pushcarth chateau in France from which the original Pushcarth had been sent out to Canada by King Louis XIV.

Professor Hickelschneider died in an insane asylum. He had made some wonderful scientific discoveries and was said to have been half a century ahead of his time, having arrived at results that he did not give to the world, but which have recently been brought out by a famous institution for original research. His son, Gustav, inherited his scientific tastes and his laboratory. It was noticed that after the father's death the son would not permit any other person than himself to enter the laboratory.

Gustav was succeeded by his son Heinrich, who did not inherit the genius of his grandfather or even the tastes of his father. He tore down the laboratory to make room for a building that would afford him an income.

Fifty years after the disappearance of Ralph Withrington it was reported in Bonn that Heinrich Hickelschneider had uncovered a vault in the laboratory from which he had taken an oblong box, such as is used for inclosing burial caskets, that the box contained a shriveled leatherlike body, that a paper was found stating that the contents of the box was a desiccated body, which might be brought to life by a certain process, that was given in minute detail, and lastly that it had been turned over to a corps of scientists, who had applied the process given and brought the leathery substance to a living human being.

There were a few persons in Bonn who attached some credence to this story. No one else paid any attention to it, and it passed away as a Munchausen tale.

During the first decade of the twentieth century, when the Withrington property had long ago passed into the Pushcarth family, a man apparently about twenty-five years of age entered the place and, advancing to the house, rang the bell, sent up his card—Ralph H. Withrington—with the word that he belonged to the family that had formerly owned the property.

The butler took the card, ushered the visitor into a drawing room and after a brief absence returned, saying that the only person who could see Mr. Withrington was Miss Pushcarth, who would be down directly. A young lady of haughty mien appeared, who maintained that reserve to be expected from one of high degree. But no sooner had she taken a fair look at her caller than she started. There was an unwholesome leathery look about him that appalled her. She knew all about the family from whom her father had obtained the place; that since one named Ralph Withrington, the owner, had not given a deed to the property the title was defective, and a dreadful idea came to her that he had returned from the dead to claim his own.

"Pardon what may seem an intrusion," said the visitor. "You have seen by my card that I am a Withrington. I have been spending some time in Germany and since my return have felt a desire to visit the home of my boyhood."

Miss Pushcarth shuddered the moment Mr. Withrington began to speak, for his voice had something of the sound of a pair of leather bellows. His throat appeared to be dry and the vocal organs stiff. When he spoke of the home of his boyhood she interrupted him:

"Excuse me. You have mistaken the place. I was born and have lived here all my life, and I must be nearly your age."

"My ancestors, I should have said," hastily replied the visitor.

"I have heard," the lady continued, "that one of the Withrington family named Ralph disappeared a great many years ago. Indeed, I understand that he was the owner of this property at the time of his disappearance, therefore the title to it is defective. Perhaps you are a descendant of this Ralph Withrington and can supply the deficiency."

A singular expression came over the young man's face. As Miss Pushcarth looked at him in the light dimmed by the heavy curtains it seemed to her that she saw in him the soul of a very old man. As to his body, it was neither old nor young. There was something about it to remind her of a certain bachelor she knew of seventy-five who kept his position as a beau in society. He was so artistically made up that one could scarcely tell whether he was seventy-five or twenty-five. Without making a direct reply, her guest, in the courtly manner of half a century before, assured her that he could make good the title to the place and asked her if she would inherit it.

"It is mine already," she said. "My mother died when I was a child and my father a year ago. There is nothing to trouble me in the settlement of the estate except the outstanding interest of this namesake of yours. Doubtless he is dead long ago and will never trouble us, but I wish the defect could be supplied."

Glancing at Withrington, she noticed another expression on his face that startled her. It was or resembled the look of one who was thinking of love, of marriage—marriage with her. But it was not the look a young man would have given her with such intent; it was more like a leer from a septuagenarian.

Without directly pursuing the matter her visitor broke out in an impassioned manner, telling her that he found himself in a world from which all who had loved him and whom he had loved had departed and left him alone. He was hungry for affection. If no new attachment came to him, nothing to fill the frightful void, he would go mad. If such an affection could be purchased he would give for it this, his family homestead, were it still his.

During this address at times he seemed to be an attractive young man offering her his devotion, at times a broken down antiquated piece of dried flesh, begging for some one to take care of him in his old age. Suddenly recovering himself he arose and said:

"But I will inflict no more of this on you. I may see you again, and I may not. At any rate, I will see that you have a clear title to this manor house."

Without waiting for a reply he hurried away.

That was the last time Miss Pushcarth saw her visitor. A few days later there came to her through the mail a document got up in proper legal form which, if the signature was genuine, removed the flaw from the title to her home. It was signed Ralph Howard Withrington. No letter accompanied it. Miss Pushcarth immediately sent for her attorney and turned the document over to him with instructions to look into the matter. Within a week he returned it with a statement that he had found a number of signatures on different records of Ralph Howard Withrington, had referred the signature she had given him to experts who had compared it with those he had found, and one and all had pronounced it genuine.

The above is a record of all that is known of the Withrington mystery that a few years ago caused such a stir in the Pushcarth family and their intimate associates.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.O., "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

EVERY MAN WOMAN AND CHILD HAS PLACE IN GOD'S PLAN

Rev. L. E. Skey Urges That We Allow God to Choose for Us — We Act He Says as if God Had Half a Dozen Plans and it Doesn't Matter Which One We Take —Big Convention of Students at an End.

The delegates to the Student Volunteer Conference have come and gone, and Peterborough is a better city as a result of their three days' visit. It was a wonderful gathering in many respects, and one result is that citizens of Peterborough have a better and broader knowledge of the mission field, and it is not improbable that some young people have heard and answered the call, "Go ye into all the world."

The International Conference will be held next year at Kansas, where two thousand or more students will gather. This International Conference is held every four years, when the Canadian Conference is withdrawn and all forces centred on the big convention.

THE BEST YET.

To Peterborough goes the credit of having the biggest and most conference ever held in the United States or Canada. There were 425 delegates, 33 Institutions represented, and there were 19 missionary leaders. The hospitality of citizens in throwing open their homes to the delegates was very much appreciated, but it is safe to say that [illegible] providing entertainment were [illegible] paid for any inconvenience [illegible] only too glad to welcome [illegible] ents again. [illegible] clergymen and missionaries [illegible] were heard in the [illegible] churches yesterday, the [illegible] congregations were the [illegible] and m[illegible] to [illegible] church, shooting [illegible] from [illegible] used so great was the interest in the closing service.

Rev. L. E. Skey, rector of St. Anne's the largest Anglican church in Toronto, spoke in All Saints church in the morning, and in Murray street at night. In both churches he spoke on God's Plan, applying it as the plan related to we as individuals and also to the Church. "God's plan calls for every man, woman and child," said Rev. Mr. Skey at All Saints. He had created all of us unto good works, and He had certain plans for our life. Such a doctrine might be called one of predestination, but the speaker pointed out that God's plans were always unto glory. Even the baby in the home had a place in the plan. God meant that that baby now missing from the home should call the parents to the higher life.

WE MAY MISS IT.

Yet we might miss the plan. That was the sad part of it. There were some who had not seen or missed the plan which God intended for them by missing Christ. Citing the case of St. Paul, he told of how he had caught the vision by which his plan of life's work was changed. God's plan was exactly the opposite to that of Paul's, who was told to go and work among the very class of people he had hated the worst. In following the plan of God Paul found his old feeling of animosity dispelled. When he put himself into the work he would stay up all night praying for his converts.

WE CHOOSE OUR OWN PLAN.

We could also miss the plan by choosing one of our own and by not absolutely surrendering ourselves to Christ. Some Christians were not in the path of the plan God had mapped out. They chose their own plan because God's way seemed hard. We were not willing to have God choose the way. Although we may not see it, we were walking away from God.

The speaker pointed out the mistakes being made every day, by people choosing their own plans. Parents were doing this with their children. There were ministers never meant to be such.

"We are acting," he said, "as if God had half a dozen plans, and it didn't make any difference which one we took." He urged that parents make the plans for their children the subject of their earnest prayers.

Another point he brought out was that when we made our decision God would guide us. We might meet opposition and persecution, but that did not mean we had made a mistake. We must first learn the lesson of humiliation. That was part of the plan.

Peterborough was given a taste of college life on Saturday night between 6 and 7 o'clock, when the entire body of convention students paraded up and down George street. They marched four abreast, the girls inside and the boys outside. Mayor Bradburn had given them the freedom of the city, and as some of the students said, "almost made us parade."

CONDITIONS IN INDIA

Some startling truths about India of the degradation of the country's womanhood and the idolatrous worship of its people, were related in Murray Street Baptist Church Sunday morning, in graphic and impressive style, by Dr. McKellar, a returned lady missionary. The congregation was large and Dr. Mc-

DEPUTATION GO TO OTTAWA

One party comprising the deputation to Ottawa, which will interview the Government urging the speedy completion of the Trent Canal, left on the 11.17 C.P.R. this morning, thirty persons forming the delegation. Others will leave this evening and will be at the Capital in time for the interview at eleven o'clock Tuesday morning.

The party was composed of representatives of the County Council and all of the City Council save Alderman Gordon who was unable to defer pressing professional engagements.

Mayor Bradburn and T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P.P., accompanied the party as well as E. A. Peck, M.P.P. and President Vincent Eastwood of of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Eastwood was unable to say definitely who would be selected to present the wishes of the deputation to the Minister. He said however that Mr. S. R. Armstrong the City Clerk was considered to be well qualified, although it would be probably decided after the deputation arrived at the Capital.

The party is not expected to return until Wednesday morning.

CONCERNING THE HOME LIBRARY

Bookcases That May Be Added, Section By Section, As The Number Of Volumes Increases

IN SOME HOUSEHOLDS books are more of a burden than a benefit. Children are admonished as to the inestimable value of reading, and perhaps upbraided in the same breath for strewing the tables and chairs with their books. But when the small boy and small girl are provided with shelves of their own in the living-room all such trouble is happlily obviated. The sectional bookcase that takes up so little room, that conforms so harmoniously to the general furnishing scheme of the room, and that protects its books from the dust that settles on shelves and bindings this is the foundation stone of the home library.

The GLOBE-WERNICKE CASES, as embodying all these qualities, merits emphatic notice.

They are obtainable in sections of similar width and different depth—suited to books of different sizes with top and base, prices being as follows:

	Plain Oak	Quartered Oak or Imitation Mahogany	Genuine Mahogany
Top	$1.75	$2.00	$3.00
8½ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.50	3.00	4.25
8½ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	3.75	4.25	5.50
10¼ inch Unit, Plain Glass	2.75	3.25	4.50
10¼ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.15	4.65	5.90
12¼ inch Unit, Plain Glass	3.00	3.60	4.75
12¼ inch Unit, Leaded Glass	4.60	5.20	6.35
Base	1.75	2.00	3.00
Drawer Base	2.80	3.10	4.25

The oak cases are procurable in golden, fumed or early English finish.

URGES SPONTANEITY IN GIFT TO THE EMPIRE

W. F. Maclean Declares For an Immediate Contribution to Imperial Government.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The debate upon the address was continued yesterday by Mr. Bradbury, Conservative member for Selkirk, who touched upon the cut in the cement duty last summer and the Macdonald bye-election. He was followed by Mr. Neely, the Liberal member for Humboldt. Mr. Sinclair of Guysboro, Mr. Maclean of South York, and Mr. Demers of St. Johns and Iberville, the discussion being prolonged until a late hour. The debate may continue over to-day.

Before the orders of the day were called Hon. Frank Cochrane in reply to a question stated that the entire Transcontinental Railway would be finished from Cochrane to Winnipeg before Christmas.

A comprehensive speech upon the big live issues of the day was delivered by Mr. Maclean. The naval issue, the transportation problem, a state-owned cable, parcels post, Government-ownership of telegraph lines, the melon cutting of the C.P.R. Co. and much-needed amendments to the Railway Act were among the subjects discussed.

Mr. David Lafortune resumed his speech in French when the House met. He stated his Opposition to any money contribution to England in connection with the navy, and adhered to the position that the Laurier policy was the only true Canadian policy.

Mr. Geo. H. Bradbury of Selkirk followed. He declared that the men arrested in Macdonald were "caught red-handed, but the Conservative party was good enough to let them off," a statement received with jeers and ironical laughter. He accused Sir Wilfrid Laurier of founding his charges, that the temporary reduction in cement duties was made to affect the Saskatchewan elections, on the "statements of a disgruntled manufacturer."

When Hon. Robert Rogers defended the arrest of Mr. J. J. Sullivan, the young Liberal who was arrested by his officials in the Macdonald bye-election by telling Parliament that he was a nephew of "Cap" Sullivan of Ontario, the Minister of Public Works told the House an untruth, according to the statement of Dr. Neely of Humboldt, who continued the debate yesterday afternoon. Dr. Neely was fortified with a telegram from Mr. Sullivan himself, who stated that he was no relative of the famous "Cap," and he severely scored the absent Minister of Public Works for endeavoring to mislead the House with a "defence" which was in direct variance with the truth. Mr. Rogers was not in the House.

PREMIER BORDEN.

He promises consideration of the request by municipaliteis along the route of the Trent Valley Canal

DEPUTATION WAS PLEASED WITH THE RECEPTION

Mr. J. H. Bornham, M.P., wired the Review to-day as follows:

The big Trent Valley Canal deputation was received this morning by Premier Borden, Hon. Frank Cochrane, and members Hughes, Corby, Bennett, Burnham, Armstrong and Northrup.

Speeches were made by Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Hon. Mr. Davis and others. The deputation received a good reception and was well pleased.

DIED AS HE SAT IN CHAIR

Kingston, Dec. 3.—William Dowsley, aged 64, a Kingston resident for half a century, was found dead while sitting in his chair at the Frontenac Hotel. He suffered from heart disease. He was born in Prescott and for many years was engaged in the boot and shoe business.

Two Hurt In Runaway.

Kingston, Dec. 3.—Patrick Tierney, Kingston, had two ribs fractured and J. Elliott, Sunbury, was badly shaken up in a sensational runaway on Princess street. Scores of people had to hurry into stores for protection. The runaway team belonged to Joe. Rushford, Brewers Mills.

RIOT AT SOUTH PORCUPINE; ONE STRIKER MAY DIE

Five Thiel Detectives Under Arrest — Strike Situation Has Become Serious.

South Porcupine, Dec. 3.—With three strikers wounded, one of whom may die, the strike situation has become extremely serious to-day. The shooting occurred at Timmins, in front of the hotel there yesterday morning, after Chief Calbeck had left the locality, and the shots are said to have been fired by Thiel detectives, five of whom are now under arrest, charged with shooting with intent.

These charges may be advanced to murder should any of the victims of the shooting succumb. One of these is shot through the lungs, another has a wound in the fleshy part of the back, and a third is wounded in the ankle. All are in the hospital.

The five men were arrested after considerable trouble by Provincial Constable Lefevre, who arrived upon the scene some time after the shooting and found considerable difficulty in locating his men.

The Thiel men are very unpopular in camp, and Mayor Wilson wired yesterday to have them taken out or the militia sent in.

Superintendent Sceptical.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Capt. Williams, superintendent of the Thiel Detective Agency at Toronto, said last night that he had heard nothing of the shooting. He did not think that his men had done it, and declared that Thiel men were being blamed for everything which was being done at the camps. He had received a wire yesterday morning from Mr. White, in charge of the Thiel force of over a hundred men, which said that here had been trouble, and that shots had been fired. Capt. Williams said that men had been sworn in at the mines before the arrival of the Thiel men, and that these men were still there. He said that out of his force of over a hundred, less than twenty had firearms, and that all had been instructed under no circumstances to fire unless their lives were in danger. He said that only seven guns had been sent up for his men, and that these had not been distributed, but were sent up with one of the men to Mr. White, whom he described as an old and careful man. Capt. Williams said that nearly all the Thiel men in the district were experienced men, and men little likely to do any rash shooting.

HON. W. H. HEARST, K.C.

The Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines for the Province of Ontario who will address the Canadian Club to-morrow evening at the Y.M.C.A. His subject will be Northern Ontario.

GOVERNMENT WILL GIVE EARLY AND FULL CONSIDERATION

To Request of Big Trent Valley Canal Deputation Which Was Heard by Premier Borden and Hon. Frank Cochrane---Government's Policy, Says Premier, is to Encourage and Build up Transportation Facilities.

(By Our Own Reporter)

Ottawa, Dec. 3—A big delegation representing the municipalities along the line of the Trent Canal from Midland on the Georgian Bay to Trenton on Lake Ontario, waited upon Premier Borden and Hon. Frank Cochrane to-day and strongly urged that the Government go ahead with that portion of the Trent Canal between the head of Lake Simcoe and the Georgian Bay and that in doing so the depth be made greater than in the portion already completed and that the locks along the system be made larger.

It was pointed out that C. P. R. boats now come to McNicoll at the lower end of the Georgian Bay and close to where the proposed canal system would end. It was contended that grain could be loaded on smaller barges and carried across to Lake Ontario thence down the St. Lawrence to Montreal.

WILL BE GIVEN FULL CONSIDERATION

Premier Borden, in reply, said that the policy of the Government was to encourage and build up the transportation facilities, and he promised that the matter would be given the earliest and fullest possible consideration.

An interesting feature of the discussion was a proposal that the famous NewMarket Canal scheme should be carried out, which was made by the Hon. E. J. Davis. He argued that, despite assertions to the contrary, the project was a practical and necessary one.

COURT THROWS OUT ACTION AGAINST HON. A. G. McKAY

Former Owen Sounder Charged That Hon. A. G. McKay Had Alienated His Wife's Affections—Plaintiff Will Enter Appeal

Canadian Press Despatch.

Milton Ont., Dec. 3.—D. O. Cameron, solicitor for W. H. Haines, Toronto whose action for damages against Hon. A. G. MacKay, the former Leader of the Ontario Liberals claiming the latter had alienated his wife's affections, was dismissed by Mr. Justice Leitch at the Assizes here yesterday, will enter an appeal. He made the announcement after the dismissal of the action. The grounds are that the case was dismissed without going into the evidence.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—"In the face of the evidence I could not allow a charge of this nature to hang over any man." Such was the statement of Mr. Justice Leitch in the Milton Assize Court yesterday in dismissing the action against Hon. A. G. MacKay, who was sued by W. H. Haines, formerly of Owen Sound, on the ground that Mr. MacKay had alienated his wife's affections. The action against the former leader of the Ontario Liberal party was launched by Haines during the reciprocity campaign a year ago. It had been hanging fire since then and when it finally came to trial Mr. MacKay came from Edmonton to defend the accusation.

Mrs. Haines has been confined in the Queen street asylum since May, 1911. Because of being declared insane she was not permitted to give evidence in the case. Her husband, who pressed the suit, had served a subpoena upon her, and when she did not appear to give evidence, his counsel asked for an adjournment, which was promptly refused by his lordship after he had heard the evidence of alienists.

Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of asylums and prisons; Dr. J. H. Forster, superintendent of Toronto Asylum; and Dr. H. Clare, assistant superintendent, testified that the woman was incurably insane and therefore wholly incapable of giving evidence. They said that she had been laboring under delusions and hallucinations for a long time, and, judging by her present condition, would continue to do so. They were just the kind, if given credence to, which would give rise to actions of this kind against not only the defendant, Mr. MacKay, but other men. She was described as a typical patient of the kind and the medical men thought it would be an outrage to rely upon her accusations.

It was pointed out that the accusations had been made some seven months before the woman was sent to the asylum, but in answer to this the medical witnesses said that at that time and probably for years previously she had had delusions with regard to men.

Upon examination for discovery the plaintiff, Haines, admitted that neither he nor his wife were at the places where the wrong-doing complained of was alleged to have been committed.

Before dismissing the case Mr. Justive Leitch said that no particulars of improper relations alleged in the statement of claim were before the court, and he therefore dropped the action, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff, Haines, to the defendant, Hon. A. G. MacKay.

SIGNIFICANT PRONOUNCEMENT MADE IN THE REICHSTAG

Fatherland Will Stand Firm in the Balkan Affair—Will Back up Austria

Berlin, Dec. 3.—Germany stands firmly with Austria-Hungary in the conflict which has arisen between that country and Servia, or for that matter, in any conflict which may be forced upon the dual monarchy.

In a brief, pointed speech in the Reichstag yesterday, the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, made this declaration, which is taken to mean unquestionably a warning to Russia, although Russia was not named. All the party leaders, except the Socialist, who followed the chancellor, expressed approval of the Government's position.

Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, also won applause, when in replying to the references of the Social Democratic leader, Herr Ledebour, to alleged discord with Great Britain, he said:

"These remarks offer a welcome occasion to state that during the whole late crisis our relations with Great Britain have been especially marked by mutual trust, which has not only brought about a most gratifying intimacy in our relations, but has also performed good services towards an understanding among all the powers. I can express the certain expectation that they will continue to do this."

The effect of the speeches in the Reichstag yesterday was heightened last evening when it became known in Parliamentary circles that an agreement had been reached for a renewal of the Dreibund.

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg declared that the belligerents in the present war did not dispute the right of the great powers to have a word to say in the final settlement of the Balkan question, in which their interests were all involved.

He said the wishes of the powers would carry greater weight if they were presented collectively. Negotiations with that end in view were now proceeding and he hoped they would result successfully.

Germany, he said, like several of the other great powers, was interested in preserving Turkey as a powerful economic and political factor.

He was able, he said, to deny reports that the great powers, or several of them, were planning the acquisition of Turkish territory as a result of the war. It was assumed the Imperial Chancellor was referring to the report that England was about to proclaim a formal protectorate over Egypt.

The vigorous tone adopted by the Imperial Chancellor surprised the House, which was expecting the usual diplomatic assurance that everything was going well.

Forty Thousand Starving.

London, Dec. 3.—The Sofia correspondent of The Times says: "There are 40,000 refugees at Saloniki, all in deplorable condition. After the arrival of the troops they were ejected from the mosques and other buildings and driven to the open spaces around the town, where they were without shelter, exposed to the cold and drenching rain, starving and wallowing in filth. Numbers died from exposure and hunger, while smallpox and other diseases had already appeared. The Turkish prisoners in the concentration camps were living under similar appalling conditions. Although the Turkish Red Crescent was well equipped, the Turkish military hospital was in a terrible condition, without bandages, medicines or comforts.

Truce Goes Slowly.

Sofia, Dec. 3.—The plenipotentiaries held a meeting at 3 o'clock yesterday at Baghtche, but it is considered doubtful if any definite conclusion regarding the armistice will be reached before Tuesday night or Wednesday. The important points of the armistice have already been settled, such as the retention by the respective armies of the positions they now occupy.

Statement Reassuring.

London, Dec. 3.—The Imperial German chancellor's statement on the European situation, together with that of Herr von Kiderlin-Waechter, the German Foreign Secretary, confirming that Great Britain and Germany are co-operating amicably in favor of peace, is regarded in the European capitals as reassuring and as calculated to have an effect when the peace delegates come to discuss terms.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—That 2,509 British immigrants located in the Province of Ontario during the month of November was the statement made at the Government immigration office at the Toronto Union Station yesterday afternoon. This brings the number of British immigrants who have come to Ontario so far this year to a thousand or more over the fifty thousand mark, three or four times the number of any previous year. It is remarkable that there is as yet no let-up in the stream of immigration pouring in. More than a hundred British immigrants for Ontario arrived here by train from Montreal yesterday.

Washington, Dec. 3.—T. The court held that moving picture films was neither discovered nor produced by Edison, but by a manufacturer of photographic supplies and that Edison's pictures lies solely in the camera apparatus.

Canadian Press Despatch.

For the latter shooting Sneed is yet to stand his trial.

MR. E. A. PECK M.P.P. AFTER EXAMINER FOR LIBEL

Retraction and Apology Has Been Tendered Editorially

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., has served the Examiner Printing Co. with a notice of action for libel. The article in question appeared in the editorial columns of the Examiner last Wednesday, and was headed "Here's His Chance."

According to the Libel law notice of action must be served three days in advance of the issuing of a writ, and if the newspaper so notified makes an apology and correction within that time, such correction can be pleaded in mitigation of damages and is generally effective, except in cases where malice is shown."

The Examiner has made editorially the following explanation and retraction:

"The paragraph complained of was written in connection with an article pointing out the duty of the Dominion representative, to procure the carrying out of an arrangement made in good faith to relieve the county of the payment of $3,000, in respect of the bridge over the Buckhorn dam. The paragraph in reference to Mr. Peck, was merely incidental, and was written, having in mind the perplexing position in which Mr. Peck was placed—as representative, it seemed to be reasonable to expect him to relieve the county of the payment of $3,000, which, on moral grounds, the county did not owe; while as County Solicitor he was bound to recommend payment of the $3,000 to save the expense of the litigation that would result if payment of a bill the Government seems determined to collect, was enforced by process of law. There was no intention to impeach Mr. Peck's fidelity as a representative, or impute any unworthy motive; and to make sure, the statement is withdrawn and regret expressed that it was so worded as to be interpreted as a reflection on Mr. Peck which was not intended."

Mr. Peck is in Ottawa to-day and it is impossible to say whether he will be satisfied with the retraction or not.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED By HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT BY H. K. FLY CO.

Mallory broke in with feverish interest: "But you said you were going to get married on this train."

"Nothing easier. Here's how!" and he raised his glass, but Mallory hauled it down to demand: "How? that's what I want to know. How are you going to get married on this parsonless express. Have you got a little minister in your suitcase?"

Ira beamed with added pride as he explained:

"Well, you see, when I used to court Anne I had a rival—Charlie Selby his name was. I thought he cut me out, but he became a clergyman in Utah—Oh, Charlie! I telegraphed him that I was passing through Ogden, and would he come down to the train and marry me to a charming lady. He always wanted to marry Anne. I thought it would be a durned good joke to let him marry her—to me."

"D-did he accept?" Mallory asked excitedly, "Is he coming?"

"He is—he did—here's his telegram," said Ira. "He brings the license and the ring." He passed it over, and as Mallory read it a look of hope spread across his face. But Ira was saying: "We're going to have the wedding obsequies right here in this car. You're all invited. Will you come?"

There was a general yell of acceptance and Ashton began to sing "There Was I Waiting at the Church." Then he led a sort of Indian war dance round the next victim of the matrimonial stake. At the end of the hullaballoo all the men charged their glasses, and drained them with an uproarious "How!"

Poor Dr. Temple had taken luxurious delight in the success of his disguise and in the prospect of watching some other clergyman working while he rested. He joined the dance as gaily, if not as gracefully, as any of the rest, and in a final triumph of recklessness, he tossed off a bumper of straight whisky.

Instantly his "How!" changed to "Wow!" and then his throat clamped fast with a terrific spasm that flung the tears from his eyes. He bent and writhed in a silent paroxysm till he was pounded and shaken back to life and water poured down his throat to reopen a passage.

The others thought he had merely choked and made no comment other than sympathy. They could not have dreamed that the old "physician" was as ignorant of the taste as of the vigor of pure spirits.

After a riot of handshaking and good wishes, Ira was permitted to escape with his life. Mallory followed him to the vestibule, when he caught him by the sleeve with an anxious:

"Excuse me."

"Well, my boy—"

"Your minister—after you get through with him—may I use him?"

"May you—what? Why do you want a minister?"

"To get married."

"Again? Good Lord, are you a Mormon?"

"Me a Mormon!"

"Then what do you want with an extra wife? It's against the law—even in Utah."

"You don't understand."

"My boy, one of us is disgracefully drunk."

"Well, I'm not," said Mallory, and then after a fierce inner debate, he decided to take Lathrop into his confidence. The words came hard after so long a duplicity, but at last they were out:

"Mr. Lathrop, I'm not really married to my wife."

"You young scoundrel!"

But his fury changed to pity when he heard the history of Mallory's ill-fated efforts, and he promised not only to lend Mallory his minister at second-hand, but also to keep the whole affair a secret, for Mallory explained his intention of having his own ceremony in the baggage-car, or somewhere out of sight of the other passengers.

Mallory's face was now aglow as the cold embers of hope leaped into sudden blaze. He wrung Lathrop's hand, saying: "Lord love you, you've saved my life—wife—both."

Then he turned and ran to Marjorie with the good news. He had quite forgotten their epoch-making separation. And she was so glad to see him smiling at her again that she forgot it, too. He came tearing into the observation room and took her by the shoulders, whispering: "Oh, Marjorie, Marjorie, I've got him! I've got him!"

"No, I've got him," she said, swinging Snoozleums into view.

Mallory swung him back out of the way: "I don't mean a poodle, I mean a parson. I've got a parson."

"No! I can't believe it! Where is he?" She began to dance with delight, but she stopped when he explained:

"Well, I haven't got him yet, but I'm going to get one."

"What—again?" she groaned, weary of this old bunco game of hope.

"It's a real live one this time," Mallory insisted. "Mr. Lathrop has ordered a minister and he's going to lend him to me as soon as he's through with him, and we'll be married on this train."

Marjorie was overwhelmed, but she felt it becoming in her to be a trifle coy. So she pouted: "But you won't want me for a bride now. I'm such a fright."

He took the bait, hook and all: "I never saw you looking so adorable."

"Honestly? Oh, but it will be glorious to be Mrs. First Lieutenant Mallory."

"Glorious!"

"I must telegraph home—and sign my new name. Won't mamma be pleased?"

"Won't she?" said Mallory, with just a trace of dubiety.

Then Marjorie grew serious with a new idea: "I wonder if mamma and papa have missed me yet?"

Mallory laughed: "After three days' disappearance, I shouldn't be surprised."

"Perhaps they are worrying about me."

"I shouldn't be surprised."

"The poor dears! I'd better write them a telegram at once."

"An excellent idea."

She ran to the desk, found blank forms and then paused with knitted brow: "It will be very hard to say all I've got to say in ten words."

"Hang the expense," Mallory sniffed magnificently, "I'm paying your bills now."

But Marjorie tried to look very matronly: "Send a night letter in the day time! No, indeed, we must begin to economize."

Mallory was touched by this new revelation of her future housewifely thrift. He hugged her hard and reminded her that she could send a day-letter by wire.

"An excellent idea," she said. "Now don't bother me. You go on and read your paper, read about Mattie. I'll never be jealous of her—him—of anybody—again."

"You shall never have cause for jealousy, my own."

But fate was not finished with the initiation of the unfortunate pair, and already new trouble was strolling in their direction.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Jealousy Comes Aboard.

There was an air of domestic peace in the observation room, where Mallory and Marjorie had been left to themselves for some time. But the peace was like the ominous hush that precedes a tempest.

Mallory was so happy with everything coming his way, that he was even making up with Snoozleums, stroking the tatted coat with one hand and holding up his newspaper with the other. He did not know all that was coming his way. The blissful silence was broken first by Marjorie:

"How do you spell Utah?—with a y?"

"Utah begins with You," he said—and rather liked his wit, listened for some recognition, and rose to get it, but she waved him away.

"Don't bother me, honey. Can't you see I'm busy?"

He kissed her hair and sauntered back, dividing his attention between Snoozleums and the ten-faning game.

And now there was a small commotion in the smoking room. Through the glass along the corridor the men caught sight of the girl who had got on at Green River. Ashton saw her first and she saw him.

"There she goes," Ashton hissed to the others, "look quick! There's the nectarine."

"My word! She's a little bit of all right, isn't she?"

Even Dr. Temple stared at her with approval: "Dear little thing, isn't she?"

The girl, very consciously unconscious of the admiration, moved demurely along with eyes downcast, but at such an angle that she could take in the sensation she was creating; she went along picking up stares as if they were bouquets.

Her demeanor was a remarkable compromise between outrageous flirtation and perfect respectability. But she was looking back so intently that when she moved into the observation room she walked right into the newspaper Mallory was holding out before him.

Both said: "I beg your pardon."

When Mallory lowered the paper, both stared till their eyes almost popped. Her amazement was one of immediate rapture. He looked as if he would have been much obliged for a volcanic crater to sink into.

"Harry!" she gasped, and let fall her handbag.

"Kitty!" he gasped, and let fall his newspaper. Both bent, he handed her the newspaper and tossed the handbag into a chair; saw his mistake, withdrew the newspaper and proffered her Snoozleums. Marjorie stopped writing, pen poised in air, as if she had suddenly been petrified.

The newcomer was the first to speak. She fairly gushed: "Harry Mallory—of all people."

The Madonna

By WALTON WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

WITH the painters of the middle ages the Madonna was the most popular subject. This was especially true of that supremely great school that flourished during the Italian renaissance period. In earlier Christian art the Virgin did not so largely figure. It was only with the council of Ephesus and its glorification of Mary as the "mother of God" and the development of the doctrine of the immaculate conception—not only as to the birth of Jesus, but as to that of Mary herself—that the ascendancy of the Virgin both in the church and in church art was established.

It was not till the wonderful renaissance era in Italy, the golden age of art, however, that the Madonna became the favorite theme of painters. The vogue started with Fra Angelico, Fra Bartolommeo and others of the first painters of the era and reached its height under Raphael. The three great figures of the renaissance period in art were Raphael himself, Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci. Angelo painted a few Madonnas, some of them unfinished, but they do not rank with most of his work. Da Vinci has one or two Madonnas that are up to his other great paintings. But it was Raphael of angelic face and character; Raphael, the prince of painters of all ages, whose Madonnas, both in number and quality, outrank those of any other painter, ancient or modern.

Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" is not only his own masterpiece, but by universal consent ranks as the greatest painting in the world. Only less famous than this is his "Madonna of the Chair," while his "La Jardiniere," "Madonna of the Finger" and many more are celebrated.

Raphael Sanzio or Santi was born in 1483 and died of a fever at Rome when thirty-seven. He was the son of a painter and studied at one time under Perugino. His first work to become famous was "The Coronation of the Virgin," which appeared in 1503. "The Marriage of the Virgin" was painted the next year, shortly after which Raphael went to live in Florence, where most of his Madonnas were finished. His fame had now become so great that he was called to Rome to decorate the Vatican. It was not till toward the end of his life that Raphael developed his own style and did his greatest work, the "Sistine Madonna" being his last great painting. He was also an architect and was appointed the chief architect of St. Peter's in Rome.

Another Madonna, a reproduction of which is here shown, is a detail of the painting by Hans Holbein the younger, known as the "Madonna of the Meyer Family." It represents the Virgin and the child Jesus being worshiped by Burgomaster Meyer, his two wives (one deceased) and some of his children. Just why Burgomaster Meyer, his two wives and children should be immortalized in this holy company is not apparent. The burgomaster paid for the picture. Members of the family are omitted in the reproduction.

There were two Hans Holbeins, father and son, both painters. The younger was practically a contemporary of Raphael, being born in Bavaria in 1497. One of his best known portraits is that of Erasmus. Several of his religious pictures are also celebrated.

The painting of the "Madonna and Child" by C. von Bodenhausen, here shown, is more modern.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

You Will Earn $100 Monthly For Spare Time Work.

URGES SPONTANEITY

After referring to the need for a revision of the British North American Act and the improvement of the Senate, W. F. Maclean (South York) dealt with the naval question. He said he had on previous occasions declared for an immediate contribution to the Imperial Government for naval defence and also for a Canadian navy. He had nothing to retract on either score. He declared for an immediate and generous gift, regretting only that it had not been made two or three Parliaments sooner. Even now it was of the first importance that the gift should be considered as a spontaneous offering of the Canadian people rather than the result of suggestion from the Imperial Government.

"I believe in a Canadian navy," continued the member from South York, because sea power is the backbone of a nation. There is no reason why we should not have Canadian ships built by Canadian labor from Canadian material or why Canadian sailors should not fight on Canadian battleships."

Mr. Maclean then took up the transportation problem. Great grievances existed and the people were entitled to a prompt and full relief. Parliament could intervene by instructions to the commission and by putting more definitions in the Railway Act. For one thing, there should be a maximum passenger fare of two cents a mile. Then, too, all territorial discrimination should be forbidden. Then, too, the Railway Act should define and deal with freight classification. Why should the shipper of brick be given an advantage over the shipper of cement, or the shipper of lumber?

"We are handicapping our [illegible]stern pioneers," said Mr. Maclean, "in making them pay higher rates for railway service than the people pay in Eastern Canada." He hoped to see legislation at this session which would do away with territorial discrimination and instruct the Railway Commission. The railway policy of the country should be fixed by Parliament.

As to the express companies, which were really creatures of the railway companies, he believed they should be eliminated by a parcel post system, which we should start at once instead of waiting to see how the experiment worked in the United States.

In answer to an interruption by E. M. Macdonald of Picton, Mr. Maclean said that speaking as a protectionist he would say that if he was convinced that the manufacturers of the country were getting wealthy at the expense of the plain people and exploiting them he would favor a downward revision of the tariff.

Mr. Sinclair of Guysboro' followed. He said that from a capitalist Government Mr. Maclean could hope for little relief for the evils of which he complained. Mr. Sinclair heartily concurred in the references to the prosperity of the country contained in the speech from the throne, but he maintained that this prosperity was but the harvest of Liberal sowing. He believed that the Maritime Provinces would to-day, if given an opportunity, enthusiastically endorse reciprocity with the United States in natural products, and he reviewed the arguments in favor of it.

Mr. Joseph Demers of St. Jean and Iberville followed in French, and the House adjourned at midnight, on motion of Sir Rodolphe Forget.

CHARGES ARE NOT PROVEN

Four of the Forty-Five Men at Indianapolis Are Freed.

Indianapolis, Dec. 3—Argument that those who already have confessed alone caused the illegal transportation of explosives on passenger trains to blow up non-union iron and steel jobs, was followed in the examination at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial yesterday of Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Bridge and Structural Ironworkers' Union.

After the testimony of its 549th witness, the Government closed its case, and on its own motion had four of the forty-five defendants dismissed on the ground that the charges against them were not sustained.

The men dismissed were:

W. K. Benson, East Galloway, N.Y., former president of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

Moulton H. Davis, Westchester, Pa., former member of the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers.

John R. Carroll, Syracuse, N.Y., former official local Ironworkers' Union.

Spurgeon P. Meadows, Indianapolis, Ind., business agent of the local council of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Mr. Ryan testified that neither he nor the executive board members knew of any money having been expended by McNamara for dynamiting purposes. All the letters written by him to business agents in various cities, which the Government charges contain veiled instructions about jobs to be blown up, Ryan said, simply referred to work upon which non-union men were employed and upon which it was desired to put union men.

"Did you ever talk to Ortie E. McManigal about dynamiting, or tell him to change his appearance oftener, so he would not be recognized?" asked Attorney Harding.

"I hardly knew McManigal, and certainly never knew he was employed as a dynamiter for McNamara or anyone else."

He stated he never had visited a vault in the ironworkers' headquarters in Indianapolis where nitro-glycerine and dynamtie had been kept and he never had proposed, as charged, that J. J. McNamara, then secretary of the union, take Hockin's place as head of the "dynamiting crew." He denied he had urged vigilence in the union's strike called seven years ago and which is still on.

Questioned why he enclosed in a letter a newspaper clipping giving an account of an explosion, he explained it was sent to McNamara as a matter of news. He denied he had told Edward Clark, the confessed dynamiter, about blowing up a job in Cincinnati.

COLD SORES AND ULSERS ARE HEALED BY ZAM-BUK

Cold sores, chapped hands, ulcers and winter eczema and common troubles just now, and for all these Zam-Buk will be found the surest and quickest remedy. Sometimes cold sores arise from chilblains on the toes or fingers, and in the former case, where colored socks are worn, there is a danger of blood poisoning from the dye. Zam-Buk being so powerfully antiseptic removes the danger as soon as applied and quickly heals.

Mr. W. J. Halliday, of Ash Grove Ont., says; "I had my little finger frozen, and it cracked at the first joint, causing a bad sore, which discharged freely and would not heal. The pain was very bad, and the whole of my hand became swollen and in bad shape.

"A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, and I soon found that Zam-Buk was altogether different to any preparation I had ever tried. In a very short time it healed the sore."

Miss Lillie May, of Stoney Creek Ont., says; "A few weeks since several nasty, disfiguring cold sores suddenly broke out on my lips which became much swollen. Seeing my condition, a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk and leave all other preparations aside. This I did, and was much pleased, after a few applications of this balm, to see every sore healed."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for eczema, blood-poison varicose sores, piles, scalp sores ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful imitations and substitutes.

Use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25. tablet. Best for baby's tender skin!

According to The Vienna Reichspost Russia has concentrated half a million troops behind the girdle of the Polish fortresses. All the Polish regiments have been sent either to the interior or the Caucasus.

The police raided Wm. Jacobi's restaurant, James street, St. Catharines, at midnight Sunday and caught five men engaged playing poker. The proprietor was assessed $20 and the visitors $10 each yesterday.

Overcome by the fumes of an overdone piece of beefsteak Miss Drysdale of St. Catharines, fell on the range and sustained serious burns, from which she is recovering at the hospital, despite her advanced age.

Resolution Favors Probe.

Washington, Dec. 3.—An investigation of possible violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, by the Grand Trunk Railroad Co. and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co., in connection with the building of projected New England branch of the Grand Trunk, is authorized by resolution introduced in the House yesterday by Representative O'Shaughnessey of Rhode Island. He wants a special House committee to investigate.

CATTLE MARKET.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 30 were 1800 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 800 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1400 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 200 calves.

A feature of the trade since this day week has been the demand from American packing concerns for canning stock, and a number of carloads of cows and bulls were bought at the latter end of the week and this morning for shipment to Chicago, which is the first time in the history of the trade that such stock has been purchased in Montreal and shipped to the United States. Another feature today was the stronger feeling for butchers' cattle, and prices scored a sharp advance, owing to the scarcity of good to choice steers and heifers, which tended to increase the demand for the lower grades considerably, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of carloads of steers weighing on an average of 900 to 1000 lbs. each, at $5.75, and picked lots of the same class sold at $6.25 to $6.50, while choice butchers' cows brought $5 to $5.25, and the best bulls from $4 to $4.25 per 100 lbs.

Owing to the decreased supplies of sheep and lambs, a stronger feeling has developed, and prices for the former have advanced 25c, and the latter 25c to 50c per 100 lbs. Demand was good. Sheep sold at from $4.25 to $4.40, and lambs $6.50 to $6.75 per 100 lbs. There was a good demand for milk-fed calves at prices ranging from $8 to $12, as to quality, but grass-fed stock were slow at from $3 to $6 each.

Hogs were steady. Selected sold at from $9 to $9.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000; active and 15c to 25c higher; prime steers, $9 to $9.40; butchers, $6 to $8.85; bulls, $4.25 to $6.25; stock heifers, $4.25 to $4.65; shipping, $7.50 to $8.75; heifers, $4.75 to $5; cows, $3.25 to $6.50; stockers and feeders, $4.50 to $7; fresh cows and springers steady, at $45 to $75.

Veals—Receipts, 800; active and steady, at $4 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; active; heavy, 5c to 10c lower; light, 10c to 15c higher; heavy and mixed, $7.75 to $7.80; yorkers, and pigs, $7.65 to $7.75; roughs, $6.75 to $6.90; stags, $5.50 to $6.50; dairies, $7.50 to $7.75.

Why Christmas Should Be Spent at Home

It is the fashion nowadays, alas, to cry down Christmas, and it is fast becoming a "can't be bothered with it" sort of day. It is looked upon as a nuisance because Christmastide brings with it a necessary increase of expenditure in the form of tips and presents.

It is becoming more and more the fashion—fashion to be bothered—to take less notice of Christmas and spend it away from home where there will be "plenty of fun."

In the good old days spending Christmas anywhere but at home was never for one moment dreamed of. Preparations were made months beforehand. Geese and turkeys were fattened, plum puddings were made, prospective guests were borne in mind, and the girls of the home fell to thinking of new schemes for decorations. Now, could anything be more delightful than making Christmas plans at least two months beforehand so as to keep the festive season right royally? All this sort of thing kept the family together, for when the winter evenings brought them nearer and nearer to Christmas day it made them see how necessary each one was to the other in the way of helping and suggesting as regards presents for So-and-so, holly for this room and mistletoe for that. Gradually it dawned on every one how dear the home was to all and how still more precious were the parents and children to one another.

When Christmas day did come it was a time of perfect happiness, harmony and satisfaction to every guest and every member of the family. If Christmas is not spent at home what becomes of the family gathering, the delight of decorating, the care and thought the happy mother has expended on the cooking of the dinner and, to crown all, the praise of the Christmas pudding, which by the consent of one and all invariably is "the finest pudding I have ever eaten?" No praise of a Christmas pudding ever comes amiss to a housewife's heart, and if Christmas is not spent at home the dinner will fall flat. There is no family gathering, no noisy, good humored chaff, and there is not that subtle, indefinable something at work which binds the family closer together, heals up old sores, opens up new friendships and wipes away all bitterness, that is so marked a feature in a good, homely Christmas gathering.

There have been more reconciliations, more "divided houses" brought together again, more eyes made dim through a mist of happy tears at some difference or misunderstanding made clear by a Christmas gathering at home than at any other season or place.

Charles Dickens, the novelist of Christmas, who did more for Christmas than any one can ever guess, had had a slight difference with Thackeray. He met him on the steps of his club on Christmas morning, hesitated, then held out his hand, which Thackeray grasped with all the warmth of his great heart. Both men returned to their family gathering at home, feeling better and happier men.

Without a doubt a family gathering at this festive and joyful season knits the bond of love and good fellowship closer than at any other time. Old slights and hurts are forgotten; hard men of business relax and soften at the sight of the children who many a time have drawn out all that is best in them after it has lain dormant for years until they have forgotten they had a tender side to their natures at all. Yes, without a doubt home is the place for Christmas. "Oh, it will be so dull and uninteresting at home!" is often the cry. It will only be dull to those who make it so.

And if there is a vacant chair or two which, alas, can never be refilled dash away the silent tear and be thankful that you are spared to taste the joys of still another homely Christmas. Your example of spending the festive season will most assuredly instill the love of the yearly family gathering into the younger generation, who will emulate your ideas in future years. Posterity will be indebted to you for showing how to keep up a good old Christmas which was suffering from a slump in the twentieth century.

By all means, then, spend Christmas at home, decorate your house, remember the postman, the butcher, the servants and even your wife's or husband's relatives. However poor you are you can be rich in mind, thoughts and cheery words. When you sit down to the table—I don't care whether it groans with turkey and plum pudding laid for twenty or thirty or whether it merely trembles under the weight of much scantier fare and places laid for only three or four—if your heart is in the right place you will say:

"Here's to a happy Christmas! Thank God we are at home!"—Pictorial Magazine.

An After Dirge.

Broke, broke, broke,
Of my hard earned "bones," oh, gee!
But it brings some relief to utter
The thoughts that occur to me.

Oh, well for the beautiful gifts
As they rest in a fair array!
Oh, well for the haunting thought
That intrudes, Does the whole thing pay?

And the giving still goes on
As it has in the years gone by,
But the last of the merry holidays
Brings again the same old cry:

Broke, broke, broke!
Not a single cent, oh, gee!
And the dough that I spent for the Christmas gifts
Will never come back to me.

There's small reason for worry when a husband and wife complain about each other; it's only when they maintain a deadly silence that there's cause for anxiety.

Catarrhal Deafness
Successfully Treated By
Catarrhozone

Deafness is not so common as blindness, yet thousands are more or less afflicted by it, and their comfort seriously interfered with.

Catarrhal deafness manifests itself but slowly, yet it must be acknowledged that the great majority of those who become totally deaf might have averted this unfortunate condition if they had treated the catarrhal inflammation at its beginning.

The only remedy that can be safely employed for all forms of catarrhal deafness is Catarrhozone. You simply charge the air you breathe with this healing, soothing agent, and by forcing it gently through the ears destroy the germ life which keeps up the inflammation, and at the same time by the soothing, healing action it heals the inflamed surfaces of the middle ear.

CATARRHOZONE, to those who are just a little deaf, and are growing increasingly deaf, is an agent capable of affording the utmost satisfaction, and its use is attended without danger, and as the treatment can be carried on at home no person threatened with the affliction of deafness should postpone one moment in beginning its use.

From every part of the Dominion glowing accounts of the beneficial action it exerts upon catarrhal conditions of the middle ear have been sent in, and you will be resorting to the only method of cure, and the simplest method too, if you try Catarrhozone. Dealers everywhere sell it, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Lindsay, Nov. 6th, 1912.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

NEWSPAPERS AND POSTAGE RATES

The Post Office Department at Ottawa is undertaking a revision of the rates of postage charged to newspapers. It is claimed by the Department that an excessive amount of the mail matter carried is that of newspapers, and that many of these are made up of a large amount of pages sent out on one day of the week. The department also affirms that this increase in size is due to the reduction of price to the subscriber, papers being served to subscribers at a distance for a much less price than in the city where published.

In pursuance of its intention to go into the matter thoroughly, the department has sent out a circular letter to publishers, making a series of questions as to facts of publication. These the publisher is asked to answer, though it is pointed out that he may refrain from so doing, if he objects. No doubt a large number of publishers will supply the information desired, especially those who publish papers in the small centres and towns, and who feel that if additional postal rates are to be charged they should fall directly on the papers that call for the mail service.

The Canadian Press Association has taken the matter up and is getting together information to meet the contention of the department, that the mails are unduly swollen with the circulation of a comparatively small number of papers of metropolitan size and importance.

ABOUT IMPERIALISM AND NATIONALITY

Speaking at the St. Andrew's celebration in London, Right Hon A. J. Balfour said that he thought the people of Canada and the other Dominions ought to have their feeling of nationality. He thought Britain should not discourage that kind of patriotism. Canada for the Canadians, Australia for the Australians, and each and all for the Empire, was his hope for a motto.

The good sense of this is apparent on its surface. There was a time when Joe Chamberlain launched his imperial preference proposals when it was proposed that there should be an Imperial Zollvereign such as was instituted when the integration of the German Empire started. The difference would be, of course, that in the British Zollverein there would be a number of free self-governing Dominions, whereas in the case of Germany, the lesser states were practically put on the rack by Prussia, and tortured into line. But the obstacle to the idea of Canada or any other self-govern Dominion becoming part of such customs union, was that each of these insisted upon retaining a prospective tariff. Free trade with in the Empire was impossible, because the Dominions did not want free trade. They desired to build up themselves, their manufactures, their population. Therefore the proposal resolved itself into the idea of extending a colonial preference, wherein each colony would give the motherland a preference, and the motherland should impose a high duty upon foreign farm products such as the Dominions exported. This proposal has made some headway though it is still surrounded by practical difficulties. But in the feeling of nationality to which Mr. Balfour refers lay the obstacle to the primary suggestion of a Zollverein. With the exception of a felt that also to adopt free trade would be to sink themselves into purely agricultural producers. They wanted to have a well rounded development, to build themselves up. Their sense of distinctiveness, of nationality was keen. And it is a good thing for the British Empire that this is so. The Empire will be greater and stronger if composed of an alliance of big, strong nations under the British flag than if the growth of the oversea Dominions were held back to make Britain prosperous. Britain needs more markets, but she deliberately strips herself of the power to force better terms of entrance to foreign markets, because of her refusal to fight her competitors with their own weapons. The successful growth of the Dominions is giving her potentially powerful allies, however, and though the difficult problem of imperial federation has by no mean been settled, it is certain that the feeling of nationality will be one of the strongest influences affecting it.

LIBERALS AND CEMENT

The attack being made by the Liberals in the House of Commons upon the Government for its action in cutting the duty on American cement in two in the summer, when building in the West was held up by the shortage of cement has a peculiar flavor. The Liberals pose as being strong for tariff reduction, in fact for free trade if possible. They argued for reciprocity on the ground that it was a halfway measure toward free trade It was not to hurt the manufacturer, but it was to cut the cost of living. But in the reciprocity agreement cement was very tenderly dealt with. The reduction in it was only about 11c. per barrel, whereas the duty against it is now about 50 per cent. In the Liberal regime the duty on cement was increased by about 30 per cent., and Canadian production largely increased. Even if the cut of 11 cents a barrel had gone into effect through the passage of reciprocity, the duty would still have been 6 cents higher than it was when the Conservatives left office in 1896. So where is there a Liberal case for complaint against the action of the Government in giving relief to the Western consumer?

The situation puts the Liberals in the position of being the defenders of the cement trust the allies of the octopus. If any more evidence be required to show why the cement merger principals are treated with great consideration by the Liberal party, then a list of the officials ought to furnish it. Who are they? Senator Edwards president; Senator Mackay, director; Senator Cox, director; C. Ballantyne director—all of whom are under obligation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier either for appointment to the Senate or have a very close affiliation with the Liberals in other ways. Again A. G. MacKay was president of an Owen Sound company. He was formerly a member of the Ross Government, and leader of the Opposition in Ontario now a supporter of reciprocity in Alberta. W. P. Telford, a Liberal M. P., has large cement interests. Who said Big Interests? The fact is and the attitude of the Toronto Globe when tariff matters affecting the moneyed interests come close home, is evidence that the Liberals were bound up so tightly by their corporation and big interest affiliations that they could scarcely move either hand or foot in a really effective way. What they could do, and did, however, was to attempt to open the Canadian markets to the early American farm products, and deprive Canadian farmers of their right to some consideration.

THE GLOBE'S FAILURE

The readers of the Toronto Globe must get pretty well tired of the "economic" bosh it so constantly preaches. The Globe never lets a day go by but what it has a few stones to throw at "modern protectionist delusions." There isn't the slightest objection to the discussion of protectionism or free trade, day or night, but there is such a thing as harping on some theme until it has assumed a form of monomania.

The old school of political economists are being knocked out of the ring. Sixty years ago discussion of these problems was rife. Cobden, Bright, John Stuart Mill and others started the movement to wipe out all protective barriers, and by and by obtained a very wide following. But they were at fault, in that they argued from the standpoint of reason alone. They laid down their laws about demand and supply competition and other conditions of industrial life, without taking into account the variations caused by such matters as the affections, uncontrollable, extrinsic circumstances, and personal indisposition. John Ruskin was one of the first to upset the political economists' apple cart and though his doctrine was regarded at first [illegible] nothing less few special articles. Britain now has a free trade system. The Dominions than holy horror, it has sunk deeply into thoughtful minds, until it and many other influences have tended to upset the reputation of these eternal verities we hear so much about.

The doctrinaire gets little sympathy these days. The Globe certainly cannot feel at all proud of itself when it calculates the sum and substance of all its years of effort to educate the Canadian people on free trade maxims and economic laws. What progress has it made? It has some weight possibly when it begins to point out that under this tariff schedule or that tariff schedule there is a certain loss, or gain, or a certain consequence. It is then applying its theories to some practicable and intelligible purpose. But so often when it should get to grips with questions like these upon which millions of dollars and the welfare of thousands of Canadians depend, it merely passes by on the other side.

TUBERCULOSIS SERUM

Dispatches from Berlin tell of the discovery of a new serum for tuberculosis, one which will cure all but the most advanced cases in three or four months. The physician who is credited with the discovery is Dr. Frederick Franz Friedman, and his discoveries and details of treatment have aroused intense interest. They have been corroborated by newspaper correspondents in such a direct manner as to lead to the belief that at last we have obtained a specific for the white plague. Such reports, however, must be taken with some caution, as every now and then tuberculosis and cancer cures are announced, and then fade into insignificance. The search for a serum that will cure tuberculosis has been going on ever since Koch first isolated the tubercle bacillus. He himself announced the discovery of a serum which would cure the disease and hundreds of patients took the treatment, many of them dying. It was later found that his "tuberculin" was of no use as a human reagent. It is now employed as a valuable testing medium for cattle. Behring, the successor of Pasteur at the Paris Institute, who discovered the antitoxin for diphtheria, also announced the discovery of a serum for tuberculosis. But it has never gained public recognition if it is true. And many others, such as Trudea, Metchnikoff, De Scheinich, Margliano, have sought and sought, and thought they have found, only to be disappointed. The Friedman discovery so far as the details go, seems to be very promising but it is much too early to place much reliance upon reports.

The loss of life caused by tuberculosis amounts to nearly a million lives every year. Germany loses 130,000 the United States 150,000. Great Britain 58,000, Austria 80,000 Italy 50,000. France 110,000, and other nations in like proportion. What a serum that would cure cases by direct application would do for humanity can scarcely be computed either in material benefit or dollars and cents. Let us hope that Friedman is the maker of the new epoch in medicine that a real tuberculosis serum means.

Novel Decoration For the Holiday Dinner Table

The Jack Horner pie seen in the cut may serve as an inspiration for a Christmas centerpiece of home manufacture.

A pasteboard box will do admirably for the chimney, which forms the structure of the pie. The simulated chimney is then covered with red crape paper, which in turn is treated to a decoration of artificial holly.

The gabled roof of the house is outlined with fringed tissue paper, symbolic of snow drifts.

A figure of Santa Claus peeps out from the chimney top, and in his hands he holds red ribbons, which inside the "pie" are attached to favors.

LABOR CONDITIONS

For Peterboro as Reported in Labor Gazette

The October report by the local correspondent to the Labor Gazette is as follows.

Labour conditions during October remained about the same as last month. The building trades were actively engaged and all outdoor workers were well employed. Manufacturers also report trade good with all factories running full time and employing a full complement of hands. There is a scarcity of female help, also of unskilled labourers. The farmers are complaining of the scarcity of farm labourers. The Campbell Flour Mills Company are building a concrete elevator, a chop elevator, and a storehouse; an addition is being made to the customs house at a cost of $10,000 or more, which will provide additional floor space of 120 feet. The Bonner Worth Company, engaged in the manufacture of knitted and spun goods, have doubled the boiler capacity at their factory and will install new machinery; they have orders to keep them busy for at least a year. A co-operative Society is being formed here with a proposed capital of $10,000 in five dollar shares. The general principle of the society is to combat the high cost of living. The De Laval Supply Company have commenced building operations. They are erecting a factory building 400x112 feet for the manufacture of dairy supplies, etc., etc. The coal situation in Peterborough is getting serious, the price for October is $8.50 for nut coal, and most of the dealers have none but expect to get some in as soon as navigation closes. The farmers were busy harvesting under difficulties owing to the inclement weather. It seems possible that the potato situation may not turn out as discouraging as was reported. Rot has made its appearance in some sections, as a result of the wet weather, but this is mostly confined to low ground and to the earlier varieties.

DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE RITUAL

Canon Davidson's Suggestion was Acted Upon

Some time ago, Canon Davidson observed that there was a lack of suitable ritual for the opening and closing meetings of the Daughters of the Empire. He wrote to the Central Council suggesting the importance of remedying this need and offering certain suggestions. After correspondence, he was invited to draw up a suggestive order, which he did and finally the ritual, as drawn up by him, was accepted and sent to every chapter in Canada, including the 57th Chapter, and is now in general use.

NEARLY ONE HUNDRED NEW DWELLINGS IN PETERBORO

Ninety-one Permits for the Year Represent $137,675 —Very Few Cost Less Than $1,000

The building permits for this year tell a very interesting story. The building operations of Peterborough are always remarked upon by visitors, and they go away with the impression that the Electric City is is going ahead in leaps and bounds. The story told is that no less than 91 permits have been taken out for dwellings and these represent a total of $137,675. Only a very few were erected at a cost less than $1,000. Some of the larger building operations are the store house of the Canadian General Electric Company, $65,000; two new schools, $84,000; De Laval Factory, $65,000; House of Providence, $40,000.

DOCTOR GRENFELL AND HIS WORK

A manly man; he sees the necessity for the work being done, and while the trials, difficulties and dangers inseparable from it are many and great; the response to the vision is the giving of himself wholly and unreservedly to it. A thoroughly qualified man for the work, he is an illustration of sanctified intelligence consecrated to the highest possible service—the healing of the bodies and souls of men. A self-sacrificing man. The same kind of work might be done in any of the large centres of population in the congenial atmosphere of wealth, refinement and culture. Dr. Grenfell is not only an honor to the medical profession, but also an inspiration to the clergy. The work he is doing was not attempted until he took it up. The man, his work and its importance will not appeal to us in vain.—F. J. Mansell.

Such amendments will include defining the investment powers of the society; providing an investment board for the investment of the funds of the society; defining the rights of the members of the society in the accumulated funds of the society and empowering the society to provide for any deficiency therein and to create a fraternal fund and department for the relief of its members and dependents.

SPECTACULAR RESCUES AT FIRE

Five Persons Were Taken From Building by Firemen

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—In a spectacular fire at the Art Metropole, Yonge street, near Eatons, about 1.30 this afternoon five people were taken from the burning third and fourth floors down the firemen's ladders.

Driven out by the flames from celluloid goods stored on the third floor, two male employes clung to the window sill until ladders could be put up for them. The report that one male employe was trapped in the burning building caused great excitement but proved incorrect.

Stone Menaces.

The decay of building stones, according to more than one authority, is not due to wind action or other surface influence, but to internal disintegration resembling wood rot, and this is ascribed by some to a low organism like the fungi and the molds that cause the decay of vegetable substances.

A cure has been found for the stone disease, or at least a form of treatment that diminishes its ravages. The stones are treated with germicides, the best of which appears to be a mixture of sulphate of copper solution with bichloride of mercury and creosote.

$5 FINE IMPOSED AT POLICE COURT

Harry Watters to Spend Christmas at Castle Nesbitt

Two charges were preferred against Percy Brault in police court this morning, the first of being drunk and disorderly on Sunday last and the second, of assaulting William Deersley the night watchman at the Grand Hotel. To the first charge he pleaded guilty but he failed to remember the assault.

Deersley swore that Brault struck him in the face on the stairs of the Grand Hotel after he had ordered him down stairs.

His worship imposed $5 fines in each case, which he ordered paid forthwith.

"I won't give any indulgence in a case of a man who gets drunk on Sunday" was Magistrate Dumble's warning.

Watters is unable to hold a job save at the gaol.

He Made His Mark, but Wrote A Fine Hand

By PAUL WOODRUFF

While I was serving in the Army of the Potomac in Virginia as captain of a company, —th Pennsylvania volunteer infantry a countryman came into camp and told a pitiful story. He said that he was a Union man and during the secession disputes had nailed a little cotton American flag up over his house and kept it there, even after the state of Virginia had seceded. Just before our occupation of the region a mob had burned the house—the flag fluttering amid the flames—and murdered his wife and children. He happened to be away at the time, and when he returned he found his family dead and his home a heap of charred ruins. He asked to be permitted to enlist, and I took him into my company. He said he could neither read nor write and made his mark instead of signing his name, which was [illegible] Saunders.

I put Private Saunders in charge of a drill sergeant, with orders to teach him the manual of arms. A few hours later the sergeant came to me and said that the man was so stupid that it was well nigh impossible to teach him anything and suggested that it might be better to make a mule driver of him. I told him that considering the rapidity with which our men were being killed off we needed food for powder more than men to be kicked to death and told him to keep at the job till he made Saunders fit to be shot.

The next I heard of Saunders he was sent from general headquarters under care of an orderly to me with the information that he had asked the general when he proposed to move against the enemy. He was anxious to know since he was thirsting for revenge. I hardly knew what to do with the man. He seemed too ingenuous, too stupid to punish, so I explained to him that not even the colonel would dare ask the general such a question as he had asked. He seemed much surprised, and said that if we were not going right on he thought he would just go ahead alone, for he couldn't stand it to be waiting in camp while the murderers of his wife and children were unpunished.

I could scarcely repress a smile as I explained to him that he had enlisted for three years and would not be permitted to fight on his own hook. Whereupon he said he reckoned he would go without permission. I informed him that if he did so and we could get our hands on him he would be shot for a deserter. This seemed to astonish him still more.

I kept my eyes on him and was astonished at the rapidity with which he improved. In a week when seeing him marching out on picket duty I scarcely recognized him for the stupid poor white Virginian who had come into our camp with woeful tale.

The next thing that surprised me was hearing that Saunders had been detailed by the adjutant for duty at the headquarters of the general in chief. I wondered what he could be wanted for there, but soldiers are not supposed to ask questions of their superiors and I refrained. Besides at that time our regiment was the top of the left wing of the army and nowhere near the general in chief's headquarters.

Not long after this the regimental quartermaster happened to mention having just come from army headquarters and I asked him if he had seen anything there of a red headed recruit from "ours" named Saunders. He said that he had been in the assistant adjutant general's office and had seen a red headed man writing at a pine desk whose face seemed familiar to him. I told him that it couldn't be Saunders, for the man couldn't write his own name.

I thought no more of the matter. We moved forward soon after this and with constant fighting our army passed through many changes. Having been sent to the headquarters of the army by the colonel with a message, I caught sight of Saunders. The general and his staff were in the field and moving, so that no clerical work was being done. Saunders pretended not to see me and moved away rapidly. I pointed him out to an officer of the staff as he was passing out of sight who told me that he was a clerk in the adjutant general's department and had been detailed for that duty because he wrote a splendid hand.

It was so [illegible] that a fool who couldn't sign his name writing a fine hand that it took some time for the situation to get through my own stupid brain. By the time it had effected a lodgment there Saunders had disappeared. I hurriedly told the officer who told me about Saunders being a clerk the story of the latter's enlistment, and added that I believed the fellow was a spy. We both went to the general with my suspicions and an orderly was at once sent out for the clerk.

It was too late. Saunders was not found. He was accounted for as having deserted. A year later I was taken prisoner and met him at the headquarters of a prominent confederate general. He was an officer on the staff. He was very kind to me and took great pleasure in telling me how he had got himself detailed as a clerk in the assistant adjutant general's office, where he had access to valuable information he had transmitted to his own commander. On meeting me at our army headquarters he knew his game was up and fled.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

And the Necessity For Cultivating the Art of Enunciation.

Speaking is one of those arts which people seem to think are unnecessary to study and learn, and the probability is that most speakers of the kind mentioned are blissfully unaware of their inaudibility. Doubtless their voice resounds comfortably in the empty spaces of their own chest and head, and this prevents them from knowing that it does not penetrate to the auditory apparatus of other people.

To be a lecturer it is not only necessary to know your subject, but the art of enunciation and audible delivery needs to be learned also. And the sound of one's voice in one's own ears is a most misleading guide. Such people ought to be trained by being made to read or speak from one end of a large room to somebody teaching them at the other end, when they would soon find out that tones which will pass muster in a conversation are useless in a public speech.

In conversation we carelessly slur half our syllables, leaving our interlocutor to guess them from the context, but this will not do in a public speech, where people are too far off to catch the signs. Again, a word pronounced in the ordinary English way—of throwing a strong accent on a single syllable and slurring the other syllables—becomes reduced to a mere monosyllable when said in that manner in a large room.—Theosophical Path.

The People of Great Britain.

Ethnologically Great Britain is a mixture of many races, resulting from a succession of invasions. When the Romans invaded Britain the inhabitants were Celtic, mixed with an earlier Euskarian non-Aryan element. They continued to be mainly so until the fifth and sixth centuries, when the level parts of the country were overrun by German tribes. Then followed invasions by the Danes and other Scandinavian tribes and lastly the Norman conquest. The inhabitants of England and the lowlands of Scotland, therefore, sprang from an amalgamation of the original Celtic with German and Scandinavian blood. Wales and the highlands of Scotland are still inhabited by descendants of the ancient Celtic tribes. The people of Ireland also are of Celtic origin, although there is an admixture of many other races.

Rudimentary Hind Limbs.

Snakes are not the only animals which exhibit the possession of rudimentary hind limbs. In the whale tribe there is no evidence externally of hind limbs. The fore limbs in them are converted into the "flippers," or swimming paddles. Yet when the skeleton is examined traces of a haunch and attached rudimentary thigh bone are found. There is developed in certain kinds of whales a bony piece representing the haunch. The thigh bone is distinct, but there is a mere rudiment attached to it, representing the shin bone or tibia of other animals.

Very few men will venture to tell you what to do for a sick horse, but anybody will tell you what to do for yourself.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cause of Eczema Explained

After years of debate, medical authorities are now agreed that eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood, but are caused by myriads of microscopic animals gnawing the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased.

Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate properly. And we can say with confidence that we have the true remedy for Eczema in our store—the D. D. D. Prescription.

The instant you wash with this soothing liquid you will find the itch relieved. We positively assure you of this. Will you try a bottle on our recommendation? Besides the regular dollar bottle, we can now offer you, through an arrangement with the D. D. D. Laboratories, a special large trial bottle at only 25c. We are not sure how long this offer will be open, but it is open to-day, and by taking it up you can get instant relief from that awful itch and an early cure.

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

JOE PATCHEN II. WILL BE FASTEST OF PACERS IN 1913

Just how fast Joe Patchen II., winner of the Chamber of Commerce and all the rest of the stakes, excepting that at Fort Erie, could pace when stretched out was a mooted question during the season. Those who knew a lot about the son of Joe Patchen and Bessie Dunehill claimed that he could step in two minutes if prepared for such a trial and others thought that if any horse could hang unto him that 2:12 would beat him.

The last apperance of the great pacer was at Los Angeles, after the Phoenix meeting, and Joe Patchen II, was driven against even time which is taken to mean two minutes. The day was not suitable and the track was not at its best, but he paced an evenly rated mile in 2:00 3-4.

This is evidence of two-minute speed, and as the horse has gone into winter quarters sound and fresh, it is likely that he will be the fastest of the pacers in 1913, and probably will bowl over a few records. If he beats two minutes as he will if no accidents occur, his sire will have the rare distinction of producing two to do the trick, the other being the wonderful Dan Patch.

In some circles, Joe Patchen's mile at Los Angeles is mentioned as a record, but as the attempt was against two minutes and he failed, the horse still has a record of 2:03 1-4, which makes him eligible to the 2:04 class next year. He probably will race in this, where possible, and in the free-for-all at other towns.

CANADIAN LEAGUE PRESIDENT MAY ALSO ACT AS SECRETARY

Toronto, Dec. 3—A week from tomorrow, the annual meeting of the Canadian League will be held at the King Edward Hotel in this city.

It has been proposed that the offices of President, Secretary and Treasurer be combined. The present arrangement is an unwieldy and unsatisfactory ones. President Jas. P. Fitzgerald, who last season conducted the affairs of his office with the utmost satisfaction to all concerned, will doubtless be asked to accept the combined executive offices for 1913. There will be no changes in the composition of the Canadian League. Considering the most unfavorable weather of 1912 the league had a very satisfactory season and all of the clubs are quite hopeful of another good season next year.

PETERBORO BOY WITH CHAMPS

Ross Craig, a graduate of Peterborough rugby teams, has been a big factor in the success of the Hamilton Alerts this season. The Hamilton Spectator says of his work in the Dominion final—

It was in the Argo-Alert game of a year ago that Ross Craig established his reputation as a line plunger, then being acclaimed the best in the business. Saturday, he again settled all doubts about this point and the manner in which he hit the line and ripped holes in the combination, which was supposed to be able to stop any bucking machine in the game, was a delight to watch. Craig found a week spot early in the afternoon and kept pounding away relentlessly, gaining yards repeatedly. The only try of the game was a tribute to his bull like rushes while his example was emulated by Johnston Bleakley, who ripped off some telling bucks just to gain a little fame for himself. Bleakley is a youngster as far as rugby is concerned, but he has been improving every time out, and Saturday was his day to "come." As often as Craig would hit the line, Bleakley would follow with a similar smash the pair being given every support by Jack Grey, Norm Clark and Flannery, in fact, it was a noticeable point that an Alert wing never hit the line unsupported, while the Argo wings invariably went at it single-handed. On but two occasions did the oarsmen gain their yards by bucking, while Craig alone must have torn through for the coveted distance a dozen times.

Would Play With Ottawa in the Intercollegiate

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—It was announced that Frank Heffernan, the crack defence man of last year's Ottawa College team, would be back at school after the first of the year and play with the students in the Interprovincial. Followers of amateur hockey will be glad to hear of this piece of news, as it means the garnet and grey will place a strong team on the ice. McCart and Tommy Kent are rated a pair who will figure prominently in the Interprovincial.

HOCKEY PLAYERS ARE IN TRAINING

Are Asked to Attend Classes Sharp on Time

Sixteen hockey players donned gym attire and went through the paces at the Lyceum last night under the direction of Herb. Clayton. The boys were given a preliminary training, that looked good to the two dozen or more fans. They were on the floor for 55 minutes and afterwards received the benefits of the shower baths.

The next class is on Wednesday night, and the boys are asked to be on hand sharp. This is a very important item to be considered. There is plenty of space and no reason whatever for the absence of any player, who hopes to land a job this winter.

LINDSAY HAS HOPES

Up in Lindsay, the fans are clamoring for an Intermediate team, and it may be that Scugogville will be round when the first bell rings.

A meeting of the Executive is called for Thursday night, at President Kay's store. Secretary Glover will be in Toronto on Friday, when the districts will be formed.

GIRLS WON AT BASKETBALL

The girls of the Collegiate were in Lindsay on Saturday, playing a game of basketball with the girls of Lindsay Collegiate. The score of 13-12 was in favor of the local girls.

The game was a close and interesting one from beginning to end, the score at the finish being 13-12 in the Peterborough girls' favor. The Lindsay girls expect to visit Peterborough for a return game shortly after Christmas.

MOUNTED POLICE TO GET INCREASE

Premier Borden is Looking After Their Interest.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—Premier Borden is again moving to increase the wages of the officers and men of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Since assuming office Mr. Borden has given much attention to the condition and general welfare of the force, and last session he amended the act and increased the pay of the men all around. Now he intends taking another step in the same direction and he gave notice yesterday of his intention to again amend the act to provide for another goodly increase for the officers and men of the force.

DEMURRAGE INCREASED.

Railway Board Permits Extra Charge To Relieve Car Shortage.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The Dominion Railway Commission yesterday issued an order granting the application of the C.P.R., G.T.R., C.N.R. and Michigan Central railroads to increase their demurrage charges on freight cars from $1 per day to $2 and $3. The increased rates, however, will be allowed only from Dec. 15 of this year to March 31 of next year. The railways asked for $2, $3 and $4 for the first, second and third day, respectively, after the free time allowed, but the four-dollar charge was not sanctioned by the board. Henceforth $2 will be assessed by the railways for the first 24 hours after free time, and $3 for each succeeding day. The order, however, is not to apply to cars held in transit at stop-over points under published tariffs, which have been filed with the board. A number of reasons are given, and some very important statements are made about the question of car shortage, in the judgment preceding the order, which is in part as follows:

"It cannot be denied that a car shortage equal to, if not greater than, that of last year is imminent, and, unless some steps are taken to secure an adequate supply of cars, traffic will be seriously handicapped during the approaching winter and spring, until the opening of navigation.

"The practice of consignees holding cars and using them for storage or warehouse purposes, undoubtedly exists. In many cases, it is cheaper for consignees to pay a day demurrage and use the car as a warehouse, than to unload the car promptly and store his goods in some other place. Many merchants and traders, whose businesses has materially increased within the last few years have not sufficient shed capacity to take care of their goods."

A QUEEN'S GIFT.

Ristori's Request When Told "Anything You Ask Me Is Granted."

Mme. Ristori, the celebrated Italian actress of her day, was born of a noble family, but her illustrious career added to the glory of her ancestors.

I frequently went to her receptions, and many were the pleasant chats we had over a cup of tea.

It was on one of these occasions that she told me the interesting story of how when she was once acting in Madrid her success was so colossal that Queen Isabella, who was then on the Spanish throne, sent for her, desiring to speak to her in the royal box. The queen expressed her pleasure in the enthusiasm and then said to Mme. Ristori:

"Anything you ask me is granted."

Without an instant's hesitation Mme. Ristori replied to the queen:

"Madame, if you really wish to give me whatever I ask I will beg you to reprieve the poor man who, as I read this morning, has been sentenced to death and is to be garroted tomorrow."

The queen hesitated a few seconds before she granted this wish. But the reprieve was signed, and the condemned man was, to his great astonishment, released on the eve of his execution, little dreaming that he owed his life to the talented actress. It was typical of Mme. Ristori's noble, generous nature to ask the queen to grant her this request rather than to ask for some jewel or other tangible souvenir to hand down to her descendants.—Frederick Townsend Martin in Ainslee's Magazine.

A woman may get to understand a lot of important things by not having a husband to explain them to her.

The Power of Luck

By BENJAMIN BERKHALTER

"Can you direct me to the works of the Loon Gulch Gold Mining company?" I asked of a ragged man, at the same time drawing rein to receive his reply.

"Right around the speer of the mountain; take the right hand road after crossin' the creek. You can't miss it. It's the only lot o' buildin's there is around there. Fine property, sir."

"So I have been told. I have also heard that it was built up on a striking piece of luck."

"You bet; the goldarnedest luck that ever happened to a prospector."

"What was it?"

"Why Hawley, he come out yere a matter of fifteen year ago, fur to see if he couldn't make a fortun' by a short road. I been tryin' to do that myself ever since I was twenty-five year old, and just look at me—my clothes in tatters and nothin' in my stomick. Where one man strikes payin' dirt thousands spend their lives workin' fur nothin'. Ten year ago if you'd 'a' seen Hawley you'd 'a' seen a man jist about like me. He was wanderin' about yere with a pick and shovel on his shoulder, ragged, nothin' in his stomick and nothin' in his pocket.

"I'm wrong there; he had ten pounds o' blastin' powder, and that was all the property he had in the world except his pick and shovel. He had a pair o' shoes on his feet, but there wan't no soles on 'em. I'm wrong ag'in about his property. He had one thing more, and that was a magnifyin' glass he used to examine quartz with to see if there was any gold in it.

"One day he was walkin' around over there where he could see up the gulch. He'd been to Antelope, where the post-office was then, and had got a letter from his wife in the east sayin' she'd been turned out o' the house she'd been livin' in, the children was sick for want o' proper food and the bottom had dropped out o' everything. Hawley was clean discouraged. He thought he'd find a place so hidden that he'd never be found and would kill himself. He hadn't nothin' to kill himself with except the blastin' powder, and he hadn't the good luck to have any matches with him or any other means o' settin' it off.

"He walked up the gulch a ways, or rather staggered up it, for he was weak from want o' food and discouragement. He left the road by a path and, comin' to the end of the path, walked on nowhere. Comin' to a lonely place among some trees and bushes, he sat down and tried to think of a way to set off his blastin' powder. Purty soon he struck an idea. He hung his magnifyin' glass on a twig and put the powder on the ground so that the focus of the sun's rays would strike it.

"But he didn't want to know jist when he was agoin' to be blown to atoms, so he moved the powder a few inches, keepin' it in the course the focused sun spot would take, so's it would pass over the powder after awhile. This would leastways give him time to say his pra'rs.

"When he'd got it fixed so's the sun spot was sure to strike it he lay down a few yards away with his back to the powder and waited. It warn't a cheerful condition, was it?"

"I should think not," I replied.

"I dunno how long Hawley waited. I never hearn. But bimeby there was a big explosion. Hawley didn't know for awhile whether he had been killed or not, he was so stunned. But he wasn't even hurted. The force o' the explosion was all upwards.

"I dunno if he was disappointed or not. I never heered that nuther. But he rolled over and looked into a hole in the ground made by the explosion. It was jest like a prospector to look to see what was in the hole instead o' thinkin' where he might 'a' been if his tryin' to kill hisself hadn't failed. Then he looked for his magnifyin' glass. He remembered hearin' somepin drop jist after the explosion and, gittin' up, went where he'd heered the sound. The glass was layin' near by on the ground. He tuk it up and, gittin' down on his stomick, looked through it into the hole. Then he picked up a piece o' quartz and examined that. Then he got up and danced all around by hisself like a crazy man.

"Diggin' out some pieces o' quartz from the hole, he tuk 'em to Antelope, where there was an assayer, and had 'em assayed. They showed gold enough to make ten millionaires, pervidin' the stuff was a reg'lar vein. Then he stole away to his hole by hisself and dug till he was satisfied that it was a vein, then entered his claim and went to men who had money and formed a company, Hawley gittin' three-quarters o' the stock.

"That's the origin o' the Loon Gulch mine, one o' the biggest in the world."

I paid the man liberally for his story and, much impressed with the force of luck in our worldly affairs, drove on to the mine. I found Mr. Hawley in the office, and if ever there was a prosperous looking man it was the president of the Loon Gulch Gold Mining company. I dined with him in his handsome dwelling, near by the mine, and found his wife and children equally comfortable and happy.

Before leaving him I gave him an outline of the story I had listened to and asked him if it was true. He admitted that it was.

I spent several pleasant days with him and his family, and when I left them it was with reluctance. Their luck was well deserved.

Prof. Hart Takes a Trip.

Galt, Dec. 3.—Prof. Hart of the O. A. C. left Sunday night under official leave of absence for the western states to visit agricultural colleges and experimental farms in search of new ideas in the line of modern progressive scientific farming. Mr. Hart is the originator of the rural school fair in Ontario. In this connection he will pay a visit to Miss Fields, superintendent of rural schools, Clariand, Iowa, which state leads in these institutions. In farmers' institutes, women's institutes, county boards of agriculture, farmers' clubs and rural school fair work the County of Waterloo stands first in the province.

Several Ships Suffer.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 3.—The storm which swept the southern part of the province yesterday and last night has, it is feared, done damage to shipping along the coast. Wind last evening blew 60 miles an hour and seas in the Bay of Fundy were running mountain high. Many large coasting vessels were forced to return to harbor. The schooner Ellen M. Golden returned with her rudder braces broken and seams started; the schooner George W. Anderson lost several sails, and the three-masted schooner E. E. Potter returned with cargo shifted. Ocean liners, including the steamers Toko Maru, and the Donaldson liner Saturnia from Glasgow have been delayed by the gale. Rain fell heavily last night.

Railway Merger Dissolved.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The great Harriman merger, created when the Union Pacific Railroad Co. bought 46 per cent. of the stock of the Southern Pacific Railway system, was split asunder yesterday by the Supreme Court of the U. S. as a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Then with the end of the merger before it, the court sent forth its portentous declaration that "While the law may not be able to enforce competition, it can reach combinations which render competition impracticable."

Shocked Into Speech.

At Kamloops, B.C., Andrew Forsyth, after having been "stone" deaf and totally dumb for a period exceeding fourteen years, suddenly recovered both senses as the result of a shock. The good fortune of Forsyth was practically synonymous with the misadventure which cost John Edmunds his life.

Edmunds had been helping himself to a ride on a train as it ran slowly through the city and, losing his footings, fell to death under the wheels. Forsyth was one of those who ran forward to gaze at the body and in his horror he screamed.

He heard his own shout and also the talk of others and forthwith joined in the conversation, although his lips had framed no word for almost fifteen years.

ALL FOR THE POOR KIDDIES

Join the Review's St. Nicholas Girl Club Now

A goodly number of ladies have sent in their names of membership in the Review's St. Nicholas' Club. All you have to do to become a member is promise to give some little boy or girl a happy Christmas. You are going to be allowed to do it in your own way. All that you have to do is to send your name and address to The St. Nicholas' Girl and you will receive the name of a little boy or girl of whatever age you specify.

Then it is up to you to go and see that little one and find out just what will make it most happy. It may be a very little thing, indeed, but it will be JUST what the kiddie wants. If you feel that you can care for more than one let the St. Nicholas Girl know.

There is no limit to what you may do if you desire. Neither is there any necessity to spend very much money.

Money and gifts are not the things that rank first in bringing happiness to others. The human touch and love are what count most. And the movement brings the giver in direct touch with the receiver. You see to whom you are giving and you get that glow of happiness that comes from the witnessing of joy that you have created in others.

There will be no excuse for a lonesome Christmas this year. It will be your own fault if, after Christmas, you have to say that you found no one to make happy and no one to love you. If there is anything that brings a greater glow of satisfaction than having brought happiness to a little child. The St. Nicholas Girl has not yet found it.

Send your name in now on a post card, or telephone 189.

ACT EARLY FOR CHRISTMAS MAILS

Advice to Those Who Will Use British Mails

MANY MONEY ORDERS

Do Your Christmas Mailing Early and Avoid the Rush

Parties who propose mailing parcels to the United Kingdom so as to be sure of them reaching their destination before Christmas should mail them not later than December 12 at 4.30 p.m. There will also be a parcel post closing at Peterborough on December 5 at 4.30 p.m. All parcels ready by that time had better be mailed by that date.

As to letters, the latest date for mailing so as to secure delivery before Christmas is December 15 before 4.30 p.m.

The above hours for mailing are at the general postoffice. If made in letter boxes should be earlier.

All mail and parcels should, of course be given to the post office as soon as possible. It is much the safer plan.

Already the signs of the coming Christmas rush are in evidence. The night staff at the post office has been increased by two and additional help will be given the day staff

ART EXHIBIT AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

Some Clever Work by Pupils of Miss McCarthy

A charming and tastefully arranged display of artistic endeavor, comprised of oil paintings, hand painted china and sepia work, may be seen in the Women's Art room at the Public library. The exhibit is presided over by Miss M. McCarthy, the talented young local artist whose clever accomplishments in her chosen profession are well-known to lovers of art in Peterborough. At the exhibit several of Miss McCarthy's own paintings may be admired, all of them denoting an accurate understanding of her work and true artistic perception. Besides her own efforts the work of several of her cleverest pupils is also arranged to the best advantage.

The most striking picture that has been painted by Miss McCarthy this year is a beautiful painting of little Marcella McNulty, the young daughter of Dr. A. P. McNulty, which has excited justifiable admiration by all who have studied it.

She has also produced an excellent likeness of her art tutor, Mr. J. W. L. Forster, of Toronto.

A striking water color from her brush, entitled, "The Country Doctor," is rightly considered by Miss McCarthy and all who have examined it to be her most worthy effort in its class. Several other landscapes and marine drawings by her pupils are in a high and praiseworthy class

Miss Florence Howden has some clever work in the exhibit, the coloring being deep, rich and very effective.

Miss Marie Canfield, one of Miss McCarthy's pupils, has on exhibition some splendid specimens, which may be examined.

Two large cabinets, filled with beutiful hand-painted china, enhance the attractiveness of the exhibit. The latter are adorned with varied floral designs and compare favorably with any china ever displayed in Peterborough.

Mrs John Comstock is responsible for several pieces of the latter, including two elaborately painted vases.

Miss McCarthy invites any interested lover of art to call and examine the display, which may be seen to-day and to-morrow.

AMENDMENT DEFEATED IN THE FIRST DIVISION

Borden Ministry Has Majority of [illegible] — Lemieux is Reprimanded by Speaker,

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—The first division of the session upon the amendment moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the address and directed at the alleged interference of Ministers of the Crown in the recent bye-elections of Macdonald and Richelieu, resulted in a Government majority of 48. The concluding day of the debate was more lively than edifying. Former Postmaster-General Lemieux was evidently looking for trouble, and finally drew out Mr. Rainville of Chambly-Vercheres, who demanded a retraction of the charge that he had said that Canada owed nothing to England. There was a turbulent scene, which Deputy Speaker Blondin was not quite able to cope with, until Postmaster-General Pelletier came to his assistance and restored the House to order. Even after Mr. Lemieux was admonished by the Speaker, he continued to contribute to the turmoil by remarks across the chamber.

The Mondou amendment was defeated in the House at an early hour yesterday morning by a vote of 184 to 4. Mr. Lamarche of Nicolet spoke for the amendment, as did Mr. Mondou. Sir Wilfrid Laurier opposed it as being inopportune.

The Prime Minister said he would oppose the amendment at any stage, as it sought to commit Canada to the position of being unable to help the Empire in any emergency.

Sir Rodolphe Forget, who resumed the debate on the address, declared that he had not been sent into Richelieu by the Government, but had gone as a personal matter, being under personal obligations for political aid in the past to Mr. Morgan, the Conservative candidate. He branded as untrue the report of his speech in La Patrie, which represented him as saying that he was authorized by Hon. Mr. Rogers to promise the construction of a marine railway at Sorel in the event of Mr. Morgan being returned, and in this connection denied that he owned La Patrie newspaper, or had any interest in the property.

Sir Rodolphe said that months before the bye-election was on, Hon. F. D. Monk, then Minister of Public Works, at a social banquet, had promised the people of Sorel that this marine railway would be constructed by the Government. Naturally, when the writs were out by the bye-election and Mr. Monk resigned, Sir Rodolphe was asked whether the new Minister of Public Works would carry out the pledges of his predecessor, and he said he believed he would.

Sir Rodolphe then called upon Messrs. Lemieux and Marcil (Bagot) to corroborate his statement.

Both gentlemen, however, insisted that the report of La Patrie was correct.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux followed. Passing from his dealing with Hon. Mr. Rogers and Sir Rodolphe Forget, the ex-Postmaster-General referred to the declaration of naval policy as contained in the speech from the throne.

"When," he observed, "I went to learn the exact meaning of an English word I go to Webster. There I am taught that an emergency is a sudden or unexpected occasion, an unforeseen occurrence, a pressing necessity or an exigency. If Britain is confronted with any of these conditions, I will be the first to join in any vote that is deemed necessary or best, for the jingo members have not a monopoly on loyalty. But nobody will be stampeded if an emergency does not exist.

"There are those now on the Government benches who in the last campaign declared in my province that Canada owed nothing to England. The Liberalism of Laurier had no recourse to the language of demagogues. The British preference was the test of Liberal Imperialism; sending Canadian troops to South Africa was the test of Liberal Imperialism, and the Laurier naval policy — the development of a Canadian fleet unit to take its part in Imperial defence—was the test of Liberal Imperialism."

Proceeding, Mr. Lemieux dealt with the Nationalist policy, "no navy, no contribution, we owe nothing to England." This was the kind of literature that Mr. Ames, "jingo of the jingoes," paid the postoffice to spread over the province. The Conservative-Nationalist orators talked about a "deep-laid plot between Laurier, Borden and Earl Grey," "and," added Mr. Lemieux, "the loudest shouters and the most persistent shriekers are now in the Borden Government."

Mr. Lemieux produced copies of Le Nationaliste and read reported utterances by Mr. Rainville in which he declared that "Borden had allied himself to Laurier, and was the mascot and tool of Laurier in this naval business."

"The first prize goes to the member for Chambly and Vercheres, but the crown of laurels and gold medal for this kind of talk belongs to the Postmaster-General." Mr. Lemieux declared amid more uproar. Liberals were shouting "resign" at Mr. Rainville, and Conservatives "Take it back" to Mr. Lemieux.

The Speaker, after many efforts, secured order and the debate proceeded.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier, who followed the ex-Postmaster-General, spoke but briefly, confining himself mainly to a general denial of the latter's statements as to his pre-election anti-Imperialistic utterances, and to a defence of the honor of Sir Rodolphe Forget.

Mr. Pelletier charged Mr. Lemieux with lack of decorum, and told him that he must obey the rules of the House. The Liberals, he said, complained of tactics employed by a few of the Nationalists in 1911. What were the facts? From 1896 to 1911 the Liberal party in Quebec had agitated against anything being done for the defence of the country or the defence of the Empire. It was their old speeches used against them in 1911 which hurt them so much.

In conclusion, Mr. Pelletier said that he had at one time owned a few shares of stock in Le Devoir, but said he was not a director and had nothing to do with the course of the paper.

The Postmaster-General was followed by Mr. Cardin of Richelieu, and then Mr. Wilson of Wentworth addressed the House in a telling speech.

R. B. ST. CLAIR FINDS OFFENCE AT TORONTO NORMAL SCHOOL

Sculpture and Pictures, in His Opinion, Far Worse Than Pictures Declared in Court to be Indecent.

Toronto, Dec. 4.—R. B. St. Clair summarized the moral reform history of the past week at a meeting of the Toronto Vigilance Association last night.

"This last week," he said, "I visited the normal school and I must say that I saw sculpture and pictures which, in my opinion, are far worse than pictures which were declared in court to be indecent.

"On the second floor I saw various so-called works of art, the details of which I cannot describe to a promiscuous audience.

"On this floor were boys ranging from 17 to 19 and girls of the same tender age. The authorities claim that these pictures are needed for instruction in drawing and art work, but I claim that if they are needed, then the girls should be separated from the boys."

Mr. St. Clair also advocated a censorship of picture postcards. Last year he and his associates had examined 26,000 and had found many that were vulgar.

The address of the evening was made by T. Hunter Boyd, who has just returned from a white slave conference in Brussells, Belgium, where he officially represented Canada. In Strasburg, Germany, he found that Jews, Catholics and Protestants were all working together for the suppression of the evil. He hoped that in time the same harmony would be found in Canada, and that people of all religions would take concerted action in the matter.

"In Toronto we have very few immoral women of the Hebrew race," said Mr. St. Clair, in commenting on the address. "The Hebrews are very desirous of having all these dens of vice rooted out of their neighborhood. Prostitution is injurious to Christianity." Fifteen people were present at the meeting.

BIG BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Wooden C.N.R. Structure Falls Into the River.

Winnipeg, Dec. 4.—With a crash and a grinding of timber that could be heard for a mile, the big wooden trestle bridge of the C.N.R., spanning the Assiniboine River at the juncture with the Red River, collapsed yesterday morning at 4.20, carrying into the river several cars of a freight train which was being backed across at the time.

The structure is the regular passenger and freight traffic bridge of the C.N.R. to replace which a steel bridge has been under construction at that point for some time. The cause of the accident is thought to be the derailment of a freight car as it passed on to the bridge.

The Duluth express passed over the bridge at 5.50 Monday night, the last loaded passenger train to cross before the accident. The wrecked bridge was erected six years ago and declared to be perfectly safe. Traffic will not be delayed by the accident. That no lives were lost is regarded as a miracle. The Terminals Co. board is investigating.

The cause of the accident, so far as can be determined, for no one actually saw it, was that a freight car left the rails and struck the south band of the bridge. Part of the train was carried into the river. The yard crew had charge of the train.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR PEACE ARE TO BE OPENED IN LONDON

Protocol Arranging For an Armstice is Signed ---Action by Greece May Mean Split.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sofia Dec. 4.—Peace plenipentiaries representing Turkey, Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro begin work in London Friday of next week. A revised form of the armistice proves that belligerent armies shall remain in positions they at present occupy. The beseiged Turkish fortresses are not to be revictualled. Revictualling Bulgarian army in field shall be carried out by way of the Black Sea and Adrianople, commencing ten days after the signing of the armistice. Negotiations for peace are to open in London December 13th.

Greek plenipotentiaries did not refuse terms, but reserved decision twenty-four hours. Even in the event of not signing, Greece will participate in peace negotiations.

London, Dec. 4.—A protocol arranging an armistice was signed late last evening by the Turkish and Bulgarian delegates, the latter representing also Servia and Montenegro. Prior to this there had been a long sitting of the Turkish Council of Ministers, to consider fresh proposals submitted by the allies.

Apparently the Greek delegates did not sign the protocol. At present nothing is definitely known on this point, nor of the terms of the armistice, as revised yesterday.

The refusal of Greece to sign the armistice is susceptible of different interpretations. In the first place, as a tacit armistice has been in existence for more than a week already, it is not impossible that the negotiations may have served to bring about an agreement on the general principles of the peace terms, such as would promise the speedy arrangement of a peace treaty when the conference meets, as is now expected, in London. In this case, the fact that Greece is standing out from the armistice protocal would not be of great importance.

In the second place, the Greek abstention may mean a serious split among the allies, arising from jealousies concerning the possession of Saloniki and the insistence of the Greeks on the capitulation of Adrianople, Scutari and Janina.

Other points which may influence the situation are to be found in the fact that Turkey recently sought to conclude a separate treaty of peace with Greece, that Bulgaria apparently is not unwilling to enter into an alliance with Turkey, and that the allies are desirous that Turkey shall enter the Balkan customs league.

There is a rumor in Sofia that a suggestion has been made to substitute Roumania for Greece in the Balkan league. It seems clear from the report that Bulgaria will ignore the Greek offer to land an army in Gallipoli peninsula, and to send her fleet to attack the Dardanelles, that the relations between Greece and Bulgaria are greatly strained, and these signs of dissension among the allies leave the situation full of dangerous possibilities.

It is reported that France is trying to persuade Greece to adopt a less unyielding attitude. It is understood that financial pressure and the exhaustion of their forces had much to do with the willingness of Bulgaria and Servia to conclude peace, and, in this respect Greece, which secured her victories with less expense, is better able to continue hostilities.

TRIBUTES TO CARTWRIGHT

Late Liberal is Subject of Eulogistic References,

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—The proceedings in the Senate yesterday afternoon were distinguished chiefly for references to the memory of Sir Richard Cartwright, eloquently made by Hon. Mr. Lougheed, the Government leader, and by Sir George Ross, leader of the Opposition. Kindly references were also made to the late Senators Wilson and Bell.

Senator Lougheed said that as all knew Sir Richard was a man who held very prominent views which he did not hesitate to express. His forensic ability was great and had added lustre of the proceedings of Parliament in both its chambers. All who had associated with him could bear testimony to his great courtesy and kindly consideration.

Sir George Ross said that Senator Wilson had been an old friend of his. He was a man who had given a long and useful service to public life. The reference of Mr. Lougheed to Sir Richard Cartwright was an appreciation of a great man in a kindly spirit.

Two features stand out prominently. First, he was a decided champion of economy in the adminstration of the Dominion treasury. With Gladstone he believed that the House should not vote a single shilling for any purpose unless that shilling was justly provided for in the revenue. The second feature of his public career was his inflexible opposition to taxing the public beyond the necessities of the public service and particularly by a tariff that placed, as he said, the consumer largely at the mercy of the producer.

MISS SMYLIE BECOMES ENGAGED AS MOTHER SEEKS DIVORCE IN RENO

MISS MARJORIE ELY SMYLIE

From Reno, Nev., where many romances have their ending, comes a report of a romance which had its beginning there, and what is even more uncommon, its beginning is coincident with and a result of the ending of another romance.

The report is that of the engagement of Miss Marjorie Ely Smylie, of New York, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Griffen, of New York and Reno, to Mr. Ray Baker, of Reno, brother of Mr. Cleveland Baker, Attorney General of Nevada.

Miss Smylie went to Reno with her mother to be a companion for her while she established a legal residence that she might obtain a divorce from Mr. Griffen, who is a wealthy manufacturer in New York.

NEW RAILWAY TO PASS THROUGH NORTH COUNTRY

Peterborough Members Present When Company Asked for Grant From Government to Build Railway From Montreal to Midland—Means Much to the North Country

Prospects are bright for the construction of a railroad extending from Montreal to Midland, and which would serve the northern part of the County of Peterborough.

PETERBOROUGH REPRESENTED.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., were present in the interests of Peterborough, when representatives of the Company waited on the Dominion Government yesterday, applying for the grant which the Government has been giving to railways when construction work is opened in new districts. This grant is $6,400 per mile.

LOWEST GRADE AND SHORTEST DISTANCE.

The road, it is understood, would be known as the Central Railway of Canada. One purpose of the Company in building this line is to assist in the handling of grain from the North-West. It is proposed to build the road with the lowest possible grade, and also with the view to making the distance as short as possible.

It is expected that the road will touch Fenelon Falls, and then pass through the northern part of the County of Peterborough. In Harvey the line would be to the north of Bull Lake. It would also run two or three miles north of Stoney Lake.

WOULD STIMULATE THE NORTH COUNTRY.

Such a railroad would be of great benefit to the north country. With transportation facilities, the people could readily dispose of timber and other products. Another effect would no doubt be mining development, a very important activity.

WILL MR. GRAHAM SAY SO?

Yesterday's issue of the Examiner contains a communication from one who writes under an assumed name, and making certain statements with regard to the Buckhorn Bridge and County matter. The whole thing is an endeavor to glorify Mr. Stratton, and contention is made that, if the late government had not been turned out of office, that it would have assumed the amount in dispute.

At this date, it is only problematical what the government would have done, and it is easy to make claims. According to a telegram received from Mr. Burnham to-day and who should know the facts, the only thing that stands in the way is the refusal of Hon. Geo. P. Graham to agree, that he and his colleagues were pledged to remove the burden. He has not, so far, done this. The telegram says—

"Anonymous letter in Examiner re Buckhorn Falls, Graham, late Minister, positively denies statement of Shaw and Council, re bridge. Government will gladly forgive debt if Mr. Graham would say so."

NAVAL POLICY TO-MORROW

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Dec. 4— While the exact time for the announcement of the naval policy by Premier Borden in Commons to-morrow is not known it is expected it will be shortly after the House assembles at three o'clock. The collapse of the debate on the Mondou amendment, left decks cleared and the introduction of the naval bill is now definitely set for to-morrow.

SCHOONER IS MISSING

Canadian Press Despatch.

Damages Given Against Sarnia.

Sarnia, Dec. 4.—William Walier and his son Reginald have recovered from Sarnia $1,200 as damages for injuries the son received when he was burned with molten asphalt about three years ago while repairing the main street pavement. The father was awarded $200 and the son $1,000 and the costs of the suit. Judge Leitch presided at the suit and just gave his decision.

East Durham Conservatives.

Millbrook, Dec. 4.—The annual meeting of East Durham Liberal-Conservative Association was held in the town hall here yesterday afternoon, when the president, Robert Grandy, of Port Hope, occupied the chair. The following officials were elected: President, T. B. Collins; vice-president, J. B. Eakins; treasurer, W. S. Givens.

Lynchers of Negro Assailants of White Women Will go Unpunished.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 4.—In the name of the State of South Carolina, Governor Blease served notice to the governors' conference here yesterday that lynchers of negro assailants of white women in his state would go unpunished. Governor Blease warmly defended his use of the pardoning power as well, declaring that in twenty-two months he had pardoned or paroled approximately four hundred persons, and that he hoped the number at the end of the second term would be eight hundred.

"I have said all over the State of South Carolina, and I say it again now," he declared, "that I will never order the militia to shoot down their neighbors and protect a black brute who commits the nameless crime against a white woman.

"Therefore, in South Carolina, let it be understood that when a negro assaults a white woman, all that is needed is that they get the right man, and they who get him will neither need nor receive a trial."

Governor Blease justified the use he had made of his pardoning power, he said, by conditions he had found in penal institutions in the state.

MINERS ARE INDIGNANT

Timmins Strike Results in Further Rioting.

Porcupine, Ont., Dec. 4.—More light has been thrown upon the causes leading up to the shooting affray at Timmins. It is stated that a car of strike-breakers arrived at the Timmins mine on Monday morning and were escorted to the Hotel Goldfields when they refused to go to work, and this information was conveyed to a meeting of union men at Schumacher. The meeting was broken up and the men went over to the hotel, when they congregated in the street, when, it is alleged, the Thiel detectives opened fire from the verandah. Five strikers were hit with bullets, but none of the wounds will prove fatal.

Three detectives came up yesterday morning for a hearing and were let out on $500 bail, each to appear tomorrow before the crown attorney. It is asserted that they attempted to assault the mayor and used batons freely among the crowd of five hundred that had assembled. Police Constable Lefebre restored order and arrested the three detectives.

The strikers were incensed and held up a special train Tuesday night between Porcupine and South Porcupine. All the windows of the van and coach were smashed in with stones, but no serious accidents occurred. Nearly all the men being brought in join the ranks of the strikers before reaching their destination.

WIRELESS STATION AT POINT EDWARD

Sarnia, Dec. 4.—The new wireless station being constructed at Point Edward is another link in Canada's big system, reaching from Fort William to Cape Race, is nearly finished and will be working in a few weeks. The station is situated on the shores of Lake Huron, and will have a sending radius of 300 miles, but will be able to receive from Cape Race. The plant and building is valued at $18,000, and is put up by the Dominion. The Canadian Marconi people will operate it, however, on a percentage basis.

WORLD'S TITLE TO CANADIAN STEER

Chicago, Dec. 4.—A Canadian steer yesterday won the world's championship at the International Live Stock Exposition here. The winner is "Glenmarnock Victor," a two-year-old grade Angus steer, raised and exhibited by James D. McGregor of Brandon, Man.

The second prize went to last year's champion, "Black Rock," a cross-bred steer, exhibited by the Iowa State Agricultural College.

"Glenmarnock Victor" was fed on Canadian barley, oats and hay, and never has tasted corn.

Eight Killed.

Zanesville, Ohio, Dec. 4.—Eight persons were killed and 11 injured, eight of whom will probably die, in a Pennsylvania Railroad wreck near Dresden, O., last night. Several escaped by jumping. The eight who were fatally hurt were scalded by escaping steam.

WHAT DID NOTES MEAN?

Ryan Says no Reference to Dynamiting Intended.

Indianapolis, Dec. 4.—Letters written by Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, were read in conjunction with dates of explosions in the cross-examination of Ryan by the Government at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial yesterday.

Ryan testified his knowledge of numerous explosions which occurred after he had written a letter from New York was gained entirely through newspaper accounts. He said newspaper accounts of explosions on non-union jobs often were enclosed in letters as news.

Extracts from the New York letter, which Ryan testified he wrote on April 27, 1910, as head of the union, to Secretary John J. McNamara, and the explosions which the Government cited as having occurred later, were:

"Let Legleitner take care of the jobs in his district." Henry W. Legleitner, now of Denver, was then a member of the executive board, stationed at Pittsburg. An explosion occurred at McKee's Rocks, near Pittsburg, in July, 1910.

"Let Hockin arrange for Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit jobs." Herbert S. Hockin is charged with being leader of the "dynamiting crew." An explosion occurred at Cleveland June 23 of that year.

"Davenport, Iowa, and Peoria, Ill., can be handled by Hockin." Explosions occurred at Davenport and Peoria on June 4.

"What did you mean when you say let Legleitner and Hockin take care of these jobs?" asked District Attorney Miller.

"I meant they were to use every legitimate means to have union men put to work," answered Ryan.

DYNAMITE FAILED IN PLOT TO BLOW UP BRIDGE

Madagascar's Deadly Cyclone.

Paris, Dec. 4.—More than one hundred persons were killed in the cyclone which swept over Madagascar Nov. 26, according to the latest reports received at the Ministry of the Colonies. Twenty-Five Sticks of Dynamite Froze and Burned Instead of Exploding.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Cumberland, B.C., Dec. 4.—Because twenty-five sticks of dynamite placed under a bridge of the Canadian Colliers track from Union Bay across the Trent River yesterday, froze and burned up instead of exploding when the lighted fuse reached the cap support of the bridge which it was evidently intended to blow up, was partly burned. "Kitty! Kathleen! Miss Lewellyn!"

"Just to think of meeting you again."

"Just to think of it."

"And on this train of all places."

"On this train of all places!"

"Oh, Harry, Harry!"

"Oh, Kitty, Kitty, Kitty!"

"You dear fellow, it's so long since I saw you last."

"So long."

"It was at that last hop at West Point, remember?—why, it seems only yesterday, and how well you are looking. You are well, aren't you?"

"Not very." He was mopping his brow in anguish, and yet the room seemed strangely cold.

"Of course you look much better in your uniform. You aren't wearing your uniform, are you?"

"No, this is not my uniform."

"You haven't left the army, have you?"

"I don't know yet."

"Don't ever do that. You are just beautiful in brass buttons."

"Thanks."

"Harry!"

"What's the matter now?"

"This tie, this green tie, isn't this the one I knitted you?"

"I am sure I don't know, I borrowed it from the conductor."

"Don't you remember? I did knit you one."

"Did you? I believe you did! I think I wore it out."

"Oh, you fickle boy. But see what I have. What's this?"

He stared through the glassy eyes of complete helplessness. "It looks like a bracelet."

"Don't tell me you don't remember this!—the little bangle bracelet you gave me."

"D-did I give you a baygled brang-let?"

"Of course you did. And the inscription. Don't you remember it?"

She held her wrist in front of his aching eyes and he perused as if it were his own epitaph, what she read aloud for him. "From Harry to Kitty, the Only Girl I Ever Loved."

"Good night!" he sighed to himself, and began to mop his brow with Snoozleums.

"You put it on my arm," said Kathleen, with a moonlight sigh, "and I've always worn it."

"Always?"

"Always! no matter whom I was engaged to."

The desperate wretch, who had not dared even to glance in Marjorie's direction, somehow thought he saw a straw of self-defense. "You were engaged to three or four others when I was at West Point."

"I may have been engaged to the others," said Kathleen, moon-eyeing him, "but I always liked you best, Clifford—er, Tommy—I mean Harry."

"You get me at last."

Kathleen fenced back at this: "Well, I've no doubt you have had a dozen affairs since."

"Oh, no! My heart has only known one real love." He threw this over her head at Marjorie, but Kathleen seized it, to his greater confusion: "Oh, Harry, how sweet of you to say it. It makes me feel positively faint," and she swooned his way, but he shoved a chair forward and let her collapse into that. Thinking and hoping that she was unconscious, he made ready to escape, but she caught him by the coat, and moaned: "Where am I?" and he growled back:

"In the Observation Car!"

Kathleen's life and enthusiasm returned without delay: "Fancy meeting you again! I could just scream."

"So could I."

"You must come up in our car and see mamma."

"Is Ma-mamma with you?" Mallory stammered, on the verge of imbecility.

"Oh, yes, indeed, we're going around the world."

"Don't let me detain you."

"Papa is going round the world also."

"Is papa on this train, too?"

At last something seemed to embarrass her a trifle: "No, papa went on ahead. Mamma hopes to overtake him. But papa is a very good traveler."

Then she changed the subject. "Do come and meet mamma. It would cheer her up so. She is so fond of you. Only this morning she was saying, 'Of all the boys you were ever engaged to, Kathleen, the one I like most of all was Edgar—I mean Clarence—er—Harry Mallory.'"

"Awfully kind of her."

"You must come and see her—she's some stouter now!"

"Oh, is she? Well, that's good."

Mallory was too angry to be sane, and too helpless to take advantage of his anger. He wondered how he could ever have cared for this molasses and mucilage girl. He remembered now that she had always had these same cloying ways. She had always pawed him and, like everybody but the pawers, he hated pawing.

It would have been bad enough at any time to have Kathleen hanging on his coat, straightening his tie, leaning close, smiling up in his eyes, losing him his balance, recapturing him every time he edged away. But with Marjorie as the grim witness it was maddening.

He loathed, and abominated Kathleen Llewellyn, and if she had only been a man, he could cheerfully have beaten her to a pulp and chucked her out of the window. But because she was a helpless little baggage he had to be as polite as he could while she sat and tore his plans to pieces, embittered Marjorie's heart against him, and either ended all hopes of their marriage, or furnished an everlasting rancor to be recalled in every quarrel to their dying day. Oh, etiquette, what injustices are endured in thy name!

So there he sat, sweating his soul's blood, and able only to spar for time and wonder when the gong would ring. And now she was off on a new tack:

"And where are you bound for, Harry, dear?"

"The Philippines," he said, and for the first time there was something beautiful in their remoteness.

"Perhaps we shall cross the Pacific on the same boat."

The first sincere smile he had experienced came to him: "I go on an army transport, fortu—unfortunately."

"Oh, I just love soldiers. Couldn't mamma and I go on the transport? Mamma is very fond of soldiers, too."

"I'm afraid it couldn't be arranged."

"Too bad, but perhaps we can stop off and pay you a visit. I just love army posts. So does mamma."

"Oh, do!"

"What will be your address?"

"Just the Philippines—just the Philippines."

"But aren't there quite a few of them?"

"Only about two thousand."

"Which one will you be on?"

"I'll be on the third from the left," said Mallory, who neither knew nor cared what he was saying. Marjorie had endured all that she could stand. She rose in a tightly leashed fury.

"I'm afraid I'm in the way."

Kathleen turned in surprise. She had not noticed that anyone was near. Mallory went out of his head completely. "Oh, don't go—for heaven's sake don't go," he appealed to Marjorie.

"A friend of yours?" said Kathleen, bristling.

"No, not a friend," in a chaotic tangle, "Mrs — Miss—Miss—Er—er—er—"

Kathleen smiled: "Delighted to meet you, Miss Ererer."

"The pleasure is all mine," Marjorie said, with an acid smile.

"Have you known Harry long?" said Kathleen, jealously, "or are you just acquaintances on the train?"

"We're just acquaintances on the train!"

"I used to know Harry very well—very well indeed."

"So I should judge. You won't mind if I leave you to talk over old times together?"

"How very sweet of you."

"Oh, don't mention it."

"But, Marjorie," Mallory cried, as she turned away. Kathleen started at the ardor of his tone, and gasped: "Marjorie! Then he—you—"

"Not at all—not in the least," said Marjorie.

At this crisis the room was suddenly inundated with people. Mrs. Whitcomb, Mrs. Wellington, Mrs. Temple and Mrs. Fosdick, all trying to look like bridesmaids, danced in, shouting:

"Here they come! Make way for the bride and groom!"

CHAPTER XXX.

A Wedding on Wheels.

The commotion of the matrimony-mad women brought the men trooping in from the smoking room and there was much circumstance of decorating the scene with white satin ribbons, a trifle crumpled and dim of luster. Mrs. Whitcomb waved them at Mallory with a laugh:

"Recognize these?"

He nodded dismally. His own funeral baked meats were coldly furnishing forth a wedding breakfast for Ira Lathrop. Mrs. Wellington was moving about distributing kazoos and Mrs. Temple had an armload of old shoes, some of which had thumped Mallory on an occasion which seemed so ancient as to be almost prehistoric.

Fosdick was howling to the porter to get some rice, quick!

"How many portions does you approximate?"

"All you've got."

"Boiled or fried?"

"Any old way." The porter ran forward to the dining-car for the ammunition.

Mrs. Temple whispered to her husband: "Too bad you're not officiating Walter." But he cautioned silence:

"Hush! I'm on my vacation."

The train was already coming into Ogden. Noises were multiplying and from the increase of passing objects the speed seemed to be taking on a part. The bell was clamoring like a wedding chime in a steeple.

Mrs. Wellington was on a chair fastening a ribbon round one of the lamps, and Mrs. Whitcomb was on another chair braiding the bell rope with withered orange branches, when Ashton, with kazoo all ready, called out:

"What tune shall we play?"

"I prefer the Mendelssohn Wedding March," said Mrs. Whitcomb, but Mrs. Wellington glared arrows at her.

"I've always used the Lohengrin."

"We'll play 'em both," said Dr. Temple, to make peace.

Mrs. Fosdick murmured to her spouse: "The old Justice of the Peace didn't give us any music at all," and received in reward one of his most luscious-eyed looks, and a whisper: "But he gave us each other."

"Now and then," she pouted.

"But where are the bride and groom?"

"Here they come—all ready," cried Ashton, and he beat time while some of the guests hummed at Mendelssohn's and some Wagner's bridal melodies, and others just made a noise.

Ira Lathrop and Anne Gattle, looking very sheepish, crowded through the narrow corridor and stood shamefacedly blushing like two school children about to sing a duet.

The train jolted to a dead stop. The conductor called into the car: "Ogden! All out for Ogden!" and everybody stood watching and waiting.

Ira, seeing Mallory, edged close and whispered: "Stand by to catch the minister on the rebound."

But Mallory turned away. What use had he now for ministers? His plans were shattered ruins.

The porter came flying in with two large bowls of rice, and shouting, "Here comes the 'possum—er—parson." Seeing Marjorie, he said: "Shall I perambulate Mista Snoozleums?"

She handed the porter her only friend and he hurried out, as a lean and professionally and ascetic hurried in. He did not recognize his boyish enemy in the gray-haired, red-faced giant that greeted him, but he knew that voice and its gloating irony:

"Hello, Charlie."

Nice Distinction.

"How do you tell the difference between a yacht and a sailboat?" said the girl with the inquiring mind. "By lookin' into the pantry," replied Captain Cleet. "If she carries plenty of refreshments and seegars she's a yacht. If it's mostly plain victuals she's a sailboat."—Washington Star.

SOME WORKING GIRLS LOSE TOO MUCH TIME

Two Girls Tell How To Avoid It.

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. We therefore quote from the letters of two girls who suffered and were restored to health. The same remedy is within reach of all.

Brooklyn, N. Y. — "Prior to taking the first bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered agony every month, but after your wonderful medicine had been taken a while I felt a little better, and after taking seven bottles of it I feel that I can truly say I have no more pain or inconvenience.

"As I am out in the business world as a stenographer, I come in contact with many girls, and when the opportune moment arrives I tell them about the Vegetable Compound and I know that quite a few are taking it."—HELEN CANET, 556 Dean St.

Another Girl's Experience.

Tishomingo, Okla.—"I am a stenographer and book-keeper, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved my life. I am enjoying the best of health now, but I was suffering from female troubles and painful periods, and would have backache, headache and fainting spells. If any woman would like to write to me I will gladly answer her letter and tell her what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. MATTIE COPENHAVER. Tishomingo, Okla.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
TO THE
PEOPLE OF ONTARIO
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor:—

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, in a few words, tell you of the steady growth of this Hospital.

In the year 1875 there were only six cots and beds, one nurse, 44 in-patients and 67 out-patients. In 1912 there were 250 cots and beds, 64 nurses, 1,294 in-patients and 17,862 out-patients.

During the 37 years of the Hospital's existence, 19,370 in-patients have been admitted, and 133,724 out-patients have been treated, a total of 153,094, or an average of 4,138 per year. Of the 19,370 in-patients, 5,495 were from places outside of Toronto. 9,644 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,711 were improved. This is a great record.

Of the 1,294 in-patients last year, 341 came from 218 places outside of Toronto, so that the Hospital is not a local, but a Provincial Institution.

In the Orthopedic Department in 37 years, nearly 700 boys and girls have been treated for clubfeet, and about 600 were corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto, so surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

The Corporation of Toronto grants $25,000, not only for the city children, but towards the maintenance of all patients in the Hospital, and the citizens of Toronto donate an average of $15,000 annually to the funds of the Hospital.

Will you, kind reader, think of what your money will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.

Remember that your pocket-book must be the Hospital's friend, if the Hospital is to be the children's friend.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital, so that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Remember that your money can help the Hospital build a bridge over which the feet of little children may travel on the journey from sorrow to joy, from sickness to health—aye, from death to life.

Please send a dollar, or more if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

MIXED WIVES.

The Dilemma That Mr. Church Faced and How He Mastered It.

In the early part of the last century there lived in an old New England town a Mr. Church, who in the course of his early life was bereft of four wives, all of whom were buried in the same lot.

In his old age it became necessary to remove the remains to a new cemetery. This he undertook himself, but in the process the bones became hopelessly mixed.

His "New England conscience" would not allow him under the painful circumstances to use the original headstones, so he procured new ones, one of which bore the following inscription:

"Here lies Hannah Church and probably a portion of Emily."

Another:

"Sacred to the memory of Emily Church, who seems to be mixed with Matilda."

Then followed these lines:

Stranger, pause and drop a tear,
For Emily Church lies buried here,
Mixed in some perplexing manner
With Mary, Matilda and probably Han-

The Last Winner

By EMILY C. TRAVERS

Three French gentlemen were sitting over their absinth at a fashionable Parisian club near the Place de la Concorde.

"I say, Du Bois," said one, "I wish you would desist from courting la belle Americaine. I have intentions there myself."

"And you, Chauveteau," said another to the speaker, "I would be obliged if you would also desist from your attentions in that quarter. La belle Americaine belongs to me."

"I like the assurance of you gentlemen," said M. du Bois. "I see no reason why I should give up a conquest already made by myself to either of you. Chauveteau, you have no chance whatever, and you, Farriere, I am sure can never win."

"And I like your conceit, Du Bois," said Farriere. "It is you who are aspiring far above you."

"Come fellows," said Chauveteau; "we are all excellent friends, and there is no need for us to quarrel over the lady, for the simple reason that none of us can win her. To do the courting of an heiress would require at least 30,000 francs. There are opera and theater tickets to buy, carriages, flowers, presents—indeed, a hundred ways of spending money—and I doubt if all of us combined could raise half the amount."

"My faith!" exclaimed Du Bois. "There's an idea for you. Suppose we all chip in and set up one of us to do the job, who shall be liberal with the other two after securing la belle Americaine's fortune."

"Good!" cried Chauveteau. "The very thing! You two men let me have 10,000 francs each, and I will not only reimburse you, but give each of you my note for 100,000 francs, payable within sixty days after my wedding with la belle Americaine."

The two men thus addressed laughed outright. Then Farriere, emptying his glass and calling for another, said:

"To propose a practical plan, I suggest that we each chip in a third of the necessary funds and decide by lot who shall make the attempt."

"I offer an amendment to that," said Chauveteau, "that instead of deciding by lot who shall do the wooing we decide it by a game of cards."

"What game?" asked Du Bois.

"Well, since the lady is American, suppose we make it the American game of 'freeze-out' poker. We will each take 10,000 francs and play till one of us has won the shares of the other two, the winner to use the fund to do the wooing, giving his obligation to the other two."

"That's definite and practical," said Du Bois. "Let us begin. We need not put up the cash; we can each take 10,000 francs in chips, the losers to redeem them later."

"Agreed!" said the other two.

Cards and chips were called for, and the game began. It was a long one, for each player, being desirous to act the lover, bet cautiously. While the game was in progress they chaffed one another, occasionally giving away to any one who might be listening the object of the game. A gentleman took a seat at a table at the other end of the room, and the three players looked at one another as much as to say, "Be careful," but when the gentleman gave an order in English they assumed that he did not speak French, and before long something of their caution disappeared.

Chauveteau was the first to be frozen out, and Farriere was relieved of all his chips by Du Bois. The man who spoke English sat reading a newspaper till the game was ended, when, calling a waiter, he sent his card to the winner. Du Bois read the name on it and looked at his friends appalled. The two looked much concerned. They supposed the sending of the card to be a challenge, but were not certain. It was agreed that Chauveteau should interview the sender and learn what it meant. Approaching the person in question, he bowed low and asked in what way his friend M. du Bois could be of service to him.

"As the gentleman who is to win the hand of la belle Americaine," was the reply in tolerable French, "he can be of service to me either with the foil or the pistol, whichever he prefers."

"Monsieur has overheard?"

"I have."

"May I ask monsieur's relationship to the lady?"

"A suitor for her hand. The matter seems now to be between me and your friend the winner. I prefer to fight for a lady rather than to gamble for her."

"I see. I will bear your message to M. du Bois."

After a consultation between the three Frenchmen, who knew well that a duel under the circumstances would be the social ruin of every one of them, Chauveteau was sent back to inquire whether if they would all join in an apology the matter would be kept secret. The reply was favorable. The stranger dictated an apology, which was duly signed, and the matter was ended.

La belle Americaine married a fellow countryman soon after this incident, but did not know till the day after her marriage that her husband had proposed to fight one who had won at cards the wherewithal to win her, or, rather, her fortune.

As for the three Frenchmen, from all of whom she had received some attention, she cut them all as she happened to meet them. Had they been mere adventurers this would not have distressed them. Since they were well known in society it troubled them very much.

An Ordinary Mortal.

"Engaged? Why, he seemed quite broken-hearted when the other girl refused him."

"Well, he's like the average man. It wasn't long before he was looking for a consolation prize."

A Human Ostrich.

A case of much interest to the medical fraternity and others in Hamilton is being much discussed around the City Hospital just now.

Among the patients in the institution is a girl of 16 or so, who has in a very marked degree some of the peculiarities which are commonly reported to be possessed by the ostrich. An x-ray picture of the young woman's stomach shows a large assortment of small ware contained therein. The doctors in attendance have already taken from her a varied assortment which includes 145 pins, 45 cents in small silver, a handful of buttons and a number of other small articles.

"We have not got rid of nearly all of it yet," said Supt. Langrill. Many of the city physicians have examined the x-ray photographs and are deeply interested in the case. "It is a form of insanity," said one of the doctors, "and in this girl's case is quite severe."

The patient, unfortunately, is not progressing very well. She does not take nourishment, and is much troubled with reaching. Still the doctors hope to get rid of the rest of the foreign articles and pull her through.

I don't care what you say, the very happiest people are those who have to count the pennies together. Only, of course, there must be enough to count.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

ALL FOR THE POOR KIDDIES

A goodly number of ladies have sent in their names of membership in the Review's St. Nicholas' Club. All you have to do to become a member is promise to give some little boy or girl a happy Christmas. You are going to be allowed to do it in your own way. All that you have to do is to send your name and address to The St. Nicholas' Girl and you will receive the name of a little boy or girl of whatever age you specify.

Then it is up to you to go and see that little one and find out just what will make it most happy. It may be a very little thing, indeed, but it will be JUST what the kiddie wants. If you feel that you can care for more than one let the St. Nicholas Girl know.

There is no limit to what you may do if you desire. Neither is there any necessity to spend very much money.

Money and gifts are not the things that rank first in bringing happiness to others. The human touch and love are what count most. And the movement brings the giver in direct touch with the receiver. You see to whom you are giving and you get that glow of happiness that comes from the witnessing of joy that you have created in others.

There will be no excuse for a lonesome Christmas this year. It will be your own fault if, after Christmas, you have to say that you found no one to make happy and no one to love you. If there is anything that brings a greater glow of satisfaction than having brought happiness to a little child. The St. Nicholas Girl has not yet found it.

Send your name in now on a post card, or telephone 189!

THE CRAVING FOR FOOD.

Man Eats Because He's Hungry, Not For Scientific Reasons.

In an article in the Popular Science Monthly Professor W. B. Cannon of the Harvard Medical school writes: "'Why do we eat?' This question, presented to a group of educated people is likely to bring forth the answer, 'We eat to compensate for body waste or to supply the body with fuel for its labors.' Although the body is in fact losing weight continuously and drawing continuously on its store of energy and although the body must periodically be supplied with fresh material and energy in order to keep a more or less even balance between the income and the outgo, this maintenance of weight and strength is not the motive for taking food.

"Primitive man and the lower animals may be regarded as quite unacquainted with notions of the equilibrium of matter and energy in the body, and yet they take food and have an efficient existence in spite of this ignorance. In nature generally important processes, such as the preservation of the individual and the continuance of the race, are not left to be determined by intellectual considerations, but are provided for in automatic devices. Natural desires and impulses arise in consciousness, driving us to action, and only by analysis do we learn their origin or divine their significance. Thus our primary reasons for eating are to be found not in convictions about metabolism, but in the experiences of appetite and hunger."

Order of the Dragon.

There is at least one order of American officers that congress has recognized to the extent of permitting the members to wear the badge with their uniform on proper occasions. This is the Order of the Dragon, established by commissioned officers of the army at Peking in 1900. The members are commissioned officers of the American army and navy who served in China during the Boxer troubles, and there are honorary members from other armies and navies which took part in the campaign of the allies. The society is similar in some ways to the Order of the Cincinnati, founded by French and American officers at the close of the American Revolution, the object of the society being to perpetuate friendships formed during the war.—New York Sun.

Sir John's Wit.

Sir John Boyd, the eminent Ontario judge, is noted for the keenness of his intellect. The Chancellor grasps a counsel's argument almost invariably before the lawyer has finished his speech, and it irritates him when the lawyer is at all verbose or has not his case well up. The Chancellor also has a sharp wit.

The other day in the somewhat informal court known as Judge's Chambers, a young lawyer commenced to argue a case with which he was obviously not well acquainted. He fussed and hummed and hesitated. He wandered all about the point in a vague manner. Sir John, however, had seen through the case like a flash. It was really a very simple one.

"What have you to say upon this point?" at last asked the Chancellor a little sharply, referring to the key of the situation.

"Oh, I was just coming to that," said the young lawyer brightening.

"No, you weren't," retorted Sir John, evidently fearing that the lawyer was going to make a fresh start. "You passed it long ago."—Toronto Star

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Lindsay, Nov. 6th, 1912.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

FAIR PLAY

The Review has received a letter from Mr. E. M. Trowern of Toronto, attacking a society recently organized in this city by a number of respectable workingmen, most of whom are employed in the Canadian General Electric Works. For several reasons the Review declines to publish it. The first one is that it looks libelous—the promoters are practically accused of dishonesty. And another reason is the Review believes in fair play. The publication of the letter would be unfair to the young organization which has a charter under the limited stock companies act, to do business. These workingmen have the same right to organize a little company as the capitalists have to form a big one. The venture may succeed or it may fail. The Review believes Mr. Trowern's objection to the society in question is that it comes into unfair competition with the retail merchants, but the same thing may be said regarding the big departmental stores of the larger cities.

RECIPROCITY DEAD

The catechism to which George W. Fowler, of New Brunswick, subjected the leading Liberals in the House of Commons upon the reciprocity question was most illuminating. Most satisfying it must have been to the majority of the Liberals who refused to have anything to do with reciprocity. First comes the Honorable (?) Bill Pugsley, who says that he still unreservedly supports reciprocity. Then Sir Wilfrid Laurier says that he still has it as an ideal, and finally Hugh Guthrie, M.P., who said at the last session of Parliament that it was dead and buried, now says that it may have been then, but it isn't now. A few days ago that sprightly debater, Carvell, of New Brunswick, also declared that reciprocity had crept out from under the snow-drift, and was warming its shins against the fire of common sense. But the interest of the public in reciprocity has waned. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier this summer suddenly abandoned his projected trip to the West, what had sentiment on reciprocity to do with the change of intention? The result in Macdonald, and in the other bye-elections did not seem to indicate that there was much liveliness in the reciprocity corpse. Inside the Liberal mausoleum things may be stirring, of course, for only the elect get a real good look in, but on the outside everything looks cold and deadly still. Canada would reject reciprocity to-morrow, as it rejected it a year ago September. In addition to this, the Borden Government record is certainly of a class to entitle it to the endorsation of every good Canadian, and before the next election there will be, we can safely say, much more useful legislation along the lines already laid down. Reciprocity may do for the Liberals, in place of something better, but it is not of very much importance now.

MANNING THE "TIN-POTS"

The London Times gives a long explanation of why British seamen fight shy of the Canadian navy. The navy, it might be remarked, consists of the Niobe and Rainbow, neither of which are now in commission. The Times ascribes the disinclination of men to become part of the Canadian naval service to the conditions of training, to the absence of even ordinary facilities for reasonable life, and to the disagreeable nature of the regulations imposed. The "training ship" was an old converted schooner named Diana, which was unseaworthy and quite unfit for inducing the recruits to believe they were actually jolly sailors on board a man of war. The whole condition of the service made it so repugnant that desertions were almost of daily occurrence.

The Toronto Globe and others ask why Canada does not furnish the men for British naval service as a contribution to the effective naval defence of the Empire. They deride the idea that Canada helps Britain by contributing ships, for which Britain must find the men. But they evidently fail to count on the magnificent success that attended the Laurier effort to get naval cadets. Did not the turbulent rush, the pell-mell eagerness of Canadians to serve in the Canadian navy at once suggest that Canada had men to spare for its own navy, and some for the British? It seems that the London Times unwittingly answers the Canadian Laurierites in a very effective manner. It knocks their specious complaint that Canada is not giving as it might give right on the head.

NEWSY ITEMS FROM FLEETWOOD

Special Correspondence

Fleetwood, Dec. 2.—Owing to the recent flurries of snow, the ground is covered with the beautiful white coat, and things are beginning to look as though the holiday season was at hand.

Hauling out grain and potatoes to market is the order of the day with most farmers in this section at present. The market price for potatoes is beginning to look good, although first-class Murpheys are very scarce. Tubers grown on clay land are fast showing signs of rot, while those sown on sandy land are in good shape with no signs of decay.

Mr A. W. Staples is very busy threshing, and no doubt his time will be very much taken up with running his engine, to have time to read these items, and his lieutenant, Mr. Percy Crawford, is doing his best to get all grain through his part of the outfit before the snow gets too deep. Their threshing season has been a long steady one, and a good word by every farmer where their outfit has threshed, looks as though their machinery was giving good satisfaction to all.

Sunday, November 24th, being anniversary Sunday, two special services were held, when the Rev. D. Balfour preached two very fine sermons to large audiences, and on Monday the 25th, beginning at 4 o'clock, a fowl supper was held in the school house, when, despite the disagreeable weather, a very large gathering, from far and near, began to assemble. By 7 o'clock all available space was taken.

Talk about fowl, why all the space on tables and in baskets around tables was heaped up, and a host of willing ladies and gents, who acted as waiters, kept everything running at top speed, and they got the multitudes satisfied with fowl and other good edibles, until the seats beneath them began to groan with the increased weight. By 7.30 most of the large gathering entered the church, where a program of high order was beginning to get in shape. Rev. W. C. Parsons officiated as chairman. A fine selection by the Fleetwood orchestra was well rendered. A reading by Miss McCullough, of Lindsay who always pleases wherever she makes her appearance, was given. Next in order was a solo by that always welcome young man of the 8th line, Mr. Harry Pearson, as every song he sings demands another. The orchestra gave a selection, and Miss McCullough gave another good reading. Mr. Preston came next with two more good solos. Next in order was a solo by Miss Vera Laidley, entitled "The Band Played Nearer My God to Thee as the Ship Went Down." Miss Laidley is no stranger to this audience, and her singing is always highly appreciated. Next was an address by the Rev. W. W. Jones, of Janetville. His remarks caused many outbursts of laughter. The orchestra played again, and Miss McCullough gave another reading. The fair closed by singing the National Anthem, and the benediction by Rev. W. W. Jones.

The following night a social was held, when the buildings were again well filled and another nice concert was held, consisting of music by the orchestra. Mr. John Sutton had his phonograph, and his choice selections pleased the audience. Rev. W. C. Parsons who officiated as chairman, made some interesting remarks. The proceeds of both totalled over $80, which sum ought to satisfy the whole promoters.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM'S EXPLANATIONS

From the Ottawa Citizen— There is reason to believe that Mr. Burnham's explanations will need even more explanation than his orginal statement. The conspiracy becomes more complex. Its central figure shifts from Pyne to the Pope. What will Trustee Genest say now?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor,—A few of my friends have been kind enough to reply to the "hot stuff" in the Star. I can only say that the Star has spoken even worse of much more important men in parliament than myself. However, I will say that I spoke on the address because Hon. R. Rogers asked me to do so. I spoke when I did because the chief whip sent an urgent note across the House asking me to do so at that time. Sir Wilfrid himself asked me next morning in the corridor why I had repeated Hon. Mr. Oliver's presentation of the Macdonald affidavits. I told him why, but cite this merely to show that even Sir Wilfrid did not think it beneath notice. But it does not do to be turned aside by a little sarcasm or comment. Politics is no place for a timid man.

Yours,
J. H. BURNHAM.

MUST REMOVE MAGAZINE

City Must Find Another Location for Powder Magazine

At the last meeting of the North Monaghan Council the Council discussed the advisability of asking the City to remove the powder magazine from its present location in North Monaghan, and it was decided that it should be removed as the growth of that portion of North Monaghan has increased so rapidly that the magazine is a detriment to property and a danger to the community in which it is located. The clerk was authorized to write the City Council accordingly.

It was also decided to pay a $2 account of T. O. Arnott, and to make a grant of $40 for roadwork on the Gravel Road near Mr. Hatton's corner.

Henry Guerin will be refunded $4.56 on error being made in his assessment.

OWEN SOUNDER WAS DISORDERLY

Made Trouble in Hotel and the Magistrate Charged Him $5.75

For creating a disturbance in the Montgomery Hotel, while under the influence of liquor, an Owen Sound man named Thomas Whitewright was fined $5.75 in police court to-day.

ANOTHER REMAND

Hugh Patterson came up again this morning, after several remands. All attempts to procure information about his past have been fruitless. Patterson is held on a charge of vagrancy. His age is about seventeen or eighteen. He informed the court that he was only fourteen, and that he came to this country when ten years old, and since then has travelled around the country working with farmers for various periods.

Patterson was remanded another week until Chief Thompson writes to his last employer for information.

MUST GO TO WORK

Cyril Sullivan was charged with vagrancy, to which he pleaded not guilty. He claimed to have worked all summer at the Peterborough Lock Works. Not feeling well lately he decided to join the sons of rest. Chief Thompson reminded him that he had apparently been well enough to frequent the pool room most of the time. Magistrate Dumble adjourned the case for a week to give Sullivan an opportunity to cultivate industry.

THE CASE OF THE FEEBLE MINDED

Report by Delegates who Attended Conference In Toronto

Dr. M. A. Morrison, who with Public School Inspector Mowat, attended the Conference in Toronto to deal with the question of caring for the Feeble Minded in Ontario, reported to the Board of Education last night. In part the report is as follows:

All emphasized the serious nature of the question and urged the immediate necessity of arrivnig at some satisfactory solution whereby the present alarming increase of the feeble minded may be checked. J. P. Downey stated that it was estimated there were 6,000 individuals feeble minded in the Province, not more than 2,000 who were receiving any adequate care. This lack of care, and the fact that the sale of marriage licenses is not restricted to responsible government officials, has led to the marriage of many feeble minded people, and statistics show that the families of feeble minded women average double the number of those of the normal women. Owing to these causes, and a laxity in our immigration laws, the number of defectives has rapidly increased.

After a lengthy discussion as to the solution of the problem, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

1. That the Government be asked to amend the Marriage Act so as to prevent the marriage of mental defectives.
2. That the Legislature be memorialized to provide institutions for the care of the feeble minded in Ontario, and that municipalities of the Province be required to pay for the maintenance of the wards of the age of 21 years, if necessary, after which, if unable to take care of themselves, they shall become wards of the Government.

A permanent executive was appointed to bring this matter to the attention of the different municipal bodies throughout the province; to secure exact data and to urge upon the Government the necessity of taking speedy action in the matter.

THE PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

Hon. Frank Cochrane Hears Deputation, with Request for Grant

Representatives of Peterborough and Victoria County Councils waited on the Minister of Railways and Canals at Ottawa yesterday, in regard to a grant from the Government towards the Pigeon Creek Bridge.

It was pointed out to Hon. Mr. Cochrane that owing to the raising of the water by the dam at Buckhorn the expense of rebuilding the bridge was greatly increased. Without the dam at Buckhorn the flow of water would be much smaller and construction work at this point would be largely facilitated.

At the present time there was 700 feet to be bridged or filled in.

The Minister asked that all information possible be given in writing when he would consider the matter, with a view to a satisfactory solution of the whole matter.

BRIGHT SERVICE AT PARK STREET

Evangelists Made Splendid Impression at First Meeting

All those who attended the opening meeting of evangelists Taylor and Hatch, at Park Street Church last night, must have gone away with their hearts burning within them, and their spirits overflowing with devout thankfulness that in this age of doubt and higher critics there can be found men of this type, who preach the sweet, sound, and saving gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Mr. Hatch opened the service by a season of song, and the audience took right hold of the new songs and music.

The solo work of Mr. Hatch is of high order. A charming personality clear intonation, and a manifest feeling of purposeful singing is the chief characteristic of this artist of Christian song.

Mr. Taylor, who was at one time associated with Dr. Wilbur Chapman as one of his chief speakers, addressed the people from the words found in John 1; 4—"And he brought him to Jesus."

Rev Harry Taylor is a very pleasing speaker, and draws many beautiful and practical illustrations from the riches of his eighteen years' experience, as an evangelist.

The Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray Street Baptist Church was present, and closed the meeting with prayer and benediction.

The public are most cordially invited to the meeting to-night at 7.45.

THERE IS NO QUESTION OF JOINT RESPONSIBILTY

County Must Assume the Responsibility—Former Minister Did Not Give Assurance That Government Would Relieve the County of Obligation.

The County Council in deputation to Ottawa did not take up that matter of the $3,000 claim of the Government. The Minister was very busy with other deputations.

That the County cannot escape the liability is evidenced by the statements made by the Minister of Railways and Canals.

THE MINISTER'S REPLY.

The following is a copy of a letter of reply by Hon. Frank Cochrane to Mr. Ed. Elliott. County Clerk, who wrote the Minister of Railways and Canals at the request of the Conuty Council:

Nov. 29, 1912.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 27th enclosing resolution re Buckhorn Dam and Bridge.

The preamble of the resolution refers to double jurisdiction and responsibility on the part of the Government and the County, which would result in conflict of authority and unsatisfactory maintenance. As to this I would refer you to the agreement $16,664 entered into on July 2nd, 1907, between His Majesty the King and the County of Peterborough in which the county pledged itself on the completion of the bridge and its delivery for use as a highway to pay the sum of $3,000, and furthermore, "on said delivery be liable for and assume all responsibility, liability, costs and expenses for the proper maintenance and repairs of the bridge, etc., etc."

From this you will see that there is no question of joint responsibility. The responsibility is bound to be assumed by the county. I note what you say regarding the action of a former Minister of Railways who undertook to submit to the Government in Council an order to relieve the county of this obligation. He made it plain, however, that there was no assurance that the Government would pass such an order, and as a matter of fact the order was based upon incorrect information, the County assuming in return to hand over to the Department certain lands which the Department has already acquired.

The resolution states further that the bridge in question was formally taken over and assumed by the Government. No one having authority to represent the Government has formally assumed and taken over the bridge. The bridge has been built as requested by the county. It has not been formally turned over to the county because the county has not yet paid the $3,000 covenanted and agreed upon. When that is paid the formalities necessary to the formal transfer of the bridge to the county will be attended to.

Very truly yours,
Signed F. COCHRANE.
Ed. M. Elliott, Esq.,
County Clerk and Treasurer.

PETERBORO DEPUTATION RETURN FROM OTTAWA

Were Assured That Trent Canal Work Will be Taken up by Government.

Peterborough's deputation to Ottawa returned home this morning reasonably pleased with the outcome of their visit and the assurances given them relative to the advancement of work on the Trent Valley Canal.

There were about thirty representatives from Peterborough and the County, forming the largest part of the delegation which numbered about fifty altogether. Other municipalities along the Trent Waterway were represented, but none as largely or effectively as Peterborough.

City Clerk S. R. Armstrong had the task of presenting the city's interest in the completion of the Canal.

Mr. W. H. Bennett, M. P., for North Simcoe introduced the deputation briefly and Mr. Armstrong then presented the case for Peterborough. He treated the question first in a general manner, referring to its importance to the Province as a whole and then referring more particularly on its importance to the City of Peterborough and the necessity of a southern outlet. His speech which covered the ground very thoroughly occupied about twenty minutes.

Representatives from Orillia, Midland, North York and Newmarket also addressed the Premier, presenting the interests of their respective municipalities.

Premier Borden tendered the deputation a very close and attentive hearing and at the conclusion asked that their presentations should be placed in writing and forwarded to the Department where they would receive thorough consideration.

Hon. Frank Cochrane and Colonel the (Hon.) Sam Hughes were with Premier Borden at the consultation.

The Premier stated that it was the policy of the Government to encourage and build up the transportation facilities and with that object in mind the deputations' requests were promised fullest possible consideration.

President Vincent Eastwood of the Board of Trade is well pleased with the result of the deputation's visit and with Premier Borden's optimistic reply.

Eight members of the City Council were among the deputation including Mayor Bradburn who did not return, being detained in Ottawa. All of the County Council were represented.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., T. E. Bradburn ex-M.P.P., O. H. Pennefather, W. H. Dunford, Mr. Jas Kendry and J. J. Turner, Jr., were also present.

POLICE CHIEF MAKES REPORT

Principal Kenner Draws Attention to Poor Ventilation

Police Chief Thompson made a report at the meeting of the Board of Education last night of the investigations of the Police as to the culprits who did the damage to the Collegiate on Hallowe'en.

The Chief received news of the affair on the following morning and detailed some of his men to work on the case.

A man who witnessed the 'doings' after swearing the Chief not to reveal his name disclosed to him some names. As the Chief has yet received no further information, the matter cannot be brought up in court without the necessary evidence. It was decided that the matter be placed in the hands of the Property Committee with power to advertise a reward for information.

LETTER FROM THE PRINCIPAL

A letter was read from Principal H. R. H. Kenner, of the Collegiate, drawing the attention of the Board to the following matters—

The poor ventilation.

The necessity of providing a case for the Biological Specimens, as they are being ruined by exposure to dust and moths.

The necessity of providing uniforms for the cadets.

Inquiring as to whether school should open January 3 or 6.

It was decided that clause (a) be referred to the Property Committee; that clause (b) and (c) be referred to the Supervision Comm[illegible] and that the schools re-open on [illegible]uary 6th.

When darning a stocking try putting it over your own shoe tree. It is more satisfactory than darning it over a wooden egg darner.

When mice trouble you, hunt their entrances to the pantry or cupboard and plaster them with a mixture of soft soap and red pepper.

KEIR HARDIE TO ASK ABOUT SHIPS

London, Dec 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The reported Indian naval contribution, which is now generally discredited, will be raised in the Commons today, when Keir Hardie will ask the Under-Secretary for India whether he has any information concerning the gift from certain ruling princes in India to the British navy of a battleship and nine cruisers of an estimated value of $10,000,000 sterling, and if not, what action he proposes to take to prevent the circulation of false statements, calculated to give annoyance to ruling Indian chiefs.

STORY OF THE SEXTANT.

A Chance Observation That Gave Godfrey a Great Idea.

The element of chance plays an important role in invention and in no case is this more strikingly illustrated than in that of Thomas Godfrey, the American who improved upon the quadrant, or, rather, devised the sextant, the basic notion for which he got by noting the reflection of the sun from a pail of water.

Godfrey was a glazier by trade, but he had a taste for mathematics and was a man of some culture.

John Hadley had also invented a sextant, apparently a development of a suggestion of Newton's, found among his papers at his death. Godfrey anticipated Hadley by about one year, but for a long time his claims were not recognized, Hadley receiving the entire credit.

The glazier thus received his inspiration for the instrument that was to prove of such value to mariners. One day, while replacing a pane of glass in a window of a house in Philadelphia opposite a pump, he saw a girl, after filling her pail, put it upon the sidewalk. The observant glazier saw the sun reflected from the window on which he had been at work into the bucket of water. His mind quickly perceived the significance of the situation, and he was thus led to the design of an instrument "for drawing the sun down to the horizon," a device incomparably superior to any that had hitherto been used for the ascertainment of angular measurements.—Harper's Weekly.

Turnbull & Co., takes over the Gent's Furnishing and Hat departments of his store. The transfer under the agreement must be completed by March 1st. The deal has been pending for some time, but proceedings had not developed sufficiently until to-day when the deal was put through, to permit of a definite announcement being made.

Mr. Barrie stated to-day that they will retain the retail fur business here and that the reason for disposing of the other part of their business was owing to the great growth of their fur manufacturing business, the output of the Regina, and Saskatoon branches compelling them to seek larger quarters.

"We have decided to build a larger establishment," said Mr. Barrie, "to handle the wholesale fur manufacturing as well as our retailing business, but at the present stage the project has not sufficiently matured to permit giving a definite statement of its location. Two factors amongst others which must be considered, will be the ability to secure sufficient and expert help, and also the taking into consideration of the best location for wholesaling.

The Gents' furnishings and Hat departments of Barrie's, Limited, will be cleared out in an immense sale by Mr. Might, after the J. C. Turnbull Company obtain possession on March 1st. Afterwards the stores will be remodelled and merged into one, the entire Simcoe street side to be plate glass, and when completed, is expected to be one of the finest, largest and most up-to-date stores in the city.

No matter where the factory location may be, one thing is assured, that the fur retail business of Barrie's, Ltd., will remain in Peterborough.

EXPERIENCES OF A GREAT EXPLORER

Christmases I Have Known

By SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON

In asking me to write "Christmases I have known," I presume the editor does not desire me to refer to those early Christmases looked forward to with anticipation, looked back to with the somewhat mingled feelings that have resulted from pleasures and presents on the one side and a surplus of food on the other. Rather, I suspect it is to Christmases in out-of-the-way parts of the world, where the good things of the festive season loomed larger in one's mind because of their absence.

In a somewhat long sea career of twenty years, I naturally have spent varied Christmases—"in heat among the tropics, in ice among the floes."

In a Gale off Cape Horn.

My first Christmas away from home was spent in a gale of wind off Cape Horn in an old sailing ship. Twenty odd years ago life was harder than it is now, and after weeks of weevilly biscuits and salt junk, we killed the pig for Christmas, and celebrated the day with roast pork and a plum pudding with a larger modicum of raisins than generally obtains at sea. The ship was under top-sails, thrashing into a south-west gale. The giant combers, with the free run of the Southern Ocean before and behind them, hammered at our steel sides and swept over the decks. Intermittent snow storms added to our discomfort, and a hard four hours' work reefing topsails gave us an appetite for our Christmas fare. It was a work of skill to go from the steaming galley down into the dark quarters where we lived—or rather existed. In those days it was four hours on watch and four off, and I remember that night that we had hardly turned into our sodden bunks when it was all hands to take in the fore topsail. The result of the order was that we spent about three-quarters of an hour, after clewing up the sail, aloft in the icy wind, every now and then the nearly-conquered sail ripping forth from under us with a report like a cannon; and when finally the last gasket was made fast round the sail, we descended to be greeted by the sluicing seas. All thoughts and sentiments of Christmas had disappeared from our minds, and we were only too ready to drop asleep in our wet clothes. So much for Christmas spent off Cape Horn.

Stranded on Yorkshire Coast.

Another and still more uncomfortable Christmas was spent much nearer home—in fact, on Boxing Day, we were too near the shores of old England, being ashore on the Yorkshire coast in another heavy gale. We left London on Christmas Eve to go to Middlesbrough, there to load for the Far East. Christmas morning broke cold and stormy. As we staggered along the east coast northwards, we thought of the pleasant firesides and comfortable homes we had left. All through Christmas Day we fought the head seas, and it was one of the weariest days I have ever known. Early morning, Boxing Day, we were close in to the Yorkshire coast. Through misadventure, our boilers ran down, and about 6 o'clock that night we drifted on to the coast. The ship heeled over, and it looked as though we should have to abandon her at once. On board were eight Britishers and forty Chinese. The Chinese seemed to consider that it was time to take to the boats—an opinion not shared by the captain of the ship—and it was somewhat more than gentle persuasion to point this out to them, as they came trooping to the boats with all their household goods. It was a peculiar sight to see them, with their bundles—and especially the inevitable umbrellas—struggling for the boats. The ship was lying over at an angle of about forty degrees, and during the night some powerful tugs came out, but it was impossible to do more than stand by. When morning broke, with infinite trouble they took hold of our ship, and on high tide she was eventually refloated, but leaking very badly.

Christmases in Many Lands.

One Christmas Day was spent in India at the somewhat early age of eighteen, hunting a two-horned rhinoceros. I did not shoot the animal, but nearly managed to shoot an unfortunate beater, who, to my somewhat untravelled eyes, appeared like a rhinoceros moving among the reeds. It was hard to imagine it Christmas Day, the only tangible sign of it being the plum pudding borne in at dinner time by a dusky-faced Indian clothed in white. The punkahs were in full swing, and the night was warm, and I remember well thinking what a travesty of Christmas it was.

Since then I have spent Chistmases in Peru, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil, America, and many other quarters of the world, but naturally the Christmases that I spent in the South Polar regions stand out in memory more vividly than any others, because on two occasions they were accompanied with extreme hunger before and extreme hunger after, the actual days themselves being red-letter ones because of a slight increase of food. Heaven knows there was enough local coloring in the ice and snow which surrounded us for thousands of miles to make up for the traditional Christmases of long ago, but I found that the ice and snow had been dissipated over the years and the food of other days concentrated on these two occasions.

Near the South Pole.

In 1902 we were a little party of three men, working South towards that elusive goal—the Southern apex of the world. With our party were some nine dying dogs, almost on their last legs with scurvy. Ahead of us lay a range of mountains, whose stern peaks dared the blue of the cloudless sky. I can see again the great cliffs of deep-brown granite capped by three or four hundred feet of snow, and to our hungry minds the first simile we could think of was how like a gigantic Christmas cake. These cliffs some 1000 feet high lay on our right. To the left stretched away the great plain of snow across which we were travelling. The mirage danced on the near horizon, throwing up little pinnacles of ice into the forms of castles and fortresses. All the morning we had trudged, pulling at our sledges with our tents and stores behind. At one o'clock came the welcome word "Lunch." The harness dropped from our tired bodies, and in a few minutes the tent was up, and the welcome hiss of the stove told us that Christmas lunch was under way. Little scraps of bacon, saved up carefully, bits of broken biscuit over and above our actual ration, were all mixed up in one glorious pot of hoosh. Too soon was the pannikin of hoosh finished, but it was washed down with an extra strong brew of tea. Mightily refreshed, we buckled on our harness again, and rolled off some eight miles across the snow plain until, at six o'clock at night, we stopped for the day. The tent was up again, the stove hissed out its welcome message once more, and a still thicker pot of hoosh was our reward. Then came the long looked-for extras. My companions produced some cigarettes and some extra biscuit, and I, after a dive into my sleeping bag, brought out from the toe of a clean sock a little plum pudding about the size of a cricket ball. The oil ration was very small, and in order to save fuel we boiled the plum pudding in the water that eventually was used for the cocoa, but never did pudding taste more delicious. A little sprig of holly still further heightened the Christmas effect, and when all was over we turned into our sleeping-bags with the thought that at least we had had a Christmas feed. Thus passed Noel of 1902.

Out of the World.

The Christmas of 1908 arrived in far sterner conditions. Again we were on a journey towards the Pole, again we were hungry, but far more hungry than the time before. Our party consisted of four. We were nearly 9000 feet above the sea, having conquered the mountains that lay before us on the previous journey. There were now no dogs, food rations were much shorter, and the cold was much more severe. We had been crossing great undulations capped with crevasses for the last few days, and a bitter wind from the South blew dead in our faces. Our clothes were worn, our strength was rapidly decreasing, and a Christmas dinner was more eagerly looked forward to. We felt more than ever that we were out of the world—a little speck perched up in an immensity of ice and snow. The same sun shone down on us, but now it seemed to impart no warmth, and yet the sense of Christmas was with us. I remember on this last Christmas we did nearly fifteen miles' marching, and the wind was increasing as we put our tent up at night to celebrate the occasion. We had already at lunch taken a photograph of our camp, with the flag flying, and as I look at it now I notice the ice around our faces where breath froze and our beards stuck to our clothing. That night, in addition to the biscuit and ordinary hoosh, we had some of our last ill-fated pony's ration, consisting of dried carrots, currants, and maize, and when the lid was lifted from the cooking pot it was not long before the contents of that pot were transferred to our insides. We finished that dinner with another plum pudding and a spoonful of creme de menthe in a 2 oz. bottle, given to us before we left by a friend in Scotland. We luxuriously puffed a cigar each after dinner, then got into our sleeping-bags (first to think, then to dream of home. The existence of the plum pudding this time was known to the whole party.

ERNEST SHACKLETON

When we started from winter quarters we had as well one tin of sardines and a 1 lb. pot of black currant jam, but in our stern determination to cut down weight, made necessary by the deep snow and falling ponies, we decided these two luxuries. We could not afford to drag a continuous weight of two extra pounds from November till the end of December, and so sardines and jam had to remain behind. I may add that they became mightily useful on our return journey, when we picked them up, arriving at the depot with no food left in the locker.

Thus passed our Antarctic Christmases. It lies on the knees of the gods at present as to where future ones will be spent, but wherever they may be, those memories of the Southern days will be the most vivid to me.

TAKEN AT HER WORD

A Conspiracy That Was Eminently Successful.

By JOANNA SINGLE.

John Mason did not slam the gate simply because he knew that this manifestation of rage would surely delight Rosalie. She was watching his departure from the window, and he was angrily conscious that she knew he would, as usual, return in a few days, although she had said she hoped she would be rid of him for awhile. She was so young and so beautiful—and so provoking!

At the entrance to the little park, already growing green in the April sun, he met her sister. He did not know Anne very well—he had been too busy with Rosalie. He wished now that he had made friends with her; her blue eyes were so like and still so unlike Rosalie's. Anne stepped in front of him and stopped him unceremoniously.

"Been trampled upon again!" she observed. "John Mason, for so clever a man generally you're sometimes an awful—fool!" She submitted this thoughtfully, in a voice too gentle to be insulting.

"Then you and Rosalie are agreed, and I suppose you are expert testimony. May I turn and walk with you?"

She nodded and then asked a matter of fact question, "How many times has she refused you?"

"I had not thought to keep count. Rosalie just now informed me that this was the last time. I didn't know I had been the same sort of—fool so often. But don't you think she ought to give me credit for my persistence. Not every man proposes so many times—to the same girl."

Anne laughed dryly as he continued:

"I would have given up long ago if I were not unexplainably sure that she does—care for me. In fact, she never has said directly that she does not. She simply says she won't marry me. What's the matter with me? Am I too rich? I can give away the stuff if she likes. Am I too successful? I might lose a case to please her. Should I be as ugly as Satan? Perhaps she would like a beauty and the beast effect! What does she want? I've said and done everything under heaven, and she walks on me—she trails me!"

"Precisely! That's why I called you—what I did. A girl likes to trail a man, but hates the man that will be trailed. Not logical, is it? To use her own words, you are always around, underfoot. You give her no time to want you or miss you or think about you. She's too sure of you. She knows just where you'll be. You never let her want anything bad enough to appreciate it when it comes. She has always had her own way. She needs to be a bit afraid of you. She needs to be bullied."

He frowned. "I am not a brute. That is not my way."

"No? Well, what has your way accomplished?"

He tried to laugh. "Oh, I'll take your advice. I'll do anything you say. It can't be worse than it is now."

"Well, I hate the responsibility. If you get her you'll fight. If you don't you'll both be miserable anyhow. You must get her—and then work out your own salvation. In the first place, you must give her a shock. Write her a note and accept your dismissal. Tell her you begin to see that she is right and that you wish to be friendly with her and the family. Then call sometimes—on the father or on me. Don't stay away. Absences of that sort are flattering. You must be quite unaffected by her presence."

"You know that is impossible. You know how the sight of her"—

"You've got to do it! And you must take another girl out occasionally. Being naturally modest, I dislike to suggest that you send me flowers sometimes and come for a walk with me. That will bring things home to her. A girl hates to have an admirer transfer himself bodily to any one, but especially to her sister."

When they had planned their campaign and he left Anne at the gate she had him laughing. Rosalie saw them and shrugged her shoulders. While removing her hat in the hall Anne remarked to her sister:

"Well, dear, John tells me that you have dismissed him for good. You know I never would have interfered if you had wanted him, but I am glad you do not. Now you may find time for your music. Your talent is too marked to be neglected. It will be a relief for you to have him out of the way awhile. You're too young to leave father and me, and, after all, I think you're right about his not being the right man for you."

Rosalie shrugged her shoulders.

The next day Rosalie, without comment, handed Anne this note:

"Dear Miss Carleton—I want to thank you for your frankness of yesterday, and I assure you that I shall not annoy you again as I have in the past. Can you forgive me for having troubled you so much and so long? You are probably right in deciding that I could not make you happy, as I hoped to be able to do. May I hope to continue my present friendly relations with you and the rest of the family? If it may I will not again trespass on your kindness. It will be, as you said, the last time you shall have the pain of refusing. Yours sincerely,

JOHN MASON."

"Well, I like a man to know when he's had enough," remarked Anne. Again Rosalie shrugged her shoulders and made a wry little face.

For a week Rosalie was blithe and busy with her music. The second week Anne observed that the gayety was a bit forced and that during the third she moped a little. John had somehow kept the other men of her set away from her, and flowers and drives and theaters were less frequent. She had no time to miss him.

In the fourth week he called—while she was out. Of course she could not know that Anne had phoned him to come. He was leaving just as Rosalie entered and shook hands with her cordially. He did not look broken hearted, and he seemed to be of very good terms with Annie, to whom next morning he sent some violets. Rosalie saw him out walking with Mary Dye. Then he took Anne driving. She began to realize that Anne was very pretty if she was a year or two older than John.

Rosalie's irritation reached its climax one morning at the breakfast table when her younger brother Ted remarked in a teasing drawl:

"John seems to be taking his medicine like a man, Rosy! He's all right, and I am glad Anne seems inclined to keep him in the family. He probably appreciates being treated like a human being after the way you always walked on him. The fellows say he's the best young lawyer in town. But I should think you'd hate to have him take his punishment so cheerfully, Rosy!"

By this time Rosalie had reached the limit of endurance. She sprang up and, before any one could interfere, had boxed Ted's ears soundly and fled to her room. No one made comment on the scene save that Mr. Carleton amusedly met the laughter in Anne's eyes and told Ted that he would have no more of his teasing. Rosalie's capricious treatment of John had long been disapproved of by her family, and, while they were all sorry for her, they thought it time she should come to her senses.

Time had been slow and torturing to John. He wanted to tell Rosalie that he loved her and her only. He wanted to send her flowers, to give her every desire of her heart, and he found it a misery to see her or not to see her. Meantime he was very attentive to Anne, who was becoming vastly bored with his raptures and sorrows and was longing for him to win his Rosalie and let her go back to her old peaceful ways.

At last one night Anne waked and heard Rosalie sobbing to herself. In the morning she pleaded headache and stayed in her room till nearly evening. Anne had a long conference by telephone with John and took pains to have her father and Ted spend the evening elsewhere.

After dinner she went to Rosalie's room and pleaded being tired. She coaxed Rosalie to arrange her pretty hair and don a pretty gown so she could go down if any one should come. While Rosalie was sulkily doing as her sister wished Anne heard the bell and slipped down to answer it. She came back saying it was some one for her father and asked Rosalie if she would mind going to the library and bringing the book she had left on the table.

Rosalie, in her trailing blue dress, went downstairs and through the hall into the library. She had half crossed the room before she saw John sitting in a great chair in the dim firelight. She wanted to flee from him, but somehow her feet would not move, nor did she find a word to say. Then, to her dismay, she knew that a slow tear was falling down her cheek. John came quickly toward her. It seemed very comfortable to be leaning against him. After awhile he held her off and looked at her. She tried to smile.

"Well," he questioned, "how shall it be? You know you said you hoped you would never have to refuse me again. I hope you will not. Just for variety, suppose you—take me."

After the little minutes had cunningly slipped away and it was time that he should leave her Rosalie exclaimed in dismay:

"Oh, Anne's book! She will be waiting for it."

"I hardly think so," John asserted dryly. "Your sister Anne is wise. She knew better than to expect you in a moment when she sent you down to me!"

"Sent me to you!" Rosalie echoed.

"Yes, my lady! Do you imagine your sister has been trailing me about for her pleasure? She is more glad to be rid of me than—ever you were!"

"Then—it—was not—Anne—ever?"

John laughed and bade her good night.

"If you were not perfectly sure that it was 'not—Anne—ever,' you would never, never have asked me!" which both of them knew to be true.

And Anne went to bed and slept the sleep of one who has successfully performed her duty.

Austrian Red Tape and a Funeral.

A funeral party at Roveredo was upset by the Austrian tariff. Two of the chief mourners came from Italy, bringing a wreath to which silk ribbon bearing an inscription was attached. At the Austrian frontier a duty of £5 was demanded on this. Vehement protests elicited the explanation that although flowers pay no duty silk pays a high one, and the amount asked for was assessed on the total weight of the wreath. After a prolonged discussion it was decided to discard the ribbon.

"Then," said the customs officer, "you must go back to Italy. If the ribbon is thrown away here you are still liable for the duty." By the time the mourners had dropped the ribbon on Italian soil their train had gone, and they reached Roveredo three hours too late for the funeral.

The "movies" offer many homeless "boarders" a happy solution of an old, old problem.

Sometimes, hamburg steak is dry and tasteless. Put two or three tablespoons of fresh cream or milk and a few bread crumbs in with it.

Twenty-five per cent of industrial accidents, it is estimated, are due to insufficient illuminations.

SCIATICA
EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by "Nerviline."

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. In order to build up my general health and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

CURED SIX YEARS

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." 50 cents per bottle, trial size, 25c; sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

NEW CUB MANAGER TOOK HIS CHOICE OF THE GOOD ONES

New York, Dec. 4.—Among National League teams Chicago profited most by the lack of control of opposing pitchers during the 1912 season, according to the official records on bases on balls and strike outs issued at National League headquarters. Chicago team received 560 bases on balls, an average of 3.68 per game. Cincinnati had the least number of strike-outs, 492, an average of 3.17 per game. New York finished second in both items, receiving 514 passes and having 497 strike-outs.

Scheckard tops the list in receiving walks, outguessing the pitcher 122 times in 146 games. Huggin, with 87 passes in 120 games, also stands prominent. Other good walkers were Paskert, Bescher, Titus, Evers, Carey and Leach. Pitcher Benton did not receive a pass in the 50 games he played.

Evers is the leader in the least number of strike-outs with 18 in 142 games, an average of one in eight games. Doyle, of New York, is a close second with 20 in 142 games. McDonald, of Boston, had the greatest number—91 in 121 games. Marsans, Tinker, Knabe, Meyers, Gutshaw, McLean, Gibson and Killifor have low figures. Zimmerman, who led the league in batting, struck out 60 times and received 33 bases on balls.

HE HAS HAD METEORIC RISE

New Lightweight Champion Subbed For Wolgast

When Willie Ritchie won the lightweight championship of the world from Addie Wolgast, it meant that his fortune was practically made. In all probability he will soon be credited with $100,000 in the right side of the ledger.

It certainly must have been an incentive for an inspiring youth. Ritchie has made a meteoric rise. Just a year ago on the 27th of November, he and Billie Kyle landed in Los Angeles, unknown and unheralded. There for a meager sum he jumped into the ring and fought Fred. Welsh, as a sub. for Ad. Wolgast who had been operated upon for appendicitis but a few hours before.

What he did on that day, the world fighting fraternity knows. He boxed 20 rounds with Freddie Welsh then recognized as one of the craftiest ringmen in the game. And he did so with the ordinary light work that came his way while assisting Packy McFarland to get in condition for a bout with "Harlem Tommy" Murphy in Los Angeles.

After that Willie was taken about by his then manager, Emil Thiery, and worked as a stable mate with the clever Packy. Ritchie boxed eight times in as many weeks, and was successful in almost every match. His last notable scrap was with Mandot in New Orleans. Following this battle he came to San Francisco and began laying wires for the chance to meet Addie Wolgast for the lightweight championship.

There was no hitch when it came to signing up the articles, for Willie agreed at the outset that it should be at 133 pounds ringside.

The fight on Thanksgiving Day was purely a test of stamina, and the Californian outlasted the Cadillac boy. While the former champion had perhaps the slight edge on the fight to the last rounds, it looks as though the better fighter had been proclaimed the new champion.

SPORTING GOSSIP

W. B. Hancock of Toronto has been appointed referee of the Cleveland-Detroit inter-city hockey games at Cleveland on Friday and Saturday nights of this week. Mr. Hancock has also been asked to coach the Bowmanville Club of the O.H.A. and may take charge of the squad upon his return from Cleveland.

Ray Marchand, the former Kingston goal keeper, is having a week's holiday at Atlantic City, but writes that he will be in Toronto next Monday, to practice with the Toronto hockey professionals. Marchand played in Cleveland last winter. He thinks he can make the position of goal keeper on the Toronto pros.

TWO O.H.A. TEAMS FOR PORT HOPE

Port Hope, Dec. 4.—A meeting of hockey enthusiasts was held in the rink last evening for organization purposes, and the attendance augurs well for a successful season here. Teams will be entered in the junior and intermediate series of the O.H.A. There appears to be material for good teams in the two classes.

JOHNSON WEDS CAMERON GIRL

Negro Preacher Tied the Knot at Home of Pugilists Mother

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, yesterday afternoon married Miss Lucille Cameron, the 19-year-old white girl of Minneapolis who recently appeared as a witness against him before the Federal Grand Jury which returned indictments charging him with violations of the Mann Act. The ceremony was performed by a negro preacher at the house of Johnson's mother, on the South Side.

The prizefighter said a moving-picture concern had agreed to pay him $5,000 to make a film of the wedding, which is scheduled to take place at the home of his aged mother on the South Side, the ceremony to be performed by the pastor of St. Mark's African Methodist Episcopal Church.

"I had a long talk with Miss Cameron yesterday," said Johnson. "I explained that I had been blamed for ill-treating her and that we might as well be married right away. She is alone in the world now. Her mother has left her and her father is quoted as saying he wants to have nothing more to do with her."

Mrs. F. Cameron-Falconnet today declared:—"I had to give up the fight when Lucille disappeared last Wednesday night. My struggle is over."

Watching Hotelmen.

Guelph, Dec. 4.—Provincial License Inspector Cory of Toronto is a visitor in the city to-day. He comes on official business connected with the department and is probing into the returns made by some of the local hotelkeepers. It is understood the Department is not at all satisfied with the amount of money received from some of the local hotels, and the inspector is making every effort to find out whether the returns are correct or not.

It is understood that the officials have a complete list of all liquors bought by these hotels and have been suspicious for some time about the returns.

Engineer Is Exonerated.

North Bay, Dec. 4.—Police Magistrate Weegar yesterday acquitted Herbert Shepherd, a locomotive engineer, charged with wilful omission or neglect of duty, endangering the lives of Thomas O'Keefe and others in connection with a collision on the C.P.R. near Mattawa, on Aug. 31 last, between a work train running caboose first and a through freight train, resulting in six deaths.

The evidence given showed that the accused engineer believed that the through freight train had passed and acted on the signals of the conductor, who was killed in the wreck.

MOON LOTUS

Story of a Lost Pearl

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I have lost the pearl," declared Lane Wendell moodily, "but I am hanging around Tokyo hoping that I may get some trace of it. Jessup, there's a little fortune tied up in that gem."

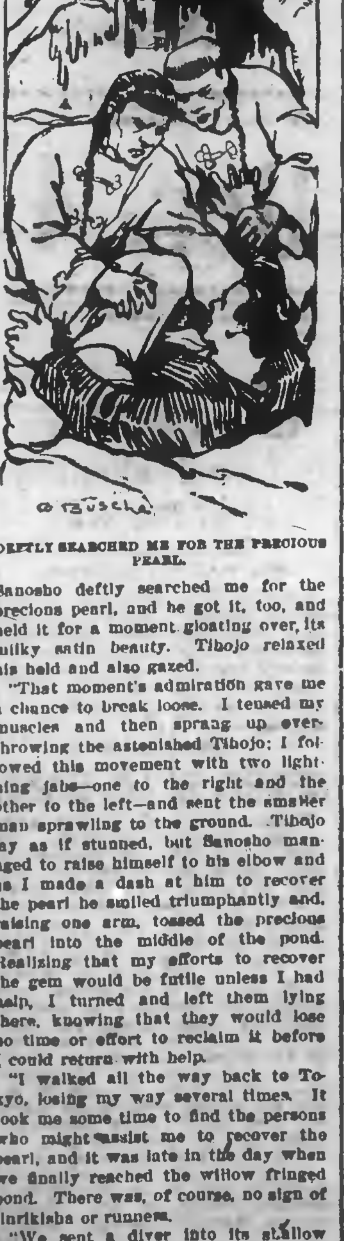
"So I should judge," returned Jessup sympathetically. "How did you lose it?"

"The old story of over confidence in one's fellow men. My purchase must have been printed in the newspapers from one end of Japan to the other for everyone appeared to know about it and consquently it wasn't surprising that my jinrikisha men should guess that it might be concealed upon my person on the day that I went forth to view the festival of cherry blossoms. They were said to be remarkably beautiful in a small village about ten miles from Tokyo, and it was with that point in view that I set out one fine day with two strong runners in attendance—one to relieve the other between the shafts.

"We never reached the village, for the rascal led us by devious ways through a lonely countryside and to the banks of a little pond where drooping willows quite concealed us, if that precaution was necessary in a locality where we had not seen a house or a human being for miles of our journey.

"'If our honorable master will condescend to alight upon the shores of this exquisite lake we will serve the delicious meal our master ordered us to bring,' said Sanosho, the most mild eyed of the pair.

"Quite unsuspecting I got out of the car and sat down beneath the willows when immediately the two fell upon me and while Tibojo held me with hands and knees like steel, the gentle Sanosho deftly searched me for the precious pearl, and he got it, too, and held it for a moment gloating over its milky satin beauty. Tibojo relaxed his hold and also gazed.



DEFTLY SEARCHED ME FOR THE PRECIOUS PEARL.

"That moment's admiration gave me a chance to break loose. I tensed my muscles and then sprang up overthrowing the astonished Tibojo; I followed this movement with two lightning jabs—one to the right and the other to the left—and sent the smaller man sprawling to the ground. Tibojo lay as if stunned, but Sanosho managed to raise himself to his elbow and as I made a dash at him to recover the pearl he smiled triumphantly and, raising one arm, tossed the precious pearl into the middle of the pond. Realizing that my efforts to recover the gem would be futile unless I had help, I turned and left them lying there, knowing that they would lose no time or effort to reclaim it before I could return with help.

"I walked all the way back to Tokyo, losing my way several times. It took me some time to find the persons who might assist me to recover the pearl, and it was late in the day when we finally reached the willow fringed pond. There was, of course, no sign of jinrikisha or runners.

"We sent a diver into its shallow depths without success. It was a hopeless task from the beginning for us. It is probable that Sanosho measured the distance and could calculate where the pearl fell into the water. If he did he could at least confine his search to a smaller radius than that afforded by our ignorance.

"So after awhile I called the men off the job and paid them."

"What will be your next move?" asked Jessup thoughtfully.

"Go home if I don't hear anything within another fortnight. I simply cannot understand the situation. Somehow I have an uncomfortable feeling that there is more behind the theft of the pearl than appears in the mere robbery. I never told you how I came by it.

"It belonged among the family jewels of a prince in the mikado's household. The prince was in financial difficulties and offered the gem for private purchase. My firm in New York was ready to snap up such an opportunity, and my cable to them brought back the reply. 'Purchase at once; draw on us.'

"The purchase was concluded with a great deal of secrecy on the part of the prince, who told me that his wife was very ill and that the purchase money for the pearl was to be used to defray the expenses of a costly operation that would save the life of his wife. This the proud Japanese told me with tears in his black eyes.

"I have learned in the last week that the wife of the prince has just undergone the operation and that she is now safely on the road to recovery. I wrote him a letter of congratulation on this fact, but have not heard a word in reply and suppose I have shocked his sense of propriety. You know there is so much ceremony involved in the interchange of letters in this country that I am continually getting myself in hot water in that respect." Lane Wendell smiled ruefully.

"I don't see how the Jap could take offense at a kindly inquiry, no matter how unceremoniously it was framed," protested Jessup, rising and stretching his form luxuriously.

"You don't know 'em!" declared Wendell, also rising. "Come on and take a walk with me."

"Perhaps we will run across your missing jinrikisha man."

"No such good luck."

Their idle strolling led them along a pleasant thoroughfare into the open country. Here, at the parting of two ways, they met a peasant girl, a seller of bamboo baskets, who looked at them from calm, childish eyes. She held forth a round basket and spoke softly in the vernacular which Wendell understood.

"Honorable sirs, I have here the root of the moon lotus. Will you not be pleased to buy?"

"Your flowers look dead, O Blossom of the Plum," said Wendell courteously.

"They are only sleeping, my lord," said the maid timidly.

"Incredible!" murmured Wendell.

"Pardon my exceedingly bad manners, oh, honorable sirs," she humbly begged, "but pray which one of you is the illustrious American, Misteer Wendell?"

"She has probably followed us from the hotel," said Wendell in English as he gave her his card, upon which was inscribed his name in both English and Japanese characters.

"I am deeply grateful for your kindness to a most unmannerly girl," she murmured as she presented the basket to Wendell. She did not look at the coin he gave her, but dropped it in her wide sleeve, and with a pretty obeisance clattered away on her wooden clogs.

"What do you make of it, Jessup?" said Wendell as they turned back toward the city.

"I won't be ass enough to say you've made a conquest, for it was a most businesslike proceeding. You're sure there isn't a bomb concealed in that basket?"

Wendell peered within. "Nothing except the plant and a slip of paper with Japanese characters—probably the directions for causing this magic plant to bloom."

"She called it 'moon lotus,' didn't she?" asked Jessup late that evening as he joined Wendell in the latter's apartment.

"Yes. I've read the directions. They are simple. All we have to do is to submerge the whole plant in warm water, set it in the moonlight and wait for results. Here's a copper dish, and I've ordered a jar of warm water—ah, here it comes now."

They waited until the servant had left the room and then Wendell wheeled a small table into the moonlight that streamed through the open window. He filled the shallow copper dish with warm water and plunged the dried roots and withered petals to the bottom. Then he put out the lamp and drew a chair beside Jessup's, close to the table.

"Now let us see what will happen," he said with a note of curiosity in his voice.

The moonlight streamed full on the copper dish and showed the plant lying dankly in the bottom. In a few minutes, however, there seemed to be a movement there as if the plant was stirring.

Presently something writhed up and unfolded into a green lotus pad; another came and another. Then from their midst there shot up a brown bud threaded with paleness that gradually unfolded into a great pearly lotus blossom that lay on the green leaves like a fair pearl in its casket.

"So that is the moon lotus," murmured Wendell. "It is very wonderful—surely a symbol of resurrection."

"What a wonderful little people they are!" was Jessup's tribute to the magic of the rapid evolution of the living flower from the dormant roots. "Wendell—what is that?" Jessup pointed a quivering finger at the heart of the moon lotus.

Wendell, who had been searching his memory for a clue to the identity of the basket girl whom he was sure he had seen before that day, pulled himself together and looked.

"My pearl!" he cried in an awed tone.

And from the center of the waxen leaves of the moon lotus he reverently picked the large pearl which had been stolen from him a fortnight before.

"Verily, the ways of the Japanese are as delicately intricate as their carvings," commented Jessup, as they parted for the night.

But Wendell made no answer. At last he had recollected where he had seen the basket girl. She was none other than the beautiful daughter of that prince of the mikado's court from whom he had once purchased the gem.

To him the situation was very plain, but it was not to be revealed to less sympathetic ears.

PROSPECTOR RETURNS.

Captain Munn Reports a Hard Trip In Baffin's Land.

Captain H. T. Munn, in charge of the gold-seeking expedition which went to Baffin's Land aboard the steamer Algerine and lost their ship in the ice, arrived in Toronto recently from St. John's, Newfoundland, where he and his men were brought by "Lucky" Scott and his party aboard the steamer Neptune, which was bound on a similar mission to that of the Algerine. Captain Munn states that he reached Pond's Inlet safely and after trading with the Esquimeaux and taking some of them aboard to assist in prospecting, the Algerine started south down a lead in the ice. When he reached a position about fifteen miles from his objective point, he ran up against the end of the lead and as there was nothing to do but wait for the ice to move he sent a party over the ice to make a camp and followed later himself.

Four hours after he left the vessel a terrific snowstorm came up and drove the ice inland. The vessel was pinched, but lifted the first time. The second time the ice closed, however, and she failed to raise and was crushed amidships like an egg-shell, sinking in thirty-five minutes. The men aboard got the boats away with three weeks' provisions and luckily landed on the ice on the shore side, although there was such a blizzard blowing that they did not know until night whether they were on the shore side or drifting out to sea as the lead in the ice widened immediately after the sinking of the vessel.

Those who had been left with the ship sent a messenger to advise Captain Munn of the accident and then made their way back to Pond's Inlet, where he joined them. They then made the discovery that they were only supplied with three weeks' provisions for twenty-four men. There was a Government cache of food thirty miles up the inlet, but it was not known how much food it contained so he and a party made a trip with boats and dogs. They found there was a year's supply, but the weather became so rough they could not get back at once.

In the meantime the Neptune came in and after being caught in the ice was driven through the inlet and twenty miles out at sea before a terrific gale which carried ice and all with it. Having reached their objective point, which was not the same as that of Captain Munn's party, the Neptune returned and picked them up. Had not the Neptune come along it was the intention of some of the party to have tried to come south fourteen hundred miles in whale boats as soon as the water opened up.

Captain Munn was enthusiastic in his praise of the generosity of the Scott party in taking on the members of his party, as it meant seriously discommoding the members of his own expedition.

The excitement was not all over after the Neptune started south, either, Captain Munn said. She ran ashore in a strong gale in Cumberland Gulf, but it was at dead low water, and as the tide rises fourteen feet they floated without damage.

Captain Munn is thinking of making the trip again next spring with a hundred ton schooner, which he will allow to remain in the ice over the winter and prospect the following spring. Anything but placer gold, he declares, cannot be handled out of that country, as it is so hard to get ships in.

The past summer, the Esquimeaux told Captain Munn, was the worst for ice they had ever encountered.

GREENING—COLLINS

A wedding of interest to a number of Peterborough people was solemnized in St. Paul's church this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Robert Pogue officiating, when Annette Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Durham Collins, became the wife of Mr. George Henry Greening, of the Bank of British North America, Toronto, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Greening, of Dublin Ireland. The bride entered the church leaning on her father's arm, wearing her bridal robes of white duchesse satin and Limerick lace, and carrying a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Her Brussels net veil was becomingly arranged and held in place by a crown of orange blossoms. The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Eleanor Collins, and cousin, Miss Cecil Denison, of Toronto, both being similarly attired in yellow satin with overdress of silk marquisette, large black picture hats of panne velvet, and carrying bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. The groomsman was Mr. J. A. Gale, of Toronto, while Mr. W. J. Allan, of Montreal, and Mr. Llwellyn Hall of Peterborough, acted as ushers. The steps leading to the choir were prettily decorated with the foliage of the season, palms, ferns and cut flowers, while white satin ribbons showed the seats reserved for the guests. A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride's parents, where Mr. and Mrs Collins received the guests, and Mr. and Mrs. Greening the congratulations of their friends. Mrs. Collins was handsomely attired in mauve satin, old rose point lace, black velvet hat, and carried a bouquet of roses, carnations and asparagus ferns.

The bride's going away dress was a brown tailor-made tweed suit, white satin blouse and brown velvet hat. After a few days spent in New York Mr. and Mrs. Greening will sail for the Old Country, where they will visit relatives of both bride and groom.

The guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Durham Collins, Brantford; Mr. and Mrs. J. Wallis Collins, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Denison, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Belcher, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. W. THE MISSION AT LABRADOR

If the history of philanthropy in the last few decades should be written, among the outstanding names would there be any that would have shed upon them a greater lustre than that of Grenfell, of Labrador?

Many men to-day bewail in an age marked by great commercialism the passing of the "good old times" with their deeds of heroism and stern self-sacrifice with the glamour upon them which the passing years magnify, but to-day we see this same self-sacrifice and heroism exemplified in a man worthy to rank with the greatest of those who have been willing to give up many of the comforts of life for the sake of their needy fellowmen.

This shining example is Doctor Wilfred Grenfell. Who will support him in his noble work?

C.P.R.'S REQUEST FOR BIG INCREASE BEFORE CABINET

Hon. W. T. White Gives Figures Concerning Capitalization of Railroads.

Mr. Borden Denies That He Promised F. D. Monk a Plebiscite on the Navy Question.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—The House spent practically all yesterday afternoon dealing with interpolations of the Government and motions for returns, which have been congesting the order paper ever since the opening of Parliament. Many of the questions propounded were by members of the Opposition, who sought to catechise the Government, upon nearly every item of news which has appeared in the press during the Parliamentary recess.

Some of the questions dealing with the formation of the Cabinet and the declarations of Armand Lavergne respecting the same were declared out of order, but the Prime Minister took occasion to deny the report that he had even promised Mr. Monk that there should be a plebiscite upon the navy question before Canada should contribute anything to the Imperial naval defence.

Information regarding the Government's relation to the C.P.R. and G.T.R. given at question hour in the replies by Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, and Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, to queries by W. F. Maclean (South York):

Hon. Mr. White said that in August last the C.P.R. petitioned the Governor-in-council for permission to increase the capital stock by $75,000,000. President Shaughnessy, while the application was pending, intimated verbally that the company would, in addition, increase its common stock by $60,000,000, under authority of its charter. This was done on Oct. 2 last, but the application for the $75,000,000 issue is still pending. On Aug. 13, President Shaughnessy wrote the Prime Minister, enclosing a copy of a resolution passed by the board of directors on Aug. 12, asking permission to make the $75,000,000 issue, raising the C.P.R.'s capitalization from $200,000,000 to $275,000,000. While admitting that a percentage of the money required to keep pace with the country's expansion could be provided out of surplus earnings, and from other sources, the president added that "by far the largest portion must be secured by the issue and sale of the company's ordinary share capital."

Hon. Geo. H. Perley, acting for Premier Borden in the latter's absence in England, replied two days later in a letter that he would take up the matter with the Finance Minister in a few days.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane stated that Jules Horne had been appointed to represent the Government on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway directorate for the protection of the public interest, but no report had been made.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane stated, in reply to questions concerning the G.T.P., that that company, which is a contractor in the construction of the National Transcontinental between Winnipeg and Moncton, N.B., has been paid $15,454,000 for its work. The total expenditure on building and equipping the line between Winnipeg and Moncton thus far is $125,000,000. The assistance given by the Government to the G.T.P. amounts to $4,983,000; loan in 1909, $10,000,000; guarantee of bonds, $35,000,000; bond pledges, $12,745,000.

The Minister also stated that the N.T.R. from Levis to Moncton will be ready for operation by September, 1913.

Mr. White dismissed all questions respecting tariff changes with the announcement that they would be dealt with in his budget speech. He denied, however, that wire fencing was to be taken off the free list. An enquiry as to what was being done in relation to the Panama Canal tolls was also shelved upon the ground that pending diplomatic negotiations were of a confidential character.

Mr. Cochrane gave some figures as to the cost of the present investigation into the affairs of the National Transcontinental. Between February and November F. W. Gutelius received on account of salary $15,800, and Mr. George Lynch-Staunton $10,300. Both gentlemen were also allowed their own expenses. F. F. Tye, who is assisting them in their work, has been paid $100 a day and expenses.

Mr. Cochrane, replying to Hon. Geo. P. Graham, made the definite announcement that Port Nelson had been chosen as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway.

Replying to Major Sam Sharpe the Minister of Militia stated that 6,000 applications had been received for the grant of $100 each to the Fenian raid veterans, and 4,000 claims had already been allowed and paid.

Mr. Nesbitt elicited the information that between May 1 and Nov. 1 Canada's cattle exports to the United States amounted to $482,605.

CHURCHES EAGER FOR THE UNION

Presbyterians, Methodists and Congregationalists May Federate.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Canadian Presbyterians, Methodists and Congregationalists may federate during the year 1913. Great efforts are being made by the leaders to bring it into immediate operation.

Early in January, the Presbyterians, Methodists and Congregationalists will meet in joint committee to draft the federation scheme in place of the church union proposed, which failed to secure efficient Presbyterian support.

Galt Favors Commissions.

Galt, Dec. 5.—Notice of a motion has been given at the City Council to refer to a popular vote the question of transferring the public works department to a commission as with the police and parks. A waterworks committee of aldermen it is contended by the mover, is not so desirable a custodian of the $75,000 voted by the people for street improvement as would be three or four select commissioners independent of municipal council. With hydro and works commissions Galt would virtually be a commission governed town.

MORE OFFICERS GO TO SCENE OF TROUBLE IN PORCUPINE

Men Are Instructed Not to Interfere With the Strike.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—As the result of strikers attacking strikebreakers and damaging Government property in Porcupine, ten more uniformed officers were sent north by the provincial police department last night. This will mean that a squad of about () constables, gathered by the Government from the various frontier points will endeavor to quell the riots in connection with the strike in the mining district. Recent news from the north is to the effect that things have quieted down somewhat.

The officers are specially instructed not to interfere with the strike, but to try to maintain peace and arrest all unauthorised persons carrying firearms.

Four foreigners were given a hearing before Magistrate Torrence at Timmins yesterday. Leo Mascotti, Alex. Mascoti and Tuggi Ressio were fined $100 each for pointing guns on the station platform. Alex. Mascotti and Mike Coschuk were fined $5 each for causing a disturbance and Leo Mascotti was fined an additional $25 for assault.

The Thiel gun men are on trial today for the shooting which occurred on Monday.

Church Get Free Water.

Kingston, Dec. 5.—The fact that free water was given to the Church of the Good Thief (Roman Catholic), Portsmouth, by Rockwood Asylum, caused complaints to be made to Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary. The latter had one of the members of the Legislature here to make a report regarding the matter as the Minister stated no permission had been given by his Department for free water for the church. As far as can be learned the church has not paid a cent for water in the last 15 years, but it is understood that as a result of the matter being investigated a charge will now be made.

SOCIALIST PAPER OUT OF BUSINESS

Chicago, Dec. 5.—The Chicago Evening World, formerly The Daily Socialist, suspended publication yesterday owing to financial troubles too numerous and heavy to surmount. One edition was issued yesterday, in which an appeal for assistance was printed, and when this was not forthcoming the presses were stopped.

35 MILLIONS FOR 3 DREADNOUGHTS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Dec. 5. — This afternoon Premier Borden announced the Government's Naval Policy provides for a cash contribution of thirty-five million dollars for the construction of three dreadnaughts of the most modern type science can devise to be placed at the disposal of the British Admiralty with the proviso that when the crisis is past they may be recalled for the neuclus of a Canadian Navy in the event of being required; in which case the ships will be maintained by Canada instead of Britain.

GREECE EXPECTED TO SIGN THE ARMISTICE SHORTLY

It is Said That the Refusal of Greece to Agree to the Protocol Was Caused by Her Unwillingness to Weaken the League.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Constantinople, Dec. 5— The Turkish Council of Ministers has prepared a scheme for autonomous government for Albania. The project has been submitted to the Sultan for his sanction.

Paris, Dec. 5— Speaking before the committee on foreign affairs at the Chamber of Deputies this morning Premier Poincare said "we stand by our allies and our friendships." He was laying down the policy of France on the Balkan situation at the time.

London, Dec. 5.—No news has yet been received that Greece has signed the armistice, although she is expected to do so, as the protocol provides that the besieged garrisons are not to be provisioned, to which Greece had strongly objected.

The fact that Turkey has agreed to this clause is held to indicate that there is no likelihood of the immediate surrender of the fortresses.

It is possible that two conferences may be sitting concurrently at London after next week. The proposal for an ambassadorial conference reached the Austrian Foreign Office yesterday, and is said to have been sympathetically received by the Austrian Cabinet. Count von Berchthold, however, is delaying his reply, until he has consulted with the other members of the triple alliance. As Germany is known to favor the conference, it is expected that Austria will embrace the proposal and the ambassadors are likely to meet at the same time as the peace delegates.

With respect to the dispute between the allies, it appears that the Greek Government addressed last Saturday a dignified and touching appeal to the Governments of the allies, beseeching them to take no action calculated to weaken or endanger the league. At the same time Greece offered all her naval and military resources in case Turkey declined to accept terms less damaging to what Greece regarded as the allies' best interests.

It is understood that this appeal forms an important historical document, which will show that Greece, far from having any intention to break away from the league, made the strongest efforts to maintain it in its original form.

No Foodstuffs Permitted.

Constantinople, Dec. 5.—An official note issued yesterday evening says:

"An armistice has been concluded with Bulgaria, Servia, and Montenegro. The state of war with Greece continues."

Although the complete terms of the protocol have not been made public, it is learned that the question of revictualling the beleaguered towns was abandoned, the Government being satisfied that the towns were sufficiently supplied with foodstuffs to last until the conclusion of peace.

The only condition mentioned in the official communication to the press is that the troops will remain in the positions now occupied. It is understood that no limit has been placed on the armistice, which may be terminated by 48 hours' notice by either side.

It is reported that the Turkish and Bulgarian delegates will meet again to-day at Baghtche, for the purpose of arranging the preliminaries for the peace conference.

Not a Cause of Illness.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—Sensational allegations that the water supplied the people of Watertown, N.Y., from its mechanical filtration system was causing an increase of kidney disease in that city, have not been borne out by the investigations of the official delegation sent over from Ottawa to look into the situation, in view of the fact that this city has been ordered by the Provincial Health Department to install a similar system.

Controller Dr. Parent has established the fact that the number of cases of kidney disease has actually decreased.

The only trouble so far found is the presence of several cases of corrosion in hot water pipes, variously attributed to the water and to bad plumbing.

BAD TRIO ARE JAILED

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calgary, Alta., Dec. 5— Raymond Webber, Roderick Dunn and F. J. Reeves, three confessed highwaymen who started from Edmonton on an auto bandit tour to the Pacific Coast on Saturday, are in jail here and the stolen auto is stalled at Didsbury, thirty miles north. They robbed a grocery store here Tuesday night and are believed to have dynamited a safe at Edmonton last week.

PARLIAMENT HAS POWER

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (Special) — The answer to Mr. Burnham's question re the marriage laws in Federal Districts makes it plain that Parliament has the power to enact a Federal Marriage Law.

BOY LOSES LEG WHILE AT PLAY

Toronto, Dec. 5.—A boy with one leg cut off by a train was rushed to the General Hospital late yesterday afternoon in an automobile. His recovery is doubtful.

He was playing on some freight cars near the Logan avenue crossing, and fell under a moving car. After being given emergency treatment by a nearby physician he was taken to the hospital by a passing auto. His name is not yet known.

Suffragettes May Use Bombs.

London, Dec. 5.—The militant suffragettes decided at a recent meeting to resort to the use of explosives in the event of the Government refusing to incorporate woman's suffrage in the forthcoming franchise bill, according to a statement issued by a news agency yesterday.

Volunteers are to be called for to use bombs, both inside and outside the House of Commons.

ROSS HOPES FOR THE BEST

But Canada May Have to Appeal Panama Tolls.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—Canada's rights to fair use of the Panama Canal for coastwise shipping was set forth in a comprehensive way in the Senate yesterday.

Sir George Ross moved for papers relating to the Panama Canal and the decision of the United States to charge tolls on traffic, but to remit the charge in the case of American coastwise traffic.

Sir George said the advantage of the canal to commerce would be very great in the case of Canada and all countries. The canal would shorten the water route between Liverpool and Vancouver by 5,666 miles. The distance by water between Montreal and Vancouver would be reduced by 7,271 miles. The cost of sending a car of freight across Canada by rail was from $20 a ton upward, while by the canal the same quantity could be taken to Vancouver at from $6 to $9.

In concluding, he said: "To retain the present tolls on Canadian coastwise shipping is contrary, I believe, to the letter and spirit of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and will be regarded in Canada as an injustice, tending to disturb the friendly relations between the two countries which have a mutual interest in developing the resources of North America and in facilitating transportation between its widely separated coasts and seaports, and also to deepen the impression that every treaty between the U. S. and Great Britain in which we were interested was interpreted to the disadvantage of Canada, territorially and commercially.

"We have every confidence that in this case what diplomacy has done before it will do again, and if the Government of Canada has not already remonstrated against the action of Congress it is to be hoped it will do so without delay.

"Should the Washington Government still refuse, notwithstanding the protest from Canada or the Imperial Government, which has already, I understand, been made, then an appeal should be made to The Hague tribunal, to which the Governments of Great Britain and the United States have bound themselves to submit the interpretation of treaties. Canada is willing to abide by the decision of that tribunal.

"We believe that the best men in the U. S. consider such an appeal eminently proper, and that any refusal on the part of the United States to refer the question to The Hague tribunal would be discreditable to the American nation."

Hon. Mr. Lougheed complimented Sir George on his presentation of the case. As the matter was one under consideration he did not care to express an opinion. The matter was now the subject of correspondence between the British and United States Governments. Canada had not been extremely fortunate in the interpretation of treaties with the United States. That country has always been willing in these matters to take the substance and leave Canada the shadow.

THE JESUITS IN GERMANY

Warning Against a Renewal of Religious Conflict.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The Jesuit question was raised in the Reichstag yesterday by the Clerical leader, Dr. Peter Spahn, who declared that the Bundesrath's recent interpretation of the anti-Jesuit law of 1872 had made more severe the provisions of the law, thereby affronting 24,000,000 Catholics in the realm. He read a formal declaration of the Clerical Centre party to the effect that German Catholics, so far as they are represented by the Clerical party in the Reichstag, "have no confidence that the needs of the Catholics in the German Empire will receive just consideration from the Imperial Chancellor and the Bundesrath, and will order their conduct accordingly." The Chancellor replied that while 24,000,000 catholics wanted the anti-Jesuit law repealed, 40,000,000 Protestants wanted it retained, and he warned the Centrists against a renewal of the religious conflict of the seventies.

JINGO SPIRIT IS ABSENT; CANADIANS ARE CONFIDENT

They Have Faith in Their Own Destines Declares Whitney in London.

London, Dec. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The speeches at last night's Canada Club banquet were in a sense remarkable for what the speakers did not say. Not a single direct and open reference was made to the naval question, although, doubtless, the subject was uppermost in the minds of most present.

McLean Brown presided, his immediate neighbors being Rt. Hon. Walter Long, Sir H. Perks, Hon. Dr. Pyne, Hon. M. Mackenzie, Hon. A. L. Sifton, Earl Stanhope, Sir James Whitney, Sir T. Whittaker, and Hamar Greenwood, M.P. Hearty cheers rewarded McLean's endeavor to get off the stereotyped style in proposing the toast of the Dominion.

Sir James Whitney, in responding, eulogized the Duke of Connaught's tenure of office. The hope dominating the Canadian mind was that the duke would be induced to prolong his stay. Sir John A. Macdonald's prediction that the Dominion would become the outlying auxiliary forces protecting the British crown was being fulfilled. There was nothing approaching a jingo spirit in Canada, but the people were confident of their own destiny.

Hon. A. L. Sifton declared that he found the feeling formerly apparent in England that Canada would separate from the Empire now entirely disappeared.

Hon. Walter Long made no allusion to the political bearing of his recent journey to Canada, but expressed profound gratitude for the lavish hospitality shown him. Canadians were Imperialists in the truest sense and determined to take full share of the burden and make certain that the history of the British Empire would be even more glorious in the future.

Should Own Utilities.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston made the startling declaration in an address here yesterday before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress that the United States should own the coal mines of the country. He did not agree, however, with Senator Townsend of Michigan, who had preceded him, that it might be well for the Federal Government to take possession of dock sites on rivers improved by the Government, so as to keep railways from preventing water competition.

"I would be in favor," said Mayor Fitzgerald, "of having the municipality or the state and the Federal Government co-operate in the control of dock sites, but I think the local authorities should have some say."

HEAVY COST OF THE BALKAN WAR

According to the latest available estimates furnished by competent authorities, the casualty list of the Balkan War up to the signing of the armistice stands as follows:

Country.	Killed.	Wounded
Turkey...	20,000	100,000
Bulgaria...	10,000	40,000
Servia...	3,500	15,500
Montenegro...	800	5,000
Greece...	300	2,200
Totals...	34,600	162,700

RUSH CALL FOR ELLIS

Is Wanted for Three Hangings in Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—A rush telegram was sent yesterday morning by Sheriff Lemieux to Arthur Ellis, hangman, of Toronto, who is now at New Westminster, B.C., asking him to start for Montreal, so as to be here in time for the three hangings which are to follow one another at short intervals. The first execution is on Dec. 13th.

WANTED HIS SOUL RETURNED

Yorkton, Sask., Dec. 5.—A Ruthenian, John Aurisczuk, charged with the murder of a fellow-countryman, a Greek priest named Czernowski, at Goodeve, on March 17, is on trial before Chief Justice Haultain.

The theory that Czernowski was murdered as the result of a religious feud, received support in the evidence of the widow and of a neighbor, who heard the prisoner in conversation with the dead man a year or two ago. The prisoner was demanding that his soul be returned to him, and he could not pray until Czernowski returned his soul. The priest replied that he did not have the man's soul, whereupon the accused appeared very angry and threatened to "fix" him.

BARGE ARIZONA NOT SIGHTED

Was Due at Chicago Yesterday—Has Crew of Fifteen

Canadian Press Despatch.

Chicago, Dec. 5—The steam barge Arizona from Midland, Ont., with lumber, due here yesterday morning, has not yet been sighted. Only slight uneasiness is felt as she is considered well able to weather any ordinary gale. The Arizona carried fifteen of a crew.

Mustn't Marry Foreigners.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The entry of foreign-born wives into the German diplomatic corps is forbidden from now on, according to a ruling of Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, who has restored the regulation made by the late Prince Bismarck prohibiting German diplomats from marrying foreigners.

Spoke in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 5.—Health officers Hastings of Toronto, and Roberts of Hamilton, spoke here on housing conditions in Canada to-day.

DUCHESS AND PRINCESS TO HEAR THE NAVAL PLANS

Will Occupy Seats on Either Side of the Speaker's Dais.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—The Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia will be on the floor of the House when the Prime Minister makes his naval announcement to-day.

They have applied for accommodation, and the duchess will sit on the right of the Speaker's dais and the princess on the left.

Owing to the constitutional usage which forbids the Governor-General from attending Parliament save at the opening or closing or for the assent of bills, the duke will not be present.

While it is not unusual for the viceregal party to come to the Commons, it occurs only on special occasions, and this will be the first visit of the duchess and princess to the House.

Keen and universal interest will attend the introduction of the bill and the delivery of Mr. Borden's speech although it is not likely that the bill will come up for its second reading until after the Christmas recess. Mr. Borden will be followed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier who, it is said, will speak briefly, and it is probable any prolonged debate will be postponed until the second reading.

The details of the measure are being reserved for publication until Mr. Borden's speech is delivered, but the general outlines of the measure will be substantially those which have been already indicated.

A Liberal caucus has been called for Friday to consider the attitude of the party towards the proposed contribution to the aid of the Empire. It is a matter of comment that as yet no notice has been given of the resolution which usually precedes the introduction of a bill providing for any expenditure. It is inferred from the absence of this notice that the bill to be introduced to-day will not directly provide for any specific contribution, but that any expenditure will be hereafter brought before the House by supplementary estimates sent to the Commons by His Royal Highness the Governor-General.

Senate Committees.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—The standing committees of the Senate have met and organized for the session. The following Senators were appointed chairman: Printing of Parliament, Senator Thomas Coffey; standing orders, Senator Tessier; banking and commerce, Senator William Gibson; railways, telegraphs and harbors, Senator Finley Young; miscellaneous private bills, Senator Bostock; debates, Senator Ellis; divorce, Senator Kirchoffer; agriculture and forestry, Senator Edwards; immigration and labor, Senator Thomas Davis; commerce and trade relations of Canada, Sir George Ross; public health and inspection of food, Senator Deveber; civil service administration, Senator Power; public buildings and grounds, Senator Choquette.

TURNED THE GAS ON BY ERROR

Kingston, Dec. 5.—Nelson Clemons and his son, Wm. Clemons, of Portland, visiting with J. Onslow, grocer, had miraculous escapes from being suffocated with gas. When retiring for the night they turned out the gas and accidentally turned it on again. The only thing that saved them was that there was an open door. A brother of Mr. Onslow, sleeping in the next room, also had a narrow escape.

Woodstock Clergyman Resigns.

Woodstock, Dec. 5.—Rev. H. H. Shaw announced yesterday morning that he would at once resign the rectorship of old St. Paul's Anglican Church, which he has held for fifteen years. Rev. Mr. Shaw came here from Lucan. He gives as his reason for resigning nervous breakdowns and other troubles.

A good husband is one who doesn't think his wife talks too much.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

He had always found that when Ira grinned and was cordial, some trouble was in store for him. He wondered what rock Ira held behind his back now, but he forced an uneasy cordiality: "And is this you, Ira? Well, well! It is yeahs since last we met. And you're just getting married. Is this the first time, Ira?"

"First offense, Charlie."

The levity shocked Selby, but a greater shock was in store, for when he inquired: "And who is the—er—happy—bride?" the triumphant Lathrop snickered: "I believe you used to know her. Anne Gattle."

This was the rock behind Ira's back, and Selby took it with a wince: "Not—my old—"

"The same. Anne, you remember, Charlie."

"Oh, yes," said Anne, "How do you do, Charlie?" And she put out a shy hand, which he took with one still shyer. He was so unsettled that he stammered: "Well, well, I had always hoped to marry you, Anne, but not just this way."

Lathrop cut him short with a sharp: "Better get busy—before the train starts. And I'll pay you in advance before you set off the fireworks."

The flippancy pained Rev. Charles, but he was resuscitated by one glance at the bill that Ira thrust into his palm. If a man's gratitude for his wife is measured by the size of the fee he hands the enabling parson, Ira was madly in love with Anne. Rev. Charles had a reminiscent suspicion that it was probably a counterfeit, but for once he did Ira an injustice.

The minister was in such a flutter from losing his boyhood love, and gaining so much money all at once and from performing the marriage on a train, that he made numerous errors in the ceremony, but nobody noticed them, and the spirit, if not the letter of the occasion, was there and the contract was doubtless legal enough.

The ritual began with the pleasant murmur of the preacher's voice, and the passengers crowded round in a solemn calm, which was suddenly violated by a loud yelp of laughter from Wedgewood, who omitted guffaw after guffaw and bent double and opened out again, like an agitated umbrella.

The wedding-guests turned on him visages of horror, and hissed silence at him. Ashton seized him, shook him, and muttered:

"What the—what's the matter with you?"

The Englishman shook like a boy having a spasm of giggles at a funeral, and blurted out the explanation:

"That story about the bridegroom—I just saw the point!"

Ashton closed his jaw by brute force and watched over him through the rest of the festivity.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Foiled Yet Again.

Mallory had fled from the scene at the first hum of the minister's words. His fate was like alkali on his palate. For twelve hundred miles he had ransacked the world for a minister. When one dropped on the train like manna through the roof, even this miracle had to be checkmated by a perverse miracle that sent to the train an early infatuation, a silly affair that he himself called puppy-love. And now Marjorie would never marry him. He did not blame her. He blamed fate.

He was in solitude in the smoking room. The place reeked with drifting tobacco smoke and the malodor of cigar stubs and cigarette ends. His plans were as useless and odious as cigarette ends. He dropped into a chair, his elbows on his knees and his head in his hands—Napoleon on St. Helena.

And then, suddenly he heard Marjorie's voice. He turned and saw her hesitating in the doorway. He rose to welcome her, but the smile died on his lips at her chilly speech:

"May I have a word with you, sir?"

"Of course. The air's rather thick in here," he apologized.

"Just wait!" she said, ominously, and stalked in like a young Zenobia. He put out an appealing hand: "Now, Marjorie, listen to reason. Of course I know you won't marry me now."

"Oh, you know that, do you?" she said, with a squared jaw.

"But, really, you ought to marry me—not merely because I love you—and you're the only girl I ever—" He stopped short and she almost smiled as she taunted him: "Go on—I dare you to say it."

He swallowed hard and waived the point: "Well, anyway, you ought to marry me—for your own sake."

Then she took his breath away by answering: "Oh, I'm going to marry you, never fear."

"You are," he cried, with a rush of returning hope. "Oh, I knew you loved me."

She pushed his encircling arms aside: "I don't love you, and that's why I'm going to marry you."

"But I don't understand."

"Of course not," she sneered, as if she were a thousand years old, "you're only a man—and a very young man."

"You've ceased to love me," he protested, "just because of a little affair I had before I met you?"

Marjorie answered with world-old wisdom: "A woman can forgive a man anything except what he did before he met her."

He stared at her with masculine dismay at feminine logic: "If you can't forgive me, then why do you marry me?"

"For revenge!" she cried. "You brought me on this train all this distance to introduce me to a girl you used to spoon with. And I don't like her. She's awful!"

"Yes, she is awful," Mallory assented. "I don't know how I ever—"

"Oh, you admit it!"

"No."

"Well, I'm going to marry you—now—this minute—with that preacher, then I'm going to get off at Reno and divorce you."

"Divorce me! Good Lord! On what grounds?"

"On the grounds of Miss Kitty—Katty—Llewellington — or whatever her name is."

Mallory was groggy with punishment, and the vain effort to foresee her next blow. "But you can't name a woman that way," he pleaded, "for just being nice to me before I ever met you."

"That's the worst kind of unfaithfulness," she reiterated. "You should have known that some day you would meet me. You should have saved your first love for me."

"But last love is best," Mallory interposed, weakly.

"Oh, no, it isn't, and if it is, how do I know I'm to be your last love? No, sir, when I've divorced you, you can go back to your first love and go round the world with her till you get dizzy."

"But I don't want her for a wife," Mallory urged, "I want you."

"You'll get me—but not for long. And one other thing, I want you to get that bracelet away from that creature. Do you promise?"

"How can I get it away?"

"Take it away! Do you promise?"

Mallory surrendered completely. Anything to get Marjorie safely into his arms: "I promise anything, if you'll really marry me."

"Oh, I'll marry you, sir, but not really."

And while he stared in helpless awe at the cynic and termagant that jealousy had metamorphosed this timid, clinging creature into, they heard the conductor's voice at the rear door of the car: "Hurry up—we've got to start."

They heard Lathrop's protest: "Hold on there, conductor," and Selby's plea: "Oh, I say, my good man, wait a moment, can't you?"

The conductor answered with the gruffness of a despot: "Not a minute. I've my orders to make up lost time. All aboard!"

While the minister was tying the last loose ends of the matrimonial knot, Mallory and Marjorie were struggling through the crowd to get at him. Just as they were near, they were swept aside by the rush of the bride and groom, for the parson's "I pronounce you man and wife," pronounced as he backed toward the door, was the signal for another wedding riot.

Once more Ira and Anne were showered with rice. This time it was their own. Ira darted out into the corridor, haling his brand-new wife by the wrist, and the wedding guests pursued them across the vestibule, through the next car, and on, and on.

Nobody remained to notice what happened to the parson. Having performed his function, he was without further interest or use. But to Mallory and Marjorie he was vitally necessary.

Mallory caught his hand as it turned the knob of the door and drew him back. Marjorie, equally determined, caught his other elbow:

"Please don't go," Mallory urged, "until you've married us."

The Reverend Charles stared at his captors in amazement:

"But my dear man, the train's moving."

Marjorie clung all the tighter and invited him to "Come on to the next stop."

"But my dear lady," Selby gasped, "it's impossible."

"You've just got to," Mallory insisted.

"Release me, please."

"Never!"

"How dare you!" the parson shrieked, and with a sudden wriggle writhed out of his coat, leaving it in Marjorie's hands. He darted to the door and flung it open, with Mallory hot after him.

COW IS BANQUETTED.

Red Deer Bovine Is Subject of a Unique Function.

It is a pretty good sign when you see a representation of the most prominent men in the west assembling at the banquet table for the special purpose of honoring a worthy Jersey cow and its worthy owner, says Norman Lambert in Toronto Globe. One night not long ago the Board of Trade of Red Deer, Alta., caused that very thing to be done. The cow's name (and it is only fair that her name be mentioned first, as she was the absent guest of honor) is Rosalind of Old Basing, and that of her owner is Mr. C. A. Julien Sharman. Rosalind has the distinction of being one of the most remarkable Jersey cows in the world, holding at the present time, as far as the latest obtainable records are able to show, the dairy championship of the British Empire, and Mr. Sharman has surely distinguished himself in having raised such an animal, which was born, fed, milked and and tested in Alberta.

Julian Sharman came to Alberta from the old country ten years ago, and in characteristic English fashion made himself acquainted with the resources and the advantages of different parts of this province. He spent six weeks in walking through the country trying to get an insight into conditions. He finally decided to settle in the dairy district of Central Alberta, near Red Deer, and it is only giving credit where it is due to say that Mr. Sharman has helped more than any other one man to identify central Alberta as a natural dairying territory.

He knew nothing about farming, much less about raising fine dairy cattle, when he first started as a husbandman. Previous to setting out for Canada ten years ago, Mr. Sharman's training had been confined to a thorough education in architecture in England and on the continent, and, to use his own words, "a knowledge of the Greek and Roman orders is hardly a grounding for successful farming." But he was only twenty-seven years of age when he arrived in this country, and he very wisely "hired out" to a good farmer for twelve months after having finished his walking tour of inspection and having decided his choice of districts.

Mr. Sharman at the present time has a milking herd numbering over sixty head, and as each female comes into "the herd" she is entered for a six months' official test. If she fails to qualify she is not retained in the group of select milkers. The belle of his present herd, of course, is Rosalind of Old Basing. In three years Rosalind has returned her master $1,007.50 for cream and skimmed milk, and has given him three calves for which he has refused $2,000.

Red Deer as a town is almost as proud of its champion dairy cow and Mr. Sharman, as it is of Dr. Michael Clarke, the member of Dominion Parliament for that constituency, which is saying a good deal. No one visits Red Deer without being told that "this is where the best dairy cow in the British Empire lives." And if you have time and do not go to see the famous "Rosalind of Old Basing," you are likely to be discredited for some time afterward. When the Duke of Connaught visited Red Deer a few weeks ago Mr. Sharman's little boy asked his father if the duke would be coming out to see Rosalind, and when informed in the negative by his parent, the boy said, "Well, what did he come to Red Deer for anyway?"

Inventory of Water.

The first inventory ever taken of the water powers of Canada has been completed by the Commission of Conservation, whose investigations extended over a period of two years. It is estimated that in 1910 1,016,521 units of horse power were developed from water power in Canada, 742,000 for electrical energy, and the rest for grist mill and pulp and paper mill use, and the full resources of the country have scarcely been tapped. The Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Conservation Commission, has stated that Canada possesses nearly one-half of the total available water powers of the globe.

The Almighty $.

Some people go so far as to say that Western Canada thinks only of making money. That, of course, is hardly true, but here's a bit of evidence tending to prove that money figures largely in the westerner's thoughts. A press sheet, received at a Canadian newspaper office and giving items showing the progress of the Dauphin district, bore this date line: "Sep. 25, 1912."

A DERELICT

By LETITIA EDWARDS

"Captain," said the first mate of the Swallow, having come aft to the quarterdeck with a marine glass in his hand, "that vessel off on the port bow is either disabled or a derelict. I don't see any signal of distress, so I suppose she is a derelict."

The captain of the Swallow gave orders to the quartermaster to put the vessel off her course in order to visit the disabled ship, and when the latter was reached a boat was lowered and the mate was pulled to her. He found her in very good condition, except that she was half full of water. She would have sunk had not air got confined in the cabin under the main deck, which bouyed her up. What the cargo was could not be learned on account of the water. Having inspected her, the mate was pulled back to the Swallow and reported to his captain as follows:

"She's the brig Susan Crane of New Bedford, half full of water and no signs of having been disabled by stress of weather. My opinion is that she was scuttled to beat the underwriters and the sinking of her was a failure, air having been held between decks."

At this Captain Dutcher of the Swallow looked grave. He was a young man scarcely thirty, lived when at home at New Bedford and knew all about the Susan Crane and her captain.

"Has she been abandoned a long while?" he asked.

"I think," replied the mate, "that she has."

"Then she must have drifted. Is she worth saving?"

"Yes, sir; the vessel would be all right if pumped out."

"Well," said the captain, evidently with reluctance, "I suppose we'll have to take her in."

The Susan Crane was taken in tow, and the Swallow continued on her course to New Bedford. But the next day the mercury began to fall rapidly.

"Do you think, sir," said the mate, "that we will be able to hold our tow through a storm?"

"I fear not."

"If we part company with her she'll be a danger to navigation."

"Perhaps we had better sink her," said the captain, drawing a sigh of relief. "Go aboard of her and let the air out of her."

A boat with a couple of axes in her bottom was sent to the Susan Crane, holes were chopped in her upper deck, and the men had scarcely regained the Swallow before the derelict sank. Captain Dutcher stood leaning over the taffrail looking at her till he saw her go down, then turned his attention to his own ship. Having weathered a three days' storm, he was nearing port when he called his crew together on deck and said to them:

"It is evident that we overhauled a case of rascality in the derelict, and when we make port we'll find that whoever directed her has got there before us and told a story of shipwreck. I wish each and all of you to promise me to keep the matter in your knowledge lockers till I give you the word to speak. If you tell you'll make nothing, for since we didn't bring her in there's no salvage for us. If you keep mum those who scuttled her might pay you something to keep quiet. Of course we can't permit the insurance companies to be swindled in any event."

"Anything you orders, sir, goes," said an old salt who took it upon himself to reply for his mates as well as himself, and the men returned to the forecastle.

When the Swallow was docked Captain Dutcher went uptown and stopped at a dwelling house and rang the bell. The door was opened by a young woman twenty-two or twenty-three years old. At seeing Dutcher her face lit up with pleasure. They went inside together and Dutcher asked:

"Has the Susan Crane got in?"

"No. She was wrecked, but the crew were all saved."

"Has the insurance been collected?"

"Not yet. I believe there's some trouble in proving the loss of the ship."

"Tell Ben I wish to see him at once."

"Why so?" asked the girl, turning pale.

"Keep what I tell you a secret. His ship was not lost. I overhauled her and was towing her in when a storm came up and I was obliged to sink her."

"Why should I keep this a secret?"

He hesitated, then said: "Margaret, I would wrong you by refusing you a reply. You may not have made a mistake in refusing me, but you erred in accepting Ben." And he told her of his discovery of the fact that Ben Hawkins, captain of the Susan Crane, was a criminal.

The shock stunned her. Dutcher left her to recover from it and sought the man who had supplanted him.

"On Margaret's account," he said, "I have arranged this matter so that you can get out of it without being prosecuted. Withdraw your claim for insurance and make each one of my crew a present and they will not trouble themselves to inform against you. As for me, you know you have nothing to fear."

Hawkins acted on Dutcher's advice, making no claim and paying each member of the crew $100, presumably for their attempt to save his ship. Margaret Earle dismissed her betrothed and married Dutcher. Hawkins left New Bedford and was never seen there again.

NEWS FROM KEENE

Special Correspondence.

Keene, Dec. 4.—The Keene Methodist Church responded to the request of the National Sanitorium Association that in every church throughout the entire Province of Ontario attention should be directed to the fight against the great White Plague on Sunday Dec. 1st, and that the day be regarded as Tuberculosis Sunday at the evening service. The pastor, Rev. William Johnston, after conducting the preliminary services, gave a short account of the Association and its work in endeavoring to combat the terrible scourge which has been the largest contributor to the death rate of the province. He then called upon Dr. W. F. Harrison, of the village, who as a medical practitioner of many years, and a close student of diseases and modern and scientific methods of treatment would be able to give reliable and intelligent information on the subject. Dr. Harrison responded in a very instructive address, explaining what tuberculosis is, what its predisposing and immediate causes are. The address was listened to with marked attention and great interest by the large congregation present, all feeling that much valuable information had been imparted as to the care that should be given to those who unfortunately are affected and as to how the spread of the contagion may be prevented.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
TO THE
PEOPLE OF ONTARIO
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor:—

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, in a few words, tell you of the steady growth of this Hospital.

In the year 1875 there were only six cots and beds, one nurse, 44 in-patients and 67 out-patients. In 1912 there were 250 cots and beds, 64 nurses, 1,294 in-patients and 17,362 out-patients.

During the 37 years of the Hospital's existence, 19,370 in-patients have been admitted, and 133,724 out-patients have been treated, a total of 153,094, or an average of 4,138 per year. Of the 19,370 in-patients, 5,495 were from places outside of Toronto. 9,644 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,711 were improved. This is a great record.

Of the 1,294 in-patients last year, 341 came from 218 places outside of Toronto, so that the Hospital is not a local, but a Provincial Institution.

In the Orthopedic Department in 37 years, nearly 700 boys and girls have been treated for clubfeet, and about 600 were corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto, so surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

The Corporation of Toronto grants $25,000, not only for the city children, but towards the maintenance of all patients in the Hospital [illegible] sons of Toronto donate an average of $15,000 annually to the funds of the Hospital.

Will you, kind reader, think of what your money will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.

Remember that your pocket-book must be the Hospital's friend, if the Hospital is to be the children's friend.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital, so that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Remember that your money can help the Hospital build a bridge over which the feet of little children may travel on the journey from sorrow to joy, from sickness to health—aye, from death to life.

Please send a dollar, or more if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

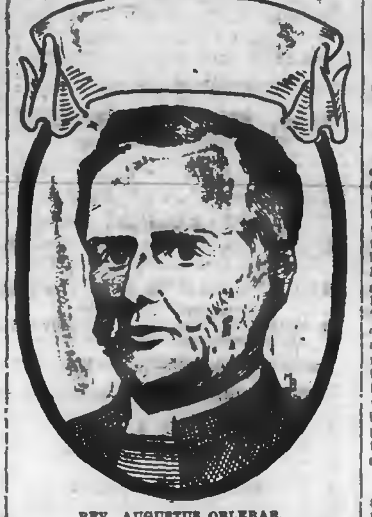
"TOM BROWN" IS DEAD

ORIGINAL OF FAMOUS SCHOOLBOY HERO PASSES AWAY.

Rev. Augustus Orlebar, Vicar of a Small Church In Bedfordshire, Eng., Was the Man Whom Judge Hughes Say Served as the Model For His Rugby Hero—Remembered the Historic Fight.

Hero of one of the most famous fights recorded in fiction, the Rev. Augustus Orlebar, for fifty-four years vicar of Willington, in Bedfordshihe, Eng., and the original of "Tom Brown," died recently at the age of 88. Judge Hughes, the author of "Tom Brown's Schooldays," made Mr. Orlebar the chief figure in the popular story, and he was one of the combatants in the famous "mill" behind the chapel, with "Slogger" Williams, which the advent of the headmaster prevented from being fought to a finish. The fight, of course, actually took place at Rugby, the "Slogger" being the Rev. Chancellor Bulkeley Owen Jones, of the diocese of St. Asaph, and a J.P. for Denbighshire, who is living in retirement at West Barnham, near Bognor. The severity of the contest between the boys was reminiscent of the old days of the "ring." When it had been in progress for some minutes, we are told by the novelist that:



REV. AUGUSTUS ORLEBAR.

Tom's face begins to look very one-sided. There are little queer bumps on his forehead, and his mouth is slightly bleeding. . . . Williams is only slightly marked in the face, but by the nervous movement of his elbows you can see that Tom's body blows are telling.

According to the story, Tom Brown's antagonist was thrice scientifically thrown, and the doctor arrived on the scene at the moment when Williams, in spite of the terrific punishment he had himself inflicted, was all but beaten. Mr. Orlebar declared that neither boy won the fight, because Dr. Arnold stopped it.

Mr. Orlebar entered Rugby School in 1838, and of his experiences he said: "The somewhat Spartan treatment meted out to the boys in those days certainly did not make milksops of them. No man who was at Rugby in my days knows what it is to feel the cold," he continued. "A fire at each end of the long corridor was all the heat provided for the studies that lay between, and early roll-call by candle-light in winter was a fitting preparation for an Arctic journey. At first," said Mr. Orlebar, "boys used to swoon before they got used to it." In his younger days he won considerable fame as a cricketer, and he was captain of the school eleven when Dr. Arnold, the famous headmaster, died in 1842. Mr. Orlebar was the Rugby boy who caught out the redoubtable batsman in the match with the Marylebone club, as narrated in "Tom Brown's Schooldays."

From Rugby he went to Oxford, and later taught the Lytteltons to play cricket. While in Bedfordshire he played with the Tylecotes and in the County Twenty-two against All England. A life-long teetotaler and non-smoker, Mr. Orlebar enjoyed excellent health, and until quite recently preached every Sunday in his church, besides filling many other offices in his parish.

A Shakespearean Abysm.

The late Andrew Lang had many amusing tales to tell of his treatment by printers and proof correctors. In one of his articles he had quoted the Shakespearean phrase, "In the dark backward and abysm of time." When he received his proof he found a query against the word "abysm." Scribbling the word "Shakespeare" on the margin, he returned the proof, not unnaturally imagining that this would recall to the reader the quotation from "The Tempest." To his horror, Mr. [illegible] found when he opened the magazine containing his article that his sentence ran, "In the dark backward and Shakespeare abysm of time."

Britain's Biggest Baby Boy.

Weighing 8 stone and standing three feet eleven inches in height, Master Maurice Reginald Pluthero, the five-year-old son of a Petersham, Surrey, Eng., builder, who has just celebrated his birthday, is believed to be the biggest baby boy in Britain. His chest measurement of 14 inches is 1 inch less than the muscles of the arm, and his limbs, far from being flat and flabby, are much harder than those of the average child. He is in splendid health.

Gave $100,000.

It was announced at the dinner in London, Eng., in connection with the opening of the session at St. Thomas' Hospital that an anonymous donation of $100,000 had been received towards the equipment of a new out-patients' department.

The coast line of England is 1,800 miles.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—There was a fair demand from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat, but owing to the further advance in prices in Winnipeg and the fact that foreign bids were unchanged very little business was worked. The local demand for flour is fair, but orders from country points have fallen off some, owing to the breaking up of the roads. Millfeed is fairly active. CATTLE MARKET.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ended Nov. 30 were 2200 cattle, 2310 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 700 calves, while the offerings on the market today were 1600 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 300 calves.

A feature of the trade continues to be the scarcity of choice steers on the market, and in consequence the demand for the lower grades has increased to some extent from local butchers, and this, coupled with the demand from American packers for canning stock, has tended to strengthen the market, and prices are higher. The trade on the whole was fairly active, and a good clearance was made, with sales of good steers at $6.25 to $6.50, fair at $5.50 to $6, and the lower grades at $4 to $5.25, while cows brought from $3 to $5 and bulls from $2.50 to $3.50 per 100 lbs.

An active trade was done in small meats, and, as supplies were small, the tone of the market was very firm at the advance in prices noted on Monday. Lambs sold at $6.50 to $6.75, and sheep at $4 to $4.50 per 100 pounds. There was no further change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being about steady under a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

A Record Scow.

The largest scow ever built in the Maritime Provinces, and probably in Canada, was successfully launched at Liverpool, Nova Scotia, recently. It is owned by the Nova Scotia Construction Co., and will be used first at the new concrete piers now being built at Halifax. The pile driver is an immense steel structure. The hammer used for driving concrete piling weighs ten tons. It has a 200-horse power engine and four steam capstans; also two thirty-ton steel derricks on each side of the bow, and every device of the latest machinery. The scow will carry a full crew and has berthing accommodation for ten men, including engineers. The cost was about $50,000.

FIREPROOF BUILDINGS.

They Must Be Analyzed as Such Apart From Their Contents.

Many people think that the term "fireproof" is a misnomer, that there is no such thing as a fireproof building and that the use of the term gives one too great a sense of security. This attitude has been brought about largely by the destruction or serious damages of certain buildings that were supposed to have been fireproof and by the fact that many persons think because a building is fireproof it should in some occult fashion prevent the contents from burning.

It is a matter of record that where buildings called fireproof have been destroyed they have been found to have violated some fundamental principle of the really fireproof building.

A fireproof building must be considered apart from its contents, for the structure itself can in no way prevent the burning of combustible material within it except the spread of fire. It is true that as yet we have not attained the absolutely fireproof building, since even the best fireproofing material we have today is somewhat damageable by fires, but we can and do erect structures that are practically fireproof.

The term "fireproof" in building construction means a capability of withstanding fire without being materially damaged. A fireproof building, therefore, may be defined as one that is capable of having its contents cremated without material impairment structurally. That is, all burnable material may be destroyed, but the structure itself will remain intact, requiring only the replacement of some of the fireproofing and the interior finish to make it again ready for occupancy.—F. P. Walther in Engineering Magazine.

Wonderful Fiddles.

One of the greatest fiddles that ever were known was to be seen at the French court at the time of Charles IX. This was a viol so large that several boys could be placed inside of it. These boys used to sit inside this queer instrument and sing the airs that the man who handled the bow was playing on the viol outside. The effect is said to have been very beautiful, though it would seem as if the presence of the lads in its interior would seriously interfere with the tone of the "great fiddle," as it was called. Many years after another huge instrument of this kind was used at concerts in Boston. It was so large that to play it the fiddler had to stand on a table to use his bow at the proper point on the strings. This instrument was called "the grandfather of fiddles."

Most people find living an agreeable job.

A Discovery of Vast Importance

It Is Now Admitted That Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, and Colds Can Only Be Quickly Cured By Mixing a New Medicine With the Air You Breathe.

Scientists acknowledge that medicated air treatment is the only treatment that will cure these diseases, and that stomach medicines are worse than useless.

Catarrhozone air treatment has been found to be the most effective way to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. Its action is so prompt that in less than an hour an ordinary cold is cured, and after a more thorough use of Catarrhozone, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all diseases of the throat and lungs are completely cured.

Catarrhozone is a very simple and powerful method of treatment. You simply breathe it through the inhaler and it immediately passes over every air cell of the throat, lungs, and bronchial tubes, curing and healing as it goes.

Catarrhozone treatment affords little drops of healing for sore places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

THE TRIUMPH OF PAROLE

The recently issued report on the penitentiaries of Canada contains a report on the Dominion parole system that makes good reading. The parole system has been in use for thirteen years, and in that time 4.379 prisoners have been given licenses. Of these only 237 could be classed as delinquents, or about 6 per cent. Last year the paroles numbered 848, and of these only 37 were delinquents, about 4 per cent. Surely this parole record is not only complimentary to the judgment of the paroling boards, but to the system of placing the prisoners into useful work upon their release. We question very much if anything like as favorable a result could be obtained if the prisoners were left on their own resources to overcome the prejudice against them on account of prison terms. They are provided with employment where their past is known, and they can be given a helping hand.

The Guelph prison farm made quite a long step forward in penal institutional arrangements in Canada. The parole system is only the probation method in another form, and works well with prison farm methods. The man who commits what the law designates as a crime is not always a criminal at heart. He often is much less a danger and menace to society than men who are supposedly eminently respectable because they operate within the letter of the law. There is often very little real difference between the man who is behind stone walls for some offence, and the man who calculates murder in his heart without. It is a question of moral justice, needing the application of Christianity to properly adjust. But certainly the modern experience in putting trust in prisoners, in trying to bring them back to their proper state in the social fabric, has been most favorable. The new penology is not punitive; it is reformatively uplifting, resurrecting. The figures given out by Mr. Archibald, the parole officer, are a source of great gratification to the reformers of penal methods

FRIENDS OF THE PEOPLE

Both the Toronto Globe and Star take up the cudgels on the cement question. It seems that the charges leveled against the Laurier crowd for being special friends of the cement merger do not please them. They are plain friends of the people, so therefore the people should not rise to question what the Laurier Government did with its favorite mergers. The Star says, frankly, that it is opposed to combines, once and all the time. The Globe states that what the Laurier Government did is not under discussion; the question is why did the Borden Government cut the duty? So the outcome of the whole business is that the Liberal attack on the Government by Frank Oliver was a boomerang, and showed up the true inwardness of the friendliness of these "friends of the plain people" for the cement merger. Every political question of this nature is barbed and strung, waiting for him who handles rashly.

In the debate in the House, George H. Bradbury, M.P., read shoals of evidence that the Western Boards of Trade, Liberals prominent among them, wanted the duty suspended to prevent a building tie-up. The Edmonton Bulletin, Frank Oliver's own paper, demanded a reduction before it was made, stating that no such action would be taken because the Borden Government was too much a friend of the "Big interests." When the reduction was made, the Bulletin complained that it was only for half the duty, instead of all. Now comes its owner and criticizes the Government for having cut the duty at all. No wonder a man's head swims in following the gyrations of the Liberal dervishes. Mr. Facing-Both-Ways seems to have suddenly developed into Mr. Facing-Four-Ways. The champions of the people, those ardent Free Trade apostles, have a grand and glorious time of it defending the masses against the trusts and the iniquitous oppressions of the Interests, especially when the mention of cement at once suggests how dutifully they follow their principles.

It is with disgust that the ordinary person will read that moving picture operators have offered Jack Johnson $5,000 for the right to take pictures of his wedding with Lucile Cameron, the white girl whom he has infatuated. The prosecution of Johnson under the white slave act, which provides severe penalties to anyone who takes or assists the passage of any female in or out of Illinois for immoral purposes, seems likely to fall down. There is nothing to show that the Johnson girl was not willing to accompany Johnson. She has apparently been given up by her mother as past redemption, and her step father refuses to have her in the house, so that marriage with Johnson seems to be the only available end of a distressing episode.

But why should all these harrowing circumstances be put fresh in the public mind, by means of moving pictures? They would not be allowed in Canada. They ought not to be allowed in the United States. Of the audiences at the moving picture shows, half are children, and while in Ontario the censorship ensures that the pictures shall be of a fairly high standard, in other states and provinces, children see much that is not for their welfare. The story suggested by pictures of the Johnson-Cameron wedding would be too horrible, too disgusting, to make it permissible.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In the signing of that armistice Greece seems to be acting up to her name by proving very slippery.

The white girl whom Jack Johnson was accused of abducting has voluntarily married him. But that is not to say that the girl has escaped a life of "white-slavery." Johnson's first wife shot herself a few weeks ago.

Brantford Expositor— It is about now that the municipal elections should be held, instead of deferring them to a period when everybody is too busy to devote any attention to such matters as the proper government of a city.

Guelph Mercury — The Michael Fraser estate amounts to $80,000 Already legal fees in squabbling over it have totalled $20,000. In keeping with the eastern war, it might be well to say that the lawyers will Balkanize the eighty if given a chance.

A bill introduced by Mr. Geo H. Bradbury, the member for Selkirk, makes it an indictable offence for any person to deface any flag of the British Empire in this country. He instanced the case of the Union Jack with the objects of an auction, or name of a hotel centered across it. This, he claims, was an indignity and should be stopped.

WEDDING STORIES

Experiences Grave and Gay at the Marriage Ceremony.

ODD BREAKS AND BLUNDERS.

The Tearful Regret That Flowed From the Heart of a Happy Ex-Widow—A Pert Reply to "Wilt Thou?"—A Tragic Wait and Its Sequel.

According to the stories told by several of Chicago's leading clergymen, wedding ceremonies do not always run any smoother than true love.

"People seem to act more insanely at a wedding than at any other time, save perhaps a fire," declared one pastor, "and it is usually the bridegroom who gets the most flustered. It is seldom that a woman gets the responses mixed as does the man. One time at a fashionable wedding where I was officiating the bridegroom insisted upon saying in a loud and distinct voice, much to the amusement of his hearers, 'I take me this plight' instead of the usual 'I plight thee my troth.'

"Another time when I was marrying a country couple at my home I asked the bridegroom the usual question, 'Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?' and he replied, with fire in his eye, 'What do you suppose we're here for of I wouldn't?'

"It was at a wedding in my church that the six-year-old niece of the bridegroom caused a ripple of laughter. With big eyes she watched the bridal procession come up the aisle, and as it neared the altar she noticed her uncle, who had come out of the vestry and with his best man and me awaited the bride in the chancel. Up she jumped and, pointing a small finger at the bridegroom, said in her shrill baby voice, 'Oh, mother, if there isn't Uncle Bob with his best clothes on and his everyday nose!' She had been told by her uncle, who possessed an unusually prominent nose, that when he got married it would be shorter.

"One time after reading a ceremony the bridegroom handed me a five dollar bill, saying, 'I'll give you two.' Not understanding him, I said, 'Thank you,' and put it into my pocket. He touched me on the shoulder and again said, 'I'll give you two.' 'Oh, you want change?' I inquired. He nodded, and I handed him $3."

One laughable wedding was that of a widow who married one of her boarders. She was a woman past forty-five, with all the airs of a schoolgirl, and amused all who knew her by her references on all occasions to her departed husband, John. In fact, John got to be a byword among all who knew the widow. Among the boarders was a young fellow of twenty-five, who fell in love with the fair relict of the sainted John, and in a short time the roomers were all invited to attend a wedding to be held in the parlor.

The widow was large, tall and stout and the bridegroom exceedingly small for a man, and when on the night of the wedding the widow appeared at the proper moment leading her prospective husband into the parlor, much as a mother leads her little boy, even the waiting clergyman had to suppress a smile. After the ceremony had been read and congratulatory speeches were in order the erstwhile widow exclaimed, with emotion, "Oh, if only my poor, dear John were here to see how happy I am at this moment!" Only the perfect self control of the guests saved the situation.

It was in an Episcopal church that a superstitious bride fainted at the altar. Just as the bridegroom was about to put the ring on her finger his nervous, shaking fingers dropped it, and it rolled away across the floor. The bride, certain that some great calamity would overtake them, refused to go on with the services and then fainted. After the delay of an hour or so she was prevailed upon to allow the ceremony to be finished.

A Unitarian minister tells this story: "One time I was to read the service in my church in a western state where licenses are not required. The church was filled, and the bridal party arrived on time, all save the bridegroom. For more than an hour we waited, the bride growing almost hysterical and the guests restless over a delay the reason for which was not suspected.

"At last word was brought that the the party was ready, and I came out from the vestry, the organ pealed forth the wedding march, and the bride came up the aisle to the altar, pale and trembling, looking much different from the pretty, flushed girl I knew.

"Imagine my surprise when the bride and best man stepped before me. The man said a few whispered words, I looked at the girl, and she nodded, and I began the service that made the girl the wife of the best man. The bride was saved from mortification, and the guests were not disappointed.

"It seems the best man had been in love with the girl, and when the bridegroom did not come he quietly stepped in and got her consent to marry him I believe she never heard directly from her recreant bridegroom, and her marriage to the best man proved a happy one."—Chicago News.

MASS MEETING FOR MEN ON SUNDAY

In Connection With Evangelistic Services Now Being Held

The second meeting of the Taylor and Hatch series at Park Street Church last night was fairly well attended and proved very interesting and profitable. Mr. Hatch led the singing and rendered very effectively "When My Life Work is Ended."

Rev. Harry Taylor took for his subject, "How they Changed the Fashions in Capernaum." His text was Mark 2; 12—"We Never Saw it in this Fashion."

Some of his sayings were:

"Canada will never gain anything by imbibing the Yankees' disaragard for God."

"The Yankee spirit means the destruction of the family alter."

"The Bible is revered more than it is read and practiced."

"Jesus always changes the fashions for the better."

"They had a unique way of advertising in Capernaum."

"They packed the house."

"When it is noised abroad that Jesus is in the house—the house is always packed."

"The four men who carried the couch of the man sick of the palsey were Mr. Love, Mr. Faith, Mr. Persistency and Mr. Resourcefulness."

"If I said I would give a ten dollar bill to all who would bring another here to-morrow night, how many would bring another?" That went home to all hearts.

"What we need is a baptism of compassion!"

"Christians sit down and make daisy chains, while souls drift to hell."

The meeting to-night is at 7.45 o'clock.

There will be a mass meeting for men in the Red Mill next Sunday at 4.15 p.m. The subject will be "How to get a Grafter; are there any in Peterborough?"

NORTHERN ONTARIO THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITIES

Minister of Lands, Forest and Mines Heard in an Excellent Address to the Canadian Club—Young Men Need Not go to the West

A GREAT PRODUCING COUNTRY

One of the largest gatherings of the Canadian Club, of the year, heard with a great deal of pleasure last night, Hon. W. H. Hearst, Ministers of Lands, Forests and Mines give an entertaining and educative address on Northern Ontario. He spoke for over one hour and dealt with every aspect of the country, and prophesied for it a wonderfully bright future.

Hon Mr. Hearst is a very eloquent speaker, and he took occasion during his address, to advance a plea for better citizenship and a fuller realization of the possibilities of Canada.

In prefacing his address, the speaker said it afforded him a great deal of pleasure to visit the fair city of Peterborough, and he was greatly impressed with the progress of the city and its general prosperity.

He was also pleased to refer to the character of the building—the Y. M. C. A.—in which the Canadian Club were holding their meetings. 'A great deal of the foundation of Canada rested upon the citizenship that the Canadian Club were helping to build.

In speaking of Northern Ontario Hon. Mr. Hearst gave its area as 250,862 square miles, forming the second largest province in the Dominion. Continuing, the speaker referred to the great timber possibiliteis of Northern Ontario, and the great extent of territory yet to be utilized. He treated the country as it existed previous to this year and gave some interesting figures of its comparative areas of timber and minerals. The area of Northern Ontario in acres was 140,000,000 and only 46,000,000 acres had yet been surveyed, and only 24,000,000 acres cultivated for grain growing purposes. There was left an enormous area yet to be surveyed and at present invested in the Crown. In certain sections of the country, the very finest agricultural products were being grown which would compare favorably with the best produced in any of the Eastern districts.

The speaker emphasized the fact that there was two and half times as much good agricultural land awaiting cultivation as there was at present being cultivated. He urged his hearers not to overlook the great possibilities of Northern Ontario, because the West was being boomed so vigorously and persistently.

AGRICULTURE

It was important in the progress of any country not to neglect its agricultural possibilities. Referring to the other productions of the province the speaker said that it yielded $30,000,000 in gold in one year. The returns in silver alone amounted to $16,000,000. In addition to the rich silver camp in the province, the gold output of Porcupine was very great.

"There are however," said the speaker, "a great many people more concerned in mining the pockets of people, than extracting the mineral from many of these northern mines. He did not advise any person going out and buying stock in a mining enterprise indiscriminately, and if they were "stung" to blame the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines for it.

MINERAL WEALTH

With reference to the mineral productions, the speaker stated that Ontario produced more than any of the sister provinces. The future of Ontario, from a mineral stand-point, never looked rosier or more promising, and yet thousands of acres of that vast territory had never heard the echo of the miner's pick. In nine months alone, Northern Ontario produced over $1,000,000 worth of gold which exceeded any yield in a previous twenty-four months.

The speaker dealt with some striking aspects of the timber productions in Northern Ontario. There were $135,000,000 there in red and white ash. Pulpwood was also very plentiful and altogether the country carried timber timber valued at $370,500,000 and timber was one of the greatest assets of Northern Ontario. In 1911 the total timber cut of the Dominion was slightly over $77,000,000 and Ontario's yield amounted to 30,000,000 or in other words, Northern Ontario produced about half the total timber cut of Ontario. One of the great questions now being investigated in Northern Ontario was how to protect this vast wooded belt from damage by fire and the preservation of the young growths. Another problem that is trying to be solved is the turning of the farmers' pulpwood into dollars and cents by establishing a [illegible] for them.

Bes[illegible] vast stretches of land in N[illegible]tario, capable of being [illegible] It was also a fact that [illegible] vast stretches of fore[illegible] will never be suitable [illegible] These stretches of la[illegible] looked after and every [illegible] to perpetuate the forest[illegible] them.

The [illegible] gave some figures [illegible] territory in several [illegible]ario reservations. [illegible] reserves that are [illegible] constitute a very [illegible] the country

TRAN[illegible] POWER

Hon. M[illegible] to speak of the [illegible]tion of Northern [illegible]ng that had ret[illegible]rtation was the [illegible]ing of the railr[illegible]cribed the unli[illegible] that Northern [illegible], it developed something like 2,000,0.0 horse power. This fact suggested to the speaker that that part of the country was bound to be one of the greatest manufacturing provinces of the Dominion. He felt that this power might some day, be made to do nearly every possible thing that could be performed by machinery.

The speaker also dwelt briefly upon the ideal climate of Northern Ontario, and repudiated the general feeling that it was a land of perpetual snow. Practically everything is grown in that country and it bids fair to be the great seed producing country in the Dominion. The country also presents just as good possibiliteis and chances for a young man to attain material wealth as the West. No better opportunity could be presented than what could be found in Northern Ontario.

President Morris thanked Hon. Mr. Hearst for his inspiring and entertaining descriptoin of the country, and remarked that he made Northern Ontario sound like a fairy land

WANTS MORE HYDRO POWER

Hamilton to Order 1000 Horsepower More

Hamilton, Dec. 5.—The Hydro Electric Board has decided that the city needs more electric power. Manager Barber announced that the city was using much more than the 2,000 horsepower contracted for, and he was instructed to order 1,000 horsepower more. Mayor Lees said that early next year he believed the city would require 5,000 or 6,000 horsepower.

AN ENGINEER FROM GUELPH

May Apply for Position Advertised by the City

Mr. E. J. Hoiland, assistant engineer for Guelph, was in the city yesterday looking around and sizing up the engineering work which is contemplated here. Mr. Holland was aware of the city's advertisement for an assistant city engineer, and his visit may perhaps result in him offering his services to the city. He is well known by Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., who is also acquainted with his parents in the Old Country.

He is a very capable and qualified engineer, from all reports, and is highly valued by the city of Guelph. His special forte is sewer construction supervision, but he is also well versed in all other departments of city engineering work, and is said to be a very practical man.

In England he successfully planned and supervised the construction of a sea wall at Bangor, on the Sussex coast, a form of work that requires extreme skill and care.

It is altogether likely that Mr. Holland will apply for the position of assistant engineer.

At a meeting of the officers a vote of thanks was passed to the 57th Battalion Duke of Cambridge's Own Middlesex Regiment for their presentation of the cup to the local 57th Regiment.

SENT TO JAIL TO SOBER UP

Prisoner Showed the Effect of Over Indulgence

A man named Chas. Plunkett presented a pitiful figure in police court to-day when arranged on a charge of being drunk. He was unable to walk unassisted, his drunken spree having rendered him a nervous and almost physical wreck.

Chief Thompson stated that he was the worst and most deplorable looking drunk he ever had to deal with. His whole frame trembled continuously like a man with the ague, and two large discolored eyes and an unkempt stubble beard did not redeem his appearance.

He pleaded guilty of the charge and was remanded until he sobered up. He is a telegraph operator by occupation and has been on a spree for three weeks, without a let-up, it is said.

AN UNRULY VISITOR.

A Warsaw man named Charles James was arrested yesterday while drunk.

"He was pretty wild when arrested," said Chief Thompson, "and smashed a window in the police cell."

James pleaded hard with the Magistrate not to be sent to jail. He claimed it was his first time in police court, and promised to never get drunk again. His Worship assessed him $5.75, which prisoner paid from a substantial wad. James is proprietor of a flour and feed store in Warsaw, and announced his intention of going back and attending to business. Fifty cents extra was tacked on to his fine to pay for replacing the broken window in the cell.

YOUNG LADIES TO FORM CLUB

One Object Would be to Cultivate Skill in Sewing

Gossiping Strictly Forbidden at the Meetings

The formation of young people's clubs is becoming more and more popular in Peterborough, and the latest one to launch forth is the Miscellaneous Club, composed of several young ladies mostly residing in the western part of the city. The young ladies assembled at the home of Miss Susie Burroughs, 121 Weller street last evening and decided to organize a club which would have for its principal objects the cultivating of skill in sewing, and putting in a good time this winter with snowshoeing, tobogganing, etc. They intend to meet once a week at the homes of the various members and anticipate a comfortable membership list. Gossiping will be strictly prohibited at the sewing circle meetings and any attempts at it will be frowned down. The officers will likely be appointed at the next meeting.

Undoubtedly this club will be heard from in the near future.

MEETING TO BE HELD AT BUCKHORN

Messrs. C. C. Nixon, J. S. Sackville, Norwood; Wm. Collins, Chas. Moore and Ald. Gillespie, left this afternoon for Buckhorn to take part in a meeting and explain why it will be impossible to hold Farmers' Institute meetings in the Buckhorn Cheese Factory this year. The Farmers' Institute formerly held annual meetings there and quite a number of members lived in that locality. The membership dwindled however, and it was finally decided to discontinue the gatherings there.

Matters of interest to the farmers will be discussed by the speakers from Peterborough at the meeting to-night.

GORE'S LANDING MAN WAS SHOT

MASS MEETING FOR MEN ON SUNDAY

In Connection With Evangelistic Services Now Being Held

The second meeting of the Taylor and Hatch series at Park Street Church last night was fairly well attended and proved very interesting and profitable. Mr. Hatch led the singing and rendered very effectively "When My Life Work is Ended."

Rev. Harry Taylor took for his subject, "How they Changed the Fashions in Capernaum." His text was Mark 2; 12—"We Never Saw it in this Fashion."

Some of his sayings were:

"Canada will never gain anything by imbibing the Yankees' disragard for God."

"The Yankee spirit means the destruction of the family alter."

"The Bible is revered more than it is read and practiced."

"Jesus always changes the fashions for the better."

"They had a unique way of advertising in Capernaum."

"They packed the house."

"When it is noised abroad that Jesus is in the house—the house is always packed."

"The four men who carried the couch of the man sick of the palsey were Mr. Love, Mr. Faith, Mr. Persistency and Mr. Resourcefulness."

"If I said I would give a ten dollar bill to all who would bring another here to-morrow night, how many would bring another?" That went home to all hearts.

"What we need is a baptism of compassion!"

"Christians sit down and make daisy chains, while souls drift to hell."

The meeting to-night is at 7.45 o'clock.

There will be a mass meeting for men in the Red Mill next Sunday at 4.15 p.m. The subject will be "How to get a Grafter; are there any in Peterborough?"

NORTHERN ONTARIO THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITIES

Minister of Lands, Forest and Mines Heard in an Excellent Address to the Canadian Club—Young Men Need Not go to the West

A GREAT PRODUCING COUNTRY

One of the largest gatherings of the Canadian Club, of the year heard with a great deal of pleasure last night, Hon. W. H. Hearst, Ministers of Lands, Forests and Mines give an entertaining and educative address on Northern Ontario. He spoke for over one hour and dealt with every aspect of the country, and prophesied for it a wonderfully bright future.

Hon Mr. Hearst is a very eloquent speaker, and he took occasion during his address to advance a plea for better citizenship and a fuller realization of the possibilities of Canada.

In prefacing his address, the speaker said it afforded him a great deal of pleasure to visit the fair city of Peterborough, and he was greatly impressed with the progress of the city and its general prosperity.

He was also pleased to refer to the character of the building—the Y. M. C. A.—in which the Canadian Club were holding their meetings. 'A great deal of the foundation of Canada rested upon the citizenship that the Canadian Club were helping to build.

In speaking of Northern Ontario Hon. Mr. Hearst gave its area as 250,862 square miles, forming the second largest province in the Dominion. Continuing, the speaker referred to the great timber possibiliteis of Northern Ontario, and the great extent of territory yet to be utilized. He treated the country as it existed previous to this year and gave some interesting figures of its comparative areas of timber and minerals. The area of Northern Ontario in acres was 140,000,000 and only 46,000,000 acres had yet been surveyed, and only 24,000,000 acres cultivated for grain growing purposes. There was left an enormous area yet to be surveyed and at present invested in the Crown. In certain sections of the country, the very finest agricultural products were being grown which would compare favorably with the best produced in any of the Eastern districts.

The speaker emphasized the fact that there was two and half times as much good agricultural land awaiting cultivation as there was at present being cultivated. He urged his hearers not to overlook the great possibilities of Northern Ontario, because the West was being boomed so vigorously and persistently.

AGRICULTURE

It was important in the progress of any country not to neglect its agricultural possibilities. Referring to the other productions of the province the speaker said that it yielded $30,000,000 in gold in one year. The returns in silver alone amounted to $16,000,000. In addition to the rich silver camp in the province, the gold output of Porcupine was very great.

"There are however," said the speaker, "a great many people more concerned in mining the pockets of people, than extracting the mineral from many of these northern mines. He did not advise any person going out and buying stock in a mining enterprise indiscriminately, and if they were 'stung' to blame the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines for it.

MINERAL WEALTH

With reference to the mineral productions, the speaker stated that Ontario produced more than any of the sister provinces. The future of Ontario, from a mineral stand-point never looked rosier or more promising, and yet thousands of acres of that vast territory had never heard the echo of the miner's pick. In nine months alone, Northern Ontario produced over $1,000,000 worth of gold which exceeded any yield in a previous twenty-four months.

The speaker dealt with some striking aspects of the timber productions in Northern Ontario. There were $135,000,000 there in red and white ash. Pulpwood was also very plentiful and altogether the country carried timber timber valued at $370,500,000 and timber was one of the greatest assets of Northern Ontario. In 1911 the total timber cut of the Dominion was slightly over $77,000,000 and Ontario's yield amounted to 30,000,000 or in other words, Northern Ontario produced about half the total timber cut of Ontario. One of the great questions now being investigated in Northern Ontario was how to protect this vast wooded belt from damage by fire and the preservation of the young growths. Another problem that is trying to be solved is the turning of the farmers' pulpwood into dollars and cents by establishing a market for them.

Besides the vast stretches of land in Northern Ontario, capable of being cultivated it was also a fact that there were vast stretches of forest land which will never be suitable for farming. These stretches of land will be looked after and every effort made to perpetuate the forest growth upon them.

The speaker then gave some figures of the amount of territory in several Northern Ontario reservations. Altogether the reserves that are being protected now constitute a very valuable asset to the country.

TRANSPORTATION AND POWER

Hon. Mr. Hearst went on to speak of the railway transportation of Northern Ontario. One thing that had retarded proper transportation was the lack of proper placing of the railroad lines. He also described the unlimited water power that Northern Ontario could produce, it developed something like 2,000,000 horse power. This fact suggested to the speaker that that part of the country was bound to be one of the greatest manufacturing provinces of the Dominion. He felt that this power might some day be made to do nearly every possible thing that could be performed by machinery.

The speaker also dwelt briefly upon the ideal climate of Northern Ontario, and repudiated the general feeling that it was a land of perpetual snow. Practically everything is grown in that country and it bids fair to be the great seed producing country in the Dominion. The country also presents just as good possibiliteis and chances for a young man to attain material wealth as the West. No better opportunity could be presented than what could be found in Northern Ontario.

President Morris thanked Hon. Mr. Hearst for his inspiring and entertaining descriptoin of the country, and remarked that he made Northern Ontario sound like a fairy land

WANTS MORE HYDRO POWER

Hamilton to Order 1000 Horsepower More

Hamilton, Dec. 5.—The Hydro Electric Board has decided that the city needs more electric power. Manager Barber announced that the city was using much more than the 2,000 horsepower contracted for, and he was instructed to order 1,000 horsepower more. Mayor Lees said that early next year he believed the city would require 5,000 or 6,000 horsepower.

AN ENGINEER FROM GUELPH

May Apply for Position Advertised by the City

Mr. E. J. Holland, assistant engineer for Guelph, was in the city yesterday looking around and sizing up the engineering work which is contemplated here. Mr. Holland was aware of the city's advertisement for an assistant city engineer, and his visit may perhaps result in him offering his services to the city. He is well known by Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., who is also acquainted with his parents in the Old Country.

He is a very capable and qualified engineer, from all reports, and is highly valued by the city of Guelph. His special forte is sewer construction supervision, but he is also well versed in all other departments of city engineering work, and is said to be a very practical man.

In England he successfully planned and supervised the construction of a sea wall at Bangor, on the Sussex coast, a form of work that requires extreme skill and care.

It is altogether likely that Mr. Holland will apply for the position of assistant engineer.

SENT TO JAIL TO SOBER UP

Prisoner Showed the Effect of Over Indulgence

A man named Chas. Plunkett presented a pitiful figure in police court to-day when arranged on a charge of being drunk. He was unable to walk unassisted, his drunken spree having rendered him a nervous and almost physical wreck.

Chief Thompson stated that he was the worst and most deplorable looking drunk he ever had to deal with. His whole frame trembled continuously like a man with the ague, and two large discolored eyes and an unkempt stubble beard did not redeem his appearance.

He pleaded guilty of the charge and was remanded until he sobered up. He is a telegraph operator by occupation and has been on a spree for three weeks, without a let-up, it is said.

AN UNRULY VISITOR.

A Warsaw man named Charles James was arrested yesterday while drunk.

"He was pretty wild when arrested," said Chief Thompson, "and smashed a window in the police cell."

James pleaded hard with the Magistrate not to be sent to jail. He claimed it was his first time in police court, and promised to never get drunk again. His Worship assessed him $5.75, which prisoner paid from a substantial wad. James is proprietor of a flour and feed store in Warsaw, and announced his intention of going back and attending to business. Fifty cents extra was tacked on to his fine to pay for replacing the broken window in the cell.

YOUNG LADIES TO FORM CLUB

One Object Would be to Cultivate Skill in Sewing

Gossiping Strictly Forbidden at the Meetings

The formation of young people's clubs is becoming more and more popular in Peterborough, and the latest one to launch forth is the Miscellaneous Club, composed of several young ladies mostly residing in the western part of the city. The young ladies assembled at the home of Miss Susie Burroughs, 121 Weller street last evening and decided to organize a club which would have for its principal objects the cultivating of skill in sewing and putting in a good time this winter with snowshoeing, tobogganing, etc. They intend to meet once a week at the homes of the various members and anticipate a comfortable membership list. Gossiping will be strictly prohibited at the sewing circle meetings and any attempts at it will be frowned down. The officers will likely be appointed at the next meeting.

Undoubtedly this club will be heard from in the near future.

MEETING TO BE HELD AT BUCKHORN

Messrs. C. C. Nixon, J. S. Sackville, Norwood; Wm. Collins, Chas. Moore and Ald. Gillespie, left this afternoon for Buckhorn to take part in a meeting and explain why it will be impossible to hold Farmers' Institute meetings in the Buckhorn Cheese Factory this year. The Farmers' Institute formerly held annual meetings there and quite a number of members lived in that locality. The membership dwindled however, and it was finally decided to discontinue the gatherings there.

Matters of interest to the farmers will be discussed by the speakers from Peterborough at the meeting to-night.

ELLIOT'S
390-392 GEORGE STREET.

Tilbury's Turkey
By George Edgar

"WHY cannot we have a Christmas dinner, just as everyone else has?" Mrs. Tilbury asked her husband as they sat at breakfast together the morning before Christmas.

From the way she asked the question it was obvious that Mrs. Tilbury was angry. She tossed her pretty head, and the way her nose rose in the air was a defiance in itself.

Tom Tilbury, her husband, sat at the opposite side of the table. He was eating a frugal breakfast, in his usual very particular manner. That is, he toyed with a glass of milk, two wholemeal biscuits, and a very small apple.

Tilbury was a man of spare habit, with a long nose, long lines down the side of his mouth, a slight tendency to baldness, a somewhat weak eye, and a very subdued manner.

"What is the good of it?" he asked mildly; "and where is the sense of it? Half the people in the world eat too much and make themselves ill over it."

"Yes—and the other half don't eat enough. Some—poor devils—because they cannot get it, and a few like you, because they are afraid of enjoying themselves or seeing any one else do so. You look as if you were eating money at every meal, and that every mouthful was part of a brick out of your next row of houses. Sensible saving, I can understand, but parsimony is horrid, and I'm just sick to death of it."

"My dear Kate," replied Mr. Tilbury mildly, and crunching his meal biscuit like a squirrel with a nut, "everything you eat is money, and one is no worse off for knowing it. The careful man saves the most."

"My dear Tom," she replied, mimicking his mild manner, "if you ate more you would be stronger, and would work better. You'd make more money in less time, and perhaps, then, I shouldn't be reduced to a rag of a dress which is only fit for the marine store."

"I think it is very nice," he answered, "and becoming."

"You think anything is nice and becoming that is cheap and the less it costs, the nicer and more becoming it is, in your eye."

There was a silence, in which both thought their own thoughts.

Mrs. Tilbury had been married just three months.

"Tom is all right," said his sister, one of Kate's best friends, the day before the wedding, "but he's mean—that's what he is. It's in his blood, like a disease, and you cannot shake it out of it."

Kate had indignantly repudiated this accusation levelled against her future lord. She had been engaged to him for two years, and had noticed no signs of such a failing. Careful, of course, he was, that she had noticed. But was it not a compliment to her that he should hoard his resources? Did it not prove his devotion and his desire to make the marriage possible as quickly as he could? Still, even in her courtship, she would have liked a little more than the customary presents. She would have appreciated the extra little gifts of flowers, or chocolates, or theatre tickets which did not come her way. This seeming neglect she had overlooked—poor Tom was anxious, perhaps over-anxious, to provide for their future. She ought to be the last one to blame him for that, and she was.

But when they were married she found his sister's warning took on more serious import. He was mean. Though he had an income of $1500 a year, he begrudged her a servant. More still, he had in property and cash close on $5000, and much of it he had possessed long before he proposed. His parsimonious courtship was after all unnecessary, and by no means a compliment to her. He could have married her at any moment during the engagement without burdening himself, and all the time have been more generous with the little attentions a woman loves from the man who intends to make her his wife.

And now he had taken his last turn—he begrudged the cost of their food. The first week he grumbled at the household bills. The next week he cut them down. The week after he announced his intention of becoming a vegetarian. He had an idea that by doing so he would have the weekly bills at one stroke, and to a certain extent he had.

This is the point where they had stuck. Kate was rather fond of the good things of life, and had hospitable instincts. He was increasingly meagre as the week passed on.

"Perhaps," she said, breaking the silence, "you will tell me what your idea of a Christmas dinner is?"

He munched his biscuit slowly.

"Myself, I don't see why we should make a special effort to eat a lot just because it happens to be Christmas. I shall go on as I am doing. I want no turkey, no plum pudding. A vegetable soup, some of those lentil steaks I get from the vegetarian restaurant, and a rice pudding will make a dinner quite as good as we ought to afford, and nourishing enough for a meal, whether it be for Christmas or any other day."

"But I do want turkey and plum pudding!" Kate answered. "I want to cook a good dinner, and eat it, too. I want to see you enjoy it, and not sitting there like a rabbit nibbling sawdust. I want to be jolly, and make the meal jolly, to get some of the spirit of Christmas into the house, to be happy without considering in a cold-blooded way whether I am quite sensible."

He looked up in his mild, short-sighted manner and smiled.

"Are you not happy, Kate?" he asked.

"Happy—with a man who wants lentil steak for his Christmas dinner—no! You are a dear, good chap in many ways, Tom, but you are mean, mean to the point of being unbearable; and you get worse."

There was a little explosion of tears, angry, rebellious tears, after this expression of opinion.

He walked into the little hall and took down his hat and coat. As he slowly applied the hat brush before departing, he turned back to the breakfast-room.

"I'm very sorry, Kate," he said. "I do want you to be happy. If you have set your heart on being festive, get a chop for yourself or some cutlets, and cook a few potatoes. I think I might eat a potato, too, as it's Christmas."

"Chops and a few potatoes!" she said, and then laughed almost hysterically until she was exhausted.

"I know what it is," she said to herself. "The man isn't mean; he has really no imagination. He hasn't got a sense of honour. But it's time I stopped enduring this and started to cure it. I'll revolt, and give him the shock of a lifetime."

When Tom came home that Christmas Eve he was in a very good temper. Something of the bustling, genial spirit of the world outside had touched him with its festive note. After all, it was Christmas, he had thought, as he passed along the lighted thoroughfares and noted the cheerful shops.

So touched had he been by the spirit of Christmas in the air that he had become generous. He had passed into a confectioner's shop and bought a sultana cake. He himself would contribute a little to the home festivities outside the ordinary routine of his wife's shopping. He would show her that he, too, could be generous. He did not notice he had picked out the smallest sultana cake in the shop, nor that it was a very little cake indeed. It was, as he noted it, a nice sized cake for two.

Once the spirit of generosity had seized him it seemed to grow within his being as if it were a strange new influence flowering there. Passing a greengrocer's shop, he bought a little bunch of mistletoe. Kate would like that, and, as he desired to be jolly rather than sensible, perhaps he might kiss her under the green leaves and the pearly shining berries as he had read of young people doing in those absurd Christmas numbers. Yes, and to make their festivities more complete, he went into his newsagent's and purchased an illustrated Christmas number, with a very red cover, and a very purple-faced Father Christmas printed on it.

"I might read it aloud," he said; "there's sure to be something foolish about Christmas in it—what Kate will call the festive spirit," he thought.

So laden, he reached his little home. Kate was there to greet him, the Kate he had known and always admired, the woman he had loved. Was it Christmas and the atmosphere of festivity which made his love seem a more real thing to him to-night as he crossed his own threshold and looked on the laughing face of his wife? After all, he was glad he had bought the little presents he had collected, and when he handed them to her, for the first he noticed the cake was small, and that the mistletoe was but a tiny bunch, and poor in berries at that. Still, the Christmas number was large enough, and its red cover did look warm and cheerful, and gave off the right festive note.

Kate received his gifts cheerfully, even with an unexpected show of gratitude. He thought perhaps she was too grateful, and, looking at her closely, saw something in her manner, a sort of suppressed excitement, which he did not quite understand or like. But she was in great spirits when she joined him at their simple evening meal, and seemed to have forgotten their little disagreement of the morning. After the meal she seemed busy. "She was cleaning down the kitchen," she explained, and dared him to put his nose into it the whole evening.

The evening wore away, and he went to rest at his usual hour. It was an hour later when his wife retired—that cleaning process seemed to be a long one. At their early breakfast next morning he was very quiet, and she was in unexpectedly high spirits. She served the simple meal he professed to like, and then hurried him into the little room he called his study, and told him not to move about the house, as she was going to have a busy morning, and he would only be in the way. He sat in the little study before the fire, turned over his Christmas number, and idly began to read a story.

It was a typical Christmas story of the old type, full of port wine and plum pudding, turkey, and stuffing, crackers, and happy, genial frolics after dinner. There was kissing under the mistletoe in it, romping games, such as postman's knock, blind man's buff, and hunt the slipper. It was a story of a jolly Christmas, with much sentiment in it, and a good deal of real kindly feeling.

When he came to the end of the story he put the number down on the table very quietly, and stared long and thoughtfully into the fire.

"That was a jolly Christmas," he thought, and then, an unusual impulse stirred him.

"I wish we were having a Christmas dinner more like the one in the Christmas story," he said half-aloud. For a moment he was inclined to go to his wife and express his opinion, but he remembered the scene of the day before, and pride was strong within him.

Instead, he decided to put on his hat and coat and walk the rest of the hours away before their mid-day meal was due. Outside of the house, he passed rapidly through the suburban streets, and set off on a brisk spin round the spacious park. The air was clear and fine, but a trifle frosty. The

THE JABBERWOCKY OF GOLF.

'Twas niblick, and the dimpled ball
Did top and foozle from the tees;
All mashie were the bunkers tall,
And the links cleeked with trees.

Beware the bunkered course, my son,
The grassy lie, the pond's encroach;
Beware the putting greens and shun
The hazardous approach.

He took his driving club in hand,
Long time the red dot ball he sought;
Then rested he at the second tee
And stood awhile in thought.

And as in golfish thought he stood,
The bunkered course before him came;
On one side sliced the jigger wood,
The other pulled the same.

One, two, one, two, and through and through
The eighteen holes with cries of "fore!"
He's six holes up! He's won the game!
He has a bogey score!

And hast thou played the course?
Come to my arms, my brassy boy!
Oh, baffy day; oh, stymie play!
He caddied in his joy.

'Twas niblick, and the dimpled ball
Did top and foozle from the tees;
All mashie were the bunkers tall,
And the links cleeked with trees.

SCIENTISTS TELL HOW SALMON LEAP

Scientists as well as laymen tell extraordinary stories of the wonderful leaps whereby salmon ascend waterfalls. One investigator who has studied the salmon of southeastern Alaska asserts that these fish do not select a particular point of attack in endeavoring to surmount a fall. They show a remarkable lack of accuracy as well as of definiteness in their movement. When trying to ascend a fall they sail through the air, with the body rigid and the fins spread and held tense, and at the instant when the momentum of the jump is lost they impart a rapid and powerful vibration to the tail. This occurs whether the jump is successful or not. Should the fish reach water at the top of the fall this motion insures the maintenance of its position. In open water they jump sidewise instead of lengthwise, and there is no movement of the tail.—Harper's.

Circles of Latitude.

Each circle of latitude keeps at the same distance from the equator entirely around the earth. Suppose that the arctic circle should be laid with a band of bright metal so that it could be seen for fifty miles each way from a peak. Then, to the eye, the curvature would be a matter of individual judgment. Face the west, then some would say the line is straight; others, curved to the right. The curvature could be detected on that circle of latitude with instruments. As one approached the pole the curvature would rapidly become more and more apparent. Go to within one-half a mile of the poles, then a circle of latitude would be like a race track one mile in diameter. When the sea is still I cannot detect the curvature of the surface of the water, but persons have told me that they can.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Keeping Up Steam.

An Irishman just landed secured a position as fireman in a large factory. The chief engineer instructed him in his new duties, saying, "To run our engine we require 160 pounds of steam. You can always tell how much steam you have by looking at this gauge."

Shortly afterward the engineer noticed that the engine was slowing up. Calling to the boiler room, he inquired of Pat how much steam he had on.

"Oi have a hundred and forty-foive pounds, sor," answered the new fireman.

"Why, man, I told you we had to have 160 pounds to run."

"Niver moind that," was the cheerful answer. "Use what ye have got, an' whin that's gone Oi'll have more for ye."—Everybody's.

LUCKY STOCKINGS.

Strange Wedding Superstitions Which Are Still Prevalent.

Stockings figure in some curious superstitions touching old customs, especially those connected with marriage. Everyone knows that there are actions both lucky and unlucky. Among the former it is commonly held that to put on any article of clothing wrong side out is decidedly a sign of good luck, but it must be done accidentally, and when the mistake is found out no change must be made, else the luck will immediately vanish. This idea is very firmly held about stockings, probably because it is more easy to make such a mistake in putting on a stocking than in donning other garments. It would be hard, indeed, for a woman to put on her dress or a man his coat or vest inside out without noticing what he was doing.

Another superstition touching the use of hose is connected with dreaming. This is a Scotch notion. If a person be about to sleep in a bed that he or she has never slept in before, the certainty of dreaming can be assured by placing the stocking taken off the right foot under the head. Not only will the sleeper be sure to dream, but the dream will certainly come to pass.

Of the superstitions attached to marriage ceremonies, most people have heard of "throwing the stocking." This rite would hardly be regarded now as consistent with modern notions of decorum, but it was highly popular in former days. The ceremony was performed at the conclusion of the wedding day's festivities by young men and girls seated at the bed-foot—the former having the bride's and the latter the bridegroom's stockings—whose object in throwing the hose backward over their heads was to hit, if possible, the head, and especially the nose, of one or other of the newly-married couple. A successful shot meant marriage at an early date for the thrower.

Another old custom which the superstitious sometimes remember when they get married is to wear one old stocking and one new one, following the thought, perhaps, that every bride should wear "something old, something new." To this day many brides adhere to this old habit, or superstition, but they do not confine the apparel to stockings.

A Concrete Example.

Dodds—As one grows older there are certain things in which it is difficult to keep up one's interest. Don't you find it so? Hobbs—Er—yes—there's the mortgage on my house, for example.—Boston Transcript.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE CLUBS MUST LINE UP BY DEC. 20th

Marmora, Dec. 5— At the annual meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League, held at the Royal Hotel, when delegates were present from Madoc, Stirling, All Saints' Club, Peterborough and Marmora. President Hubbell, after a few remarks, called for the election of officers, which resulted as follows—Hon. presidents, R. J. Cook, M.P.P., Stirling, E. A. Peck, M.P.P., Peterborough, past-president, W. H. Hubbell, Marmora, president, Geo. West Madoc; first vice-president, Dan McCabe, Peterborough, second vice-president, D. H. Anderson, Peterborough; third vice-president, J. Dryden, Campbellford, secretary-treasurer, E. M. Gladney, Marmora; executive committee, team managers.

It was decided that in future the annual meetings should be held the first Monday in December of each and every year.

The representation from the western district was very disappointing, and greatly handicapped the work owing to the uncertainty whether the various clubs would enter teams this year. It was finally arranged that any clubs desiring to enter must take formal application to the secretary, who was directed not to accept any application after the 20th. If any are received the secretary and president were authorized to arrange districts for these teams.

The rule of the constitution adopted last year regarding the mailing of certificates and all fees will be strictly adhered to, and the secretary was therefore authorized to refuse any certificates or money which is postmarked later than January 1, 1913.

Copies of this year's O. H. A. rule books with the new amendments, will be forwarded to each club in due course. Western clubs are advised to write D. H. Anderson, of Peterborough, 137 Lock Street, as to the forming of districts.

Tommy Moffatt represented All Saints, but it is not definitely decided to enter a Peterborough team owing to the three O. H. A. sevens tion run on a semi-professional basis, and there will be little regret felt because of the failure of the union to go through.

OF PICTON O.H.A. TEAM.

Picton has decided again to enter a team in the junior O.H.A. Every one of last year's team is eligible, and Picton is expected to be on the hockey map in a similar position where she stood some years ago.

PATRICKS TO SUPPLY HOCKEY FOR THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 5.—An artificial ice rink to cost $250,000 will be erected at the San Francisco Panama Pacific Exposition by the Patricks. Frank Patrick has received official notice from the directors of concessions and amusements at the World's Fair that the rink concession has been awarded to the British Columbia hockey magnates.

The contruction of the rink will be commenced early in 1914 and it is expected to be ready in 1915, in plenty of time to have everything ready for opening in February that year. It is planned to take down several Canadian hockey teams for a series of matches, while the world's best fancy and speed skaters will be given a chance to display their abilities.

The three teams which comprise the Pacific Coast League will be signed up for a whole year instead of the brief northern winter season, and they will be the head-line attractions at the World's Fair Arena. When the information gets round among the hockeyists of the Dominion, the Patricks will likely find themselves deluged with applications for places on the teams of 1914.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Frank Heffernan, the big flying wing of the Toronto R.R. and A.A., is not going back to Ottawa College, as is reported, but will instead play with the Toronto hockey team in the Senior O.H.A. series. The local club will probably play an exhibition game with New Edinburgh when they come here during the holidays to fulfil an engagement with the St. Michaels.

What has become of the International Hockey League which was organized with a great hurrah some time ago? asks the Toronto News. Teams from Toronto, Hamilton, Syracuse and Detroit were included in the circuit, and according to the promoters it was going to be the real thing in a hockey sense. But apparently the new league died aborning, as nothing has been heard about it for some time, and the men who were behind the "Victorias," the Queen City team, have flitted to the background. In any event, there was no room for an organiza-

DRIVERS SHOULD HAVE WARNING

No Notice at Foot of Benson Avenue Hill

A gang of men have been engaged for some time in sewer construction on Benson Ave., and following the usual precautionary steps barricades are in place and the lanterns lighted at the close of the day's operations.

The work extends from Manning Ave., but no notice of the street being barricaded is given at the foot of the hill on Smith street, and the result has been that many drivers with heavy loads have reached the top of the hill only to find the street blocked. On one occasion a threshing outfit had started up the hill when informed of the blockade.

The Review has been asked to draw attention to this state of affairs. The city should provide a warning at the bottom of the hill.

RYAN SOUGHT TO HOLD PAPERS

Indianapolis, Dec. 5.—Frank Ryan, indicted president of the Iron workers' Union, testified at the "dynamiting conspiracy" trial yesterday that after the arrests of the McNamaras he, on advice of counsel, resisted the removal of evidence wanted at Los Angeles, where the McNamaras were charged with murder and dynamiting.

The papers referred to were hundreds of letters and records afterwards procured by the Government in connection with the indictment of the 41 men now on trial.

Admission to West Point.

A candidate for the Military academy at West Point must first get the indorsement of the senator or congressman from his district. The question of appointment is generally settled in each district by competitive examination, the representative in congress appointing the boy who obtains the highest marks. Once the candidate has passed this competitive examination and received the appointment to the academy he must pass both a mental and physical examination at the hands of the army officers assigned to duty at the West Point institution. All appointees must be between seventeen and twenty-two years old, free from any infirmity which might render them unfit for military service and be able to pass an examination in English grammar, English composition, English literature, algebra through quadratic equations, plane geometry, descriptive geography and the elements of physical geography, United States history and the outlines of general history.

Ingenious Old Jars.

From time to time fresh illustrations are afforded as to the ancients' ingenuity, with special reference to what are termed the "lost arts."

Recently it has been shown that the old Peruvians must have understood the laws of atmospheric pressure in order to construct the curious jars and vases they left. One of these pieces of pottery was ornamented with the figures of two monkeys, and when water was poured into or out of the vessel sounds like the screeching of monkeys were heard. Another similar vessel has the figure of a bird that uttered appropriate notes; another was ornamented with a cat that mewed and another with snakes that hissed. An ingenious water jar bore the form of an aged woman on whose cheeks tears were seen to trickle, while sobs were heard when water was poured from the jar.—New York Tribune.

Famous Venetian Palace.

Vendramin is not only one of the most beautiful residences on the canal in Venice, but it is closely associated with the history of the city of the doges. It was built in 1441. German princes occupied it at first. Then it passed into the possession of the Duke of Mantua, who purchased it for 50,000 ducats of gold. It was the scene of great social events under the Archduke Charles Ferdinand of Austria and his wife, Anne de' Medicis, in 1652, and through them the palace has come into the possession of the present owners through marriage. It was here that Richard Wagner died in 1883. The desk at which he wrote "Tristan und Isolde" is carefully preserved. Some years ago a plaque was affixed to the palace showing its connection with the great composer.—London

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

No Trouble For Australian Aborigines to Break Camp.

An Australian aborigine breaks the monotony of his life by frequent visits to other camps, but his preparations for these holidays have a simplicity about them which must appeal to many a worried housewife. It is thus described by Messrs. Spencer and Gillen in "Across Australia:"

"Apart from ceremonies and dances, the one great break in the monotony of life is paying visits to strange camps. Packing up is not a tedious process. The man simply walks out of camp, carrying his spears, spear thrower, boomerangs and shield; the woman takes the youngest child across her hip, balances a pitchi on her head, and, with one arm round the child and a digging stick in her free hand, she is ready for the road. The girl children and younger women look after the puppies, which are never left behind on any account, and, when unable to walk, are carried in pitchis like young babies.

"Two minutes at most is all the time required for an aboriginal family to pack up and start and there is no trouble in regard to the house while the owners are away. If any one chooses to occupy it during their absence he can do so, but the owners will see at a glance who has been in possession while they have been away."

He Found the Ghost.

"Talking about ghosts," said the janitor of one of the best known concert halls in the city, "makes me think of the scare I got the other day when I went into the auditorium after some supplies I had left back on the stage. As I stepped into the place I heard a scraping and hauling on the stage. Some one was puffing and blowing and then whistling a bit. For the moment my hair began to stand up. I managed to get to one of the switches and turned on the light. There was the ghost! One of the piano houses had sent over one of their blind tuners to fix up a piano and there he had been working away in the dark, his tools scattered around the stage and parts of the piano strewn about."—New York Sun.

Hostel and Inn.

At one time the words "hostel" and "inn" were not confined to licensed houses, but were applied to lodging houses. The "inns" of Oxford and Cambridge, very numerous before the introduction of colleges, were regulated by the college authorities. The inns of court were provided for the accommodation of law students. In olden times country houses of the aristocracy, during the absence of the owners, were used as "inns," or guest houses. It was then the rule to hang out as signs the arms of the owners: hence the origin of public house signs —London Globe.

"Very likely, Laura. And say, why can't we have an understanding in the matter—a division of labor, as it were? I'll do the asking, and you keep tab." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Real Thing.

"Do these emotional actresses ever shed real tears?" asked Mrs. Grouch, between acts.

"Sure," replied Mr. Grouch. "Every now and then they hit a bum town and get a peak at the box office receipts."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Doomed the Colonel.

Emperor William I. of Germany was a strict disciplinarian. One day during the maneuvers of the army a cavalry regiment charged at a strongly intrenched and embatteried village, of which the garden walls were lined with marksmen. "Look, look!" exclaimed the Russian representative. "That regiment is lost." "No," was the emperor's calm reply, "this regiment isn't, but the colonel certainly is." And, sure enough, at the close of the maneuvers he was placed on the retired list.

ROYAL GEORGE PILOT TESTIFIES

Quebec, Dec. 5.—Pilot Sam Rioux related much yesterday in the same way as did the other witnesses Tuesday the story of the stranding of the Royal George.

Mr. Rioux said that just previous to the stranding, the Royal George was traveling at 16 to 17 knots an hour. He would swear that he took the light of a boat for that of a lighthouse. There were other lights in the river, and he knew that had he not been careful he should have run the vessel on the Beaumont shoal. That would have been on the opposite shore to where the liner grounded.

Can Control His Muscles.

A man recently exhibited himself in London who it is said gave "an extraordinary demonstration of phenomenal muscle manipulation and stopping the beating of the heart before members of the medical profession in London." By years of hard work, careful study, and immense concentration of mind, the athlete in question can manipulate his muscles to an extent never before deemed possible in medical history," says the report. Many men have by exercises developed enormous muscles, but they have been invisible and remained firm to the touch even when relaxed. But this athlete can relax his muscles to such an extent that "by shaking his arm he can make the triceps quiver like reeds shaken by the wind." More than this, he can stop the beating of his heart for more than 20 seconds and retard or accelerate his pulse at will, thereby defying the laws of nature. There is no authentic case of this feat ever having been accomplished before. It is also claimed that this performer can remain under water from six to eight minutes, and that he can live for a protracted time when buried.

Napoleon and His Tutor.

Napoleon was a great soldier, but he could not spell. His handwriting was also so bad as to give rise to the rumor that he used undecipherable characters to conceal the fact that he, the master of Europe, could not master French orthography. In the early days of the empire a man of modest aspect presented himself before the emperor.

"Who are you?" asked Napoleon.

"Sire, I had the honor at Brienne for fifteen months to give writing lessons to your majesty."

"You turned out a nice pupil," said the emperor, with vivacity. "I congratulate you on your success." Nevertheless he conferred a pension upon his old master.

The Cardinals' Red Hats.

To the Countess of Flanders, so tradition has it, the cardinals owe their red hats. She complained to Pope Innocent IV. that in an assemblage she could not distinguish cardinals from abbots and other great personages of the church; so the council of Lyons in 1245 prescribed the red hat to replace the miter, and red hat it has been ever since. In the constitution of Boniface VIII. it was enacted that cardinals should wear robes of royal purple, but since 1464 red robes have been worn, and the purple usually appears only at Lent and Advent, when cardinals can be distinguished from bishops by the red skull cap, biretta and stockings.

Orange Blossoms.

Much uncertainty exists as to why the orange blossom has been so much worn by brides, but the general opinion seems to be that it was adopted as an emblem of fruitfulness. According to some authorities, the practice has been derived from the Saracens, among whom the orange blossom was regarded as a symbol of a prosperous marriage, a circumstance which is partly to be accounted for by the fact that in the east the orange tree bears ripe fruit and blossoms at the same time.

It Ended All Right.

The old lady who entered the coach at a country station had an anxious face and confided to her neighbors that she had but once before been on a railroad train. This was soon evident after the first half hour, when every time the train stopped she inquired if it was New York. Then she became anxious lest the train should arrive late, and "Maybe Lyddy would think I wasn't coming," she said.

"Didn't you tell her which train you would take?"

"Yes, indeed!" said the old lady. "I told her to meet me at the New York evening train. There isn't more than one, is there?"

She was somewhat flustered when assured that there was more than one train, but was reassured when she talked to the conductor.

"All right, mother," said that functionary; "I'll stop the train at New York and see that you get off safely."

And when the train rolled into the station and the old lady met Lyddy and embraced her the passengers exchanged a smile of pleasure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mrs. Reider (with paper)—I see that the big anaconda up at the zoo won't eat chickens unless they are alive. Mr. Reider—Wise old snake! That's the only way to beat the cold storage game.—Puck.

His Advantage.

"I know more about that woman than she knows about herself."

"How can that be possible?"

"Easily. I know she isn't pretty, but she doesn't."

Men are sent into the world with bills of credit and seldom draw to their full extent.—Walpole.

Helping Him.

George (nervously)—I'd like ever so much to marry you, Kitty, but I don't know how to propose.

Kitty (promptly and practically)—That's all right, George. You've finished with me; now go to papa.

ST. NICHOLAS GIRLS' CLUB TO MAKE CHILDREN HAPPY

Names Received So Far at the Review Office

So far the Review has received the names of the following, who desire to help in the St. Nicholas Girl's movement to make poor children happy at Christmas:

Mrs. Herb. Morphet, 458 Hunter street.
Miss Edna Johnston, 528 Weller street.
Miss Irene Scott, 512 Weller street.
Miss M. Pearce, Water street.
Mrs. Scott, 512 Weller street.
Mrs. Johnston, 528 Weller street.
Mrs. Gamble, 678 Roger street.
Mrs. Wm. Haslam, Downie street.
Mrs. Herbert Clayton, Red Mill Theatre.
Mrs. J. Lewis, Aylmer street.

In some cases the members offer to look after general youngsters.

All you have to do to become a member is promise to give some little boy or girl a happy Christmas. You are going to be allowed to do it in your own way. All that you have to do is to send your name and address to The St. Nicholas' Girl and you will receive the name of a little boy or girl of whatever age you specify.

Then it is up to you to go and see that little one and find out just what will make it most happy. It may be a very little thing, indeed, but it will be JUST what the kiddie wants. If you feel that you can care for more than one let the St. Nicholas Girl know.

There is no limit to what you may do if you desire. Neither is there any necessity to spend very much money.

Money and gifts are not the things that rank first in bringing happiness to others. The human touch and love are what count most. And the movement brings the giver in direct touch with the receiver. You see to whom you are giving and you get that glow of happiness that comes from the witnessing of joy that you have created in others.

Send your name in now on a post card, or telephone 189.

Except for a point as to the manner in which the matter was settled, the editor of the Herald in the last issue, states there is nothing to retract, and that the articles were in the public interest and written without malice.

A BRITISHER'S PROTEST.

To the Editor,—I was pleased to see your editorial article on British fair play last night, and see that you refused to publish the slanderous letter from Mr. Trowern, of Toronto, which letter the Examiner printed.

What right has the Examiner to slander working men just because they are trying to form a company to save or make a few honest dollars?

The reputations of the men who are at the head of the society are just as dear to them as the good name of the owner of the Examiner, who should apologize for printing such stuff about decent workingmen.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION TO ASSIST IN THE NAVAL DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE

THREE POWERFUL DREADNOUGHTS FOR THE MOTHERLAND

They Will be Built in Britain at a Cost of Thirty-Five Millions and Will Bear Historic Names---Minor Vessels Will be Built in Canadian Yards---Cannot Organize Navy Now.

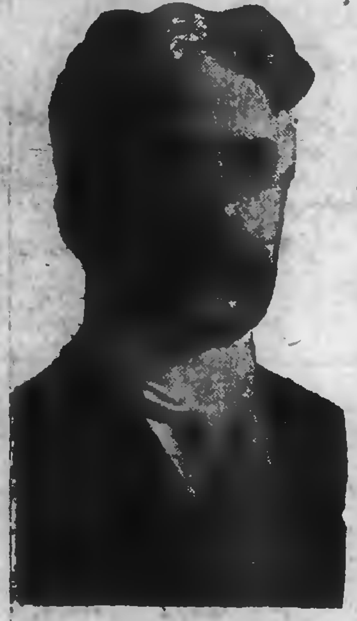
Ottawa, Dec. 6.—Canada's contribution to the defence of the Empire will consist of three of the most powerful battleships in the world at a cost of $35,000,000.

Premier Borden made the announcement to a crowded House yesterday afternoon, and in discussing the need for action, he said:

"The situation is, in my opinion, sufficiently grave to demand immediate action. We have asked His Majesty's Government in what form temporary and immediate aid can best be given by Canada at this juncture. The answer has been unhesitating and unequivocal. Let me again quote it:

" 'We have no hesitation in answering, after a prolonged consideration of all the circumstances, that it is desirable that such aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ship of war which science can build or money supply.'

"The ships are to be at the disposal of the Imperial authorities for the common defence of the Empire, and will be a part of the royal navy, but Canada is assured that if it should prove desirable they will be made part of a Canadian navy. The British Government also promises that an effective fleet will be placed on the Pacific coast, and a powerful squadron will visit the Atlantic seaboard at intervals. The new battleships will be built in Britain. The British Admiralty will assist Canadian shipbuilding by placing contracts for smaller craft with Canadian firms and the Dominion will defray the extra cost. To build the giant vessels at home," said the Premier, "would be a sheer waste of twenty million dollars.



PREMIER BORDEN.

With regard to the voice of Canada in Imperial affairs, the Premier announced that the British Cabinet would welcome the presence in London of a Canadian Minister for all or a part of the time and would take no important step in foreign affairs without a consultation with him.

Intense interest was exhibited throughout the chamber when the Premier rose to speak. The naval policy had been forecasted, but the details were still a secret, and the silence which preceded his first words betokened that it was a historic moment.

"In addressing the House upon so important a subject as that which I propose to-day I shall speak in no controversial spirit," he began. "If a portion of my remarks may controvert opinions which have been expressed by hon. gentlemen on either side of the House, let it be understood that I do so not by way of criticism but purely for the purpose of giving frankly to the House the reasons which have led the Government to adopt the course which I shall now outline.

Problem of Co-Operation.

"It is not necessary to dwell upon the increasing power and influence of Canada within the Empire, but on its remarkable growth and expansion and on the wonderful and rapid development of its resources during the past quarter of a century. With this increasing power and influence there has necessarily come by sure and gradual steps a certain development in our relations with the United Kingdom and other dominions. The evolution of the constitutional relations within the Empire during the past half century has not been less marked than its material progress. In this constitutional development we are necessarily confronted with the problem of combining co-operation with autonomy.

"It seems most essential that there should be such co-operation in defence and in trade as will give to the whole Empire an effective organiza-

On the other hand each Dominion must preserve in all important respects the autonomous Government which it now possesses. Responsibility for the Empire's defence upon the high seas, in which is to be found the only effective guarantee of its existence and which has hitherto been assumed by the United Kingdom, has necessarily carried with it responsibility for and control of foreign policy. With the enormous increase of naval power which has been undertaken by all great nations in recent years this tremendous responsibility has cast an almost impossible burden upon the British Islands which for nearly a thousand years have exercised so profound an influence upon the world's history. That burden is so great that the day has come when either the existence of this Empire will be imperiled or the young and mighty dominions must join with the Motherland to make secure the common safety of the common heritage of all. When Great Britain no longer assumes sole responsibility for defence upon the high seas she can no longer undertake to assume sole responsibility for and sole control of foreign policy, which is closely, vitally and constantly associated with that defence in which the dominions participate.

Reiterates Policy.

Before proceeding to declare and explain the proposal of the Government Mr. Borden reiterated his policy as stated at the time of the introduction of the Laurier bill. He then read to the House the memorandum of the British Government on the naval security of the Empire.

"Do Canadians sufficiently realize," he went on, "the disparity between the naval risks of our Empire and those of any other nation? The armies of continental Europe number their men by the millions, not by the thousands. They are highly equipped and organized; the whole population have undergone military training, and any one of these countries is absolutely secure against invasion from Great Britain, which could not send an expeditionary force of more than one hundred and fifty thousand men at the highest estimate. Such a force would be outnumbered twenty to one by any of the great European powers.

"The great outstanding fact which arrests our attention in considering the existing conditions of naval power is this: Twelve years ago the British navy and the British flag were predominant in every ocean of the world and along the shores of every continent. To-day they are predominant nowhere except in the North Sea. The paramount duty of ensuring safety in every part of the world, and by concentrating nearly all the effective naval forces in close proximity to the British Islands."

He then cited figures to show that in 1902 there were 160 ships on foreign and colonial stations against 76 to-day.

"Do not imagine that this result has been brought about by any reduction in expenditure, for the case is practically the reverse. Great Britain's total naval expenditure in 1902 was less than one hundred and fifty-two million dollars. The increasing strength of other navies, and especially of the German navy, has compelled Great Britain not only to increase her fleet, but to concentrate it in the vicinity of the British Islands.

Security the Issue.

"It is neither necessary nor desirable in this place to debate or discuss the probability or imminence of war. The real test of our action is the existence or non-existence of absolute security. We cannot afford to be satisfied with anything less than that, for the risks are too great. It should never be forgotten that, without war, without the firing of a shot, or the striking of a blow, our naval supremacy may disappear, and with it the sole guarantee of the Empire's continued existence.

"In presenting our proposals it will be borne in mind that we are not undertaking or beginning a system of regular and periodical contributions. I agree with the resolution of this House in 1909 that the payment of such contributions would not be the most satisfactory solution of the question of defence.

"Upon the information which I have disclosed to the House the situation is, in my opinion, sufficiently grave to demand immediate action. We have asked His Majesty's Government in what form temporary and immediate aid can best be given by Canada at this juncture. The answer has been unhesitating and unequivocal. Let me again quote it:

"We have no hesitation in answering, after a prolonged consideration of all the circumstances, that it is desirable that such aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ships of war which science can build or money supply."

Cost of a Dreadnought.

"Upon inquiry as to the cost of such a battleship we are informed by the Admiralty that it is approximately two million three hundred and fifty thousand pounds, including armament and first outfit of ordinance stores and ammunition. The total cost of three such battleships which when launched will be the most powerful in the world would be approximately thirty-five million dollars and we ask the people of Canada through their Parliament to grant that sum to His Majesty the King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the overseas dominions in order to increase the effective naval forces of the Empire, to safeguard our shores and our seaborne commerce and to make secure the common heritage of all who owe allegiance to the King.

"The ships will be at the disposal of His Majesty the King for the common defence of the Empire. They will be maintained and controlled as part of the royal navy, and we have the assurance that if at any time in the future it should be the will of the Canadian people to establish a Canadian unit of the British navy these vessels can be recalled by the Canadian Government to form part of that navy, in which case, of course, they would be maintained by Canada and not by Great Britain. In that event there would necessarily be reasonable notice and Canada would not desire or suggest the sudden withdrawal of so powerful a contingent from any important theatre in which the naval forces of the Empire might be exposed to severe and sudden attack. In the meantime, I am assured that special arrangements will be made to give Canadians the opportunity of serving as officers on these ships.

"There have been proposals to which I shall no more than allude that we should build up a great naval organization in Canada. In my humble opinion nothing of an effective character could be built up in this country within a quarter or perhaps half a century. Even then, it would be but a poor and weak substitute for that splendid organization, which the Empire already possesses, and which has been evolved and built up by centuries of the most searching experience and of the highest endeavor. Is there really any need that we should undertake the hazardous and costly experiment of building up a naval organization especially restricted to Canada, when upon just and self-respecting terms we can take such part as we desire in naval defence through the existing naval organization of the Empire; and in that way can fully and effectively avail ourselves of the men and the resources at the command of Canada?

Built In Britain.

"Where shall these ships be built? They will be built under Admiralty supervision in the United Kingdom, for the reason that at present there are no adequate facilities for constructing them in Canada. The plant required for the construction of a Dreadnought battleship is enormous, and it would be impossible at present to maintain shipbuilding in this country on such a scale. In any case, only the hull could be built in Canada, because the machinery, the armor, and the guns would necessarily be constructed or manufactured in the United Kingdom. The additional cost of construction in Canada would be about twelve million dollars for the three, and it would be impossible to estimate the delay. These ships are urgently required within two or three years at the outside for rendering aid, upon which may depend the Empire's future existence. According to my conception, the effective development of shipbuilding industries in Canada must commence with small beginnings and in a businesslike way.

"I have discussed this subject with the Admiralty, and they thoroughly realise that it is not to the Empire's advantage that all shipbuilding facilities should be concentrated in the United Kingdom. I am assured, therefore, that the Admiralty are prepared in the early future to give orders for the construction in Canada of small cruisers, oil-tank vessels and auxiliary craft of various kinds. The plant required is relatively small, as compared with that which is necessary for a Dreadnought battleship, and such an undertaking would have a much more secure and permanent basis from a business standpoint. For the purpose

STARVATION NOT INVASION

Is the Danger Says Lord Charles Beresford

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Dec. 6.—Lord Charles Beresford says in the Daily Express this morning: "What I recommended that the Dominions do, was to defend their end of trade routes with strong naval bases, mines, torpedo boat destroyers and light cruisers.

The trade routes are unprotected and now our danger is starvation, not invasion. The country was deceived and fooled by statements regarding the dreadnaughts of other nations. We were insulted by being told about dreadnaughts, the Dominions quite forgetting that the fleet is composed of a variety of units, any one of which being defective or short, jeopardized the

CHINATOWN FILM AT THE RED MILL

The Yellow Peril Will Prove an Interesting Picture

"The Yellow Peril," a truthful and startling portrayal of the lights and shadows of Chinatown, is the title of a picture in 3,500 feet of films which will be shown at the Red Mill Theatre to-night and to-morrow.

The picture will give an accurate idea of the life of the denizens of the opium dives in Chinatown, and will also depict some of the conditions under which white slavery is made to flourish there.

Chinatown in all its repugnant phases, and all phases of its better perspectives, have been interwoven in a picture that will grip the attention of all who see it from start to finish. There is nothing in the pictures to offend, and its presentation at the Red Mill will be the first occasion on which it has been shown in Peterborough. It affords a splendid opportunity to all to see Chinatown as it really exists, every scene being taken from actual life. The Red Mill will also give a special matinee on Saturday afternoon, to which the children are particularly invited. 1d

GREAT BRITAIN IS GRATEFUL

London Papers Express Delight at the Naval Gift.

London, Dec. 6.—The news of Borden's naval announcement reached London soon after ten o'clock last night, and quickly drew an eager crowd around the tape machines in clubs and hotels. Parliament at Westminster was busy with Welsh Disestablishment, but the momentous pronouncement at Ottawa was keenly discussed by the whole, the feeling being that the offer was a most generous one and constituting splendid fruit of the visit of Canadian Ministers last summer. The offer indeed was more generous than the average Parliamentarian had been inclined to expect, and the general tenor of its conditions was regarded as a statesmanlike provision for meeting the exigencies of the present naval situation, combined with due regard for safeguarding Canada's own interests in the world of politics. None of the evening newspapers published special editions, but in every morning newspaper to-day the announcement is the chief feature.

"Canada's Offer Made Good" is The Mail's heading to an editorial which describes Borden's speech as magnificent.

"No policy could be more statesmanlike or patriotic nor could it have been proclaimed in nobler, more moving words," says The Mail, which continues:

"As dominions are now supporting in some considerable part the financial cost of providing an Imperial navy, so they have a clear right to determine how that navy shall be used. They must, in a word, be called to our councils. Co-operation must be reconciled with autonomy. Happily this is a point on which all parties in this country are agreed, so that it only remains to devise the machinery."

The Express says Premier Borden's speech reshapes the whole meaning of Empire, and establishes on a new basis the security of our common heritage. It repels the direct menace of the growing sea power of Germany and her allies. Even if the intense Imperialism which swept away American reciprocity did not command co-operation to the Dominion, sheer self-interest would dictate it. The burden was too heavy; thus strengthened we are invincible. It is nowhere denied there must also some partnership in control of policy.

The Express finishes with an argument for closer fiscal connection.

The Morning Post says it is important to note Borden's statement does not profess to embody a permanent Canadian naval policy. He is evidently impressed by the superior organization of the Imperial navy to anything Canada could produce. From the constitutional aspect The Post admits it is a beginning, though not a satisfactory beginning, of embracing the dominions in an Imperial council. It is a mere makeshift, and the whole position will have to be revised and made more satisfactory to the dominions.

The Chronicle describes the offer as a very handsome, impressive contribution. The Imperial value of such offers exceeds money value. Three dreadnoughts voluntarily provided by the Dominion are worth more to the Empire and fleet than the same ships provided by British taxpayers, because they prove a most practical way.

Foreign powers will take note that our command of the sea rests not alone upon the wealth and spirit of the people in two small islands. They may also be assured that our over seas dominions, which have no conceivable interest in the quarrelsome adventures, would not contribute to our navy if they did not regard it as the handmaid of an essentially unaggressive policy.

AT THE FURY OF THE SEAS

Passenger Steamer on the Rocks But May Withstand the Storm.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 6.—The Passenger Steamer Easton, of the Booth Lines, lies to-day on rocks on Iroquois reef thirty miles west of Port Arthur, Ont. The steamer is exposed to the fury of the worst blizzard that has swept Lake Superior in years. Wireless reports her last night with stern out of water, but holding together. Persistent rumors of loss of life are not confirmed, and the belief is expressed that the seas are not strong enough to pound her to pieces.

"Weather bad, outlook dark," were the last words heard from the stranded steamer. Fifteen passengers and twenty-five crew were aboard. The Company's statement that all aboard have been taken off by tugs standing by is denied from other sources.

DREADNOUGHTS ARE THE BEST FORM OF ASSISTANCE

Admiralty's Memo Proves the Existance of an Emergency—Premier Presents Carefully Considered Statement From the British Authorities.

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—In the course his speech on the naval proposals of the Government Mr. Borden presented a document which has more than ordinary interest, both in Canada and abroad. It was a memorandum "prepared by the Board of Admiralty on the general naval situation and communicated to the Canadian Government by His Majesty's Government."

Premier Borden adduced it in support of his statement that there is a real emergency and while the facts and figures are not new the language in which the note is couched will have an international significance. The report says, in effect:

"The Admiralty set the greatest store by the important material, and still more important moral, assistance which it is within the power of Canada to give to maintaining British naval supremacy on the high seas, but they think it necessary to disclaim any intention, however indirect, of putting pressure upon Canadian public opinion, or of seeking to influence the Dominion Parliament in a decision which clearly belongs solely to Canada."

After reciting the relative strengths of the British and German navies and showing that the development of the latter has proceeded at such a pace as to entail extra efforts to guard against hazards, the memorandum declares that the effect of the new German navy law of 1912 is to produce a remarkable expansion of strength and readiness in that country's navy. The number of battleships and large armored cruisers which will be kept constantly ready and in full commission will be raised by the law from 21, the present figure, to 33—an addition of 12, or an increase of about 57 per cent.

This great fleet is not dispersed all over the world for duties of commerce protection or in discharge of colonial responsibilities; nor are its composition and character adapted to those purposes. It is concentrated and kept concentrated in close proximity to the German and British coasts.

It is now necessary to look forward to the situation in 1915. In home waters:

Great Britain will have 25 "Dreadnought" battleships and two "Lord Nelsons."

Germany will have 17 "Dreadnought" battleships.

Great Britain will have six battle-cruisers.

Germany will have six battle cruisers.

It has been necessary within the past decade to concentrate the fleet mainly in home waters.

In 1902 there were 160 British vessels on the overseas stations against 16 to-day.

Whatever may be the decision of Canada at the present juncture, Great Britain will not in any circumstances fail in her duty to the oversea dominions of the crown.

She has before now successfully made head alone and unaided against the most formidable combinations and she has not lost her capacity by a wise policy and strenuous exertions to watch over and preserve the vital interests of the Empire.

The Admiralty are assured that His Majesty's Government will not hesitate to ask the House of Commons for whatever provision the circumstances of each year may require. But the aid which Canada could give at the present time is not to be measured only in ships or money. Any action on the part of Canada to increase the power and mobility of the Imperial navy, and thus widen the margin of our common safety, would be recognized everywhere as a most significant witness to the united strength of the Empire, and to the renewed resolve of the overseas dominions to take their part in maintaining its integrity.

The Prime Minister of the Dominion having enquired in what form any immediate aid that Canada might give would be most effective, we have no hesitation in answering after a prolonged consideration of all the circumstances that it is desirable that such aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ships of war which science can build or money supply.

EXTENSION OF POWERS OF RAILWAY COMMISSION

Senate Adjourns.

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—The Senate held a short sitting yesterday and adjourned until Jan. 15.

Before adjournment, however, Senator Dandurand asked if the Government leader had any information as to the adjournment of the Commons. Hon. Mr. Lougheed replied that he had discussed the matter with the Prime Minister, and understood it was intended to adjourn the Commons on about Dec. 18 for the holidays, the House to be recalled again about the 7th or 8th of January.

As it was possible that the naval bill might be disposed of in the Commons before adjournment, it was desirable that the Senate should be back soon after the Commons, to take it up.

Senator Choquette was told that the Government has no present intention of publishing an official history of Canada.

Will be Asked of Government by the Farmers of Alberta.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calgary, Dec. 6.—United farmers of Alberta will petition the Federal Parliament asking for the extension of powers of the Railway Commission to inflict fines on railways and recompense those suffering loss through the railways negligence. They will also ask that railways be restrained from attracting new settlers until in a position to handle the increased traffic which such settlement creates.

EXCUSE ME!

The train was kicking up a cloud of dust and getting its stride. The kidnapped clergyman paused a moment, aghast at the speed with which the ground was being paid out. Then he climbed the brass rail and, with a hasty prayer, dropped overboard.

Mallory lunged at him, and seized him by his reversed collar. But the collar alone remained in his clutch. The parson was almost lost in the dust he created as he struck, bounded and rolled till he came to a stop, with his stars and his prayers to thank for injuries to nothing worse than his dignity and other small clothes.

Mallory returned to the observation room and flung the collar and bib to the floor in a fury of despair, howling: "He got away! He got away!"

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Empty Berth.

The one thing Mallory was beginning to learn about Marjorie was that she would never take the point of view he expected, and never proceed along the lines of his logic.

She had grown furious at him for what he could not help. She had told him that she would marry him out of spite. She had commanded him to pursue and apprehend the flying parson. He failed and returned crestfallen and wondering what new form her rage would take.

And, lo and behold, when she saw him so downcast and helpless, she rushed to him with caresses, cuddled his broad shoulders against her breast, and smothered him. It was the sincerity of his dejection and the complete helplessness he displayed that won her woman's heart.

Mallory gazed at her with almost more wonderment than delight. This was another flashlight on her character. Most courtships are conducted under a rose-light in which wooer and wooed wear their best clothes on their best behavior; or in a starlit, moonlit, or gaslit twilight where romance softens angles and wraps everything in velvet shadow. Then the two get married and begin to live together in the cold, gray daylight of realism, with undignified necessities and harrowing situations at every step, and disillusion begins its deadly work.

This young couple was undergoing all the inconveniences and temper-exposures of marriage without its blessed compensations. They promised to be well acquainted before they were wed. If they still wanted each other after this ordeal, they were pretty well assured that their marriage would not be a failure.

Mallory rejoiced to see that the hurricane of Marjorie's jealousy had only whipped up the surface of her soul. The great depths were still calm and unmoved, and her love for him was in and of the depths.

Soon after leaving Ogden, the train entered upon the great bridge across the Great Salt Lake. The other passengers were staring at the enormous engineering masterpiece and the conductor was pointing out that, in order to save forty miles and the crossing of two mountain chains, the railroad had devoted four years of labor and millions of dollars to stretching a thirty-mile bridge across this inland ocean.

But Marjorie and Mallory never noticed. They were [illegible] exploring each other's souls, and they had safely bridged the Great Salt Lake which the first big bitter jealousy spreads across every matrimonial route.

They were undisturbed in their voyage, for all the other passengers had their noses flattened against the window panes of the other cars—all except one couple, gazing each at each through time-wrinkled eyelids touched with the magic of a tardy honeymoon.

For all that Anne and Ira knew, the Great Salt Lake was a moon-swept lagoon, and the arid mountains of Nevada which the train went scaling, were the very hillsides of Arcadia.

But the other passengers soon came trooping back into the observation room. Ira had told them nothing of Mallory's confession. In the first place, he was a man who had learned to keep a secret, and in the second place, he had forgotten that such persons as Mallory or his Marjorie existed. All the world was summed up in the fearsomely happy little spinster who had moved up into his section—the section which had begun its career draped in satin ribbons unwittingly prophetic.

The communion of Mallory and Marjorie under the benison of reconciliation was invaded by the jokes of the other passengers, unconsciously ironic.

Dr. Temple chaffed them amiably: "You two will have to take a back seat now. We've got a new bridal couple to amuse us."

And Mrs. Temple welcomed them with: "You're only old married folks, like us."

The Mallorys were used to the misunderstanding. But the misplaced witticisms gave them reassurance that their secret was safe yet a little while. At their dinner-table, however, and in the long evening that followed they were haunted by the fact that this was their last night on the train, and no minister to be expected.

And now once more the Mallorys regained the star roles in the esteem of the audience, for once more they quarreled at good-night-kissing time. Once more they required two sections, while Anne Gattle's berth was not even made up. It remained empty, like a deserted nest, for its occupant had flown south.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Fresh Trouble Daily.

The following morning the daylight creeping into section number one found Ira and Anne staring at each other. Ira was tousled and Anne was unkempt, but her blush still gave her cheek at least an Indian summer glow.

After a violent effort to reach the space between her shoulder blades, she was compelled to appeal to her new master to act as her new maid.

"Oh, Mr. Lathrop," she stammered—"Ira," she corrected, "won't you please hook me up?" she pleaded.

Ira beamed with a second childhood boyishness: "I'll do my best, my little ootsum-tootsums, it's the first time I ever tried it."

"Oh, I'm so glad," Anne sighed, "it's the first time I ever was hooked up by a gentleman."

He gurgled with joy and, forgetting the poverty of space, tried to reach her lips to kiss her. He almost broke her neck and bumped his head so hard that instead of saying, as he intended, "My darling," he said, "Oh, hell!"

"Ira!" she gasped. But he, with all the proprietorship he had assumed, answered cheerily: "You'll have to get used to it, ducky darling. I could never learn not to swear." He proved the fact again and again by the remarks he addressed to certain refractory hooks. He apologized, but she felt more like apologizing for herself.

"Oh, Ira," she said, "I'm so ashamed to have you see me like this—the first morning."

"Well, you haven't got anything on me—I'm not shaved."

"You don't have to tell me that," he said, rubbing her smarting cheek. Then she bumped her head and gasped: "Oh—what you said."

This made them feel so much at home that she attained the heights of frankness and honesty by reaching in her handbag for a knob of supplementary hair, which she affixed dexterously to what was home-grown. Ira, instead of looking shocked, loved her for her honesty, and grinned:

"Now, that's where you have got something on me. Say, we're like a couple of sardines trying to make love in a tin can."

"It's cosy though," she said, and then vanished through the curtains and gayly ran the gauntlet of amused glances and over-cordial "Good mornings" till she hid her blushes behind the door of the women's room and turned the key. If she had thought of it she would have said, "God bless the man that invented doors—and the other angel that invented locks."

The passengers this morning were all a little brisker than usual. It was the last day aboard for everybody and they allowed a certain extra animation, like the inmates of an ocean liner when land has been sighted.

Ashton was shaving when Ira swaggered into the men's room. Without pausing to note whom he was addressing, Ashton sang out:

"Good morning. Did you rest well?"

"What?" Ira roared.

"Oh, excuse me!" said Ashton, hastily, devoting himself to a gash his razor had made in his cheek—even in that cheek of his.

Ira scrubbed out the basin, filled it and tried to dive into it, slapping the cold water in double handfuls over his glowing face and puffing through it like a porpoise.

Meanwhile the heavy-eyed Reddick was stalking through the dining-car, regarded with amazement by Dr. Temple and his wife, who were already up and breakfasting.

"What's the matter with the bridal couples on this train, anyway?" said Dr. Temple.

"I can't imagine," said his wife, "we old couples are the only normal ones."

"Some more coffee, please, mother," he said.

"But your nerves," she protested.

"It's my vacation," he insisted.

Mrs. Temple stared at him and shook her head: "I wonder what mischief you'll be up to today? You've already been smoking, gambling, drinking—have you been swearing, yet?"

"Not yet," the old clergyman smiled. "I've been saving that up for a good occasion. Perhaps it will rise before the day's over."

AN OLD-FASHIONED CHRISTMAS DINNER

What Washington Irving Saw—Fine Description of the Old-Time Feast of Yuletide

No better description of the old-fashioned Christmas dinner has been penned than that of Washington Irving:

The dinner was served, he says, up in the great hall, where the Squire always held his Christmas banquet. A blazing, crackling fire of logs had been heaped on to warm the spacious apartment, and the flames went sparkling and wreathing up the wide-mouthed chimney. The great picture of the Crusader and his white horse had been profusely decorated with greens for the occasion; and holly and ivy had likewise been wreathed round the helmet and weapons on the opposite wall, which I understood were the arms of the same warrior. A sideboard was set out on which the display of plate might have vied (at least in variety) with Belshazzar's parade of the vessels of the temple; "flagons, cans, cups beakers, goblets, basins," and ewers, the gorgeous utensils of good companionship that had gradually accumulated through many generations of jovial housekeepers. Before these stood the two yule candles, beaming like two stars of the first magnitude; other lights were distributed in branches, and the whole array glittered like a firmament of silver.

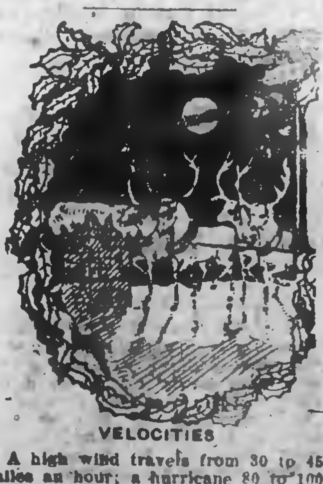
The parson said grace, which was not a short familiar one, such as is commonly addressed to the Deity in these unceremonious days, but a long, courtly, well-worded one of the ancient school. There was now a pause, as if something were expected, when suddenly the butler entered the hall with some degree of bustle; he was attended by a servant on each side with a large wax light, and bore a silver dish on which was an enormous pig's head, decorated with rosemary, with a lemon in its mouth, which was placed with great formality at the head of the table.

The table was literally loaded with good cheer, and presented an epitome of country abundance in this season of overflowing larders. A distinguished post was allotted to "ancient sirloin," as mine host termed it; being, as he added, "the standard of old English hospitality, and a joint of goodly presence, and full of expectation." There were several dishes quaintly decorated, and which had evidently something traditional in their embellishments; but about which, as I did not like to appear over-curious, I asked no questions.

I could not, however, but notice a pie, magnificently decorated with peacock's feathers, in imitation of the tail of that bird, which over-shadowed a considerable tract of the table. This, the Squire confessed, with some little hesitation, was a pheasant pie, though a peacock pie was certainly the most authentical; but there had been such a mortality among the peacocks this season that he could not prevail upon himself to have one killed.

When the cloth was removed the butler brought in a huge silver vessel, of rare and curious workmanship, which he placed before the Squire. Its appearance was hailed with acclamation; being the Wassail Bowl, so renowned in Christmas festivity. Its contents had been prepared by the Squire himself; for it was a beverage of the skilful mixture of which he particularly prided himself; alleging that it was too abstruse and complex for the comprehension of an ordinary servant.

The old gentleman's whole countenance beamed with a serene look of indwelling delight as he stirred this mighty bowl. Having raised it to his lips, with a hearty wish of a merry Christmas to all present, he sent it brimming round the board, for everyone to follow his example, according to the primitive style; pronouncing it "the ancient fountain of good feeling, where all hearts met together."



VELOCITIES

A high wind travels from 30 to 45 miles an hour; a hurricane 80 to 100 miles an hour.

The velocity of the earth on its axis exceeds 1,000 miles an hour; around the sun it is 66,000 miles an hour; the velocity of the moon is 2,273 miles an hour.

Sound travels through air at 1,090 feet a second; through water 240 feet a second; along steel wire 17,130 feet a second.

Electricity travels along wires above ground at 24,360 miles a second.

WHAT IT SHOWED

"Gentlemen," said the quack doctor, who was trying to get together some money for Christmas, "I have sold these pills in your market-place for the past ten years. Never during that period have I had a single complaint about them. What does that prove to you, gentlemen?"

"I reckon it proves that dead men tell no tales," replied an onlooker as he moved away.

Knowledge is power. Study to be a dynamo.

No Loafing in Switzerland.

In Switzerland a man may not deliberately join the army of the unemployed and remain indefinitely in the ranks without even making an effort to secure employment and in the interval be constantly deteriorating into an unemployable. There is no resorting to charitable institutions as hotels, no wandering about the country extorting alms from honest people while pretending to be in search of employment. An unemployed person must make a serious effort to find work. If he does not the authorities will find it for him and of a kind that may not be to his liking, and he is compelled to perform the work assigned to him. If he refuses he is placed in the workhouse, where military discipline is maintained and where every inmate is required to work to the full capacity of his strength, for which he receives as compensation his board and lodging, with wages ranging from 3 to 10 cents per day.

Byron's Curls.

Were Byron's curls a natural development? It is an article of faith with his admirers that cut had nothing to do with his ringlets. The youthful Disraeli reproduced them, and his curls certainly betrayed the iron. And if you believe Scrope Davis that indiscreet person was once in a position to surprise Byron's secret process. The two were on familiar terms at Trinity. Davis walked into Byron's rooms one morning and found him still abed and with his hair in unmistakable curl papers. "I thought your hair curled naturally," Scrope remarked. "Confound you, so it does!" the other returned. "I take care of that. But don't you tell anybody." Of course Scrope told everybody. Still, Byron was curly headed at Harrow. And he could not very well have gone to bed in curl papers there.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Cold That Kills and Cold That Cures.

In England severe cold generally kills a good many people. In certain parts of North America cold still more severe puts new life into them. It requires no argumentation to show that there must be a definite reason for this. The chief reason is that English cold is mostly damp, while in North America it is mostly dry. There is the greatest difference in the world between dry air and damp air. The former is usually air pure and simple, possessing a full quantity of oxygen and often charged highly with ozone. The latter consists of air mixed with the vapor of water. When the former air, fully oxygenated, is breathed it stimulates more powerfully than champagne. The latter, less oxygenated and charged with vapor of water, not only does not stimulate, but depresses.

A Hunting Incident.

A city hunter, rigged out in a corduroy suit, double peaked cap, leggings and other picturesque paraphernalia, engaged a small country boy as guide.

The two were greatly astonished when a rabbit jumped out from behind a log, looked about and dropped over as if dead.

"There isn't a mark on it!" exclaimed the sportsman.

"No," replied the boy. "I guess he must have laughed himself to death."—Judge.

"I and Mont Blanc!"

A story of a Prussian lieutenant who stood at the foot of Mont Blanc and with a haughty eye contemplated the mighty mountain delightfully illustrates the arrogance of the youngsters of the German army.

"Donnerwetter!" he said, stroking the vestige of a mustache. "How ridiculously small a civilian must feel!"

Expert Testimony.

"I don't see why you women always want a house full of closets," remarked Crabshaw to his wife.

"I know, dad," replied little Johnnie, speaking up. "It's so they can always have a new place to hide the jam."—New York Times.

$48,000,000 FOR ROLLING STOCK

Cossal Amount Expended By C.P.R. for New Equipment During 1912

Forty-eight millions of dollars in rolling stock, ordered in one year!!

That is what the Canadian Pacific Railway has done during 1912. It is double the amount ever ordered by any other railway system in North America in the same period and is tangible evidence that the C.P.R. is keeping pace with the development of Canada—no matter how swift it may be.

When the orders are completely filled the C.P.R. will have in commission 2,225 locomotives, 90,416 freight and stock cars of all kinds, 2,261 first and second class passenger coaches, and 512 tourist sleepers, standard sleepers, diners and cafe cars, 1,383 conductors' vans, 4,029 boarding, tool and auxiliary cars and steam shovels—to be operated on over 12,500 miles of track.

The new equipment ordered during 1912 includes 404 locomotives, 2,653 box cars, 636 flat cars, 401 coal cars, 300 stock cars, 227 refrigerator cars, 94 first class sleepers, three compartment cars, 20 observation cars, 25 diners, 57 tourist cars, 117 first class and suburban cars, 138 baggage, mail and express cars.

Four motor cars, which will climb up the side of the mountain from Lagan to the Lakes in the Clouds will be placed in commission—the tracks having already been laid—and will prove a great convenience to the army of tourists which invades that picturesque region yearly.

The equipment is being chiefly procured chiefly in Canada, but different shops being unable to fill the orders in their entirety, the remainder has to be purchased in the United States, in order to obtain delivery within a reasonable time.

The already enormous carrying capacity of the C.P.R. will be greatly increased when the new equipment is secured and distributed. The passenger cars would, if filled with travellers, move simultaneously 168,000 people, while the cars would carry comfortably all the men, women and children of over fifty of the average-sized Canadian towns.

A Lesson in Gunnery.

For two solid hours the gunnery instructor endeavored to instil some faint idea of the subject down for discussion, but his stock of patience was ebbing.

"Now," he bellowed, "are there any of you budding Nelsons who don't know the difference between firing by electricity and firing by percussion?"

One at least still needed further instruction on that point, and he said so.

Then, like a clap of thunder, the instructor explained.

"If you got struck dead by lightning that would be electricity. See? But if I came over to you and gave you a clout over your fat head that, my son, would be percussion. Twig?"

The other saw and said so.—London Tit-Bits.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS IN BRIEF

A force of Greek troops yesterday severely defeated and punished 1,000 Turks who were pillaging the village of Boyatisco.

It is understood that the House of Commons will adjourn for the Christmas recess on Dec. 18, and will meet again on Jan. 8.

On the C.P.R. steamer Lake Erie, which arrived at St. John, N.B., yesterday from Liverpool were seventy young women for domestic service.

Nobody will be appointed for the time being to replace M. J. Butler, who resigned as general manager of the Dominion Iron & Steel Corporation recently.

Through the arrest of Mrs. Margaret Black the Hamilton police believe they have discovered one of the principal stations of the white slave traffic in Canada.

This season's number of people returning to Great Britain for the Christmas season is the largest ever registered in the railroad and steamship business of Montreal.

Robt. Jackson, a recent immigrant, was sentenced to the Central Prison for one year yesterday for attempting to break into the cellar of an east end grocery store in Toronto.

The Turkish fleet is concentrating in the Dardanelles. The Government has decided to order it to engage the Greek fleet, but there is much skepticism regarding the probability of a naval battle.

Sensational charges of graft were made at a mass meeting in the City Hall at Guelph last night. Samuel Carter, commissioner of light and heat, accused city officials of taking money in the purchase of the lighting plant.

A Slight Mistake in English.

Slight mistakes in speaking a foreign language or in understanding it when some one else speaks it are commonly nothing more than amusing, but a member of the Alpine club mentions an instance of a more serious nature. He was climbing with a guide, who persisted in talking bad English instead of indifferent French. The guide had just crossed a snow bridge over a wide crevasse and turned to wait for the tourist on the further side.

He was asked if the bridge was weak and replied, "No—strong."

Naturally the tourist walked boldly across the bridge, which promptly collapsed and dropped him into the crevasse. However, it was not very deep, and when he crawled out looking like a snow man he discovered that his guide had meant to say that the bridge was "not strong."

The tourist then strongly enjoined upon him to reserve his English henceforth for use in the valleys.—Exchange.

The grouchy bachelor uncle does not enjoy Christmas. For him it means worry over the purchase of gifts for many small nieces and nephews, not to mention a long list of grown-up relatives, who, according to his reasoning, will expect something handsome in the way of a stocking-filler, inasmuch as they know he has nothing to do with his money but provide for his own luxuries. Not the least of his Yuletide terrors is the knowledge that he must accept one of the many invitations he receives to take part in a family gathering, and devour vast quantities of rich and heavy Christmas fare, including roast turkey, plum pudding, mince pie, and other indigestibles, which foreshadow dyspepsia. Far rather would he spend the day quietly at his club, but he has not the courage of his convictions.

In this spirit he leaves all his shopping till the last possible moment on Christmas Eve, hurriedly buys whatever articles the busy clerks thrust before him, and rushes for his train.

Once among his own kin, where radiant childish faces bring back to him almost forgotten memories, his dignified deportment undergoes a change, he enters into the spirit of the festive occasion, his whole being becomes impregnated with the joy of the day which once a year brings its message of "Peace on Earth, Good will to Men," and as he leaves for the busy scenes of the city again, he can truthfully say, "I have had a very merry Christmas."

Christmas Cakes and Puddings

Christmas Candies.

A new and delicious confection may be prepared as follows: Cut rich steamed fruit cake into small stars, triangles, or circles and dip into sweet chocolate which has been melted. This makes a dainty addition to the Christmas candy box.

Christmas Marmalade.

Wash three quarts of cranberries, barely cover with water, and cook until berries are tender. Press through a sive and add to this juice and pulp six pounds of warm sugar, two pounds of seeded and chopped raisins, and four large, clean oranges. The oranges should be minced fine, thus using skin and pulp, but the seeds should be picked out. Cook until thick and turn into glass jars. The orange skins must be cooked until thoroughly tender. While cooking watch carefully that it does not burn. Stir often.

Old English Plum Pudding.

Take of raisins well stoned but not chopped one pound, currants thoroughly washed one pound, suet very finely chopped one pound; mix them, add quarter pound of flour or fine bread crumbs, three ounces of sugar, one and one-half ounces of grated lemon peel, a blade of mace, half of nutmeg grated, one teaspoon of ginger, half dozen eggs, well beaten; work it well together, put in a cloth, tie firmly, allowing room to swell; put into boiling water and boil not less than two hours. The cloth, when about to be used, should be dipped in boiling water, squeezed dry, and floured, and when the pudding is done have a pan of cold water ready and dip it in for a moment as soon as it comes out of the pot, which prevents the pudding from sticking.

Christmas Fruit Cake.

Six pounds flour, three of butter three and a half of sugar, one ounce mace, two glasses wine, two glasses brandy, four pounds raisins, half pound citron, six eggs, one pint yeast, small teaspoon soda put in at last moment. After tea take all the flour, except one plate for dredging raisins, a small piece butter and a quart or more of milk, and mix like biscuit; then mix butter and sugar, and at 9 o'clock in the evening if sufficiently light, put one-third of butter and sugar into dough; at 12 add another third and early in the morning the remainder; about 11 o'clock if light enough begin kneading and continue for one hour, adding meanwhile all the other ingredients. This will make seven loaves and is excellent.

Christmas Fruit Cake.

Three cups of sugar (one brown, two white), one cup of butter, six eggs. Spices: One teaspoonful of allspice, one teaspoonful of cloves, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of nutmeg, one pound of currants, two pounds of seeded raisins, one pound of dates or figs, one lemon, grate yellow and use the juice; three cups of crackers rolled fine, one cup of sour milk, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of saleratus, one-half pound of walnuts; add one cup of flour and one-half pound of citron. Pour into a large cake tin and bake about two hours in a steady oven. This improves with age. Frost when ready to use it. I always put a piece of paper over cake for the first three-quarters of an hour to prevent hard crust forming on top of cake.

Christmas Cake.

One scant cupful of butter, two cupfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of flour sifted, three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, whites of eight eggs, half a glass of milk, one teaspoonful each of lemon, almond, and orange extract, half a pound of blanched almonds, one cupful of shredded cocoanut, one cupful of seeded raisins, quarter pound of citron cream, butter, and sugar; add milk and extracts and half the flour, beat all well, then add stiffly beaten whites of eggs and the remainder of flour into which has been sifted the baking powder; lastly add cocoanut, thinly sliced citron and well floured almonds and raisins; bake in loaf pan in moderate oven forty-five minutes; ice with boiled icing; form wreath around top of thin leaves cut from citron and small red candles to form holly berries.

Christmas Pudding.

The cost of this pudding need not exceed 25 cents, perhaps less, in any locality. All of the ingredients are usually kept in stock in every pantry. It can be made two weeks before using, if stored in a cold place, and reheated as long as it lasts. It will serve six persons. Two cups of entire wheat flour, one cup of sour milk, one cup of New Orleans molasses, one cup of seeded raisins, one egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one level teaspoonful soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of water. Mix all ingredients thoroughly, adding dissolved soda last. Steam in a buttered covered mould three hours. Sauce—Blend one-half cup sugar, one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, add one cup of cold water, boil slowly five minutes, then add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla.

Brown Suet Pudding

You will find this a very inexpensive and an extremely wholesome pudding. First chop four ounces of suet, and warm half a pound of treacle. With one pound of flour mix a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful each of cream of tartar, carbonate of soda, and grated nutmeg, and threequarters of a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Next add the treacle, then the suet, and six ounces of raisins. Stir till all the ingredients are mixed; add a little milk; tie in a scalded and floured cloth, and boil for three hours.

Macaroni Soup

This is an inexpensive and nourishing soup, and can be prepared at the shortest notice. Boil some macaroni in salted water for twenty minutes, strain it, and add three pints of stock nicely flavored with vegetables. Season with pepper and salt, and serve. If you have it, a little grated cheese sprinkled on the top of each plateful is an improvement.

Refreshing Drink

When you have finished with the tea pot at breakfast, fill it up with boiling water, and let it stand for a few minutes; then pour the water off the leaves into a jug, and set the jug in a cool place. When quite cold, squeeze in the juice of a lemon, allowing one lemon to a quart of tea. You will find this a very nice drink.

Honey Cake

Take two-thirds of a cupful of honey, one cupful of flour, and three eggs. Beat the yolks and the honey together, add the flour and four tablespoonfuls of cold water. Mix well, then add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs. Flavor with lemon essence, and bake in a quick oven. This makes a very good sponge-cake.

An enormously wide bow and scarf of Gartier blue ribbon, which is passed across the bodice from side to side, is a new corsage ornament.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—On unfavorable weather reports from the Argentine cables on Manitoba spring wheat came stronger at an advance of 3d to 4½d. There was considerable demand from foreign buyers, there being orders in the market for over half a million bushels, but owing to the higher prices in Winnipeg the volume of business done was small. The local trade in coarse grains is quiet. There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour and as bids were higher some sales were made. The local market is steady under a fair demand. A fair trade is passing in millfeed. Demand for butter is fair and cheese is more active. Eggs firm.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

THE BORDEN POLICY

The Borden naval policy is one on which the Conservative party from the Atlantic to the Pacific can bank as the truest and most effective expression of Canada's desire to aid in Imperial defence that could have been suggested. Three Super-Dreadnoughts, the finest the world can produce, are to be placed at the disposal of the British Admiralty, on the one condition that, if at any time required by Canada for a nucleus of a Canadian navy, they are to be returned. The three Dreadnoughts, which Canada presents to the effective naval forces of the Empire will set free a squadron for the Pacific ocean, and occasionally an Atlantic squadron will be able to visit Canada. The contribution of $35,000,000 is not a precedent for a periodical contribution, for a permanent naval policy will be evolved in two or three years for submission to the people at the next general elections. As compensation for the building of the Dreadnoughts in Britain, where the enormous plant necessary for the work is available—as it would not be in Canada—the British Admiralty will place orders in Canada for the construction of oil tank vessels, cruisers, and small vessels used as auxiliaries in the navy. These can be built in Canada quite readily, because they do not require extensive special equipment.

There are many points, both in Mr. Borden's speech, and in the memorandum from the British Admiralty which he presented, worthy of notice. One is the specific declaration of the Admiralty, in reply to the query as to how Canada may best aid Imperial naval defence, that the most effective aid would be highest class battleships for use in the North Sea. The Admiralty knows what is needed to give it more fighting equipment. The Borden Government has answered its call. As to the need, the statement presented, showing how the British naval forces in every sea but the North Sea had declined in power, ought to be an answer that will sink deep into the hearts and minds of Britons all over the globe. The British empire is safe only when its navy keeps command of the seas. It is not a military power. The soldiers that any Continental nation could put into the field would outnumber an offensive British force twenty to one. If the British navy is to degenerate in its relative power, if the springing up of younger nations all over the world is to make its supremacy on the water a thing of the past, then a combination of their strength will be sufficeint to put an end to the Empire. This is no sudden emergency. It is an emergency which the progress of the world has brought slowly on. The day has dawned when the overseas Dominions of the Empire must take their share in the duty of upholding the integrity of the Empire. Mr. Borden has made partial provision for the discharge of Canada's present responsibility, protecting Canadian interest in every way. We think his announcement will be greeted with sincere approbation from all Canadians of whatever party. Certainly the Liberals will not undertake to object to so plain a call of duty. It would indeed be a splendid thing for Canadian name and honor, if the House of Commons were to pass the bill providing for the contribution unanimously. Let the debate be carried out, but we hope that Canada's good name will not be dragged in the mor[illegible] of humiliation by any Nationalist or disloyal utterances of which we sometimes have had too much. Let ever Canadian join whole-heartedly in this most necessary project for the developing of Imperial defence and the unifying of the Imperial interests.

LIBERALS ILL-TEMPERED

The ill-temper being shown by the Liberals in the House of Commons may be esteemed by them fighting politics, but to the country at large we think they will be looked upon as most unseemly attempts to be nasty. The chief among the Laurier "soreheads" is Rodolphe Lemieux the ex-postmaster general. That amiable gentleman delights in finding a billet for his shafts in Hon. L. P. Pelletier, the Borden Government postmaster-general. In fact, so bitter is the animosity between these two protagonists that it would not be at all surprising if some day they did not confine themselves to words. But the members of the Government are in a position to go along quietly, paying little heed to ill-natured attempts to vent party spite. Playing politics is all right, but there is some limit to dishonesty and asperity. The attacks upon Hon. Bob Rogers, the Minister of Public Works, have also been of a peculiarly vitriolic nature. The Macdonald bye-election and the Saskatchewan election have furnished themes for reams of eloquence about the loftiness of British institutions, the prostitution of British justice, the manipulation of His Majesty's courts for wrongful purposes, and so on ad nauseam. Like the wise man he is Hon. Bob Rogers does not bother to listen to the blatherskites going their 60 miles an hour. He has other more important business to look after. The very fact that he does not stay in the House to preserve his reputation from all imputation by these gentlemen hurts them beyond measure, and they redouble the virulence of their attack. But the members of the Borden Government are able for the best there is on the Liberal side, whether it be in parliamentary tactics or in the matching of wits. The Liberals will make nothing out of their attacks just as they are making nothing out of their attitude upon the naval policy. The early conclusion of the debate upon the address in reply to the speech from the throne was due to the desire of the Liberal members individually, not to postpone the date of the announcement of the naval policy. They want to know what it is, in order to consult their constituents upon it during the Christmas recess. Then when they gather in the New Year, they will have their orders. There is one thing certain, and this is that if they find the Borden naval policy is popular, they will refuse to buck it at the command of Laurier. That opportunist has missed his cue on several occasions, and apparently this time he will be saved only by the good sense of the followers, whom he cannot control now as he could when he held office.

TRENT CANAL EXTENSION

The deputation of the Trent Valley municipal representatives that waited upon Premier Borden received a very attentive hearing. The case they presented was in the hands of S. R. Armstrong, city clerk of Peterborough, a gentleman who is as well posted on the canal and commercial matters relating to it as anyone in the district. What the outcome of the visit will be cannot of course be foretold, but it is sure that there will be every desire by the Borden Government to do what is right and square by this section of Ontario. The Toronto Mail and Empire, the chief Government organ, commends quite heartily the idea of extending the Trent Canal through the Severn River to Georgian Bay, and also says that the extension to Lake Ontario, now under contract, is equally necessary if the Trent canal and the country served by it and connecting waterways are to reap adequate benefit. The canal is of comparatively little service under the present conditions. It has no large outlet at either end, and can originate only local traffic.

Peterborough and the other municipalities have much to gain by water connection with the Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario. It will mean more industries, of a heavy manufacturing type, for this city. If coal can be brought up the canal in barges rather than hauled in over the railway, there is no reason why there should not be a considerable development here of industries using large quantities of coal. Enough surplus supply would have to be accumulated in the navigation season to last well over until the opening of navigation again. Tourist traffic from Lake Ontario through to Georgian Bay would soon develop, making the Kawartha district an added popular summer resort. In fact the commencement of through traffic would make Peterborough the centre of an ever extending trade that would greatly increase the prosperity of this city's business men. It is to be hoped and expected that the deputation's presentation will have the weight intended by the communities represented, and that active work on the construction of the extensions may not long be delayed.

GOOD ROADS LOR THE FARMER

"Goods roads for the farmer" is one of the slogans of agricultural progress. The farmers of Peterborough County are as much interested in this question as the farmers of any other county. The main roads of the county are in most places in fair condition, but the earth roads in spring and fall are next to impassable. The general movement in Canada to improve the highways carries a local interest that cannot be ignored. In Ontario this year, for instance, about $800,000 is being expended under the Highway Improvement Act. About 1,400,000 is spent each year by the municipalities and 1,100,000 statute labor days are put in on the roads.

Each year a certain proportion of the expenditure goes for maintenance, and this being of current nature, cannot be regarded as putting the roads of the province in any better shape than they originally were. But much of the labor and money spent each year is capital expenditure. That is, it provides a heavy, sound basis for surfacing. Once the principal bed is laid, the expense of maintaining the road, if properly conducted ought to be fairly light.

There is no question, however, that the time is coming when Ontario, the leader of all Dominion provinces in road building, will have to be more generous to the municipalities. At present the counties engaged in operating good roads systems under the Highway Improvement Act, receive only one-third assistance from the province. They ought to receive one half. Only 17 or 18 of the 38 counties have commenced systems under the Act, and if the province were to bear half of the expenditure, many of these would come into the fold. The municipalities entering upon such good roads systems ought also to have some consideration from the province in respect of expenses for maintenance. There ought to be a provincial tax or a toll tax put upon automobiles. These are the dead-weight under which the farming districts, trying to keep up good roads, must stagger along. If the automobiles wear out the roads they ought to pay part of the expense of maintaining those roads. We think the justice of this will strike everyone. Let Provincial Secretary Hanna impose a road tax upon automobiles, and see what a noise is let loose.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"If you want to live to a ripe, happy old age, eat baked onions," is the advice of Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in America, who is 78 years old. Hetty evidently believes that "in onion there is strength," instead of the saying, in union there is strength.

From Hamilton Herald:—The official announcement that the local Hydro-Electric system will require 8,000 horse power of current within six months or so is somewhat remarkable. If it had been predicted last year that the civic plant would need that amount of electric current before it was completed, the prediction would have been ridiculed.

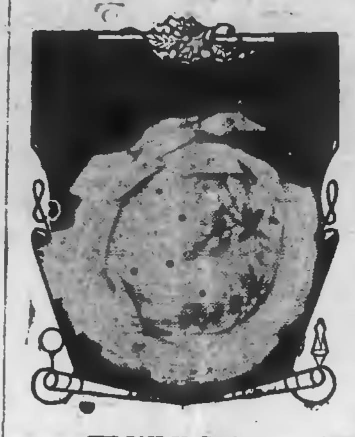
Artificial Flowers In Dainty Gift Form This Season

Artificial flowers are a fad of the season, and now the pretty posies have invaded the realm of needlework in a new guise, that of a hanging pincushion contrived from a huge ribbon rose.



THE ROSE PINCUSHION.

Dresden silk in rose shades is the covering used for the pincushion proper, which is placed in the center of the blossom. Artificial foliage adds to the beauty of this attractive Christmas gift.

The Effect of Discipline.

"Just see how the chickens mind the old hen, Robby," said Mrs. Norris to her son. "Watch them run to her when she calls them."

"I suppose she sat on them when they were little," remarked the infant phenomenon reflectively.

MARRIAGE LAWS IN TERRITORIES

Questions By Mr. Burnham M.P. and Replies By the Minister of Justice

In the House, on Wednesday, the Hon. Mr. Doherty made reply to the questions put to Mr. Burnham in regard to the marriage laws in parts of the Dominion under Federal control. We put below the questions and answers in full—

Mr. Bradburn— What portions of the Dominion of Canada are solely under federal control and jurisdiction?

What are the laws with respect to marriage in these districts?

Mr. Doherty—The territory which remains subject to the legislation of the Dominion and not subject to any provincial powers is comprised in the Northwest Territoreis and the Yukon Territory, being all that part of the Dominion not included within the bounderies of any province.

The law affecting marriage in the Northwest Territories is the law of England as the same existed on July 15, 1870, in so far as applicable and in so far as not repealed, altered, varied, modifeld or affected by any Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom or of the Parliament of Canada applicable to the territories or by any ordinance of the Northwest Territories. See Revised Statutes, 1906, chapter 62, section 12.

The law affecting marriage in the Yukon Territory is that which was in force in the Northwest Territories on June 13, 1898, in so far as applicable, and in so far as not repealed, abolished or altered by the Parliament of Canada or by any ordinance of the Governor in Council or the Commissioner in Council under the provisions of the Yukon Act. See Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906 chapter 63, section 19.

Note— It is claimed that the sections of the statutes referred to above, use the words "civil and criminal" laws and the answer adds the word "marriage" to identify it. This answer negatives completely the claim of supremacy made by any other body than parliament in these territories and therefore respecting marriage under their laws, even if made elsewhere in Canada. It is probable that if this had been found out at first, much turmoil and humiliation would have been saved. The air now clean for the future respecting marriage in Canada, if made under these laws of the parliament of Canada.

THEY ADMITTED STEALING COAL

Three Fines of $5 Imposed at Police Court

Charged with stealing coal from the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company's yards, three young men Edward Pilling, Elmer Little, and Bruce Minto were before Police Magistrate Dumble to-day. They admitted the thefts.

Ald. Wm. Buller of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, who swore out the informations against the trio, complained of having missed coal from the yards for a long tiem, but was unable to discover the guilty parties. Cheif Thompson placed an officer on the watch, who managed to catch the parties and ascertain their names.

Pilling, to whose place the coal was taken, offered as an excuse that he didn't have any coal to burn and had no money to buy until payday.

Each party was fined $5, which the Magistrate ordered to be paid forthwith.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR THE DISTRICT HEALTH OFFICERS

Are Asked to Furnish Complete Details of Health Organization in District.

The new district officers of health will not find time hanging heavily on their hands for a few months, at least. A series of instructions, giving them suggestions as to information they are expected to secure, is being prepared by the Provincial Board.

The district officers will be asked to secure complete details as to the health organization of their respective districts. They will be required to report on all public institutions, their equipment sanitation, etc., the water supply of all municipalities, the sewage and garbage removal systems must also be thoroughly investigated.

But the officers must go further. The instructions call upon them to make a study of the meat trade and the conditions governing the handling of meat, both in abattoirs and in the retail market. They will be expected to report fully on a number of things that on the surface bear little relation to health matters, but which nevertheless are important; the condition of the streets and lanes, the extent and condition of vacant lots, of ponds and streams, the character of street lighting, the schools, and their equipment.

The ice supplies will come in for inspection, as will the condition of station lavatories, cattle yards, etc. The steamboats will receive similar attention. Even apartments houses, restaurants, and hotels will be visited and reported on.

When these reports are in the hands of the department, a remarkable survey of sanitary conditions over the province will be compiled, a survey of a magnitude never attempted elsewhere. This information will act as a guide for the health legislation of the future, and if conditoins are revealed as it is expected they will be, there will be room for even more radical health reform amendments than those incorporated in the Public Health Act of last session.

BARBERS ATTENDED TO THEIR OWN FACES BY WAY OF CHANGE

Celebrated Twenty Fifth Anniversary of the Union With a Banquet.

The local Barbers' Union No. 402, royally observed the 25th anniversary of their inception, by holding a highly successful banquet, followed by a toast-list, in Hooper's Parlors last evening. In the neighborhood of thirty barbers attended, and a fair number of the bosses.

President George A. Campbell officiated as chairman most capably.

The gathering was of a purely social nature and sparkling wit and humor held undisputed away. A most appetizing bill of fare followed by choice cigars placed the entire gathering in the right frame of mind to enjoy everything going.

Brother Gainey related some interesting facts about the Barbers' Union as represented in Canada, membership of 35,000. Other speakers to give brief addresses were Bros. George Hall, Ed. Wright, Forsythe, Lewis, Brousseau, Morrow and Quinlan.

Mr. John Smith contributed a couple of vocal selections that were much enjoyed.

Chairman George Campbell in a few appropriate remarks, regretted the absence of so many of the bosses. He stated that it was the intention of all journeymen barbers to have one afternoon and evening holiday during the months of July and August each week. This decision had been reached he explained through the unsuitabiltiy of the plan adopted last summer when different journeymen failed to take their afternoons off on the days they were supposed to. This summer all journeymen in every union shop will be off on the same afternoon and evening. It will therefore be up to the bosses to either acquiesce to the journeymen's wishes in the matter, or else keep their shops open with only themselves in charge.

The banquet last night was to have furnished an opportunity for the journeymen to have the bosses affix their names to an agreement, in harmony with the journeymen's decision, hence the absence of so many of the bosses was more or less regretted.

Expressions of regret were passed at the approaching departure from the city of Mr. Brousseau and the bunch joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

A CHARGE OF ARSON

Vacant Dwelling in Dummer Township was Burned

County Constable Cochrane arrested Robert D. Hill and his young brother, Russell Hill, last night, in the township of Dummer and the two are now held on a charge of arson. The Constable brought both to Peterborough early this morning.

The charge preferred against the two before County Police Magistrate Edmison to-day was of having unlawfully and maliciously set fire to a vacant dwelling house in the township of Dummer, owned by William Davis.

The younger lad was placed in the Children's Shelter and his brother remanded for a week in the county goal.

LOOKING MORE LIKE CHRISTMAS

Merchants are Fulfilling their Part of the Program

With Christmas only 19 days in the future Peterborough merchants are beginning to feel the early rush of the Christmas shopping. Christmas goods are being prominently displayed in cases on counters, and in windows, and already there is a brisk trade. Merchants in every line of business affected by the Christmas season are busily preparing for the big rush that is only beginning. The great majority of shoppers are purchasing gifts to send away. However, the great rush of Christmas shopping will not begin for a week or so yet. Many people are just now beginning to realize how near Christmas really is, and a good fall of snow would be even more convincing.

MARK STREET MISSION BAND

The Mission Band of the Mark street Methodist church held a most successful entertainment the other evening. Mr. F. G. Hight, of Toronto, delighted the audience by an illustrated address on his trip to Europe. The program was interspersed by selections from the Mission Band.

Elmar Carr and Viola Wicker recited very nicely. The occasion was made more interesting by the awarding of the prizes in connection with the autograph quilt. Four prizes were to be given, while a special prize was offered to the member collecting $10 and over. While many did well, special mention being made of Viola Wicker, May Cook and Homer Borland. Edythe Stevens, the ten year old daughter of Mr. George Stevens, did exceptionally well. Of a total of $80 collected she collected $62. As the special prize the Band gave her a fine Bible illustrated with copies of Tissott's paintings, and a small Morocco hymn book, while the pastor brought in the quilt and presented it to her.

The total proceeds of the quilt and concert amounted to $93.

RHEUMATISM AND SPRAINS

Zam-Buk is a Cure!

When you have a sprain or feel the aching, gnawing pain of rheumatism or the acute agony of lumbago, rub Zam-Buk well in.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says: "I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable for rheumatism and stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure. It seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains, driving them completely out, and I am now cured."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for piles, ulcers, cold sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, scalds, scalp sores, babies' rashes, and all skin injuries and diseases. All drugists and stores, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes.

SILVER CUPS AND PRIZES DONATED

Prospects are Bright for Big Poultry Show

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association was held in their hall on Simcoe street last night, with President F. Holmes in the chair. There was a good attendance of members, and the reports of the several committees, appointed to work out the details in connection with the coming annual show, were received with great enthusiasm. The Special Prize Committee reported that several additional silver cups and other valuable prizes had been secured and placed on the prize list.

Several important communications were read and disposed of.

The secretary reported that the applications from outside points for prize lists were more numerous than in previous years, and stated that prospects were very bright for the largest and best show in the history of the Association being held next January.

The material excavated from the Panama Canal would build a Chinese wall from San Francisco to New York.

ARE GROWING IN INTEREST

The evangelistic meetings at Park street are beginning both in numbers and interest, and the Rev. Harry Taylor is paving the way for a great turning to God.

The two evangelists sang a duet last night that won its way into the hearts of all present, "Winning Precious Souls for Jesus." Mr. Taylor is also a good singer.

Those who are missing these meetings are robbing themselves of a blessing divine.

The narrative from which Mr. Taylor drew material for his address last night was found in Luke's Gospel, chapter 8. "The Widow's Dead Boy."

The meeting to-night is at 7.45. All men are made welcome.

The following letter from 'Peterborough Fan" appears in the Toronto News:

Sir,—I see by The News of Dec. 3rd that Hen Simpson is claimed as a native of Hamilton. This is an error, as Simpson is from Peterborough, which was also the birthplace of Ross Craig, the Alerts' great line-plunger; Fitzpatrick, the outside wing of the Senior Alerts; "Pete" Campbell, the Varsity captain; Frank Heffernan, the flying wing of the Torontos; Dick Sheehy, the Ottawa College half-back, and Harold Matthews, the R.M.C. centre scrimmager. You might publish this in justice to a city which has had its share of Rugby glory in the days gone by, and which was represented on many of the best teams this season.

The Parkdale senior O.H.A. club has been invited to play in Cleveland on December 20 and 21. The O.H.A. executive will on Monday evening pass on the desirability of allowing their teams to play exhibition games with Cleveland, Detroit, Syracuse, and other clubs. The published report that a ban has been placed on these United States teams by the O.H.A. is not correct. Nothing has been done in the matter.—Toronto Star.

The matter of O.HA. groupings will be taken up at Toronto to-night. Secretary Glover will be present.

It has been suggested that all senior O.H.A. teams be grouped in one. Of course the Toronto and western clubs would agree. Yes they would—nix.

As was stated before, there is plenty of space at the Lyceum gymnasium, and all hockey players should attend the training classes. To-night's the night.

SUICIDE AND AN EXPLOSION

Man Carried Lantern in Gas-filled Room

Hamilton, Dec. 6.—One man's suicide and the serious injury of his brother by a terrific gas explosion, when the latter, with a lighted lantern, went looking for the former in a dark and gas-filled room, was yesterday's tragedy in Hamilton.

The man who ended his own life was Robert Pottage, a tailor, 21 years of age, who, with his brother, Christopher, two years younger, kept a small tailor's workshop over the store at 273 James street north. Pottage committed suicide some time in the afternoon.

Writer's Cramp.

Those who have to do a great deal of writing are liable to get an attack of writer's cramp. The first indication of writer's cramp is a feeling of tiredness in the hand and arm. Then words are formed very slowly, and suddenly the pen will fly upward or outward. This is due to a sudden spasm of the muscles affected. Anybody who is attacked with writer's cramp should give writing up for a time, since paralysis of the muscles may follow. He should treat the limb with an electrical battery and generally lie up and keep quiet.—Pearson's Weekly.

Curious English Well.

In the grounds of Livesey Hall, near Blackburn, there is a spring called "Mother Livesey's well." The curious thing about this well is that the water only flows during nine months of the year and is quite dry during the other three months—June, July and August—however wet the weather may be. The water always commences to flow on the same date each year and never freezes even during the hardest frost.—Leeds (England) News.

His Preference.

"It is a positive delight to meet a man you feel you can trust," remarked the individual with the high forehead.

"Oh, I don't know. I prefer a man who pays cash," replied the man who kept the grocery store.

Cause For Worry.

"You must take exercise," said the physician, "and by all means worry less. Play golf."

"Doctor," replied the patient, "you mean well, but a man who plays my kind of golf game can't help worrying."—Washington Star.

THROUGH BOTH THICK AND THIN

If monarchs have often permitted themselves the indulgence of making puns the fact has not been recorded in the pages of history. One pun, however, is assigned to King Frederick William IV. of Prussia. It is said that on the occasion of a court ball he was standing near the middle of the dance hall in conversation with an exceedingly thin ambassador. In the haste and excitement of a fiery galop a lieutenant of the hussars danced with his partner between the monarch and the person whom he was addressing, and then, seeing what he had done, he began to stammer abject apologies and explanations.

"Oh, that was nothing," replied the king, with a hearty laugh. "A hussar must go without fear through thick and thin."

A whimsical glance from his own portly figure to that of the slender ambassador accompanied this answer, and the hussar felt himself not only pardoned, but invited to share in the king's laugh.

Hired Relatives.

In Bukharest, the capital of Roumania, flourishes the noble profession of "hired relatives," which undertakes to furnish to everybody in want of parents, brothers, sisters, aunts, etc., the necessary persons to represent them. Persons who desire to get married, for instance, and have no parents to figure at their respective weddings or who are in possession of such who decline to give their consent to the marriage of their sons and daughters need do nothing more than station themselves near the entrance to the marriage license bureau. There they will soon find themselves accosted by some "gentleman" or "lady," who for a moderate sum of money is willing to take the place of the absent parent. For 20 lei ($4) quite a respectable looking father can be hired. Fifteen lei is paid for a brother, and a fashionably dressed mother costs the same amount. Investigation has disclosed the fact that some of these professional mothers have figured at weddings fifty times a year.

The Drum of the Ear.

The reason deaf people cannot hear is that the drum of the ear is imperfect or has been destroyed. Sound is nothing but the vibrations of the air acting on the drum of the ear. When people are quite deaf it is because the eardrum will not respond to these vibrations, but they can still feel these vibrations even if they cannot hear them. When a number of deaf mutes are sitting in a room together and one wishes to attract the attention of another he strikes his heel on the floor, and every one in the room feels the vibration and looks around to see who called. In the large asylums for the deaf and dumb the doors are hung very loosely, so that if you shake them it sets up a vibration like stamping on the floor, and that is the way they wake up deaf people that sleep too late in the morning.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION

of stimulating so important and necessary an industry, we have expressed our willingness to bear a portion of the increased cost, for a time at least. I see no reason why all vessels required in the future for our Government service should not be built in Canada, even at some additional cost."

To Bear Historic Names.

The new vessels, said Mr. Borden, will be the three most powerful battleships in the world, and they will bear historic names associated with this country.

"No modern nation possessing a great seaborne commerce can afford to neglect its interests upon the high seas. Heaven forbid that in this country we should aid or abet any warlike or aggressive tendencies. This Empire will never undertake any war of aggression and all the influences of Canada will assuredly be arrayed against any such course; but we know that war has come many times within the past fifty years without warning, like a thunder-bolt from a clear sky and the destiny of more than one nation has been profoundly affected."

The Premier then discussed the comparative expense of the scheme. It was a modest outlay, he declared, alongside of what most countries were paying.

Argentine in the past four years had spent $65,000,000 to $75,000,000 for naval defence. The United States spends $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 per year or $2.75 per head, at which rate Canada would spend $20,000,000 a year.

"It is apparent therefore," he declared, "that the aid which we propose to bring at this juncture is of a moderate and reasonable character. For forty-five years as a confederation we have enjoyed the protection of the British navy without the cost of a dollar, and I venture to submit my firm conviction that this assistance freely tendered by the people of Canada through their Parliament, is due to their own self-respect.

"So far as official estimates are available the expenditure of Great Britain in naval and military defence for the provinces which now constitute Canada during the nineteenth century was not less than four hundred million dollars."

Mr. Borden then discussed the detail by which the British Government handled the problems of defence. The committee consists of the Prime Minister and such persons as he summons, and is not technically responsible to the Commons, although it commands the support of that body.

Would Welcome Minister.

"I am assured by His Majesty's Government," said the Premier, "that pending a final solution of the question of voice and influence they would welcome the presence in London of a Canadian Minister during the whole or a portion of each year. Such Minister would be regularly summoned to all meetings of the committee of Imperial defence, and would be regarded as one of its permanent members. No important step in foreign policy would be undertaken without consultation with such a representative of Canada. This seems a very marked advance, both from our standpoint, and from that of the United Kingdom. It would give to us an opportunity of consultation, and therefore an influence which hitherto we have not possessed. The conclusions and declarations of Great Britain in respect to foreign relations, could not fail to be strengthened by the knowledge that such consultation and co-operation with the overseas dominions had become an accomplished fact."

Henry Pitts says that one reason why it pays to be polite is that you never can tell how hard the other fellow can hit.

WHAT IS DIRT?

How the Question Was Answered by a Professor of Chemistry.

An old college professor used to say to his students: "What is dirt? Don't be afraid of a little dirt, young gentlemen. What is dirt? Why, nothing at all offensive when chemically viewed. Rub a little alkali upon that dirty grease spot on your coat, and it undergoes a chemical change and becomes soap. Now rub it with a little water, and it disappears. It is neither grease, soap, water nor dirt.

"That is not a very odorous pile of dirt you observe there. Well, scatter a little gypsum over it, and it is no longer dirty. Everything you call dirt is worthy of your notice as students of chemistry. Analyze it, analyze it! It will all separate into very clear elements.

"Dirt makes corn, corn makes bread and meat, and that makes a very sweet young lady that I saw one of you kissing last night. So, after all, you were kissing dirt, particularly if she whitened her skin with chalk or fuller's earth.

"There is no telling, young gentlemen what is dirt, though I may say that rubbing such stuff upon the beautiful skin of a young lady is a dirty practice. Nice, pearly face powder is made of bismuth—nothing but dirt." —Exchange.

Staking a Play.

"We'll have to give her a prominent part in the new play."

"But she can't act."

"That's all right. We'll fix her up with seven gowns. That will keep her busy in the dressing room most of the time."—St. Louis Times.

Automatic Cooking Boxes.

Automatic cooking boxes were in general use among the Hebrews nearly 2,000 years ago. The Greek and Roman writers frequently refer to them. In his edition of "Juvenile," for example, Friedlander cites a commentator who refers to "the Jews who a day before the Sabbath put their viands hot into the cooking boxes, the pots being covered with napkins and wrapped about with hay, so that they may have warm food on the Sabbath."

Pernicious Literature.

"Did you see that stout woman push that little man off the sidewalk?"

"Yes."

"What did she do it for?"

"Why, she's been reading somewhere that women are displacing men in all the walks of life."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REPORT THAT N. DOUROS WAS KILLED NOT TRUE

The staff at the Boston Cafe and other Greeks of the city were made happy last night by the receipt of a telegram stating that Nicholas Douros was safe and well.

Following a report that Mr. Douros had been killed, his cousin in Athens was asked to secure news. This he did by communicating with Salonica from which place word was sent to an officer of the regiment in which Mr. Douros is serving. The reply is a personal one from him. His regiment is under the command of the Crown Prince, the force now being in the vicinity of Janina. As the Crown Prince entered both Monastir and Salonica, it is believed that Mr. Douros also shared in the honors.

Louis Yeotes is with another regiment and on another battle ground

HE WASN'T ONE OF THE REGULARS; HE WAS JUST A VOLUNTEER

That was forty-six years ago, the Fenian Raid was on and the young volunteer is now Mr. Benjamin Shortly, Peterborough's well known harness manufacturer. In recognition of his services, Mr. Shortly today received a cheque for $100, the Government grant to veterans of the Fenian Raid.

The grant was delayed, pending an investigation. It was held that Mr. Shortly was a member of the Regulars and therefore not qualified to receive the grant. It was proved however, that he was only a volunteer. At the time he was twenty years of age, and living in Montreal, he was attached to the Montreal Garrison Artillery. The call came for six men to join a British Battery and he was one of those who responded. Mr. Shortly held a commission and was thirty one days at the front.

In his efforts to prove his claim Mr. Shortly had the assistance of Mr. Burnham, M.P.

PRESS AND INDIVIDUALS DISCUSS THE NAVAL GIFT

Premier Borden is Flooded With Telegrams Congratulating Him on the Step He Has Taken—Glasgow Herald Says Britain is Not Exhausted Yet

London, Dec. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Glasgow Herald says: "The dominions are not speaking correctly when they say they are coming to the assistance of a tired, exhausted Motherland. The Motherland is not tired and is very far from being exhausted. Great Britain, as every statesman from the overseas dominions admits, is more full of energy, enthusiasm, industrial life and ability to maintain her place in the world than she has ever been. Her people are as willing and able as ever to bear the burdens necessary to keep her supreme at sea. There should be no mistake about the meaning of a contribution from any dominions. No contribution from any dominion whether in the form originated by New Zealand and now adopted by the Malay States, can relieve the Mother Country from the responsibility of maintaining an all-powerful navy. Far from relieving the burdens of the British taxpayer, the paper declares that in one sense a contribution by the Dominion will impose on Great Britain fresh burdens. It is one thing to build ships and quite another thing to man them. Dreadnoughts can be constructed in less than two years, but British bluejackets' training extends over seven years, during which period the whole expense will have to be borne by British taxpayers.

The Scotsman commenting on the naval contribution, says: The Mother Country may well feel proud beyond measure. This free-will offering is the most magnificent in the history of our own or any other nation. The magnitude and value of the gift, great as these are, form but a secondary source of pride and gratitude. With the proof that has been rendered that we have behind us in all dangers and difficulties the hearts and hands of the people of Canada and other self-governing dominions overseas, the dangers and difficulties themselves begin to melt away.

"The epoch-making character of Canada's last general election, by which she repudiated reciprocity with the States and chose to cast in her destinies permanently with the British Empire has had no more significant proof than the prompt conversion of Premier Asquith to the view that the appeal of the Dominion to be heard in the determination of policy and direction of affairs of the Empire was an obviously reasonable one."

Premier Asquith will probably make himself responsible for a resolution in the Commons, the coming week, expressing the gratitude of the British people for the magnificent contribution to the naval needs of the Empire.

Lord Strathcona expresses gratification at the cordial reception of the naval scheme in this country. Canada, out of her loyalty and devotion to the Empire, had made that great offer voluntarily.

As to the residence in London of a Canadian Minister to represent the Dominion on the committee on Imperial defence he thought his presence here, together with other representatives of the overseas dominions in close consultation with the executive of the Home Government could not fail to promote Imperial unity.

Rt. Hon. Walter Long describes Canada's gift as a stirring incident in the history of the Empire, and a splendid tribute to the spirit of Imperialism which they were proud to know permeated the whole British Empire to-day.

Lord Charles Beresford apparently foresees grave danger in the Canadian naval idea, and says in The Daily Express:

"What I recommended that the Dominions do was to defend their end of the trade routes, torpedo boat destroyers and light cruisers. The trade routes are unprotected, and now our danger is starvation, not invasion.

"The country was deceived and fooled by statements regarding the Dreadnoughts of other nations. We were insulted by being told a dreadnought could sink their whole fleet. The people speak of nothing but dreadnoughts, quite forgetting that fleet is composed of a variety of units, any one of which being defective or short jeopardizes the whole.

Empire Thrilled, Says McNamara.

London, Dec. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Mr. McNamara, a Canadian-born, Minisiter of the Admiralty, giving an opinion on Canada's gift, said: "We all must feel a thrill at reading of the splendid recognition by the eldest of the dominions of her vital stake in the integrity of the British Empire. The spirit of yesterday's proceedings at Ottawa was the finest tribute possible to statesmen who, in times past, laid the foundation of our Empire. I've been five years at the Admiralty and have witnessed untold evidences of the determination of our brothers across the sea to maintain the Empire intact, but I take great joy in the fact as a Canadian-born Minister of the crown to pay tribute to the spirit which inspires the fellow-countrymen of the land of my birth."

Every Briton Must Rejoice.

London, Dec. 7.—Sir Conan Doyle, the celebrated writer of patriotic verse and author of "The Great Boer War," who is politically a Unionist, but believes in Home Rule for Ireland, says of Canada's naval proposal: "Magnificent. Every Briton must rejoice."

Hon. A. L. Sifton, Premier of Alberta, and Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, decline to express a public opinion.

New Zealand Comments.

Wellington, N.Z., Dec. 7.—Speaking last night at Lawrence, the Premier, Thomas McKenzie, declared that Canada's proposal to add three powerful battleships to the naval defence of Great Britain was a splendid one—that Canada had risen to the occasion in a magnificent manner. He said New Zealands contribution to the Imperial navy was ensured, that several warships would be given, but they would not be fighting ships as compared to battleships. He said that a representative of the Government (Allen) would visit England shortly and confer with the naval authorities there, and when he returned to New Zealand the local government would declare its naval policy. If more money for naval defence was necessary, the Premier added, certain New Zealanders would respond readily.

German Press Silent.

London, Dec. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Mails Berlin correspondent says so far no German comment on the Canadian gift has appeared.

Gen. Van Liebert, president of the Pangerman Naval League, who holds a Conservative seat in the Reichstag, said to him: "We think we can hold our own in the North Sea, where our strength is concentrated, particularly as Great Britain requires to distribute her strength in many seas."

Premier Gets Messages.

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—That Premier Borden's naval proposal has created a profound impression upon the Imperialists of the Dominion, and, in fact, the whole Empire, is strikingly evidenced by the scores of congratulatory messages with which he was bombarded yesterday.

Among others, the veteran Lord Robert sent the following cable: "You have earned the gratitude of England and the Empire for Canada's wonderful offer of contribution to our defence. Personally, I send my warmest thanks."

ALLIES ARE GETTING READY FOR THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Greece Still Refuses to Sign the Armistice and is Carrying on Her Campaign at Chios and at Janina—Servia is Reported to Have Set up Several Batteries

London, Dec. 7.—Pending the assembling of the peace delegates in London, the Balkan allies are occupied in preparing a joint draft of the demands which are to be made upon Turkey and it is understood exchanging communications with a view to arriving at an agreement defining their own mutual obligations.

The formal acceptance of all the powers to send delegates to the ambassadorial conference to be held in London have not yet been received, but there is no reason to suppose there will be any delay in the assembling of the conference.

The position of Greece in refusing to sign the armistice remains unchanged. The Greeks are said to be continuing their campaign on the Island of Chios and at Janina and their ships are closely searching foreign steamers found between the Dardanelles and Smyrna.

It is reported from Vienna that Servia has set up several batteries on the right bank of the Danube opposite the Hungarian town of Orsova.

Negotiate at Vienna.

London, Dec. 8.—Telegraphing from Constantinople, the correspondent of The Daily Express asserts that Vienna has been chosen as the scene for peace negotiations between Turkey and Greece. He says the Turkish Ambassador at Vienna has received full powers to negotiate with the Greeks and that he will be assisted by Osman Nizami Pasha, the Turkish ambassador to Germany.

VERDICT ON THE WRECK

Jury Blames Construction of Cars for Disaster.

Toronto, Dec. 7.—"That John Bannatyne came to his death at Streetsville Junction on the C.P.R., on Oct. [illegible], from injuries received in a collision that occurred between two C.P.R. trains, and so the jurors do say that the said John Bannatyne in the manner and means aforesaid, accidentally, casually and by misfortune came to his death and not otherwise; and we further find that this wreck occurred by reason of the construction of the cars of the passenger extra train, and in particular of the baggage car of that train being unsuitable for passenger service.

We further say that Engineer Wes[illegible] did all in his power to stop the train, but that he overran the switch, owing to some defect in the [illegible] on his train.

We further state that in our opinion where trains have orders to meet at switching points, the out-going [illegible] should be held at the order [illegible] until the incoming train has [illegible] the siding or switch."

[illegible] was the verdict with which, after more than an hour's deliberation on the mass of evidence taken in [illegible] sittings held since Oct. 28, Coroner Arthur Jukes Johnson's [illegible] the Streetsville wreck inquest. The verdict came as a surprise [illegible] of those who had sat through the hearings.

CHILDREN WALK OUT OF SCHOOL

Acted on Instruction of Their Parents

Windsor, Dec. 7.—Inspector Ingall of Ottawa paid his first visit to the separate school in Tecumseh Thursday afternoon, and as he entered the school practically all the children walked out. In an investigation held yesterday morning it developed that the children walked out on instructions from their parents, and their action was approved by the trustees, "not as trustees, but as Frenchmen." The action is a protest against the bilingual regulations of the Whitney Government.

The inspector was not recognized in his official capacity.

LIBERALS TO RESIST BILL ON ITS SECOND READING

During Christmas Recess the Opposition Will Feel the Public Pulse Before Going on to Argue That There is no Emergency.

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—The Liberal caucus on the naval question, it is understood, resulted in a general understanding that for the present at least the Opposition should fight. The present line of attack will be left to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to decide. The second reading of the bill will undoubtedly be resisted, at least until after the members have an opportunity to feel the public pulse during the Christmas recess.

The Opposition is prepared to vote at once the full extent of the figures suggested for the emergency contribution, namely $35,000,000, and more if necessary, for the construction and maintenance of Canadian warships along the lines of the resolution adopted by Parliament in March, 1909. This the caucus considered to be the only true and sane Imperial policy consonant with Canadian pride, Canadian national autonomy, and permanent Imperial unity.

When the Government's naval bill comes up for debate on second reading in the Commons next week, the Liberals, led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, will be prepared to put up a vigorous fight. Sir Wilfrid at the close of the caucus gave to the press the following statement:

"The caucus was most enthusiastic and absolutely unanimous and proud that the memorandum of the Admiralty clearly establishes what they always contended, that there is no emergency. In this they find a full justification of the principle of a Canadian naval policy, which can be expanded to the full extent of the figures suggested in the memorandum and this they considered the true Imperial policy."

Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has given notice of a resolution which he will present to the House next week, authorising the Governor-in-council to purchase at par from the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. the three per cent. bonds of that company yet unsold whose payment is guaranteed by the Dominion Government.

Hon. J. B. Hazen introduced a resolution to provide for the installation and inspection of radio telegraphy apparatus on certain ships and for the general regulation of radio telegraphy.

The Minister explained that it was proposed to compel all vessels carrying fifty passengers or more and travelling between ports two hundred miles apart and more to have on board wireless equipment.

A penalty of $5,000 would be imposed on the owners of a ship neglecting to comply with the law and the sailing master would also be liable to a fine of $1,000.

Mr. Pardee asked if the bill would apply to the Great Lakes, and was informed that it would.

Mr. Pardee then suggested that a ship might get into serious trouble when plying between ports less than two hundred miles apart.

Mr. Hazen said that was a detail of the bill which might be discussed with advantage by the House. He would ascertain from the officials their reasons for fixing the distance at two hundred miles.

Mr. Pardee then asked if the bill would apply to all ships registered outside the Dominion. Mr. Hazen said he had not thought of that. He agreed that the bill should apply to all vessels which sail from Canadian ports.

Mr. Pardee then suggested that the proposed legislation should apply to all vessels carrying passengers. He failed to see why passenger vessels carrying less than fifty passengers should be exempt from its provisions.

Mr. Hazen was inclined to agree with this suggestion also. The resolution was then passed, and the bill introduced and given a first reading.

BLEASE DEFIES CONSTITUTION

Again Defends Doctrine of Lynching Without Trial.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7.—Many women in attendance on the Governors' conference hurriedly left the hall when Governor Cole L. Blease, of South Carolina, for the second time defending his doctrine of lynching, without a trial, negroes guilty of criminal assault, shouted the words, "To hell with the constitution."

This sentiment was in response to a question by Governor S. Carey, of Wyoming, who desired to know if Blease had not taken an oath to uphold the constitution and laws of his state, and if these laws did not protect colored men as well as white men.

A sweeping resolution, repudiating the remarks of Governor Blease, of South Carolina, in support of lynch law, was adopted by the governors' conference yesterday by a vote of 14 to 4.

Governor Blease, defending himself, snapped his fingers in the faces of the other governors and declared that he cared not one white what the conference did or left undone.

At the meeting of the police commissioners yesterday the statements regarding the police department made by Sam Carter at the public meeting was briefly referred to, and it was decided that another meeting of the commission be held to-day, to discuss the matter, and decide whether an investigation will be held or not.

Chief Randall when asked yesterday if he had anything to say replied that he had nothing whatever to say, at present. He expressed confidence that everything will come out all right in the end, but preferred to wait till the proper time.

Thresher Killed.

Orangeville, Dec. 7.—A shocking fatality occurred Thursday evening on lot 29, first line east, Township of Mono, about [illegible] miles from here, whereby Edward Halbert was almost instantly killed. Halbert had a steam threshing outfit on his farm and was adjusting the belt on the fly wheel of the engine, when his left arm caught in the belting and was torn off near the shoulder.

HE URGES MAINTENANCE

Rowell Wants Canada to Man and Support Ships.

Galt, Dec. 8.—N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Ontario Liberals, delivered an address to the Canadian Autonomy and Imperial Unity," in which he congratulated Premier Borden on his naval announcement, but also urged the Government to undertake the manning and maintaining of the ships which it is proposed to build. Canada, he said, should lift the burden from the shoulders of the British taxpayers. He believed that the naval bases in the North Atlantic and North Pacific should be protected by Canada.

Mr. Rowell reviewed the history of the question of naval defence from the year 1887, when the Government of Great Britain first requested Canada to share the burden of naval defence, which Canada then refused to do, down to the naval agreement bill of 1911, between Great Britain, Canada and Australia, and concluded as follows:

"If I understand the address of the Prime Minister aright, the ships to be built are to be and to remain the property of Canada, but to be manned and maintained by Great Britain. In view of the great burden Great Britain is now carrying in naval defence, a burden involving the gift of her sons to man her ships, as well as of her money to maintain them, in view of the great demands upon the British Exchequer for moneys to carry out important schemes of social reform, I cannot but confess my own great personal regret that Canada is not manning and maintaining, as well as giving, these dreadnoughts.

"Why should we impose upon the British people and the British exchequer the obligation of manning and maintaining ships, when Canada is well able to do so herself? In view of the statement that Great Britain has been compelled to withdraw her naval forces from the outposts of Empire, in order to strengthen the forces at the centre, and that she is not able to maintain naval forces either in the North Atlantic or in the North Pacific, where admittedly such forces are needed, I cannot but express my personal regret that Canada is not undertaking to carry out the naval agreement of 1911 between Great Britain, Canada and Australia, whereby Canada assumes the responsibility for providing the forces necessary, both in ships and in men, to protect these naval bases; to fly the white ensign on these seas; to protect the trade routes as well as the honor and integrity of the Empire, just as Australia is now doing in Australian waters.

For over twenty-five years Great Britain has been asking us to take part in the naval defence of the Empire. Surely the people of Canada have had time enough to make up their minds as to what our naval policy should be. As a Canadian citizen may I express the earnest hope that the Government will see its way clear before the present bill goes through the House, to undertake the manning and maintaining of the ships which it is proposed to build, and definitely to assuming the responsibility on behalf of Canada of protecting the naval base of the North Atlantic and North Pacific as provided in the terms of the naval agreement of 1911."

EXCUSE ME!

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED BY HENRY W. SAVAGE.

COPYRIGHT, BY A. KIRBY CO.

And his wife choked on her tea at the wonderful train-change that had come over the best man in Ypsilanti.

By this time Fosdick had reached the stateroom from which he had been banished again at the Nevada state-line. He knocked cautiously. From within came an anxious voice: "Who's there?"

"Whom did you expect?"

Mrs. Fosdick popped her head out like a Jill in the box. "Oh, it's you, Arthur. Kiss me good morning."

He glanced round stealthily and obeyed instructions: "I guess it's safe—my darling."

"Did you sleep, dovie?" she yawned.

"Not a wink. They took off the Portland car at Granger and I had to sleep in one of the chairs in the observation room."

Mrs. Fosdick shook her head at him in mournful sympathy, and asked: "What state are we in now?"

"A dreadful state—Nevada."

"Just what are we in Nevada?"

"I'm a bigamist, and you've never been married at all."

"Oh, these awful divorce laws!" she moaned, then left the general for the particular: "Won't you come in an hook me up?"

Fosdick looked shocked: "I don' dare compromise you."

"Will you take breakfast with me in the dining-car?" she pleaded.

"Do we dare?"

"We might call it luncheon," she suggested.

He seized the chance: "All right, I'll go ahead and order, and you stroll in and I'll offer you the seat opposite me."

"But can't you hook me up?"

He was adamant: "Not till we get to California. Do you think I want to compromise my own wife? Sh! Somebody's coming!" And he darted off to the vestibule just as Mrs. Jimmie Wellington issued from number ten with hair askew, eyes only half open, and waist only half shut at the back. She made a quick spurt to the women's room, found it locked, stamped her foot, swore under her breath, and leaned against the wall of the car to wait.

About the same time, the man who was still her husband according to the law, rolled out of berth number two. There was an amazing clarity to his vision. He lurched as he made his way to the men's room, but it was plainly the train's swerve and not an inner lurch that twisted the forthright of his progress.

He squeezed into the men's room like a whole crowd at once, and sang out, "Good morning, all!" with a wonderful heartiness. Then he paused over a wash basin, rubbed his hands gleefully and proclaimed, like another Chantecler advertising a new day:

"Well—I'm sober again!"

"Three cheers for you," said his rival in radiance, bridegroom Lathrop.

"How does it feel?" demanded Ashton, smiling so broadly that he encountered the lather on his brush.

While he sputtered Wellington was flipping water over his hot head and incidentally over Ashton.

"I feel," he chortled, "I feel like the first little robin redbreast of the merry springtime. Tweet! Tweet!"

When the excitement over his redemption had somewhat calmed, Ashton reopened the old topic of conversation:

"Well, I see they had another scrap last night."

"They—who?" said Ira, through his flying toothbrush.

"The Mallorys. Once more he occupied number three and she number seven."

"Well, well, I can't understand these modern marriages," said Little Jimmie, with a side glance at Ira. Ira suddenly remembered the plight of the Mallorys and was tempted to defend them, but he saw the young lieutenant himself just entering the washroom. This was more than Wellington saw, for he went on talking from behind a towel:

"Well, if I were a bridegroom and had a bride like that, it would take more than a quarrel to send me to another berth."

The others made gestures which he could not see. His enlightenment came when Mallory snapped the towel from his hands and glared into his face with all the righteous wrath of a man hearing his domestic affairs publicly discussed.

"Were you alluding to me, Mr. Wellington?" he demanded, hotly.

Little Jimmie almost perished with apoplexy: "You, you?" he mumbled. "Why, of course not. You're not the only bridegroom on the train."

Mallory tossed him the towel again: "You meant Mr. Lathrop then?"

"Me! Not much!" roared the indignant Lathrop.

Mallory returned to Wellington with a fiercer: "Whom, then?"

He was in a dangerous mood, and Ashton came to the recue: "Oh, don't mind Wellington. He's not sober yet."

This inspired suggestion came like a life-buoy to the hard-pressed Wellington. He seized it and spoke thickly: "Don't mind me—I'm not shober yet."

"Well, it's a good thing you're not," was Mallory's final growl as he began his own toilet.

The porter's bell began to ring furiously, with a touch they had already come to recognize as the Englishman's. The porter had learned to recognize it, too, and he always took double the necessary time to answer it. He was sauntering down the aisle at his most leisurely gait when Wedgewood's rumpled mane shot out from the curtains like a lion's from a jungle, and he bellowed: "Pawtah! Pawtah!"

"Still on the train," said the porter.

"You may give me my portmanteau."

"Yassah." He dragged it from the upper berth, and set it inside Wedgewood's berth without special care as to its destination. "Does you desire anything else, sir?"

"Yes, your absence," said Wedgewood.

"The same to you and many of them," the porter muttered to himself, and added to Marjorie, who was just starting down the aisle: "I'll auttainly be interested in that man gittin' where he's goin' to git to." Noting that she carried Snoozleums, he said: "We're comin' into a station right soon." Without further discussion he handed him the dog, and he hobbled away.

When she reached the women's door, she found Mrs. Wellington waiting with increasing exasperation: "Come, join the line at the box office," she said.

"Good morning. Who's in there?" said Marjorie, and Mrs. Wellington, not noting that Mrs. Whitcomb had come out of her berth and fallen into line, answered sharply:

"I don't know. She's been there forever. I'm sure it's that cat of a Mrs. Whitcomb."

"Good morning, Mrs. Mallory," snapped Mrs. Whitcomb.

Mrs. Wellington was rather proud that the random shot landed, but Marjorie felt most uneasy between the two tigresses: "Good morning, Mrs. Whitcomb," she said. There was a disagreeable silence, broken finally by Mrs. Wellington's: "Oh, Mrs. Mallory, would you be angelic enough to hook my gown?"

"Of course I will," said Marjorie.

"May I hook you?" said Mrs. Whitcomb.

"You're awfully kind," said Marjorie, presenting her shoulders to Mrs. Whitcomb, who asked with malicious sweetness: "Why didn't your husband do this for you this morning?"

"I—I don't remember," Marjorie stammered, and Mrs. Wellington tossed over-shoulder an apothegm: "He's no husband till he's hook-broken."

Just then Mrs. Fosdick came out of her stateroom. Seeing Mrs. Whitcomb's waist agape, she went at it with a brief, "Good morning, everybody. Permit me."

Mrs. Wellington twisted her head to say "Good morning" and to ask, "Are you hooked, Mrs. Fosdick?"

"Not yet," pouted Mrs. Fosdick.

"Turn round and back up," said Mrs. Wellington. After some maneuvering, the women formed a complete circle, and fingers plied hooks and eyes in a veritable Ladies' Mutual Aid Society.

By now, Wedgewood was ready to appear in a bathrobe about as gaudy as the royal standard of Great Britain. He stalked down the aisle, and answered the male chorus's cheery "Good morning" with a ramlike "Baw."

Gas Distended His Stomach

Caused Palpitation, and Prevented Sleep—When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of "Nerviline."

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveler of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the traveling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDIES

GREATEST IN THE KINGDOM.

—Dec. 8.—Matt. 18:1-14.—

"In Heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father."—Verse 10.

PERHAPS it was the fact that Peter, James and John had been favored more than the others on several occasions that led to the query which opens to-day's study: "Who, then, is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven?"

Jesus, calling to Him a little child, set him in the midst of them and said, "Verily I say unto you, except ye turn (from this spirit of self-seeking) and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." Whoever would be greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven should therefore become as humble as this little child. A little child asks questions; it seeks instruction; it does not profess and boast wisdom or knowledge—it is candid, it is truthful. It is in later years that it learns from its parents and others, untruthfulness, pride, bombast and various qualities which it did not possess at first. It may have possessed these dispositions by heredity, but at first it was guileless.

The Master's lesson is that whoever would become a child of God and be taught of God, and developed for the glorious position in the Kingdom to which we were called, must become childlike—must turn away from all pride, from selfish ambitions and hypocrisies and pretentions. They must confess their littleness and ignorance and go humbly to the Lord for the necessary instruction. Any who refuse to adopt this proper, childlike spirit will be refused the opportunities of the Kingdom, for God will have none others—none others can be taught of God, they will not learn the lessons necessary, under the arrangements of the present time.

"Except ye become as little children."

"One Such Little Child."

We are not to understand that little children are members of Christ's Kingdom class. The Lord is seeking for mature men and women, who have a childlikeness of mind, and who in gladness and simplicity of heart accept His Message. "Whoso shall receive one such little child in My name, receiveth Me." "Whosoever shall offend," or injure, "one of these little ones that believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were sunk in the depths of the sea."

If some one were thus drowned in the sea, it would terminate his present life, but it would not at all endanger or influence his future life. A future life by a Restitution awakening is assured to Adam and every member of his race. But he who would injure one of the Lord's little ones would thereby come under such a measure of Divine displeasure that it would affect his interests beyond the grave. He would be held responsible for his deeds, in proportion as he realized what he was doing when he injured the Lord's saints. The Lord declares that His faithful ones are as precious to Him as the apple of His eye, and that all their interests are subject to Divine supervision.

Doubtless many saints from Jesus' day down have been persecuted ignorantly, and the Lord will have mercy upon those persecuters; but some of the persecuters have had such light, such knowledge, as to make them responsible, and it is of this class that our lesson speaks.

Cut Off Hand or Foot.

Here the Master brought in a saying which has perplexed many: "If thy foot cause thee to stumble, cut it off, and cast it from thee; it is better to enter life maimed, or halt, than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; it is better to enter into life with one eye, than that having two eyes thou be cast into Gehenna fire."

"Go after the straying sheep."

Those who fail to remember that Jesus spake to the people in parables, and never without a parable, will be liable to stumble over these words. His teaching is this: If you have anything in your make-up dear to you as a right hand or a foot or an eye, that is likely to cause you to stumble and fail to enter the Kingdom, you would better cut off that tendency, no matter what it costs. Would it not be better to enter into life than to go into Gehenna fire, destruction, the Second Death? Surely! Having put our hands to the plow, having even become followers of Jesus, we must either go on and be accepted as conquerors or must perish.

How careful the Lord's people should be not to stumble one another, even one of the least of the little ones who has accepted of Jesus and become His follower! Jesus suggested that any shepherd losing one of his sheep would leave all the others to go and seek that one; and he rejoices specially at its recovery. So we, the followers of Jesus, should remember that we are all sheep under the great Shepherd, and that He has the spirit of loving interest and care which would go after the straying sheep; and that we should have this same spirit.

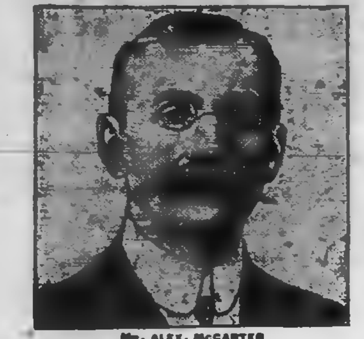
AWFUL NERVOUSNESS AND PARALYSIS CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

The Miracle Worker, That Cures When Doctors Fail — Now Used In Thousands Of Homes In Every Section Of Our Great Country.

Two Men, From Widely Different Parts Of Canada, Tell How They Found Health And Happiness By Taking These Wonderful Fruit Juice Tablets.

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9th. 1911

"I have been in Walkerton in business for a good many years and many of my townsmen know that my health, for long periods, was precarious. My trouble was extreme nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its most severe form. It was so bad that I could not sleep before about four in the morning. I noticed in the Toronto "World" one of your published testimonials of how someone had used "Fruit-a-tives" for similiar trouble, and asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, his opinion on the matter and he advised their use. I immediately procured several boxes and I am pleased to say that I now enjoy splendid health and could not possibly feel better. I can eat with every degree of satisfaction, and sleep without an effort, which pleasure I was denied before I was fortunate enough to use "Fruit-a-tives". I strongly advise anyone suffering from like complaints to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" immediately. Don't stop at a few doses—but continue using "Fruit-a-tives" until a cure is accomplished."



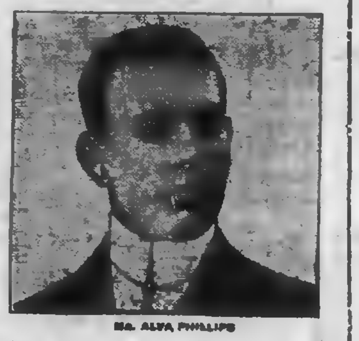
MR. ALEX. McCARTER

ALEX. McCARTER.

BRISTOL, N.B., JULY 25th. 1911.

"I am unable to say enough in favor of "Fruit-a-tives", as it saved my life and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything more for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally, I took "Fruit-a-tives" for the constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of "Fruit-a-tives", I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me.

I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day. I reverently say "Thank God! for Fruit-a-tives".



MR. ALVA PHILLIPS

ALVA PHILLIPS.

These two cases show the wonderful powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in restoring a shattered nervous system to health and vigor—in entirely curing obstinate Constipation—and in completely relieving Indigestion and Dyspepsia. What other one medicine in the whole world has ever done so much? "Fruit-a-tives" cures.

It is the only medicine in the world actually made from fruit with the addition of valuable tonics. It is pleasant to take and will always give the most gratifying results when taken regularly.

THE MARRIAGE LAW.

To the Editor,—It is considered here by many competent authorities that the answers to Mr. Burnham's marriage questions establish that the power of Parliament to make laws respecting marriage is merely limited by the usual provincial provisions set out in the B.N.A. Act, and that marriage law is on a par with the powers appertaining to the federal parliament. This upsets the contention that the federal parliament has no power to pass a marriage law. The net result of the late agitation is therefore that the reference to the courts defined the jurisdiction of the Dominion, as well as that of the provinces, and enabled the Dominion to say that it has the right through its parliament to pass a federal marriage law to be respected as all legal acts are in all parts of the Dominion of of Canada. The supremacy of the civil or state law is established within the usual provincial limitations.

THE POOR DOG

Poison Not the Only Means of Extermination

There must be a plot to exterminate Man's Best Friend. Dogs are being sent to the happy hunting grounds by the use of poison and yesterday afternoon a street car acted with deadly intent when a small spaniel met death near the corner of Smith and George streets.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently

BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs. Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air.

"PILLS LIKE A FY

So Harsh and Drastic Many Pills as to Ser. Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many others, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be ill with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the sick."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's. Refuse a substitute. Sold in boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,716, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.90 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

A CANDID LETTER

The letter from the Electric Power Company stating that the company would in no way oppose the passage of the Hydro-Electric by-law, that, in fact, the company would advise voters to support it, is a candid one. If there is any particular construction to be placed upon it, it is that the company recognizes, as well as do most others in Peterborough acquainted with public sentiment, that the support to be given the by-law will be so overwhelming as to be proof against opposition. But the Electric Power Company does not injure itself in accepting the casting of the die. It may be that the construction of an independent system by the city will lead to complications that the shrewd representatives of the company can foresee, but of that there is no evidence.

The duty of the Peterborough people under the circumstances is to give their vote for the by-law. The Hydro-Electric power commission has undertaken to supply power in quantities agreeable to Peterborough, at prices that compare very favorably indeed with prices in other Hydro-Electric centres. Peterborough might have to face a rate war in obtaining sufficient market for that power, in operating a municipal system, but the experience of the Hydro-Electric system in other cities where it has private cometition is that there is little disposition by the private interests to cut below the public service. It is impossible to say what might happen in that respect in Peterborough, but at least the people here would be able to rely conclusively on the undertakings of the Commission. The principle to be settled is whether Peterborough is to have public competition in this matter or not. With the working out of the intricate details in safe hands, we think that there is no doubt as to what the answer will be. At the same time, the Electric Power Company is adopting a broad attitude that will not lose it any friends.

MR. ST. CLAIR AGAIN

If Mr. R. B. St. Clair has any wish to retain usefulness in fighting social evils, he will go easy upon such criticisms as the one he uttered about the statuary at Toronto Normal school. Mr. St. Clair denied that these were of use as models for art instruction, claiming that they were far worse than the pictures which had been declared indecent in court. If they were actually of use, then boys and girls should be separated. Perhaps when anyone in a public capacity undertakes to criticise someone who is endeavoring to work in the cause of morality, he or she becomes liable to a misinterpretation of motives. But it can safely be said that as the statuary in question has been there for fifty years, the harm that it is doing is no more to-day, than when St. Clair himself was a boy. The question of when a work of art becomes an exhibit of moral turpitude is an old one. The one armed Venus has been discussed as a contributory to indecency. But though there may be statuary which would come within such a class, it is very hard to draw any line of distinction. Certainly a person who crosses the borderland of sanity and reason in his criticisms in the interest of public morals very quickly finds that he has lost his hold upon public attention. Instead of a reformer, he is regarded more as a nuisance. There are many great and crying evils of a social nature in the world to be corrected, without the display of too "pernickety" a temper in relation to works of art.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The first woman jury in Kansas is said to have opened its deliberations with prayer. At least, that is an improvement on sending out to borrow a corkscrew.

N. Y. Sun:—A Minneapolis clergyman imported chorus girls to demonstrate the scandals of the turkey trot and bunny hug for his congregation. "Our empty churches" ought not to be a problem of Minneapolis.

Irrepressible old Keir Hardie has shown himself unduly solicitous regarding the report of a contribution from Indian princes to naval defence. He fears their feelings will be annoyed if the statement is untrue. The last time he interested himself in the Indian empire was in the shape of inflammatory remarks calculated to stir up its masses against their rulers.

The City Council of Hamilton very properly intends to officially recognize the achievement of the football players of that city in capturing three Dominion championships—truly a great achievement. At the same time they should go a little further and recognize in some way "the man behind, or the one higher up," in the person of M. M. Robinson, formerly of Peterborough. "Bobby" reorganized the champion Alerts and put them on a good war footing—and snatched victory for the city after the old reliables, The Tigers, failed. "Bobby" is short in body and brawn, but long in brains, energy—and nerve.

DR. GRENFELL'S CALL TO DUTY

Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell's personal appeal:

"There is needed at once to help the institute to start without anxiety for the first year the sum of $10,000. To many this sum seems impossible, but to many who are even now approaching the time when that which has been lent them shall be called in again by the Giver. Here is an opportunity for an investment of that kind which never fails to bring as its eternal reward the true joie de vivre, the joy of the Master, which He has told us He permits us to share with Him."

PRESENTATION TO MR. HARDY

He Leaves To-night to Take Position at Montreal

A neat little remembrance and in expression of good will were tendered to Mr. C. F. Hardy this morning in the Farm and Dairy offices by the combined staffs of that publication and The Canadian Horticulturist. The gift was a traveller's leather lined, black stationery bag, and an attractive clock, suitable for den or bedroom.

Mr Hardy has for nearly six years been connected with the joint staffs of these two publications, having been with the old Canadian Dairyman before it removed its offices to Peterborough. For the past three years Mr. Hardy has been Advertising Manager of The Canadian Horticulturist and of The Canadian Florist, which position he has held with signal success as to draw the favorable attention of outsiders, one of which, The Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, has secured his services in connection with the advertising department on their publications. Mr. Hardy leaves on the late train Sunday night for Montreal to take up his duties forthwith.

THERE WERE ONLY EIGHT HOUSES

When the Late Mrs. McCann Came to Peterborough

Margaret Hogan, relict of the late James McCann, passed away early this morning, at the residence of her son, Mr. John McCann, Crescent street, at the age of 86 years.

The late Mrs. McCann was born in the village of Cashel, County of Tipperary, Ireland; and came to Peterborough in 1816. The voyage to Canada lasted three months, and on arrival in Peterborough she was greeted with only a village of eight houses. Shortly after her arrival she left to live near Keene, where she was married and spent most of her life. Mrs. McCann came with her husband 20 years ago to Peterborough, and two years later he died, and since then she has been living with her son. Last summer he paid a visit to her old home in Ireland, and found the house in which she was born still standing. Mrs. McCann was well known in Keene, as well as in the city.

She is survived by two sons, John McCann, with the Street Railway Company, and J. A., of Spokane, Washington, and two daughters, Mrs Mrs. M. P. Collins, of Chicago, and Mrs. John Carey, of Otonabee.

MR. T. F. MATHEWS.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

Fritzi Scheff is winning popular praise in her newest bright opera "The Love Wager." Miss Scheff is under the managerial direction of Joseph M. Gaites, who has surrounded her with a splendid singing organization, and has provided a very picturesque scenic production. The new opera is by Edith Ellis, with music by C. J. Hambitzer, and is based on the same Hungarian farce which two years ago met with great success under the title of "Seven Sisters."

Is the Broadway drama to undergo competition with Shakespeare this season? The revival of "Julius Caesar" by an actor of romantic roles is not without its interest in this connection, following as it does, hard upon the conclusion of a successful month's engagement at the Manhatten of two popular and competent impersonators of Shakesperian drama.

New York is never without its allowance of Shakespeare, good, bad and indifferent. But the fact for encouragement is the improving quality and growing frequency of the performances. Apart from the Hamlets and Juliets that come and go as individual actors and actresses realize an old ambition to appear in the classic roles, there is evidence of an added appreciation by managers and by the profession of the modern acting qualities of Shakespeare and the certainty of public support when the play is adequately produced.

The death is announced of Phoebe Davis known to playgoers the country over for her long time impersonation of the role of "Anna Moore," the persecuted heroine in "Way Down East." She was Mrs. Joseph R. Grismer in private life, and was born in 1864 in Wales. She began playing her famous role in 1897, and continued it in twelve seasons until her retirement from the stage nearly four years ago.

TO BE OLDER THAN 35.

"No one can say that I am husband-hunting, but I have always believed that I could and would prove a wonderful wife if the right man—the man of my ideals, I mean—should ever come into my life," declares Mary Garden.

Asked about her recent statement that "when I reached the age of thirty-five I shall stick there till the end," she replied:

"How do I propose to remain thirty-five? Just by thinking I'm thirty-five," and she placed a forefinger between the laughing blue eyes.

"It doesn't matter whether I'm forty-five or thirty-nine, or what my age may be," she continued, "if I think thirty-five, that's all I'll ever be. Just look brazen and say you're thirty-five, that's all you need to do.

"But with a man it is different. A man should rush along as quickly as possible to get to that beautiful manhood of forty. His thirties are 'prep. school' for life, and under thirty he is just as much of a nuisance (and a pleasure) as young growing animals—colts, calves, puppies."

Alonzo Klaw, the landscape painter, and son of Mark Klaw, of Klaw & Erlanger, was married recently at the residence of the bride's parents, to Alma Ash, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Ash.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Maurice Harris, of Temple Israel. It was a quiet home wedding, only the relatives and a few intimate friends being present.

Alonzo Klaw is well known in art circles. Mrs. Klaw is a graduate of Barnard College. After a wedding tour the young couple will make their home at Lake Mahopac, where the bridegroom owns a large farm and is building a studio.

During Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's coming tour of this country, she will appear in at least one play new to America. She has just notified Martin Beck, under whose direction she will appear, that "Une Nuit de Noel sous le Terreur" would be included in her repertoire. This is an episode of the French Revolution, written by her son, Maurice Bernhardt and Henri Cain.

THEATRICAL

The Princess of Patches

"The Princess of Patches" was last night's offering by Perry's Peerless Players and evidently those who attended the first presentation carried to their friends flattering descriptions, judging by the large audience. Dan Mallory played the part of the tramp and was even funnier than before. His entertainment between the acts, classes him with one of the best monologists yet seen in this city. Miss Corinne also was popular.

Write Ideas For Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

You Will Earn $100 Monthly For Spare Time Work.

FREE Send your name and address at once for free copy of our illustrated book, "MOVING PICTURE PLAYWRITING"

Don't hesitate. Don't argue. Write now and learn just what this new profession may mean for you and your future.

SPORTING NEWS

A meeting of the Mercantile Hockey League is called for at the Y.M.C.A., next Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

Lindsay has notified the O.H.A. that the town will not be represented in the Association this winter.

Geo Littlewood, once a noted pedestrian, is dead from tuberculosis in London.

Littlewood's first achievement was at Madison Square Garden, New York in December, 1888, when he won the six-day go-as-you-please race, covering a distance of 623 miles and 1,320 yards. He won two other big races of the same description, the first at Philadelphia and the second in New York.

A class of twenty, the majority of whom were junior hockey players, had a workout at the Lyceum gym last night. Evidently the seniors do not need training.

SMALLER TOWNS WANT SOME OF THE HOLIDAY DATES

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Baseball League, which is to be held at the King Edward Hotel on Wednesday of next week, the smaller towns are going to fight for something. This time they don't want bigger guarantees or smaller salaries. They demand some of the better schedule dates. The Guelph club is leading the campaign. They claim that London, Hamilton and Ottawa got all the good dates last year including the majority of Saturdays, as well as Victoria Day, Dominion Day, and every other holiday of importance. They claim that they ought to get at least a fair share of the Saturdays and holidays. The St. Thomas, Guelph and Berlin clubs are all with Guelph in the matter, so it looks as if "Jim" Fitzgerald's league had a real fight on its hands.

DWYER FOR POSITION VACATED BY DEROCHER

Toronto papers note that Derocher, Milloy, Wier and Revoy, of Peterborough are in Syracuse where they will play hockey this winter. Several other names could be added to the list including Jimmie McMartin and Tom Lansfield.

With the exception of Milloy, the players have been absent from Peterborough for some time. Their departure, of course, leaves a few gaps to be filled. This is particularly so in the case of Milloy and Derocher.

Joe Dwyer will likely be asked to do the net work for the senior team and if he comes along as he did last winter, it's a cinch the job will be his for keeps.

Only Seven Words Evidence.

Indianapolis, Dec. 7. Seven words embraced in the phrase "Pretty hard to do anything to it," were produced by the Government at the trial of the accused "bomb plotters" yesterday as its evidence that Herman G. Seiffert, Milwaukee, was implicated in the McNamara dynamite conspiracy.

Seiffert, as one of the forty-one labor union officials charged with causing explosions on non-union work had waited weeks to testify and he was on the stand less than 20 minutes explaining what he meant by that phrase.

About a month before an explosion in Milwaukee on March 10, 1911, when an unloading hoist and a steamer near the dock was damaged by dynamite with $50,000 loss, Seiffert took the place of Wm E. Reddin, business agent of the Ironworkers' Union, who was sick for four days. During that time Seiffert wrote a letter to John J. McNamara, secretary of the International Ironworkers' Union at Indianapolis. Using that phrase, the witness said, he referred to efforts to unionize the job, for McNamara required reports from all local unions as to prospective work for members of the union. Seiffert asserted he first learned of the explosion from newspapers the following day. Ortie E. McManigal confessed to having actually placed the explosive.

WESTERN GROWTH

Remarkable Development Revealed by Various Statistics

Building statistics may also be utilized to give a graphic idea of western growth. Last year twelve western cities from Winnipeg to Fernie expended $50,554,103 on new buildings. Winnipeg took the lead with $17,600,000. Calgary occupied second place with $12,709,476. Regina stood third with $5,088,110. Saskatoon spent $4,920,000, and Edmonton $3,797,525. When it is remembered that only three years before the total expenditure of the twelve cities on buildings was only $11,501,037, then some conception of how the cities are extending will be had. The present year has dawned with great activity in building lines, which gives every promise of carrying the 1912 total far ahead of that for 1911. The coast cities also exhibit a startling growth in building statistics. Vancouver spent $5,950,883 in 1906, while in 1911 her building permits reached $17,652,642.

Assessment figures likewise reflect the activity in building. Winnipeg's property was valued at $41,106,870 back in 1904. In 1911 it stood at $172,677,250. Calgary's assessment was $4,099,437 in 1904; it was $52,747,600 in 1911. Edmonton showed an advance from $2,580,986 to $46,494,740. Regina grew from $2,284,710 to $34,840,733. This in the space of seven years is a remarkable achievement.

Another valuable way of showing growth is to refer to the bank clearings. Winnipeg clearing house returns for 1906 were $504,585,914. In 1911 they were $1,170,606,864. Vancouver during the same period showed an increase from $132,606,356 to $539,869,610. Calgary began in 906 with $41,771,924, and last year had $219,245,879. Victoria had a growth from $46,615,615 to $133,762,447; Edmonton from $3,936,721 to $122,649,238, and other cities in proportion. Between 1910 and 1911 the percentage increase in Winnipeg was 22, in Vancouver 21, in Calgary 45½, in Victoria 31.7, and in Edmonton 71. All these increases are greatly in excess of those in eastern cities. Ten years ago there were only 71 branch banks in these prairie provinces. In 1911 there were 727, or over one-quarter of the total number of branch banks in the Dominion.

ENGLAND'S METHOD

Gave the Home Manufacturer Control of the Home Market

It was by protection that England overtook nations that once excelled her in manufactures. She not only levied high duties on imported goods, but prohibited the export of raw material by severe penalties. She gave the home manufacturers control of the home market in the most complete manner, till from this solid basis they have successfully invaded every country in the world. Not only this, the competition of the home manufacturers in the home market reduced the price of goods to the British people lower than they could ever have been produced by free trade. So far was the protective system carried that she would neither sell English wool to foreign manufacturers nor buy their cloth. In the early stages of English manufactures the exportation of wool was made a felony by the common law. The owner of a ship, knowingly exporting wool, forfeited "all his interest in the ship and furniture." If we copy British commercial policy at all, expecting to attain the same results, we must copy it in all its stages, in which case we find, the stage of English history, corresponding with our present stage, affording great protection to our home manufacturers.

WHERE THEY MOURN

American Steel Companies Look at Canada With Envy

American companies which manufacture steel and iron products are gazing with envious eyes upon Canadian railway building. They long for contracts to supply rails and other equipment. But the tariff, with its anti-dumping clause, insists that, if they want to sell in Canada, they must manufacture in Canada. A special report, prepared under the instructions of the American steel and iron companies, presents the following interesting paragraph for their sad perusal:

"The Canadian Government's protective policy may be expressed as follows; First, to impose duties sufficiently high to protect Canadian manufacturers from the competition of the United States; and, secondly, of other countries. Second, to provide bounties in favor of Canadian makers and assist them with governmental railway orders so as to enable profitable operation of the mills and development of ore properties, employment of labor, etc. Third, to enable British makers to secure any surplus tonnage which cannot be manufactured in Canada by a preferential tariff extended to Great Britain, of approximately one-third of the duty, i.e., British rails paying $5.04, against $7.84 per gross ton, etc."

If American manufacturers want to share in the prosperity of this country, they must first contribute to it by establishing branch factories on our side of the border.

TWO GREAT FACTORS

"The two great factors in the upbuilding of Canada are the farmer and the manufacturer. The farmer is the more important. He has had no general or special organizations to influence public opinion or legislative action. Those organizations and papers promoted to supply his needs have been captured by extremists. They have appealed to prejudice rather than to good judgment, and have, therefore, failed to secure endorsement of thinking farmers."—The Farmers Magazine.

CANADIAN HOME MARKET

The Natural Right of the People of Canada

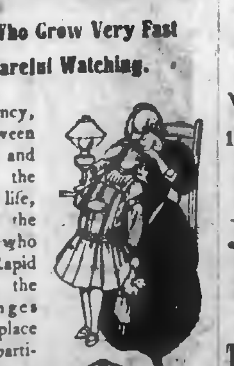
The wants of seven million people—housing them, feeding them, clothing them, transporting them, amusing them, curing them, burying them, constitute the Canadian home market. It is a great market, a future competitor of the American market, which consumes one-third of the products of the world. This home market is the natural right of the Canadian people. Foreigners should only supply those articles which we cannot produce after they have paid a duty to our Government equal to the difference between the wages of bare existence and the wages of comfortable subsistence. Almost everything needed in Canada should be produced by our own mills so that transportation charges may be avoided and employment may be given to our people.

AN INDUSTRIAL AWAKENING

While British Columbia is rapidly becoming a great industrial province; while Manitoba can boast of having over four hundred separate industries, and while Alberta and Saskatchewan are establishing industries as far as they can generate power to operate them and grow food to supply their workmen, the Eastern districts of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia still hold the supreme position in manufacturing. Montreal is still first among the cities in capital, and volume of production. Toronto comes second. Hamilton is third and Winnipeg fourth. The Western Provinces are progressing wonderfully along industrial lines.

Manufacturers Enquire

Increasing interest among manufacturers in widely scattered sections is now being shown by the flood of enquiries being received by the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau. A marked feature respecting these enquiries is the desire expressed for specific information regarding labor conditions and raw materials.



GUARD THEIR HEALTH!

Children Who Grow Very Fast Need Careful Watching.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills would make her healthy and happy.

Next to infancy, the years between ten or twelve and eighteen are the most critical in life, especially for the boys and girls who grow too fast. Rapid growth and the physical changes that are taking place render them particularly liable to weakness and disorders of the digestive system, kidneys or lungs that very frequently, when allowed to run on, condemn them to a lifetime of suffering.

It is most important that at this period of life those organs which carry off the body's waste and impurities—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin—should be kept active and vigorous.

Nothing will do this more effectively than that good old-fashioned remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. It acts directly on each of these organs, enabling them to do their work properly, and thus keeps the whole system pure and healthy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are still made from precisely the same formula as when our grandparents used them, for nothing better has ever been devised.

SCHOOL GARDENS AS FACTOR OF EDUCATION

An expert landscape artist, Prof. Hutt, of the Ontario Agriculture College, delivered a very interesting illustrated lecture at the Normal School last evening on the subject of "Gardens as a Factor in Education." He endeavored to illustrate the close relation of school gardens to the child mind and spoke on the wisdom of beautifying schools and homes with trees, gardens and flowers. Pictures were shown on a screen of the best school gardens in Ontario and also of bare uninviting rural schools, and Prof. Hutt brought out a strong point by showing how the absence of flowers and bareness of school surroundings gave children a dislike to the country.

Prof. Hutt is employed by the Ontario Government to supply assistance to any city needing expert help in landscape gardening. During his lecture he pointed out the condition of the King Edward School and implied that he would be very willing to co-operate with the local Board of Education in laying out the grounds of the new schools.

Principal Duncan Walker was chairman.

MAY BE THREE CORNERED FIGHT IN THE WEST WARD

Some time ago the Review gave a forecast of the Municipal Elections and intimated that Mr. Geo. Leader would offer himself as a candidate.

This morning Mr. Leader announced that he had decided to offer himself for nomination, with the intention of running in the West Ward.

Asked for a statement, Mr. G. Walter Green, who has been mentioned as a probable candidate in the West Ward said this morning that he had not fully decided. He was considering the matter, he said, but thought it was a little too early to give a definite answer.

The sitting aldermen are Ald. Brown and Duffus, the former having to go before the people next January.

BUY CHRISTMAS GOODS AT HOME

(Written especially for and publication authorized by the Peterborough Ad. Club.)

We may as well confess it! We have all erred—we have all done what we should not do—purchased out of town when it really would have paid us to have bought in Peterborough. Let us now consider.

At this Christmas season this question of Home vs. Out-of-town buying assumes stupendous proportions. To Peterborough, and to you, Dear Reader, as a citizen of this city, this question of where to purchase is of great importance, as you full well realise.

You know, if you have stopped to think of it, that in the stores on three blocks alone of George street, from Brock to Charlotte, there are goods to the value exceeding two million five hundred thousand dollars. ($2,500,000.00.) From this vast stock you are privileged to select your purchases.

PEOPLE EMPLOYED IN STORES.

The number of people employed in the stores fairly staggers your belief. Five of the leading stores on George street, in the aggregate, give employment the year round to between 400 and 600 people. (Bear in mind that we refer only to these leading stores in this connection, and are not considering in this estimate the employment given by the scores of other stores in the city.) Our stores from this one standpoint alone are a very important factor, and a great one in the upbuilding of our progressive city.

Travellers and visitors to Peterborough, almost every day in the year are heard to express their astonishment at the marked progressiveness of our merchants. They cannot get over the attractive store fronts, the well-trimmed, bright windows of our leading George street merchants, and the truly metropolitan air that pervades these palatial places of retail business.

AN APPEAL TO LOYAL CITIZENS

At this Christmas season when our money is spending freely, when our purchases are greatest of the year we urge all good and loyal citizens to think well of where they buy. We would have you think well of what it means to encourage Home Industry and to "buy at" home. Amongst our merchants we number our most progressive—many of our best citizens. By doing business with them, we build up Peterborough and attract others to our city who will join with us in causing our mutual interests to advance, and each of us individually to become more prosperous.

Without our stores, and without our merchants, what would our city amount to? What would it profit us then to buy through mail-order houses! Let us be honest with ourselves. Let us be fair to our own best interests. Let us consider well these things and at this rapidly approaching Christmas season be generous in our views, and each and every time when we can buy satisfactorily in Peterborough, buy here and keep our money within our bounds, where it will keep on doing greatest work for us.

EX-ALD. A. A. McINTYRE.

He will be a candidate for Aldermanic honors at the Municipal Elections.

DEATH CAME VERY SUDDENLY

Mrs J. L. Squair was Found Dead at Her Home

Death's summons came suddenly to Mrs. J. L. Squair, Thursday night and it was not till the arrival of the husband and daughter, last evening, that her demise was learned.

Mr. Squair, who is engaged at Keene in the management of a mill and his daughter, Miss Minnie Squair, a school teacher, returned to spend the week end at home. The absence of Mrs. Squair, caused no alarm as it was thought she might be away on a visit. The late Mrs. Squair had been out on Thursday evening. After returning to her home and retiring for the night, she was stricken with heart failure.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN ON WITHDRAWAL CLAUSE

Paper Seems to Think Minister at London Might Endanger Home Fleet—Beresford to Inquire if Canada's Ships Will be an Addition to the Program or a Part of It.

London, Dec. 8.—Canada's naval contribution has far overshadowed the eastern war as the topic of the week in England. The politicians and newspapers, with very few dissenting voices, welcome the Dominion's gift for its own sake and as a memorable step towards consolidating the Empire.

Uncertainty exists as to whether the Government proposes to receive Canada's ships as an addition to the minimum fleet considered necessary to maintain naval supremacy or as a part of that fleet.

Lord Charles Beresford will ask assurances in the House of Commons that the ships constitute an addition to the British program, not part of it.

Lt.-Col. Arthur Hamilton Lee, Unionist member for South Hants, who was Civil Lord of the Admiralty in 1903, proposes to ask when the orders will be placed, when the ships will be completed and whether any are attached to the Canadian offer.

Joseph Martin, a former Canadian, who sits for East St. Pancras, will ask why, if the Admiralty memorandum discloses that the navy should be strengthened without delay, the Government should hand over the obligation to Canada.

The only feature of the new policy causing uneasiness is the innovation of giving the colonies a place on the committee of Imperial defence. The Manchester Guardians says: "From the English viewpoint, we view with distrust the admission of a Canadian representative to the committee of defence, especially when he is armed with the power, if his advice is not taken, of withdrawing nearly half a squadron from the Imperial navy.

"We are certain that this power would not be exercised frivolously or at a time of national danger, but the fact that it exists would give the Canadian member of the committee more than ordinary influence."

Churchill a Deceiver.

London, Dec. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Observer's Berlin correspondent wires that Germany is maintaining a masterly silence regarding Canada's dreadnoughts. It is broken only in solitary and noteworthy instances by Count Hoventlow, who gives vent to his opinion in Deutsche Tageszeitung.

He finds Canada's intended contribution gives the lie direct to Churchill's sixten to ten Anglo-German naval ratio, and convicts Albion afresh of international perfidy.

Canada's action, he asserts, is fruit of the incessant agitation on "London Imperialism." There cannot be a shadow of doubt Churchill and Borden in the early months of 1912 discussed and worked out the project now before the Canadian Parliament. Germany will withhold judgment on the honesty of Churchill's policy until the British estimates for 1913 are published. If the First Lord's program of five capital ships includes three Canadian dreadnoughts, his reputation for veracity will be saved; if the program is eight ships, Churchill, Asquith and company will stand convicted as base deceivers.

LINER ST. LOUIS IS DISABLED

Plymouth, Dec. 9.—The American line steamship St. Louis, which sailed from New York Nov. 30, met with a serious accident last Thursday, when a piston rod broke and was hurled from the cylinder to the top of the engine-room. It did much damage, but no one was hurt. Repairs are expected to occupy two months.

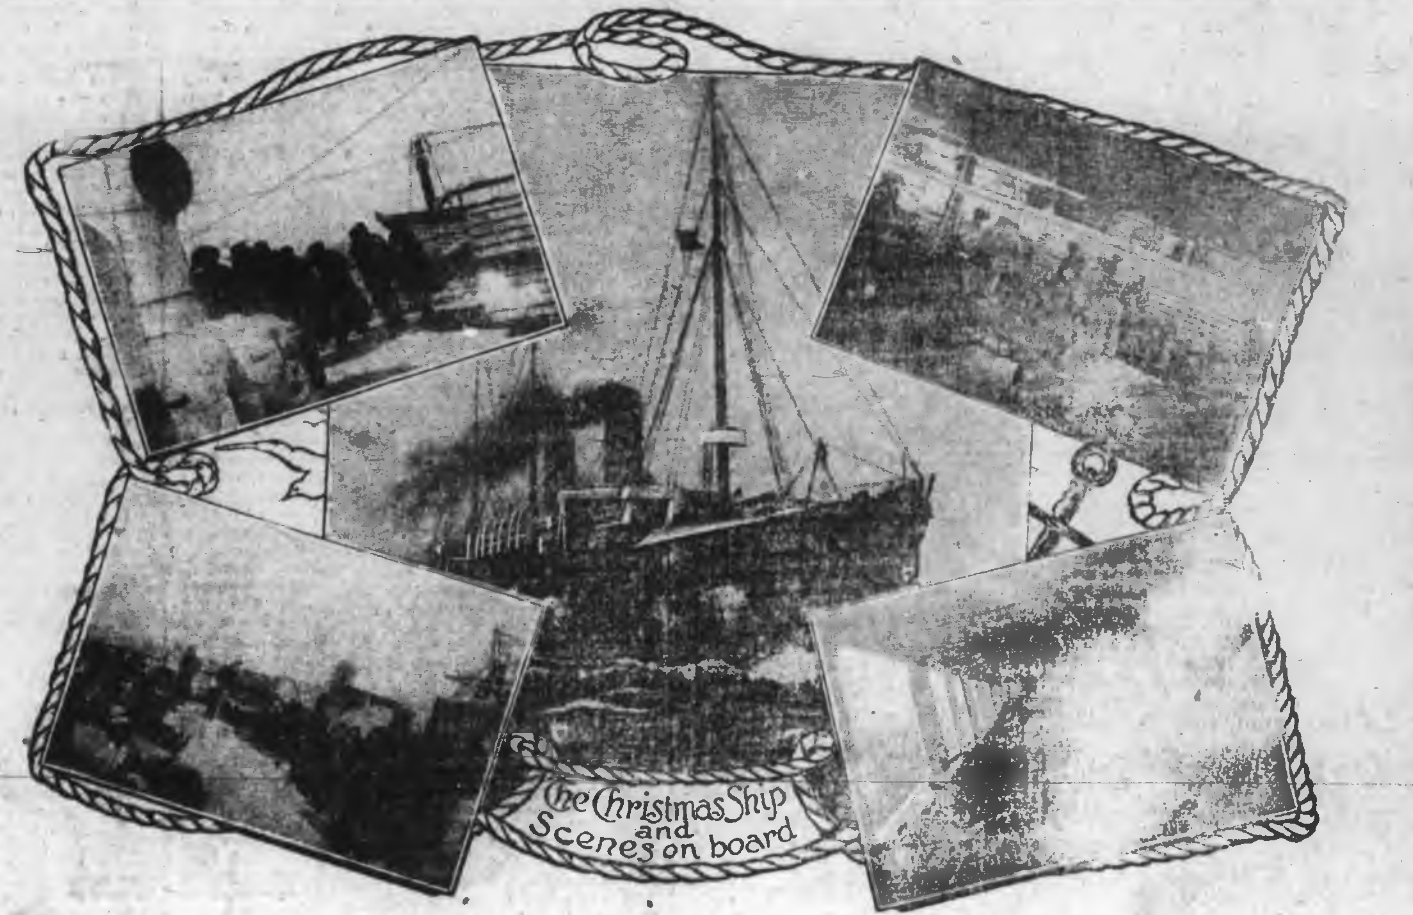
SHOULD CURB CORPORATIONS

Woodstock, Dec. 9.—N. W. Rowell, K.C., Opposition leader in the Legislature, addressed the annual meeting of the North Oxford Liberal Association yesterday afternoon.

He dealt principally with the abolish-the-bar policy of the Opposition and attacked the Government for not paying sufficient attention to the dangers of aggressions by corporations.

"We should," he said, "to the full limit of the legislative and administrative power of the Government, prevent corporate power from being used to influence elections or to control the course of legislation or the administration of justice.



With the coming of the Christmas season, the Old Country spirit tugs hard at the heart-strings and thousands of our English-born Canadians cross the sea to spend the holidays with dear ones in the Mother Land.

LIMITED HELD UP BY LONE BANDIT

Passengers Robbed and Man Makes His Escape.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 9.—A bold train hold-up was carried out on Saturday night just as the C.P.R. Imperial Limited, leaving Vancouver at 7.40 was passing out of the city. A single bandit, disguised by a black mask, boarded the train as it was passing the British Columbia Sugar Refinery, a mile and a half out, entered a Pullman car and at the point of a revolver forced the passengers to pass over their money and valuables. The man dropped off the train just before it arrived at Arnet, six miles from the city.

The total loss was $308 in bills, two watches and one chain, one diamond ring and two English sovereigns. The sleeping car conductor contributed $30. The police have no trace of the robber.

DEPLORES LOSS OF CANTEEN

Washington, Dec. 9.—In the annual report of the U. S. Secretary of War, just presented to President Taft, the strength of the regular army on June 30 last is given at 4,470 officers and 77,835 enlisted men, an increase during the year of 189 officers and 7,834 men.

The report states that army officers are almost unanimous in testifying that the number of dives and ill-resorts in the neighborhood of military reservations has greatly increased since of the sale of light wines and beer has been prohibited.

TORONTO PEOPLE ARE BITTEN BY RABID DOG

Carter's Beagle Inoculates Doctor, Undertaker, a Woman and Four Children, Who Will all be Forced to Take Pasteur Treatment.

Toronto, Dec. 9.—When a large black beagle dog went mad on Dundas street, Ward Seven, on Saturday, seven people were so badly bitten by the animal that they will be forced to take the Pasteur treatment. After terrorizing the whole district the dog returned to its home, where it was shot. The head was analyzed by Dr. Amyot, who described the case as one of the deadliest forms of rabies.

The dog broke from its fastening at 503 Quebec avenue, during the morning. The owner, Nelson Leadbeater, a cartage agent, was out at the time. Before leaving the premises the dog bit Leadbeater's two small children. Running along the avenue to Dundas street, the dog turned in at Whetter's butcher shop. Those who were on the street at the time noticed the peculiar actions of the dog and kept a safe distance away.

Dr. Cunningham happened to be in the shop at the time. Without even a bark, the animal sprang at his throat. Dr. Cunningham raised his hand and the dog lacerated three of his fingers.

L. Scrutton, an undertaker, was the next victim. He was walking along when the mad creature came leaping along the street and bit him.

A child belonging to Mr. Steele of Quebec avenue also felt the fangs of the dog, while playing on the street.

The son of James Smith, brickmaker on the Weston road, was bitten while the animal was on the rampage, and a woman who lives on Vine street will also have to take the Pasteur treatment, as she, too, was bitten.

After locating the house from which the dog had come, Dr. Cunningham summoned Dr. Arthur Melhuish, veterinary surgeon. The latter armed himself with a forty-four calibre revolver and proceeded to the house on Quebec avenue. The dog had been trapped in the kitchen.

The doctor cautiously opened the door, and as he did so the animal sprang for the openingly. By slamming the door the doctor caught the head of the animal. The doctor fired a shot through the dog's head, and Constable Ide added another.

It is thought that there are several other people in the neighborhood who may have been bitten by the dog. Dr. Melhuish states that he has had nearly seventy cases of rabies in the last six weeks, and it is understood several other people from Ward Seven have been taking the Pasteur treatment.

Two weeks ago a large dog was shot after it had bitten a young man. The head was examined and found to be rabid.

About two days later another animal owned by Fred. Chowns at Humber Bay became mad and had to be shot.

CANADIANS IN NEW YORK SING "RULE BRITANNIA"

When Reference is Made to Canada's Contribution to Motherland.

New York, Dec. 9.—Three hundred and fifty Canadians and their guests sat down at Delmonico's Saturday night for the annual dinner of the Canadian Society, and heard inspiring speeches from distinguished men from the old home country and from a representative of the new south.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, in responding to the toast of the Empire, aroused much enthusiasm by his declarations as a French-Canadian, of the unalterable attachment of his people to British institutions, while the other speakers also dwelt upon the same subject and to the unbroken and unbreakable friendship which does and must exist between the two great branches of the English-speaking nations.

Only one direct reference, that by Hon. J. A. Ouimet, was made to the proposed Canadian addition to the British navy. The president of the society, Dev. Dr. C. A. Eaton, however, when the orchestra struck up "Rule Britannia," rose and invited all to join in, remarking: "We Canadians have been strong in shouting that Britannia rules the waves, when it did not cost us anything. Let us join in all the stronger now."

Rev. J. A. Macdonald, in his address, expressed the hope that Canada would one day rule her own fleet, but made no other reference to the subject.

Among those who came from Canada for the occasion were: Hon. J. A. Ouimet, Montreal, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Ottawa; Dr. J. A. Macdonald and Fred. B. Featherstonhaugh, K.C., of the Empire Club, Toronto; E. V. Villeneuve, Charles R. McCullough of Hamilton; A. D. Fraser and F. H. Markey, Montreal.

Dr. J. A. Macdonald said that Canada by refusing to surrender any part of her autonomy, whether in trade policy or in tariff arrangements, or in treaty agreements, or in military and naval defence, will make secure the permanence and the power of the British Empire. It is not by any return to the old notion of government from Downing street, even in the great matter of Imperial defence that Canada will best serve the Empire. The old imperium idea is doomed, dead and done forever. But the new idea of world-wide alliance, of free and sovereign nations loyal to one throne and crown and king, is the most frequent conception in world politics to-day.

STURGEON FALLS HOTEL BURNED

North Bay, Dec. 9.—The new Ontario Hotel at Sturgeon Falls was destroyed by fire which broke out on the first floor Saturday evening, and spread so quickly that nothing could be saved. Fifteen boarders lost all their belongings in the fire. The building was of frame construction, and was owned and operated by M. Brigbois. The loss will reach $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

MAURETANIA IN NO TROUBLE

Steamship Officials have No News From Liner

Canadian Press Despatch

New York, Dec. 9.—Cunard officials here have no apprehensions for the safety of Mauretania which last night was rumored to have met with a mishap soon after leaving Liverpool. They have received no intimation of any accident and they take the absence of news to mean that no accident occurred.

RENOUNCES HIS RIGHTS

Grand Duke Michel's Step Makes Czar Uneasy.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 9.—Emperor Nicholas and the members of the imperial family are greatly upset by the determination of the Emperor's only brother, Grand Duke Michel Alexandervitch, definitely to renounce his rights of succession to the throne. The morgantic marriage contracted in 1910 by the grand duke with the divorced wife of a brother officer, was recently blessed by the birth of a son. This event prompted Grand Duke Michel's decision. He wishes to retire to the private life of a country gentleman, assuming the title of count, in order to enjoy domestic bliss far from the atmosphere of the court, for which he never had any predilection.

The Emperor is opposed to this step, all the more because of the recent illness of his only son, Crown Prince Alexis, which has revived fears for the succession.

The sons of the late Grand Duke Vladimir, who would become the next candidates for the throne, unhappily share their father's intense unpopularity. All classes of well-informed Russians, indeed, regard the possibility of their ascending the throne as disastrous for the dynasty.

The Dowager Empress Marie is so incensed at the action of Grand Duke Michel, that she announces that she will not return to Russia unless he changes his mind. Such a change would involve dissolution of the morganatic marriage.

TORONTO POLICE MATRON DEAD

Was First Found by Police Doing Missionary Work.

Toronto, Dec. 9.—After more than seventeen years' faithful service as police matron for the city of Toronto, Mrs. Agnes B. Whiddon, 2 Gould street, died in the Western Hospital yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Whiddon failed to recover from an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Whiddon was 50 years of age. She came to Canada from Scotland when just out of her 'teens. With her she brought qualifications of a first-class nurse and also the benefits of a good education.

When first the police became acquainted with Mrs. Whiddon she was doing missionary work in the ward. She had a home on Elm street and later on Centre avenue. It was here that the police were able to find a harbor for young girls. In Mrs. Whiddon they found a congenial, motherly woman, willing to help them keep the straight course is life.

She was gentle with the weak women, kind and patient. With the quarrelome persons she was equally kind, but if they were not submissive, she, too, could become very stern. Although only diminutive in size in comparison with some of her prisoners, she was generally able to control them.

When searching female prisoners for stolen property she was alert, and it is claimed never overlooked anything. Some of the detectives describe her as being a detective, policeman and a kind woman all in one.

Her salary from the position she placed in the bank regularly. This was devoted to charity, and many a poor home has been helped along by the money furnished by the fine little woman.

On one occasion she gave her total savings of $500 to charity.

NAVAL PLAN NOT TO BE CURTAILED

Canada's Ships an Addition to Existing Program

Canadian Press Despatch

London, Dec. 9.—Winston Churchill in the House of Commons this morning stated that Britain's naval program would not be curtailed because of Canada's thirty-five million gift. Canada's aid would be an addition to the existing British naval program.

RENEWAL OF THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE TAKEN FAVORABLY

Fact That the "Dreibund" Between Germany, Italy and Austria, Has Been Re-established Six Months Before its Expiration Means That Servia and Russia Will Have to be Careful.

London, Dec. 9.—The circumstances of the renewal of the dreibund six months before the necessity arose to give notice of its expiry or renewal is considered to have special reference to the Balkan problem. Continental newspapers comment on its renewal as calculated to make a strong impression on Russia and Servia, thus helping the preservation of peace.

Turkey has not yet officially appointed her peace delegate, but all the Balkan states, including Greece, have named theirs, and the delegates will start for London to-day.

Dr. Daneff, president of the Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, will stop at Bucharest on his way to London, and will endeavor to reconcile Roumania's territorial and economic aspirations with Bulgaria's interests.

The Greeks continue their military operations and have occupied Syrakon and St. George, villages four hours distant from Janina, where the remnants of the Turkish Mouastir army are said to have arrived.

A Belgrade despatch to The Telegraph says that the Austro-Hungarian authorities have stopped at Fiume the steamer Hegesdisch, with a cargo of 800 tons of flour destined for the Servian army at Durazzo.

It is announced that Austria intends to confiscate the flour for the use of her army, thus creating a similar situation as brought about by the stoppage by Turkey of Servian guns.

Another Belgrade despatch says there is considerable anxiety over the health of King Peter. The king fainted several times Saturday.

Boycott on Austria.

Vienna, Dec. 9.—The alliance between Austria-Hungary, Germany and Italy has been renewed without alteration.

Information from Belgrade received Saturday is to the effect that the Servian Merchants' Union has decided to boycott all Austrian products.

On the banks of the Danube, below Belgrade, the Servian artillery has taken positions commanding several important points on Austrian territory.

Turks Stand Firm.

Constantinople, Dec. 8.—The following official message has been received from the Vali of Adrianople, under date of Dec. 4:

"At 9 o'clock yesterday evening, before the armistice was signed, the enemy, with the intention of approaching the forts, made a general charge with all their forces of infantry and artillery on the south, north and east, and also on the Maresh side. Our brave soldiers repulsed the attacks with great vigor and did not give way a step from the advance posts which they were occupying.

During terrible fighting, which lasted nearly six hours, the enemy sustained considerable losses and had to retreat on all sides in a lamentable state. The enemy fired nearly seventy shells at the town, without, thanks to God, causing any losses.

"The armistice was proclaimed today."

Greeks Land At Epirus.

Corfu, Dec. 9.—The first regiment of the Greek army landed yesterday at Santi Quaranta, on the coast of Epirus, opposite Corfu, under the protection of the fleet. The Greek flag was hoisted. The Turkish authorities submitted without resistance.

The cruiser Macedonia has captured an Italian steamer embarking Albanian insurgents and stores of Avlona, and has brought her to Corfu.

Royal Mausoleum Defiled.

Turin, Dec. 9.—The mausoleum of the House of Savoy, in the Superga, the royal burial church, has been broken into and the tomb of the Dowaged Duchess of Genoa profaned. The dowager duchess was the mother of Queen Margherita and the grandmother of King Victor Emmanuel. She died last August. It has not yet been ascertained whether the motive of the vandals was robbery.

FALSE AND UNNECESSARY

Canadian Press Despatch

Washington, Dec. 9.—In his annual report to President Henry L. Stimson, the Secretary of War declares that the law granting free passage through the Panama Canal to American vessels engaged in coastwise shipping is a false and unnecessary policy.

BIGGER THAN EVER.

Guelph Winter Fair Has Record List of Exhibits.

Guelph, Dec. 9.—The twenty-sixth annual Ontario Provincial Winter Fair opened its doors in this city to the public to-day and will continue open morning, afternoon and evening until Friday evening.

The fair this year will beyond question exceed that of any previous year, notwithstanding the fact that a big show is in progress in Toronto. It was expected that this show would feel the effects of the one at Toronto, but it has only served as a stimulant to the officials to proceed with greater things than ever before, and already the efforts are being crowned with success.

To the general public the horse department of the show is the great attraction, and it is easily the best horse show ever seen in Guelph. When this department was added to the fair three years ago it was an experiment, but as time goes on it continues to grow in size and interest, with the result that this year close to fifty horses will have to be stabled outside of the building. One hundred stalls were erected this year, but still there is not room enough.

It would not have been surprising had there been a falling off in the exhibit of beef cattle, but the reverse is the case, and this department is crowded. Some of the finest fattest heifers to be seen anywhere are here, and the same fat stock from the Chicago show are expected to arrive today. All records have been broken in the dairy cattle class; no less than seventy-one of these being under test, it having started Saturday morning and closing on Monday night. If this department continues to grow as it has in the past two years, extra permanent accommodation will have to be provided.

The sheep, swine, poultry and produce exhibits are fully up to other years.

EXCUSE ME!

Ira Lathrop felt amiable even toward the foreigner, and he observed: "Glorious morning this morning."

"I dare say," growled Wedgewood. "I don't go in much for mawnings—especially when I have no tub."

Wellington felt called upon to squelch him: "You Englishmen never had a real tub till we Americans sold 'em to you."

"I dare say," said Wedgewood indifferently. "You sell 'em. We use 'em. But, do you know, I've just thought out a ripping idea. I shall have my cold bath this mawning after all."

"What are you going to do?" growled Lathrop. "Crawl in the ice-water tank?"

"Oh, dear, no. I shouldn't be let," and he produced from his pocket a rubber hose. "I simply affix this little tube to one end of the spigot and wave the sprinkiah hyah over my—er—my person."

Lathrop stared at him pityingly, and demanded: "What happens to the water, then?"

"What do I care?" said Wedgewood.

"Your durned fool, you'd flood the car."

Wedgewood's high hopes withered. "I hadn't thought of that," he sighed. "I suppose I must continue just as I am till I reach San Francisco. The first thing I shall order tonight will be four cold tubs and a lemon squash."

While the men continued to make themselves presentable in a huddle, the hook-and-eye society at the other end of the car finished with the four waists, and Mrs. Fosdick hurried away to keep her tryst in the dining-car. The three remaining relapsed into dreary attitudes. Mrs. Wellington shook the knob of the forbidding door, and turned to complain: "What in heaven's name ails the creature in there. She must have fallen out of the window."

"It's outrageous," said Marjorie, "the way women violate women's rights."

Mrs. Whitcomb saw an opportunity to insert a stiletto. She observed to Marjorie, with an innocent air: "Why, Mrs. Mallory, I've even known women to lock themselves in there and smoke!"

While Mrs. Wellington was rummaging her brain for a fitting retort, the door opened, and out stepped Miss Cattle, as was.

She blushed furiously at sight of the committee waiting to greet her, but they repented their criticisms and tried to make up for them by the excessive warmth with which they all exclaimed at once: "Good morning, Mrs. Lathrop!"

"Good morning, who?" said Anne, then blushed yet redder: "Oh, I can't seem to get used to that name! I hope I haven't kept you waiting?"

"Oh, not at all!" the women insisted, and Anne fled to number six, remembered that this was no longer her home, and moved on to number one. Here the porter was just finishing his restoring tasks, and laying aside with some diffidence two garments which Anne hastily stuffed into her own valise.

Meanwhile Marjorie was pushing Mrs. Wellington ahead:

"You go in first, Mrs. Wellington."

"You go first. I have no husband waiting for me," said Mrs. Wellington.

"Oh, I insist," said Marjorie.

"I couldn't think of it," persisted Mrs. Wellington. "I won't allow you."

And then Mrs. Whitcomb pushed them both aside: "Pardon me, won't you? I'm getting off at Reno."

"So am I," gasped Mrs. Wellington, rushing forward, only to be faced by the slam of the door and the click of the key. She whirled back to demand of Marjorie: "Did you ever hear of such impudence?"

"I never did."

"I'll never be ready for Reno," Mrs. Wellington wailed, "and I haven't had my breakfast."

"You'd better order it in advance," said Marjorie. "It takes that chef an hour to boil an egg three minutes."

"I will, if I can ever get my face washed," sighed Mrs. Wellington.

And now Mrs. Anne Lathrop, after much hesitation, called timidly, "Porter—porter—please!"

"Yes—miss—missus!" he amended.

"Will you call my—" she gulped—"my husband?"

"Yes, ma'am," the porter chuckled, and putting his grinning head in at the men's door, he bowed to Ira and said: "Excuse me, but you are sent for by the lady in number one."

Ashton slapped him on the back and roared: "Oh, you married man!"

"Well," said Ira, in self-defense, "I don't hear anybody sending for you." Wedgewood grinned at Ashton. "I rather fancy he had you theah, old top, eh, what?"

Ira appeared at number one, and bending over his treasure-trove, spoke in a voice that was pure saccharine: "Are you ready for breakfast, dear?"

"Yes, Ira."

"Come along to the dining-car."

"It's cosier here," she said. "Couldn't we have it served here?"

"But it'll get all cold, and I'm hungry," pouted the old bachelor, to whom breakfast was a sacred institution.

"All right, Ira," said Anne, glad to be meek; "come along," and she rose. Ira hesitated. "Still, if you'd rather, we'll eat here." He sat down.

"Oh, not at all," said Anne; "we'll go where you want to go."

"But I want to do what you want to do."

"So do I—we'll go," said Anne.

"We'll stay."

"No, I insist on the dining-car."

"Oh, all right, have your own way," said Ira, as if he were being bullied, and liked it. Anne smiled at the contrariness of men, and Ira smiled at the contrariness of women, and when they reached the vestibule they kissed each other in mutual forgiveness.

As Wedgewood stropped an old-fashioned razor, he said to Ashton, who was putting up his safety equipment: "I say, old party, are those safety rasors safe? Can't you really cut yourself?"

"Cut everything but hair," said Ashton, pointing to his wounded chin.

Mallory put out his hand: "Would you be kind enough to lend me your razor again this morning?"

"Sure thing," said Ashton. "You'll find your blade in the box there."

Mallory then negotiated the loan of one more fresh shirt from the Englishman, and a clean collar from Ashton. He rejoiced that the end of the day would bring him in touch with his own baggage. Four days of foraging on the country was enough for this soldier.

Also he felt, now that he and Marjorie had lived thus long, they could survive somehow till evening brought them to San Francisco, where there were hundreds of ministers. And then the conductor must ruin his early morning optimism, though he made his appearance in the washroom with genial good mornings for all.

Mallory acknowledged the greeting, and asked offhandedly: "By the way, how's she running?"

The conductor answered even more offhandedly: "About two hours late—and losin'."

Mallory was transfixed with a new fear: "Good Lord, my transport sails at sunrise."

"Oh, we ought to make 'Frisco by midnight, anyway."

"Midnight, and sail at daylight!"

"Unless we lose a little more time."

Mallory realized that every new day managed to create its own anxieties. With the regularity of a milkman, each morning left a fresh crisis on his doorstep.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Complete Divorcer.

The other passengers were growing nervous with their own troubles. The next stop was Reno, and in spite of all the wit that is heaped upon the town, it is a solemn place to those who must go there in purgatorial penance for matrimonial error.

Some honest souls regard such divorce-emporiums as dens of evil, where the wicked make a mockery of the sacrament and assail the foundations of society, by undermining the home. Other equally honest souls, believing that marriage is a human institution whose mishaps and mistakes should be rectified as far as possible, regard the divorce courts as cities of refuge for ill-treated or ill-mated women and men whose lives may be saved from utter ruination by the intervention of high-minded judges.

But, whichever view is right, the ordeal by divorce is terrifying enough to the poor sinners or martyrs who must undergo it.

Little Jimmie Wellington turned pale, and stammered, as he tried to ask the conductor casually:

"What kind of a place is that Reno?"

The conductor, somewhat cynical from close association with the divorce-mill and its grist, grinned: "That depends on what you're leaving behind. Most folks seem to get enough of it in about six months."

Then he went his way, leaving Wellington red, agape and perplexed. The trouble with Wellington was that he had brought along what he was leaving behind. Or, as Ashton impudently observed: "You ought to enjoy your residence there, Wellington, with your wife on hand."

The only repartee that Wellington could think of was a rather uninspired: "You go to —"

"So long as it isn't Reno," Ashton laughed, and walked away.

Wedgewood laid a sympathetic hand on Little Jimmie's shoulder, and said: "That Ashton is no end of a bounder, what?"

Wellington wrote his epitaph in these words:

"Well, the worst I can say of him is, he's the kind of man that doesn't lift the plug out when he's through with the basin."

Quaint Lancashire Customs.

Concerning church bells Mr. Frank Hird, in a remarkable serial publication which he is editing, called "Lancashire Stories" (Jacks), tells of the quaint customs which are still observed in some of the parishes in the County Palatine.

Before the Reformation the great bell of the parish church was rung on Shrove Tuesday to call the people together for the confession of their sins, or to be "shriven"; hence the name of the day. "This bell," says Mr. Hird, "is still rung in some parts of Lancashire, and is still called the 'Pancake Bell,' being now regarded only as a signal to the people to begin frying their pancakes.

"In some villages a bell is rung as the congregation is leaving the church after the morning service. This is known as the 'Pudding Bell,' it having been firmly believed for many generations that it is rung to warn those at home to get the dinner ready. The origin of the ringing of his bell is not known, but, like many other old customs, it still lingers in the remoter parts of the country, announcing to the village that the service is over and that 'pudding time has come'."

ENGLISH SYSTEM BEST.

Officers Blame German Training For Turkish Reverses.

The collapse of the Turkish army has naturally resulted in a great deal of comment and speculation as to the causes of its extraordinary failure. There are many divergent opinions, but the view that the Turkish defeats indicate, at least to some extent, that German military training has been over-estimated is general.

Major-Gen. Sir Alfred Turner said: "In the Russo-Turkish war of 1878-79 the Turks fought magnificently. Their army was then trained under the English system. To-day the Turkish army has been many years' training under German methods—a system which undoubtedly makes highly efficient, capable soldiers.

"But their attitude in the present Balkan war is unaccountable—amazing. The long list of their defeats is extraordinary. The men seem to have no enthusiasm, no fighting spirit, no esprit de corps. What is the matter with the Turkish army? We all know that the Turkish soldier is one of the best fighting men in the world—he has proved himself to be that.

"I think the trouble lies with the officer, not with the man. He is probably the worst officer in Europe. And in the present compaign the officers seem to have entered into the war half-heartedly and entirely without enthusiasm. Is the system of training wrong? Trained under German army methods, there can be no doubt that the men are well-disciplined, but however capable an army, it can do nothing unless the men show spirit and confidence in themselves."

Another well-known English officer said:

"The German army is a parade army — it is a solid, well-disciplined machine, but it never takes into account the feelings or spirit of the men who make it. Under German training the live, plucky, fighting Turk has lost his old courage and enthusiasm. Machine-like methods have left him spiritless and discouraged. The continued reverses of the Turks seem to show that at least with them, the German army training, is a signal failure in actual warfare."

A well-known retired officer said: "As a nation we have always had a pet bogey—the vision of some mighty foreign power coming to our shores and annihilating us and our families."

A century ago people shuddered at the name of Bonaparte; he was expected in England daily, but he never came. Later the Russian bogey appeared. This spectre was even more mysterious and forbidding; the Russian was represented to be a man good enough for two of any other nations, but the terror of him soon died.

"More recently the Chinese bogey loomed up on the horizon — people spoke under their breath of the 'Yellow Peril.' Yet the Chinese military power vanished before the Japanese, whom we had never heard of as soldiers. For a time there was no national bogey. It seems, however, that Britons simply must have somebody to be frightened at, so the Germans became the fashionable spectre."

The Value of a Name.

The celebration of Trafalgar Day recalled the fact that though there is no direct descendant of the naval hero living, a bearer of the historic name in the person of Lord Nelson is still in Great Britain. His lordship is in his ninetieth year, but, all things considered, he is remarkably hale and active.

Lord Nelson is the Father of the House of Lords, and has held a seat in the Upper Chamber for 67 years. Moreover, he has enjoyed a pension of $25,000 a year for 77 years, despite the fact that he is only a distant descendant of Horatio Nelson. To the individual who airily inquires, "What's in a name?" Lord Nelson could reply, "A handsome pension and a striking residence." He came into this handsome heritage in the following manner: After the death of the great admiral the earldom was conferred on his brother, who had no son, and so there was a special remainder to his two sisters' heirs. The peerage in due course passed to the son of one of these sisters, Susannah Bolton, who adopted the name of Nelson. The present earl is this man's son, and is consequently only a grand-nephew of the great Horatio Nelson.

Smoking In Church.

The notice put up by the vicar of Lancaster (Eng.) forbidding visitors to smoke in the church reminds a contemporary that one or two centuries ago smoking in church was the practice. Wooden spittoons filled with sawdust were placed about the church for the smokers, and they sometimes left their long clays, or "churchwardens," in the care of the verger until the next Sunday came round.

It is told of the incumbent of a Warwickshire church that he used to smoke regularly in the vestry while the congregation were singing the hymn before the sermon. He made a point of selecting a long hymn to give himself time to get through his pipe. "My people," he said, "like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."

HE IS A POET IN HIS OLD AGE

A remarkable old man is Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, the poet, novelist, and critic. He was the lifelong friend and confidante of Swinburne, on the most intimate terms with George Meredith, and for fifty years or so he has been in the centre of literary activity in this country.

Yet his mind still retains its keenness in spite of the fact that he has just celebrated his eightieth birthday. When congratulated on the event he declared: "I hardly know what it is to feel aged yet. I get up at the same hour in the morning that I have done all my life—soon after six, which, I believe, is often somewhat early for the household. And I go to bed at the same time—between ten and eleven—and work as much as I ever did. Then I still go out walking daily on Putney Heath and do my mile and a half, but I don't mind admitting that I now usually return by way of taxi or, if I feel democratic, by motor-'bus.

Great Britain.

The island of Great Britain—so called to distinguish it from Britain Minor or Little Britain, in France—is the largest island in Europe. Its greatest length is 608 miles and its greatest breadth 320 miles. It embraces England, Scotland and Wales. No other country in the world has such great mineral wealth in so small an area.

A Six o'Clock Club.

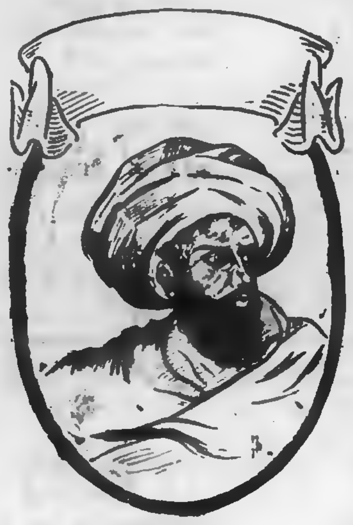
EX-SULTAN OF MORROCCO HAD A McCARTHY FOR ANCESTOR

Ruler Whose Abdication Has Been Forced by France Can Point With Pride to a Certain Mrs. McCarthy Who Occupied a Place In His Grandfather's Harem—Mulai Has a Handsome Income and Is a Poet.

Tired of being Sultan, Mulai Hafid, of Morocco, recently abdicated his throne in favor of his brother and is now enjoying the languorous life of the Oriental pleasure lover. He quit his job in characteristic style. "Let my brother, Mulai Yussef," he wrote, "take my place. I am tired of the burdens of state. I long only for the days of my youth, when I was a free nomad of the plains and loved a maiden of my tribe. I never won her; but her memory has always been in my heart. Perhaps, if I can escape these anxieties and trials, which go with the high place I occupy, I may find again that simple happiness, again find some maiden by whose side I can compose the verses I love to make, and be at peace."



MULAI HAFID.

With which the potent Mulai quit his job; accepted some $75,000 a year from France; made a trip to the land that paid his pension, looked the ladies over and approved them; took a steamboat load of his wives out for an airing before they returned to the permanent immurement of the harem, and has since been delicately turning off a poem or two, to show that Omar Khayyam, with damsel, jug of wine and bough, hasn't anything on him.

A contradiction in humanity, a career presenting the most amazing contrasts, a nature in which are twinned the gentlest attributes and the most pitiless cruelties—no one has yet undertaken to solve the mystery of this surprising abdication and its poetically given reason, beyond quoting the curious philosophy of the Orient and its precedents for hermit life when greatness palls.

But the true key to all that has proved energetic, ambitious, enterprising and disturbing is to be sought back in Mulai Hafid's ancestry.

He is an Irishman. To be sure, he is only Irish; but the red-haired rumpus raisers of India, whom Kipling noted, all harked back to the lost soldier of the fighting breed. The same qualities which Mulai Hafid has displayed characterized his brother, Abd-el-Aziz, whom he rebelled against and deposed early in 1908.

Years ago, when Morocco's Sultans were real rulers and their realm a real empire, a certain Mrs. Denis McCarthy, wife of Sergt. McCarthy, of the 88th Foot—otherwise known, and as much feared as respected, under the name of the Connaught Rangers—found herself at Gibraltar and in love with an officer. She ran away and finally found herself in Tangier, where her beauty stirred Moslem admiration until she became one of the harem of the Sultan at Fez. It was her son, Mulai Hassan, who succeeded to the throne; and his son, Abd-el-Aziz, succeeded him eighteen years ago.

Abd-el-Aziz, whose policy should have been wholly reactionary to suit the tastes of his Mohammedan subjects, took to European pleasures and influences like a duck to water. Carefully exiled among some oases far away, his brother, Mulai Hafid, was tending flocks, writing verses and falling in love with the daughter of the tribesman he says he can never forget. He was also sizzling a bit in the early effervescence of his infusion of Irish blood.

Ten years elapsed. The cork of authority blew out with a bang. Mulai Hafid, under the title of the Sultan of the south, and professing pious allegiance to the Koran, whose teachings his brother shamed, was acclaimed the young champion of the prophet. Abd-el-Aziz, his prestige ruined by the passion his tinge of northern blood had instilled for civilized pleasures his initiative unequal to the struggle, was soon flying to the French for safety. Mulai, with a crafty diplomacy equal to his daring, let the Sultanate come to him as the free gift of the people, taking good care that an upstart rival, El Reghi, didn't take it unsolicited.

But alas for good Mohammedan resolutions and genuine royal Moroccan blood! Soon the energy which had inspired him to the war turned him to European tastes, to the taking of but one wife, to all he had condemned in his deposed brother. Morocco, after a while, began to manifest those external disturbances, such as the slaughter of European officials, which are the Moslem symptoms of piety and virtue; and Mulai, enervated by ease and a speedy return to his harem, found his good old Irish fighting blood swamped by the African corpuscles of indifference and sloth.

COUNTY NOVELISTS.

England Is Well Equipped With Authors Who Employ Local Color.

The most famous of present-day county novelists is undoubtedly Thos. Hardy, who wrote his first novel with Dorsetshire folk, speech, manners and places as its sole subject matter, and who has been absolutely true to his first love ever since. Other novelists may range the earth—and even the moon and Mars—for subjects, but Hardy sticks to Dorset.

Another famous living novelist has kept almost as exclusively to the Black Country. One might be pardoned for doubting whether this uninviting tract of South Staffordshire would lend itself kindly to the novelist's uses, but Arnold Bennett has found it an amply sufficient area from which to draw character and incident, and to make a reputation of a very high order.

Eden Phillpotts' county in Devonshire, and the particular tract of that county of junkets and cream which he specially uses as the stage of his stories is the wild upland of Dartmoor. He has succeeded in making this tableland as famous as an earlier novelist made Exmoor with his immortal "Lorna Doone."

George Eliot was quite a local novelist so far as her plots and places were concerned, although she is universal in her fame. Only one of her books—"Romola"—strays far from Griff House, an old red-brick homestead on the road between Coventry and Nuneaton, where she spent the first twenty-one years of her life. The places she knew live again in her great books, and her native county of Warwick supplies all her local color.

Mrs. Gaskell was almost entirely true to the county of Cheshire, and her most famous book, "Cranford," is a series of pictures of the very streets and houses and people of the quaint old town of Knutsford.

The dales of Yorkshire, with the Swale and Wharfe and Nidd, are certainly ideal places for a summer holiday, although they are bleak and terrible enough in the depth of winter. Halliwell Sutcliffe, however, makes them his "happy hunting-ground" all the year round. His home is near the historic abode of the Brontes at Haworth, and he knows his native moors and loves them, and puts them and their sturdy inhabitants into all his novels.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—The foreign demand for wheat was quieter and cables were easier, at a decline of ¼d per quarter. There continues to be a fair enquiry for Manitoba barley, but owing to the sharp advance in prices of fully 5c per bushel in Winnipeg, on account of the increased demand, exporters could not work any further business. WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

London Papers Have Big Corps at Scene of War.

London newspapers have been spending hundreds of thousands of pounds in securing the latest war news. Never have such elaborate arrangements been made by the world's press. The Daily Mirror, for instance, has nine special photographic correspondents at the front.

The Daily Mail has sent out seven special correspondents, The Daily Express five, The Daily Telegraph six, and The Daily Chronicle four. Most of the British provincial papers have, in order to save expense, arranged with these London dailies for the duplication of war telegrams.

The doyen of war correspondents is Mr. Bennet Burleigh, who again represents The Daily Telegraph. His career dates back to the American Civil War, when he fought on the Confederate side, and from the 'seventies onward he has never missed a really big campaign for The Telegraph. At El-Teb he helped wounded Dervishes at the risk of his own life. In the Chino-Japanese and Russo-Japanese wars he witnessed the horrors of Port Arthur, and his account of the big conflict of the latter campaign was a wonderful piece of work.

Perhaps the most interesting of war correspondents in the Balkans is Miss Mary Edith Durham, representing The Daily Chronicle at the Montenegrin headquarters at Podgoritza, near the frontier, who is likely to become famous as one of the first women war correspondents to be accredited to a great newspaper. Miss Durham, who has lived in Montenegro for some time, has written several books on the problems of the Near East, and has a greater knowledge of Montenegrin affairs than any other woman outside the Black Mountain state.

Probably the most enterprising war correspondent of to-day is Mr. M. H. Donohoe, who also represents The Daily Chronicle in the present campaign. Mr. Donohoe first represented that paper in South Africa, and afterwards in the Russo-Japanese war. In recent years Mr. Donohoe has contrived to be present at the only fighting which has taken place in Europe—at Constantinople in 1909, when the Young Turks captured the city; and at Lisbon two years ago, when the revolution took place, and he was able to send the first account of the street fighting and the escape of King Manoel.

A remarkable fact regarding the nine Daily Mirror photographic correspondents is that three of them, Messrs. Thomas E., Horace, and Bernard Grant, are brothers. The first-mentioned has been on the photographic staff of The Mirror for six years, and has traveled all over the world in quest of exclusive and special news photographs. His younger brothers, Horace and Bernard, have also seen much foreign service.

Desert Sounds.

The occurrence of mysterious detonations in various parts of the world has long puzzled investigators. No satisfactory solution of the problem has yet been found. The noises seem to be especially common in Australia, where they are known as "desert sounds," and in the delta of the Ganges, where they are called "Barisal guns." Dr. J. D. Cleland, of New South Wales, has summarized the various explanations of the phenomena. The theories that have found most favor attribute the sounds to surf-rollers, the falling-in of river banks, earthquakes, and to the sudden splitting of rocks intensely heated by the sun. The last explanation seems the most plausible in the case of the desert sounds of Australia, which occur at long distances from the sea.

Printing By Motor.

The African Standard was published at Nairobi in unusual circumstance. Owing to the breakdown of the electric supply, the printing machinery was stopped. The proprietors harnessed a motor-car to the printing press and ran off the edition at the expense of a considerable quantity of gasoline, the paper appearing at the usual time without a hitch.

Bateman Escapes Gallows.

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—At the Cabinet session Saturday it was decided to commute to life imprisonment the sentence of death against John Bateman, the octogenarian of Whitby, Ont., who was condemned to be hanged for the killing of his wife, whom he beat to death.

Bateman was to have been hanged Dec. 13, but owing to his advanced age and other extenuating circumstances, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, decided to commute the sentence to imprisonment.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

MR. W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario,
Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,

I am delighted with the result of my 20 year endowment policy, No. 36,715, in your Company, which matured and was paid on the 1st inst.

Being interested in this Policy I took particular pains to read all I could about Companies failing to come up to their estimates and the frequent claims of superiority of the No Profit Policies, and I wondered if I had not made a mistake in paying for a participating Policy, but when you pay me $482.20 of profits, I find I made no mistake, as I never at any time expected more than $500.

I noticed in the last issue of the "Saturday Night" a result where a man in some Company did not receive 3 % on the extra premium he paid for profits—it set me thinking—so I figured out what rate of interest I received on the extra I paid, and find I received almost 8½ % compound interest on the $9.30 I paid extra for a participating Policy—not bad, eh?

The profits on my Policy were distributed every five years, and I am assured that if they had been on the reserve plan I would have received considerably more.

However, I am well satisfied, and I want you to know it, and to thank your Company for it.

I know now, too, that I made no mistake when I took out that other Policy with you a few years ago.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ROBERT CHAMBERS.

BUYING AT HOME

The Review is heartily in accord with the appeal prepared by the Peterborough Ad Club and published in Saturday's papers, in regard to shopping at home. Inquiry among the expressmen reveals the fact it is alleged that the greatest out-of-town shoppers are the professional men and the upper ten. Comparatively little of the out-of-town shopping is done by the working classes. The committee which prepared this appeal is responsible for this statement:—"In printing alone we have learned there is enough business going out of town to give employment to at least one hundred additional printers in our city."

BERESFORD'S DICTUM

Lord Charles Beresford says that Britain has been fooled about the importance of Dreadnoughts, and that therefore he would recommend the Dominions to defend their end of the trade routes with strong naval bases, mines, torpedo boats, destroyers and light cruisers. The trade routes are unprotected, and now the danger is starvation, not invasion. But Lord Charles is an eminent enough authority on naval affairs to know that the protection of trade routes is not sufficient to keep up the British food supply if the fleets of the enemy are able to win the mastery of the seas. In such a case the whole fabric of naval defence fails, and Britain would be called upon to suffer invasion as well as starvation. The first essential is to put a naval force in such strength in home waters that no German or other European naval force could hope to compete successfully with it. Then there will be no war, and the trade routes will be kept open. To make the British navy supreme and keep it so at the heart of the Empire is just now the main requirement for protection of the outlying parts of the Empire. It will be possible for the local units to attend to small police work without much trouble.

THE NAVAL CRITICISMS

As was to be expected, the announcement of the Borden naval policy leaves the Liberal newspapers filled with spleen and cantankerousness. The Globe says that Canada's gift to Britain of the three largest Dreadnoughts in the world is merely the rendering of tribute, and does not place Canada in the position of an Imperial partner. It says that Canada merely does to the burden of the British taxpayer by contributing these ships because they will be maintained by the Admiralty in common with the rest of the Imperial navy.

The Calgary Albertan says that the $35,000,000 or the three Dreadnoughts are not needed, the money will be passed without sanction, mandate or authority of the people in order to satisfy the jingoes and greedy manufacturers.

The Halifax Chronicle says that the policy is a return to the days of decadent Rome which hired her soldiers to fight for her. Canada hires Englishmen to do what they ought to do themselves. The policy a poor and thoroughly humiliating substitute for a thoroughly Canadian policy. The sending of a check to Britain is no naval policy.

These are the variations rung upon the tune. The vindictiveness of the Liberal Opposition on the naval matter is most certainly surprising. One would imagine that they were entirely out of sympathy with the Canadian effort to take a part in Imperial defence sharing the burdens of Empire in a way that would most effectively increase the defense forces of the Empire. The chief ground for criticism that will be held by the Liberals will be that Canada contributes the Dreadnoughts, but it will not maintain them. The cry about burdening the already over-burdened British taxpayer who has spent millions upon millions in defence of Imperial possessions will be worked to the utmost. But what is there in it? As many of the English newspapers irrespective of party point out, the effect of such a liberal contribution by Canada to imperial defence will not only be in financial relief important though that might be, but in the moral effect. The Canadian action is the notification of this country to the world that Canada esteems itself essentially a part of the British Empire, that foreign aggressors must fight not only the people of two small islands, but the growing nations over the seas. The impetus given to the idea of Imperial unity by the action of New Zealand Australia and Canada in contributing to the naval strength of Britain is worth much as a moral force. Canada becomes not a dependency, not a protected nation, but a partner and a protecting nation. The money can be spared by this country without trouble, and though we have not yet formulated a permanent naval policy, when we come to do so there will be no standing back. But the Liberal hostility is, as we said before, quite surprising. Why the bitterness, the acidity, the querulousness, of their attitude? They believe in a Canadian navy, it is true, but to assert that Canada is not helping Britain, but burdening the Motherland by this aid is refuted by the utterances of the Liberal newspapers in the Old Country. Perhaps, after the Globe and some of the others think over the action of Frank Oliver in refusing to stand up and join in singing "God Save the King" when every other member of the House did so, they may begin to see some political light. From a Conservative standpoint, it would be better for them to keep on in their present carping anti-Imperial attitude.

A HYDRO SUCCESS

The Hydro Electric Power Commission has reduced the price of power to all the municipalities in the system, the charge being lessened in the aggregate about $120,000. The cost of power to Toronto is reduced from $18.50 to $15 a horse power, as compared with an estimated rate of $16.50. The Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission will therefore, be saved about $50,000 a year on its contract. The price of power to London is reduced from $28 to $24, a saving of from $12,00 to $15,000. The price in Guelph is reduced from $25 to $22, in Stratford from $32 to $30, Hamilton from $17.90 to $16, Waterloo from $26 to $23.50 and so on. A comparison of most of these prices shows that the price quoted by the Commission to Peterborough for the small supply that can be taken by this city is very low. For 24 hour power the quotation is $17.55 for 200 horse-power, and $15.95 for 275 horse-power, with 15 per cent over load. For $500 horse power connected load the price ranges down as low as $12.55.

The lowering of the Hydro-Electric charges in the Western cities of the system, is ample proof that the Commission is performing its duty as a trustee for the combined municipalities in the control of the central distributing system, with the utmost efficiency. The credit of the Commission stands high with the municipalities that have had long business dealings with it. There is no reason to think that Peterborough would receive any different treatment, and inasmuch as in submitting the $120,000 by-law the city Council is acting in consonance with the advice of Hon. Adam Beck there is little reason for doubting that the ultimate end of the scheme is quite clear to him and those associated with him. There may be many details that cannot be made public for reasons of policy, but if there are any of these, it is well assured that they are being withheld for a purpose.

WHY GOVERNMENT WAS IMPRESSED

Ottawa Dec. 9.—The Trent Valley Canal project has undoubtedly received a help from the influential and earnest character of the recent deputation to Ottawa. Governments are especially anxious to do the will of the people and this one is not likely to wish to be an exception. It is understood from those who are in the right quarter to find out that the Government is impressed with the necessity of having this project finished with all possible speed. The absence of friction in the northern or unopened part of the country, was the most gratifying fact connected with the visit of the recent deputation from Midland, Orillia, Peterborough, etc.

Daily Christmas Hint

Something a Young Man May Give His Fiancee

The up to date young woman cares nothing about pockets nowadays. In fact they spoil the lines of a narrow straight skirt in a tailored costume. Consequently almost any girl would appreciate a gift in which she might store her vanity trifles.

VANITY SETS.

Such gifts are illustrated, one being an umbrella in the top of which is fitted powder and a chamois face cloth.

Another cut shows a corsage bouquet in which is hidden a complete vanity set.

Perhaps the reason some women hold their husbands' intellects in such evident contempt is because they can't help questioning the intelligence of any man foolish enough to marry them.

ABOUT THE LAST REDUCTION IN HYDRO-ELECTRIC RATES

From the Hamilton Herald: With monotonous regularity the Hydro-Electric enterprise is justifying the predictions made in its behalf. How well do many of us remember the positive declarations of ex-Mayor McLaren that Hamilton would have to pay $25 per h.p. for its power at the very least; Controller John Allan's ridicule of the claim that the Hydro power would cost no more than the rate at which the Cataract company offered to supply the city; the gloomy fears expressed by prominent business men at the board of trade meeting and the mass meeting in the Temple theatre last year. The enterprise would not bear examination, it was said. It was not operated on business principles. It could not be made to pay. It was sure to prove a failure. The promise of reduced rates was illusory. The rates which the municipalities would have to pay would be ruinous. And much more to the same effect.

But the "hydro" has had a cheerful way of falsifying the predictions of its enemies. The original rates have already been reduced. Now Hon Adam Beck announces another substantial reduction consequent upon the increase in the quantity of power used by the co-operating municipalities.

The Hamilton rate drops from $16.50 to $16. Toronto's rate has fallen to $15, the lowest rate paid. Toronto gets the advantage of the low rate by reason of the large power load which that city carries, more than half the total quantity consumed. Before the end of the year it is expected that 20,000 h.p. will be delivered to Toronto. Next year however, in all probability Hamilton's rate will be less than Toronto's, for the prospect is that this city's power load will be more than doubled next, and the increase in the load will cause a substantial lowering of the rate.

Although the construction of the city's electric distributnig system is hardly more than begun, we are paying no more for power than the local company offered to charge as a generous concession to the city, and in a few months we shall be paying considerably less. And we shall be able to use the power for any purpose—not merely for public purposes. And in paying for it we shall be paying the purchase price of a proprietary interest in the whole transmission system. It is good business.

DR. SHIRREFF HAS RESIGNED

Ottawa's City Solicitor Must Make Public Apology

Ottawa, Dec. 9—As a result of the recent judicial investigation into the conduct of the Health and Water Works Department, the Board of Control has accepted the resignation of City Engineer Ker, for 15 years past a trusted employe, and Dr. W. T. Shireff, the medical officer of health, was asked to hand in his resignation.

The City Solicitor, Taylor McVeity, who conducted the probe, and during its cause made verbal charges against Mayor Hopewell with regard to real estate transactions, which he did not substantiate, was ordered by the board to make a full public apology to the Mayor, or his resignation will be asked for.

SERVICES TO BE CONTINUED

All This Week at Park Street Church

Three interesting services were held yesterday at Park Street Baptist church and many were led to accept Christ and start the heavenly life on earth.

The singing was bright and brotherly, and the spiritual atmosphere is growing.

All who wish to hear these eminent evangelists will have to avail themselves of the privilege some evning this week, or next Sunday, as they find they cannot stay any longer than next Sunday.

The large audience was thrilled last night as Mr. Taylor, in graphic language, spoke on "How to Catch a Grafter; are there any in Peterborough," using the parable of the Pharasee and the Publican for his material.

Special services all this week, also special subjects.

WILL GO 'OME FOR CHRISTMAS

There are many sons and daughters of Merrie England, now in Peterborough, who will eat their Christmas dinner with their families and friends across "the pond."

Many inquiries are made at the local railway ticket offices, regarding dates of steamship sailings and fares. A report from Montreal says that this season's number of people returning to Great Britain for the Christmas season, is the largest ever registered in the railroad and steamship business of Montreal.

TIE PIN FROM BROTHERHOOD

Mr. Hardy Will be Missed at Charlotte St.

Mr. C. F. Hardy, advertising manager of the Canadian Horticulturist, left last night for Montreal, where he will be connected with the advertising department of the Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Mr. Hardy was President of the Men's Brotherhood of Charlotte street Methodist church, and yesterday afternoon he was presented with a pearl tie pin.

Mr. D. D. C. Dawe, vice-president of the Brotherhood, made the presentation, and Rev. T. J. Mansell, the pastor, referred to the loss which the Brotherhood would sustain by Mr. Hardy's departure.

Mr. Hardy suitably replied, thanking the Brotherhood for their kind remarks, and wishing the class every success in the future.

CONSIDER THE POOR POSTMEN

Here are Some Dont's for Christmas Season

While Peterborough people are as a whole looking forward to the holidays with eager anticipation, there is one body of men to whom Christmas is not a season of unmixed joy. They are the post office clerks and mail carriers, who certainly have reason to dread the time when Christmas mails begin. Have you ever considered what it means to the postman to carry about his huge pack of letters, packages, and bundles of every size and description? Or thought about the extra work and rush entailed in the post office during the next two or three weeks to handle the tremendous volume of mail matter that comes and goes?

A little time and thought on the part of all of us might help to lighten the labor of the post office employes to quite an extent. Clip out the following "don'ts" and paste them on your writing desk in such a conspicuous place that you cannot fail to see them when preparing your Christmas mail:

Don't wait until the last minute to mail your gifts. They may not be delivered until several days after Christmas.

Don't forget that the mailman is not a pack horse.

Don't open a package left at your house by mistake. Return it to the postman when he calls the next time.

Don't forget to write name and address of sender on every package.

Don't forget to write names and addresses as legibly as possible. It facilitates distribution and delivery.

Don't grumble at the postman if he is a little late, or if he makes a slight blunder. Perhaps if you had distributed letters and parcels until your head swam, and your legs ached right down into your toes, you wouldn't do any better.

DEALT WITH LOCAL OPTION

Rev. Dr. McTavish Spoke in Two Presbyterian Churches

Rev. Dr. McTavish, of the Dominion Alliance, dealt with the Local Option question in St. Andrew's and Knox church yesterday.

He took up the question generally, his chief argument in favor of the measure being that the temperance forces had not lost a repeal contest in the last two years. He ventured to say that if local option carried in Peterborough no more liquor would be sold illegally than is at present sold illegally under license.

ANNUAL MEETING Wm. HAMILTON CO.

A largely attended meeting of the shareholders of the Wm. Hamilton Company, Limited, was held at their office in this city on Saturday afternoon, 7th inst., at three o'clock.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. G. Gladman, President, who read an address reviewing the business of the Company for the past year and setting forth its present condition and future prospects.

The Company has now a large number of contracts on hand and unusually large number in prospect and more men are being employed every week.

A very pleasing feature of the meeting was an offer made by one of the shareholders to grant the company a loan of twenty-five thousand dollars, ($25,000)on the security of the real estate and buildings and plant, the money to be applied in paying off the balance of the purchase price still due to the vendor. The offer was at once accepted and on motion of Mr. J. C. Smith, a hearty vote of thanks was presented to the shareholder for his splendid offer.

The following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year—Geo. G. Gladman, J. C. Smith L. A. Potvin, C. R. Cameron and G. R. Munro.

HUGH THOMPSON DIES AT ORILLIA

Well Known Lumberman Succumbs to Pneumonia

Orillia, Dec. 9.—Hugh C. Thompson, a well known lumberman, died at his home here Saturday after two days' illness of pneumonia. Mr. Thompson spent his early years in Belleville and fourteen years ago moved to Orillia. For a number of years he was with the Grand Trunk Railway and afterwards with McCormick & McLeod of Bracebridge and Playfair & White of Midland. Mr. Thompson was sixty-four years of age, and leaves his wife and two sons.

The late Mr. Thompson some years ago lived at the corner of King and Stewart streets and held the position of head tie inspector of the G. T. R., during which time he made many friends, who are still in the city and will learn of his death with deep regret.

The remains passed through the city this morning en route to Belleville for interment.

MUSICALE WAS GREATLY ENJOYED

Good Program Provided by Women's Art Association

Under the W.A.A. auspices another charming "Twilight Musicale" was given in the Conservatory Music Hall at four o'clock Saturday afternoon. The attendance was unusually large and very appreciative. The "Twilights" are becoming more and more popular, and the meritorious programs that are arranged are in a class by themselves.

The Conservatory Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. R. Gliddon, contributed the ever popular and descriptive "War March from the Priests," and "The Beautiful Blue Danube." Selections from Robin Hood were also played in a spirited and pleasing manner.

In a reading entitled, "Kentucky Philosophy," Miss Katie Leary, the talented young performer, was very warmly applauded, and gave an encore.

Master Paul Gliddon gave a clever performance on the cornet, and received a goodly share of applause.

Mrs. Perks was also heard to advantage in a vocal number, "The Scent of the Flowers."

The Madrigal Quartette, consisting of Messrs. Vernon Morphet, W. A. Greenslade, Mrs. George Perks and David Fleming, pleased all by a couple of contributions rendered in most acceptable style, the voices blending perfectly.

Mr. Harold Cluxton presided.

A VETERAN SCHOLAR

DR. JOHN READE, F.R.C.S., CELEBRATES 75TH BIRTHDAY.

Poet, Critic, Journalist, Folklorist, Ethnologist, Historian and Philosopher, Who Is Known More Widely Abroad Than In Canada, Occupies a Significant Place In National Life and Letters.

A significant date in the literary history of Canada was Nov. 13, 1912. For on that day the press of Canada, the poets, literary critics, and the chief historical and literary societies of the English-speaking world remembered, one way or another, the seventy-fifth birthday of the grand old man of Canadian letters, John Reade, F.R.S.C., poet, critic, journalist, folklorist, ethnologist, philologist, historian, and philosopher. The date, in short, will be the first genuine occasion for signalizing the nativity of a Canadian man-of-letters, who is—, alas, that it should be so—much more known, and more highly honored, in the United States, Great Britain, and continental Europe than he is in his homeland.

Dr. John Reade's qualities combine those of the late Louis Frechette and the late Sir J. M. LeMoine, says Dr. J. D. Logan in Toronto Globe. But the Montreal litterateur and folklorist is a much more human and exquisite poet than was Frechette, and a far more scholarly student of history and society than was LeMoine; while, for encyclopaedic knowledge, philosophical thought, and sustained literary style—almost faultless in diction and structure—Dr. Reade stands alone in Canada, and he had few superiors in Great Britain or the United States in the last half of the nineteenth century. Further, though the late Louis Frechette surpassed Dr. Reade in gifts for the writing of fiction and drama, and though Frechette was highly honored in France for these gifts, and, had he lived, would have had his seventy-fifth birthday duly celebrated in his Canadian homeland, Frechette's poetry and general literary work had neither the finesse in style nor the reach in thought which belong to Dr. Reade's verse and literary prose. Besides, Frechette was born in 1839, two years later than Dr. Reade, and thus, had he lived, Frechette would not have had the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birthday celebrated till 1914.

As to the late Sir James M. LeMoine, while he was a most assiduous student of ethnology and Canadian folklore, and possessed wide knowledge in these matters, he had neither the fine classical scholarship nor the poetic and philosophical acumen which Dr. Reade possesses. Moreover, LeMoine was born in 1825, fourteen years before Dr. Reade and forty-two years before Confederation, and so may justly be said to have belonged to a generation and epoch which did not have the modern Canadian, or National, point of view.

Dr. Reade always had this point of view, and expressed it in his poetry and in all his writings, especially in his criticism, his researches into Canadian folklore, and abundantly in his editorials which appeared in The Montreal Gazette, of which he has been for forty-two years the literary and assistant general managing editor.

So that from every point of view Dr. Reade's seventy-fifth birthday, Nov. 13, 1912, had a right to be honored by all loyal Anglo-Celtic Canadians; and the celebration of it will be the first significant event of the kind in the literary annals of the Dominion.

It remains to summarize the claims which Dr. Reade has on Canadians for their remembrance of the anniversary of his nativity. Though born in Ireland, he has lived and wrought in Canada for fifty-six years, and his sentiment and outlook has always been that of an ardent patriot of his adopted land — a genuine Canadian and Imperialist of the broad-minded kind.

Dr. Reade began his literary and journalistic career at Montreal in 1856. He is the dean of Canadian journalists, and was a leader in raising journalism in Canada to the dignity of a profession. Again, he is the greatest and most distinguished of Canadian folklorists and ethnologists, and on that account has been signally honored with memberships in the chief historical and literary societies of Great Britain and the United States. Further, Dr. Reade is the most erudite, subtlest, and yet the most kindly and helpful, of Canadian literary critics. Finally, Dr. Reade stands alone, in a niche by itself, in the little temple of Canadian poetry.

Dr. Reade's verses have been pronounced by one critic as "the sweetest book of fugitive poems which has appeared from the Canadian press."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor,— The Examiner prints the report of the County Council that because of divided jurisdiction the late Government agreed to take over the Buckhorn bridge. This matter is now before the courts and should not be discussed. I suppose, but I do not think there is any harm in saying that that is the easiest way of getting out of a bargain I ever heard of. Well, it all depends on Hon. George Graham. If he says the county is right, it will win and we will all be glad. But so far he has denied it.

Yours truly,
"WOW! WOW!"

Queen's Students' Frolic.

Kingston, Dec. 9.—Queen's students held their annual rush after the Alma Mater Society elections Saturday night and made things lively around the city. They visited five cent theatres, rushed several restaurants and made a call on the fair co-eds, at ladies residence.

Mayor Hoag, who was at King Edward Theatre and addressed the students, was picked up and put on the shoulders of two husky fellows and carried through the main streets to his drug store, the boys singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Beyond the breaking of a few panes of glass, there was no damage and everyone took the fun good naturedly.

Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Paris, Dec. 9.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Hon. A. L. Sifton was among the principal guests at the British Chamber of Commerce banquet here Saturday night.

President Bodington said nobody appreciated more than the British ambassador the increasingly important role which the chamber maintained, not merely in relation to the United Kingdom, but of all dominions, whether in conjunction with Hon. Phillippe Roy, Canadian commissioner in Paris, or other overseas representatives.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

WORK ON THE G. T. PACIFIC

The Hudson Bay Company's post at Fort George, British Columbia, are laying their plans and making arrangements to have their next season supplies come in by way of Edmonton and Tete Jaune Cache, over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This arrangement marks a new feature in transportation over that country, as heretofore all freight had to be drawn in by waggon over the old caribou road for a distance of 167 miles, and thence by steamer for another 150 miles.

Every day brings us nearer to the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This is emphasized by the fact that passengers can now leave Edmonton at 10.00 p.m. in Pullman Sleeping Car, arriving at Fitzhugh, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, Alberta, at 9.20 the next morning, and Tete Jaune Cache on the Fraser River, in British Columbia at 2.00 o'clock the next afternoon, 16 hours to do the journey. This is remarkable when it is considered that two years ago last summer, an exploration party in charge of Mr. H. R. Charlton, General Advertising Agent of the Company, penetrated the forests and followed the trails through the Yellowhead Pass, which trip occupied 37 days of continuous travel by pack train between Edson and Tete Jaune Cache.

Pour boiling starch over ink or iodine spots and they will come out in two or three hours.

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

PLAYERS AGAINST SENIOR SERIES

An explanation is given for the non-attendance of senior hockey players at the training classes, now being held at the Lyceum.

Several of the players of last season's intermediate team have made the statement that they are not in favor of playing in the senior series and would prefer that the Hockey Club, pack the senior idea in a trunk and throw away the key.

This is a rather tame excuse. No matter what series is to be played, the boys should turn out to training. One series may be as hard as the other.

FORBES WAS TOO GOOD FOR THOMAS AND WON EASILY

Exit Tommie Thomas, erstwhile wrestling champion of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

Hail to the victor, one Jack Forbes, from Bonnie Scotia, with the welterweight championship laurels.

The attendance at the roller rink, Saturday near midnight to witness the wrestling match was less than one hundred. The audience included one lady, but there was no demonstration. It wasn't quite the same crowd as watched Fritz Mohl, Young Hackenschmidt and other celebrities hug and grow rich, but there was just as much fun.

With Gene Hurtubise on the watch for rough stuff, the two embraced a few minutes short of the respectable side of 11 p.m., and four minutes later Tommie's shoulders connected with the canvas. The next one came in 8 minutes and it was all over.

Now Mr. Forbes is looking for three other exponents of the wrestling game with the intention of placing each hors de combat, within 60 minutes. This is the challenge he hurls.

It was an unequal struggle, as Forbes is away ahead in condition. Thomas states that he has not been wrestling for five years.

CHANCE SAYS HE IS THROUGH

Los Angeles, Dec. 9. — Frank Chance, when told that he was to be offered the management of the Cincinnati Reds, now that the Tinker deal had fallen through replied that he was through with baseball. Asked if he would go to the New York Highlanders, the former leader of the Clubs replied that he was absolutely through with the game. Chance said if he ever did get back into the sport it would be as an owner of a Pacific Coast League team.

"Gerry" Herrmann hoped to obtain Chance's consent to manager the Reds by sending John Bruce, secretary of the National Commission to California to see him. The Red's owner decided to take this step when the Tinker deal was called off. He realized he was unable to transact any business with Chance through the mail or by wire, and the ex-Cub leader declined to come East to talk over any baseball proposition.

PUT BAN ON BODY-CHECKING

The Rev. Father Stanton, of Ottawa College has a suggestion to make to the Interprovincial Hockey League. He wishes the league to put the ban on body-checking, arguing that it tends to produce rough play and that the fact of the pros. doing away with it shows that they consider the matter in the same light.

The College delegates to the Inter-provincial will probably be instructed to bring this up at the next meeting and ask the league to make some ruling on the question. There is little doubt that the body-check, although able to be brought into play in a legitimate manner, tends to produce rough work.

ALL TORONTOS BEAT HAMILTON

Pete Campbell's Team Ahead by Five Points

Toronto, Dec. 9.—In a somewhat loosely played game, but one which was featured by many brilliant runs, the Rugby season came to a close Saturday, when All Torontos defeated All Hamilton at Rosedale by a score of 27 to 22. The locals were always in the lead, the score by quarters being:—Toronto 10, Hamilton 0; Torontto 10, Hamilton 9, and Toronto 17, Hamilton 9.

The Toronto team with Pete Campbell at the helm got the ball in play faster, and their end runs were always dangerous. The locals' best work in these runs was in the last period when Maynard nad Lawson were brought back into the game. This pair, being fresh, got away for big gains, and the result was two tries in short order. The locals with a comfortable lead, however, had to keep going, for the visitors got over two tries before the final whistle was blown.

OTTAWA COLLEGE TO OPEN SEASON

Exhibition Game is Arranged for December 23

Arrangements have been completed for an exhibition game at Brock street rink, between Ottawa College and the local senior seven, on Monday, Dec. 23.

The Collegians will bring along a strong team and endeavour to get away with a win. All this is of course, to come about providing ice is available. Ottawa College made a big bid for Interprovincial honors last season, only failing att the last round.

KELLY TO LEAD LEAFS AGAIN

New York, Dec. 9.—By far the most important announcement of the annual gathering of the International League in this city, as far as Toronto is concerned, was made late to-night. John Joseph Kelley has signed his 1913 contract with the Toronto Baseball and Amusement Company.

Joe Kelley's name was freely mentioned in connection with the management of the various National League Clubs, several of which are at this moment without managers. Kelley did not attend the league councils and did not appear, as was expected, at the meeting of the National Association in Milwaukee. The signing of Bill Clymer to manage the Buffalo club put an end to the persistent rumors that the Toronto pilot was to lead the Bisons next year.

FACTORY WORK WESTERN CANADA

Rapid Progress in Many Cities in Regard to Manufacturing Industries

Here and there throughout Western Canada are evidences that it will not be long before the great west will have its manufactories. Already a number of industries are in operation, with a fair prospect that more will follow. It will astonish visitors to Winnipeg this summer to see the permanent exhibition of the products of Winnipeg factories in the fine big hall of the Industrial Bureau on Main street. A large building, with abundant floor space, is filled with displays of all sorts of manufactured articles. There are eighty-four exhibits in all, covering a wide range of production, and yet the floor space is too limited to include all that wish to enter. An addition of 17,000 square feet will be made at once. This Winnipeg display of manufactured goods is an eye-opener to the man who thinks the prairies are devoted solely to agriculture. Possibly the Manitoba city is in the van in its industrial development, but there are other western cities which are realizing that, if they are to maintain their growth, they must have something besides real estate businesses to keep them going. They are all in the hunt after factories, and, what is more, they are beginning to get them.

As an indication of what may soon be expected in the larger centres of population in the west, the experience of Winnipeg is most instructive. That city now boasts some 296 manufacturing concerns. Naturally, many of these are diminutive, and a good number are printing offices, which hardly come in the category of manufactories. But the balance is a fairly respectable number. Of all Winnipeg's industries, iron and machine shops are the most prominent. Including the railway shops, these employ 4,700 hands. There was last year fabricated in these shops 24,000 tons of structural steel, which was practically all used in construction work in western cities —an indication of what is being accomplished in this one indpstry.

Last year forty-one new factories were added, with 1,000 hands, and this year the number will be exceeded. A very vigorous campaign is being waged to attract manufacturers.

On a lesser scale one might repeat this story in the case of Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, not to mention the coast cities. As population flows into these cities and the surrounding districts, thereby increasing consumption and affording larger opportunities for local industry, present factories are bound to expand and new ones to enter the field.

WHEN AMERICANS THRIVED

Made Greater Strides During Periods of Protection

If we examine the history of the United States which, as a new country somewhat resembles our own, we will find it divided into periods of free trade and protection. During a period of protection, the government paid off the debt of the Revolutionary War, and built up considerable home manufactures. Then came a period of free trade, which drained the country of specie, ruined the manufacturers, and ended in a great commercial crisis. Each period of free trade and protection, since that time, has produced a similar result. What is protection doing for the States now? Last year American manufacturers were sending machinery to Ireland; and English merchants complained that Americans were underselling them two dollars per ton on iron. The time is coming when the British Government may have to throw around their manufacturers the shield of protection once more. The present contention between workmen and masters may bring about a crisis in the manufacturing interests of England which will put their free trade principles to the test. Men talk bravely when danger is far off. So it is with British free traders while they know their own manufacturers are an overmatch for foreigners. But let the British markets be flooded with foreign goods, let British manufacturers be ruined, let the country be drained of specie, and see how long they will hold their free trade principles. This state of things would bring about as vigorous protection as ever. Free trade is an advantage to England now, but it was not so, or considered so, till it was seen that British manufacturers were an overmatch for foreigners.

THE HOME MARKET

The home market in Canada, economically and nationally, is of paramount importance to the agricultural classes of Canada, and it is just because the protection of the past decade has guarded that home market so consistently, that the Canadian farmer is more prosperous to-day than ever before. The growth of Canada during the past ten years has been for the benefit of the man on the land, who has enjoyed the most urgent demand for everything he could grow in the form of food.

Railways and Industries

We aid railways by bonuses in order to bring producers and consumers into closer relations with each other; and protection to home industry has precisely the same effect.

PREACHING TO THE KING

English Clergyman Describes a Sermon at Balmoral.

I have had the honor of preaching before three of our sovereigns, said a well-known clergyman recently, and I can assure you I have never found any duty more pleasant. Nervous? Well, I must admit I had a bad attack of nerves the first time—but never since.

I shall never forget the day on which I received my first command to preach at Balmoral. At first I was inclined to think it must be a practical joke, for I was not aware that Queen Victoria even knew of my existence. As, no doubt, you know, this honor is for the most part confined to the royal chaplains, a select and august body from which I was, in my own opinion at least, as far removed as from the stars. However, it seems that Her Majesty had read a volume of my sermons, and was good enough to wish to hear me preach. And thus the honor came to me quite unsought and quite unexpectedly.

So, on the Saturday before the day of my ordeal I made the journey to Ballater, feeling pretty much as a man must feel on his way to the gallows, and from Ballater I drove through the glorious Highland scenery to Crathie, where I found a warm hospitality at the Manse. If I had been one of the Queen's chaplains I should have gone straight to the Castle, and I was glad, as an outsider, to be spared this honor, which would certainly have oppressed a man so unused to Kings' palaces.

On the following morning, with, I confess, "my heart in my mouth," I presented myself at the Castle, where a most genial and courtly gentleman-in-waiting took me in tow and conducted me to the vestry adjoining the "service-room." Here I put on my black gown and nervously glanced through my manuscript, with an eye on the slow-moving hands of my watch. It was distinctly a "bad quarter of an hour" that I spent in the vestry, tortured with nervous fears, and I was thankful when the time came to enter the chapel, which, of course, I had never seen until then.

Quickly the vacant seats were filled by Court officials and distinguished guests, among whom I recognized Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and the Earl of Fife. Half-a-dozen or so young princes and princesses followed, and after a slight pause a voice announced "The Queen," and Her Majesty entered, a small, dark-clad figure, walkiy slowly, but with an impressive dignity, supported by a stick, and escorted by two Indian attendants. She took her seat immediately in front of me, and the service began. By this time I had quite recovered my self-possession, reassured by the simplicity and homeliness of my surroundings, and I felt every whit as much at home as among my own people.

Of the service itself there is little to be said. It was very simple and very reverent. The singing of the two hymns, which were accompanied by Princess Beatrice on the harmonium, and in which the Queen joined in a low, sweet voice, was hearty, and Her Majesty, who remained seated through it all, followed the service and my sermon with the closest attention —once, when I ventured on a rather humorous remark, smiling up at me

Happens Once Every 2,500,000 Years

A remarkable freak in moon phases was noted in the month of February 1866, a month which has gone into astronomical annals as "the month without a full moon." In that year January and March each had two full moons, but February none. A writer in a leading astronomical journal used the following language in describing it: "Do you realize what a rare thing in nature it was? It has not happened before since the beginning of the Christian era or probably since the creation of the world. It will not occur again, according to the computations of the astronomer royal of England, for—how long do you think? Not until after 2,500,000 years from 1866!"

JAMES PLUNKETT DIED WHILE ON REMAND IN COUNTY JAIL

He Had Been Placed Under Arrest While in an Intoxicated Condition—Coroner's Jury Hear Evidence and Give Their Verdict

James F. Plunkett, a telegraph operator, recently employed at W. F. Nelson's stock exchange, died in the county goal shortly after ten o'clock Saturday night. Plunkett was committed to the gaol on Thursday morning by Police Magistrate Dumble, after being arrested in a hopelessly intoxicated state. He was committed until the whiskey in his system had an opportunity to leave him in a fit condition to stand trial. But death intervened after a violent attack of delirium tremens, although everything that medical aid could offer was done for the prisoner.

A coroners' jury viewed the body this morning at ten o'clock and after a brief consultation brought in the verdict—

"That the deceased. James Plunkett came to his death in the county gaol, on December 7th from alcoholism bringing on delirium tremens resulting in heart failure."

WAS CLEVER OPERATOR

The circumstances leading up to Plunkett's death are extremely sad. An intelligent man of forty-five clever in his line of employment, for the last three weeks he had been on a drinking debauch which culminated by his arrest on Wednesday afternoon last week. His pitiable appearance rendered more so by two discolored eyes received by a fall on the hard pavement, were remarked upon in police court, and he required the assistance of two policemen to assist him up and down the stairs to the court room, owing to his weak and shaking limbs.

UNDER DOCTOR'S CARE

When taken to the gaol, Gaoler Nesbitt immediately saw that he was in urgent need of medical aid. Dr. Caldwell, the gaol surgeon, was summoned, and administered sedatives. The man continued to get worse, and up to the night of his death, he received every possible medical attention.

Plunkett's body, when viewed by the jury to-day, was in a pretty bad shape, especially his face.

A cut across the bridge of the nose and two sunken and disfigured eyes, contributed to his appearance, both lamentable [illegible].

The following jurors were empannelled by Coroner Dr. Greer — G. A. Pringle, J. F. Akey, F. W. Sanderson, H. P. Morgan, W. H. Meredith, C. H. Smith C. Blewett. foreman; R. Grant and W. H. Hamilton.

After viewing the body, Detective Samuel Newhall was sworn. The officer testified to having known the deceased when he was an operator at W. F. Nelson's stock exchange. Previous to that he was an operator at Havelock, Ont. The witness was present when in answer to a phone message. Plunkett was arrested and brought to the police station, with his face badly disfigured from a fall. He also knew Plunkett to have been clever at his work.

Gaoler Nesbitt described the prisoner's condition when taken in at the gaol. He was very shaky and his face badly disfigured. About four o'clock, the prisoner was seized with a fit and vomiting of blood ensued, evidently coming from the wound of his nose. Dr. Caldwell gave him a little milk nourishment He was delirious most of the time up to his death. In fact so violent that he required to be restrained by two prisoners, who acted as attendants. Death occurred at five minutes past ten. During a coherent, period Plunkett managed to tell the Gaoler that he was born in the United States.

Turnkey R. Rae, corroborated Gaoler Nesbitt's evidence. The latter was not present when he died. The two prisoner attendants were Wallace and Roddy, who gave the sick man all the assistance in their power and remained by his couch at night. They were with him when the end came. None of the gaol officers were present. To Dr. Caldwell, the gaol physician, the prisoner said he had been drinking for three weeks. The physician affirmed that Plunkett was plainly suffering from what is commonly called delirium tremens. He was confident that he had been extended all the care possible and in his opinion he would have died in a hospital just the same.

Coroner Greer in addressing the jury said that it was evidently a case of a man who had been on a severe and prolonged debauch ending in delirium tremens, and while under its influence had expired.

The body was removed to Comstock's undertaking parlors this morning, and will be kept there until further instructions.

GREAT MUSICAL EVENT HERE

On Tuesday, Dec. 17, Gatty Sellars, the World-Famed Organist, Composer, of the Queen's Hall, London, England, Concerts, and the Crystal Palace Musical Festival, who has recently established a World's Record of over 300 recitals in direct succession on the largest organs of Canada and the United States, is to play here at the Baptist church on Tuesday, December 17. In many of the larger cities visited he has attracted the largest audiences in the history of the cities for an organ recital. At Salt Lake City Mormon Tabernacle an immense audience greeted him, which was also the case at Los Angeles Auditorium, the largest re-inforced concrete structure in the world, with its $30,000 organ. At Seattle, Washington, he appeared in the largest Presbyterain church in the world with a membership of nearly 5,000, and having the sister organ of the Los Angeles instrument, whilst at Topeka, Kansas, Auditorium, 4,500 attended the recital. The program includes descriptive pieces new to this country, one of these being the Russian Patrol, in which the effect of trumpets, drums and the tramping of soldiers is clearly portrayed. In 'The Storm at Sea' he obtains the most remarkable effects ever heard on the organ so realistic is the effect. The Coronation Music, as performed at the Coronation of King George and Queen Mary at Westminster Abbey, including the Fanfares played by the King's Trumpeters, the Chorales, the Coronation Marches of Frederic Cliffe and Sir Edward Elgar, and concluding with the strains of the National Anthem, a Fanfare of Trumpets and Cathedral Chimes from the Queen's Hall, London, makes a magnificent ending to a program of such historical interest. Mr. Sellars has appeared in Europe with Albani, Marchesi, Busoni, Santley, and in the same series of concerts as Paderewski and Kubelik. He is a son of the Rev. S. Sellars, his mother being formerly a Miss Gatty, a name well known in musical circles through the reputation of Sir Sir Alfred Scott Gatty. Carter, Principal King of Arms. A crowded church is anticipated for this great musical event. 17

A GREATER PETERBORO

Electric City is Booming in the South End

MANY NEW HOUSES

But the Demand May be Greater than Supply

Will Peterborough's boom last? is a question that may just as appropriately be asked of conditions here as in the Canadian West. A visit to the southern part of Peterborough and an investigation of activities that are manifest there, with indications of more to come, more than justifies the contention that the city is sailing ahead on another rapid wave of progress.

It is not exaggerating to describe the growth that is taking place, as greatly resembling the building of the nucleus of another city. From Brownton, east to George street, rows of good substantial houses are being constructed and this building activity forms one of brightest reasons why a flourishing addition to Peterborough will in time be built up. In some respects the growth assumes the manner in which Western towns and cities go ahead. Here and there one sees a more or less isolated house being built. It is not long ere others are commenced beside it and in a surprisingly brief period a long row of uniform brick or frame dwellings are built up. This is what is happening in the south end of Peterborough at the present time.

NEW FACTORY HELPED.

Of course the De Laval Dairy Supply Company has been a great factor in this progress. Land in the vicinity of their factory became immediately valuable when it was learned of the Company's intention to build there. Workmen's houses now are being mainly erected and judging by the demand already, house-building in that locality is proving a profitable occupation for many. Besides workingmen's houses there are dozens of good brick veneer houses going up rather closer in to the city and which are finding ready sale. These compare favorably with the best class of residences in the city.

The De Laval Dairy Supply Company's factory is being rapidly rushed, and the brick-work is now almost completed, and their office building ready for sheeting. A small army of men is engaged at the work.

BARONESS SEEKS TO RECOVER $20,260

BARONESS DE PALLANDT

Mystery surrounds the action of the Baroness de Pallandt against Charles B. Flynn, a wealthy mining engineer, with the McIntyre Porcupine Mines, in Canada. The judgment obtained against Mr. Flynn is for $20,[illegible]3.65, which the Baroness declares she advanced to the mining man in Paris in 1908 and for which he gave his note.

The Baroness de Pallandt is of a wealthy Chicago family and was Miss May Dugus before she was married, in 1893. She was separated from her husband in 1901 and met Mr. Flynn in Paris in 1903, where he was busy promoting some mining properties. Friends of the Baroness have said that the mining man was attentive to her at this time, that the two became good friends and she advanced $15,790 to be invested in the Canada mining properties.

The Baroness de Pallandt has figured in the news before. In 1903 John D. Kilpatrick killed himself. Mr. Kilpatrick was a wealthy young man, and, according to his friends, he fell in love with the Baroness, who had been separated from her husband at that time. She suddenly left for Europe when he was pressing his suit, and he was found dead in the Martinique Hotel soon afterward.

WAR MINISTER STEPS OUT

Ministerial Change in Austria May Indicate War.

London, Dec. 10.—No explanation is yet forthcoming of the sudden resignation of the Austro-Hungarian Minister of War, Gen. Auffenberg, and the chief of the general staff, Gen. Schemua. They have said that their action was due to personal reasons, but coming at such a time as the present it cannot be doubted that it will have a wide political significance.

It had been expected that in the event of war Gen. Von Hoetzendorf would be appointed chief of staff, and his appointment now to succeed Gen. Schemua, couple with the news of the renewal of the Dreibund and that Austria and Hungary, have negotiated temporary loans of $50,000,000 cannot but have a disquieting effect on the international situation.

It is supposed that Austria wishes possibly to exert a strong influence over the coming conference proceedings at London and especially to prevent the entry of Turkey into the Balkan federation.

The Austrian war party is known to be inflamed against Russia, in the belief that the defiant Russian attitude is due to the Franco-Russian alliance, and some of the Austrian newspapers, representing the war party, are urging that unless Russia ceases mobilising, the powers comprising the Triple Alliance should fall upon France and crush her before Russia is able to intervene.

However, the crisis may end, the war fever is having a disastrous effect on Austro-Hungarian trade. A complete financial panic prevails throughout Galicia, where the various banks have recently paid out more than $60,000,000 to nervous depositors, without stemming the run.

It was reported at Paris yesterday that the entire Austrian fleet had concentrated at Pola, the chief naval station of Austria-Hungary.

Changes in Austria.

Vienna, Dec. 10—Important changes have taken place in the Austro-Hungarian war department. Gen. Auffenberg, the Minister of War, resigned yesterday. Gen. Krobatin, Under Secretary in the War Office, has been appointed as his successor.

Gen. Schemua, chief of the general staff, who recently paid a significant visit to Berlin and conferred with Count von Moltke, chief of the general staff of the German army, has also resigned. He has been succeeded by Gen. Von Hoezendorf, who held the same post several years ago.

INEFFICIENCY SHOWN IN REPORT BEFORE HOUSE

Investigators Report That Sorel Shipyards Are Wasteful and Inefficient and Politically Corrupt—Dredging Contractors Have Made Fortunes.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—The report of the Morine-Lake-Ducharme Commission appointed last year by the Borden Government to investigate the administration of the various Government Departments during the Laurier regime was tabled in the Commons yesterday by Premier Borden.

The report is a lengthy one of about 3,000 closely typed pages. While it declares that numerous irregularities exist in the various Departments, no scandals are unearthed.

The commission was to have made recommendations for the reorganization of the different branches of the service, along more business-like lines, but the report points out that owing to the magnitude of the task, the commission decided to leave the matter in the hands of Sir George Murray, who was brought from England specially for this purpose by Premier Borden.

The finding of the commission in its investigation into the methods of administering the Sorel shipyards states that for years past the work there has not been conducted under the supervision of competent management. There were no practical ship builders in authority, and as a result there was waste and extravagance, says the report, and it goes on to charge that the shops were used as recruiting stations for Liberal voters.

The commission recommends that the Government should maintain shipyards of its own, even though the cost be infinitely greater. It further recommends that construction work be continued at Sorel under the supervision of practical ship builders and efficient management, that every vestige of political partisanship and patronage be eliminated and that the works should be throughly inspected by competent Ottawa officials every three months.

The letting of the Timiskaming dam contract is next dealt with. It states that a contract for a wooden dam at this place was given to Messrs. Kirby and Stewart of Ottawa, but that, subsequently, the Department decided to change the plans and specifications and have the dam made of concrete instead of wood. No new tenders were called for the concrete work, which was carried on by Messrs. Kirby and Stewart, who charged $100,000 above the original contract price for the concrete work. Auditor-General Fraser, however, held up and refused to pay the item, and the matter is still under advisement.

Owners of dredges, the report says, have understandings before bidding as to what price each shall bid, and numerous instances are given to prove this assertion. Other contractors or dredging companies are in the habit of sending in alternative tenders, and, in many cases, secured contracts in this manner.

Profits made by dredging companies are instanced, as in one case where a company earned $795,590 in two years for work in the Maritime Provinces, at 16 cents per yard.

The commission concludes that contracts for dredging, according to the present system, should be discontinued.

The Federal Printing Bureau, which was specially investigated by Messrs. Lake and Ducharme, comes in for considerable attention and is declared to be inefficient and unable to do the work required.

The commission finds that the building is utterly inadequate, with insufficient accommodation for plant, employes or storage purposes.

Mr. Kyte, M.P. for Richmond, N.S., made a sensational statement. J. A. Gillies, he said, who was the unsuccessful Conservative candidate in Richmond in the last general election, on Dec. 8, 1911, asked for the dismissal of D. R. Boyle, the fishery officer at West Arichat, on the ground of offensive partisanship, and recommended the appointment in his place of Captain Andrew Landry of Descouse.

On Dec. 28 the Department of Marine dismissed Leon N. Poirier, wharfinger at Descouse, N.S., and appointed Captain Landry in his place. On Feb. 1, 1912, Captain Landry was committed for trial for forgery, and on June 4 was found guilty and sentenced to a year in jail. On June 11, 1912, Captain Frederick Poirier, buoy contractor at Descouse, was dismissed, and directed to hand the buoys and moorings to Captain Andrew Landry. Captain Poirier replied that he could not conveniently do so, as Captain Landry at that time was in jail serving a year's term for forgery.

"The Minister of Justice was appealed to, and on Aug. 3 Captain Landry was released, and we had a jail delivery," said Mr. Kyte, "such as never was seen before. Landry, after serving two months of his term, walked out of the jail a free man to take up his duties as a public official."

Hon. Mr. Hazen said that Mr. Kyte evidently desired to make an attack on his political opponent, Mr. Gillies. Mr. Hazen said this was the first he had heard of the appointment or of the sentence of Captain Landry. Mr. Gillies had recommended him, and the Minister believed Mr. Gillies thought Captain Landry a "highly suitable man to fill the position."

Premier Borden said that the matter was one which deserved looking into, and as the Minister of Justice was not present to give the reasons for the releasing of Captain Landry, he would move the adjournment of the debate.

TO CHAIN UP ALL THE DOGS

And Raise the Dog Tax to Ten Dollars.

Toronto, Dec. 10.—A regular rabies scare is now dominating Ward Seven, consequent on the series of attacks made on the residents by dogs in that locality.

The majority of the victims will be subjected to the Pasteur treatment and bad results may be thus avoided. When asked as to the necessity of enforcing an order for all dogs to be chained Provincial Medical Health Officer McCullough stated that the Government would have to be communicated with.

At the City Council yesterday a petition signed by many residents of the west was presented by Alderman Ryding. It reads: "In view of the fact that rabies has been very prevalent in the vicinity of Ward 7 for some time and also in view of the fact that a number of people have been bitten by rabid animals, we humbly petition you to take some steps to prevent the spread of rabies immediately, and would suggest that all dogs west of Dufferin street be chained securely and dog owners failing to comply with this regulation should be subjected to a good, stiff penalty. We further recommend that the dog tax be raised to $10."

This is the first time since the establishment of the Nobel foundation, the first award of which was made in 1901, that the committee of the Norwegian Parliament has found no person worthy of the ward. The committee in explanation of its action merely states that it has decided that there "has been no work deserving of the prize."

Will Not Curtail.

London, Dec. 10.—All doubts were swept away yesterday of the possibility of Great Britain curtailing her own naval program in view of the gift by Canada to the British Empire of three powerful battleships at a cost of $35,000,000.

Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking in the House of Commons, said he adhered to the point of view of the Canadian Government which is, he announced:

"That the aid given by Canada should be in addition to the existing British program, and that any steps Canada might take should directly strengthen the naval forces of the Empire and the margin available for its security."

Mr. Churchill deprecated the putting of further questions on the subject pending the approval by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada of the naval proposal put forward by Rt. Hon. Robert L. Borden, the Canadian Premier.

WILL NOT BLOCK BILL

Laurier Declines to Profit by Borden's Error.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—A technical error has occurred in connection with the naval bill which may necessitate its reintroduction in the Commons, unless Sir Wilfrid Laurier is willing to forego the formalities involved. This the leader of the Opposition will probably do, and it is expected that the debate on the measure will be taken up at its second reading on Thursday.

Two things are requisite before the House can consider a bill whose main purpose is the appropriation of public money. The first of these is a recommendation of the Governor-General as provided by the British North American Act; the second is the adoption of a resolution by the committee of the whole House declaring such expenditure to be expedient. When Mr. Borden moved the first reading of the naval bill, Mr. Speaker Sproule called his attention to these prerequisites. The Prime Minister said in reply that the $35,000,000 appropriation had been recommended by His Royal Highness the Governor-General and that the necessary resolution would be put through the committee of the whole House later on.

At the time the Speaker and Mr. Borden had in mind a rule of practice which permits certain bills to be put through the Senate and be introduced in the House without being preceded by a resolution. Such bills appropriate money incidentally and the sections relating to the appropriation of money are printed in italics or enclosed in brackets and treated as blanks until referred to, and reported favorably from the committee of the whole House.

Mr. Borden crossed the floor of the House yesterday afternoon and held a conference, the result of which will probably be that the Liberal leader will courteously permit the resolution to be brought in and reported by consent without discussion to-day, thus preparing for discussion on Thursday.

THE CONCILIATION BOARD GRANTS DEMANDS OF MEN

Report Filed by Arbitrators in Dispute Between Company and its Striking Brotherhood of Railway Employes Awards Reinstatement.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—The award of the conciliation board appointed by the Minister of Labor to investigate the dispute between the Brotherhood of Railway Employes and the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., which resulted in a strike of the men, and which is still going on, was filed at the Department of Labor yesterday afternoon.

The report, which is signed by Judge McGibbon of Brampton, Ont., chairman of the board, and J. A. McDonald of Halifax, indicates the claims made by the men, and recommends that practically all their demands be granted.

The dispute between the men and the company has been going on for some months. Recognition of the schedules and an increase in pay of 15 per cent. were among the principal demands made by the men. This the company refused, and the brotherhood applied to the Department for a board of arbitration, but failed, and a strike was begun. Hon. T. W. Crothers finally decided to appoint a board. It was composed of Judge McGibbon, J. A. McDonald of Halifax, representing the men, and J. E. Duval of Montreal, representing the company. The latter gentleman was named by the Department after the C.P.R. refused to be represented.

It recommends as follows: (1) The strikers to be reinstated in their old position immediately at the salaries they were receiving previous to the strike. (2) The strikers to receive back pay for the time they have been on strike. (3) The men who were discharged by the company for their connection with the Brotherhood of Railway Employes should be treated as strikers and receive the same treatment. (4) Increase of salaries recommended, but the matter is left to interested parties to be arranged at a later date. (5) The report is to cover all district affected within the scope of the board.

The report then lays down rules which shall govern the members of the brotherhood regarding seniority, vacancies, appointments, etc. The board further decided that the schedules recommended should take effect from May 1, 1912, and remain in effect for one year, and from year to year thereafter.

For public holidays and Sundays the board recommends that the men be paid time and a half.

Judge McGibbon in his report highly commends the assistance given him by Mr. Crothers, and speaks in the highest terms of the administration of the Department.

The minority report of Mr. Duval has not yet been filed, but it is understood that it agrees on most points with that of Judge McGibbon and Mr. McDonald.

The Minister of Labor is confident that an agreement will speedily follow the board's finding, but it is thought that the company will oppose the recommendation that the men should be given back pay while on strike. The strike has been on now for five weeks, and the men claim that they will remain out until their claims are granted.

BRITAIN'S PANAMA NOTE READ BY SECRETARY KNOX

Ambassador Bryce Communicates Great Britain's Formal Objections to Canal Tolls—Will Resist Discrimination and Exclusion of Railroad-Owned Boats—Arbitration May be Necessary.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Great Britain's formal note of protest against that section of the Panama Canal Act which exempts American coastwise shipping through the Panama Canal, was presented to the Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox, last night, by the British ambassador, James Bryce, who read the note word for word to the Secretary at the latter's home.

It is an elaboration of the points of objection in the note presented to the State Department last July. In brief, these objections are: That while it was clearly in violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty either to remit or refund tolls on all American shipping using the canal, the same objection probably would apply to the coastwise trade shipping in view of the probable impossibility of framing regulations that would not result in a preference to American shipping.

In addition to supporting these points by long arguments, Sir Edward [illegible] any attempt to exclude from the canal British ships owned by Canadian railroads, or whose owners may be guilty of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. He holds that this section of the act cannot apply to British shipping, but only to U. S. vessels.

He also indicates in his notes that underlying the objection to the exemption from toll of American coastwise ships is an apprehension that in the future the principle might be extended to American ships in the foreign trade.

Otherwise the note is devoted almost entirely to an effort to demonstrate that any such exemption of American shipping as is proposed is in direct conflict with the terms of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and that President Taft was clearly wrong when he took the contrary view.

The note winds up with a proposal that the issues should be settled by arbitration, provided that they cannot be adjusted by mutual agreement, for which a way remains open.

Alton B. Parker will preside, and among the speakers will be Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to England.

THE SAILORS DESERTED

Lake Captain at Sarnia Was Forced to Take Four Jailbirds.

Sarnia, Dec. 10.—Seldom does a lake captain have to face a mutiny on his ship, but this was the situation that confronted the skipper of the City of Naples, tied up at the Northern Navigation dock here. The Naples, loaded with five thousand tons of soft coal from Cleveland, reached this port and stopped for shelter from the northwest storm. The boat's cargo was consigned to Port Arthur and the trip was to be the last of the season, but the crew, together with a mate, announced that they would not go any further and decamped.

As a last resort the police station was visited and here the first mate managed to corral four men, who offered to become sailors if he would pay their fines. The new crew were soon on board, and thus short-handed the City of Naples left Sarnia late yesterday afternoon. Efforts were made to dispose of the ship's cargo in Sarnia, but this was unsuccessful, so after much telephoning it was sold to a merchant at a Georgian Bay port.

The Naples is owned in Hamilton by parties who purchased her last spring from a Chicago firm. The boat was out of commission for a couple of years before this and is a sister ship to the City of Genoa, which sank last fall in collision here at the navigation dock.

BIG SHOW IS ON AT GUELPH

Best Classes of Animals on Record Are Shown.

Guelph, Dec. 10.—The provincial winter fair opened yesterday morning without formality and at 9.15 the poultry judges were busy. All day long the trains have been unloading visitors at the stations which are the busiest spots in town with the exception of the fair building itself. Guelph is striving hard to act the part of host in an efficient manner. Some of the hotels are already filled, but the officers of the fair and the city officials have arranged for billeting in private houses and in this way they hope sufficient accommodation will be provided for all visitors.

The feature of to-day program has been the judging of the horses and beef cattle. The predominating class of horses at the fair is as usual the Clydesdale, while the cattle are headed by the Shorthorns.

The attendance for the first day was estimated at 3,000. Of these 2,400 were admitted by passes and 600 were admitted by the paid admission route.

The following is a partial list of firsts for horses and cattle:

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED By HENRY W. SAVAGE.

COPYRIGHT, 1911, By H. K. FLY CO.

He liked this so well that he wished he had thought of it in time to crack it over Ashton's head. He decided to hand it to him anyway. He forgot that the cardinal rule for repartee, is "Better never than late."

As he swung out of the men's room he was buttonholed by an individual new to the little Trans-American colony. One of the camp-followers and sutlers who prosper round the edges of all great enterprises had waylaid him on the way to the battleground of marital freedom.

The stranger had got on at an earlier stop and worked his way through the train to the car named "Snowdrop." Wellington was his first victim here. His pushing manner, the almost vulture-like rapacity of his gleaming eyes, and the very vulturine contour of his profile, his palmy gestures, his thick lisp, and everything about him gave Wellington his immediate pedigree.

It ill behooves Christendom to need reminding that the Jewish race has adorned and still adorns humanity with some of its noblest specimens; but this interloper was of the type that must have irritated Voltaire into answering the platitude that the Jews are God's chosen people with that other platitude, "Tastes differ."

Little Jimmie Wellington, hot in pursuit of Ashton, found himself checked in spite of himself; in spite of himself deposited somehow into a seat, and in spite of himself confronted with a curvilinear person, who said:

"Excoose, please! but are you getink off at R-r-reno?"

"I am," Wellington answered, curtly, essaying to rise, only to be delicately restored to his place with a gesture and a phrase:

"Then you neet me."

"Oh, I need you, do I? And who are you?"

"Who ain't I? I am Baumann and Blumen. Our cart, please."

Wellington found a pasteboard in his hand and read the legend:

Real Estate Agents Baggage Transfer
Baumann & Blumen
Divorce Outfitters
[illegible] Avenue, Reno, Nevada
Notary Public Justice of the Peace Divorces Secured Satisfaction Guaranteed

Wellington looked from the crowded card to the zealous face. "Divorce Outfitters, eh? I don't quite get you."

"Vell, in the foist place—"

"'The foist place,' eh? You're from New York."

"Yes, oritchinally. How did you know it? By my feshionable clothink?"

"Yes," laughed Wellington. "But you say I need you. How?"

"Vell, you've got maybe some beggetch—some trunks—yes?"

"Yes."

"Vell, in the foist place, I am an expressman. I deliver 'em to your address—yes? Vere iss it?"

"I haven't got any yet."

"Also I am addressman. Do you vant it a nice hotel?—or a fine house?—or an apartment?—or maybe a boarding house?—yes? How long do you make a residence?"

"Six months."

"No longer?"

"Not a minute."

"Take a fine house, den. I got some beauties just wacated."

"For a year?—no thanks."

"All the leases in Reno run for six months only."

"Vell, I'd like to look around a little first."

"Good. Don't forget us. You come out here for six months. You vant maybe a good quick divorce—yes?"

"The quickest I can get."

"Do you vant it confidential? or very nice and noisy?"

"What's that?"

"Ve are press agents and also suppress agents. Some likes 'em one way, some likes 'em anudder. Vich do you vant it?"

"Quick and quiet."

"Painless divorce is our specialty. If you pay me aif advence depouit I file your claim de minute de

"I'll think it over," said Wellington, rising with resolution.

"Don't forget us. Baumann and Blumen. Satisfaction guaranteed or your wife refunded. Avoid subatitoots." And then, seeing that he could not extract any cash from Little Jimmie, Mr. Baumann descended upon Mallory, who was just finishing his shave. Laying his hand on Mallory's arm, he began:

"Excoose, please. Can I fit you out vit a nice divorce?"

"Divorce? — me! — that's good," laughed Mallory at the vision of it. Then a sudden idea struck him. It took no great genius to see that Mr. Baumann was not a clergyman, but there were other marriers to be had. "You don't perform marriages, do you?" he asked.

Mr. Baumann drew himself up: "Who says I don't? Ain't I a justice of the peaces?"

Mallory put out his hand in welcome: then a new anxiety chilled him. He had a license for Chicago, but Chicago was far away: "Do I need a license in Nevada?"

"Why shouldn't you?" said Mr. Baumann. "Don't all sorts of things got to have a license in Nevada, saloons, husbands, dogs—"

"How could I get one?" Mallory asked as he went on dressing.

"Ain't I got a few vit me? Do you vant to get a nice re-marriage license?"

"Re-marriage?—huh!" he looked round, and, seeing that no one else was near: "I haven't taken the first step yet."

Mr. Baumann laved his hands in one another: "A betchelor? Ah, I see you vant to marry a nice divorcee lady in R-r-reno?"

"She isn't in Reno and she has never been married, either."

This simple statement seemed to astound Mr. Baumann:

"A betcheller marry a maiden!—in Reno!—oi, oi, oi! It hasn't been done yet, but it might be."

Mallory looked him over and a twinge of distaste disturbed him: "You furnish the license, but—er—ah—is there any chance of a clergyman—a Christian clergyman—being at the station?"

"Vy do you vant it a cloigyman? Can't I do it just as good? Or a nice fat alderman I can get you?"

Mallory pondered: "I don't think she'd like anything but a clergyman."

"Vell," Baumann confessed, "a lady is liable to be particular about her oist marriage. Anyvay I sell you de license."

"All right."

Mr. Baumann whipped out a portfolio full of documents, and as he searched them, philosophized: "A man ought alvays to carry a good marriage license. It might be he should need it in a hurry." He took a large iron seal from his side-pocket and stamped the paper and then, with fountain pen poised, pleaded: "Vat is the names, please?"

"Not so loud!" Mallory whispered.

Baumann put his finger to his nose, wisely: "I see. It is a confidential marriage. Sit down once."

When he had asked Mallory the necessary questions and taken his fee, he passed over the document by which the sovereign state of Nevada graciously permitted two souls to be made more or less one in the eyes of the law.

"Here you are," said Mr. Baumann. "Vit dat you can get married anyvere in Nevada."

Mallory realized that Nevada would be a thing of the past in a few hours more and he asked:

"It's no good in California?"

"Himmel, no. In California you bot' gotta go and be examined."

"Examined!" Mallory gasped, in dire alarm.

"Vit questions, poisonally," Mr. Baumann hastened to explain.

"Oh!"

"In Nevada," Baumann insinuated, still hopeful, "I could mary you myself—now, right here."

"Could you marry us in this smoking room?"

"In a cattle car, if you vant it."

"It's not a bad idea," said Mallory. "I'll let you know."

Seeing Marjorie coming down the aisle, he hastened to her, and hugged her good morning with a new confidence.

Dr. and Mrs. Temple, who had returned to their berth, witnessed this greeting with amazement. After the quarrel of the night before surely some explanation should have been overheard, but the puzzling Mallorys flew to each other's arms without a moment's delay. The mystery was exciting the passengers to such a point that they were vowing to ask a few questions point blank. Nobody had quite dared to approach either of them, but frank curiosity was preferable to nervous prostration, and the secret could not be kept much longer. Fellow-passengers have some rights. Not even a stranger can be permitted to outrage their curiosity with impunity forever.

Shearing Sheep in Syria.

The manner of shearing sheep in Syria and all Asiatic Turkey does not differ materially from the ancient methods of the people as applied to practically every other vocation. While the sheep industry is one of the oldest in the country, having existed for centuries in the same pastures where the ancestors of the present herders also tended flocks, there does not appear to have been any improvement in the manner of shearing or breeding the sheep. Shearing is still accomplished in the crudest way, the workers always leaving a considerable amount of wool on the animal, while the fleece removed is cut most unevenly. The shearers frequently cut great holes in the skins of the sheep, which by the Ethel Smyth, Famous as Composer and Suffragette.

DR. ETHEL SMYTH.

Window smashing and the gentle art of musical composition seem separate and distinct vocations, but Dr. Ethel Smyth, one of the most famous of women composers and an English suffragette of the very militant type, is able to combine both achievements successfully.

As every one knows, Ethel Smyth was arrested not long ago on the charge of being concerned in the attempt to burn Lewis Harcourt's country house at Neneham, Oxford. She has put the woman's demand for the vote into music in her choral satire "1910," which is a grotesque symphony of suffragettes, antisuffragettes and the hullabaloo of a Parliament square riot.

The University of Durham conferred on Miss Smyth the degree of doctor of music two years ago in recognition of her work.

Hat Trimmings at Weird Angles.

Aigret trimmings now slant at very weird angles. Sometimes the tall, thick aigret seems to be poised exactly upright against the hat brim when the hat is viewed off the head, but the hat is probably donned at a decided angle. The aigret takes a backward, almost horizontal, sweep when the finished effect is achieved. An extreme model shows a hat brim turning up steeply at the front for six inches, while at the back there is scarcely any brim at all. A stiff brush aigret stands out straight at the back, exactly at right angles to the uprising brim in front. Off the head this hat is a veritable caricature, but when on the high brim slopes backward and not straight up, and the long brush aigret slants downward in chic and graceful manner. Sometimes long wings are poised upside down on the hat, their long tips meeting at the back, far beyond the hat brim. A hat of this sort was noted the other afternoon at one of the hotels. A pretty young woman removed her loose limousine coat, to reveal a graceful frock of taupe colored permo stuff—a worsted and mohair weave of softness and luster—and the charming frock was matched by a taupe plush hat having two immense taupe wings shading to coral at the tips. An ornament of dull silver and coral was placed across the front of the hat between the wings. Patent leather boots with taupe colored buttoned tops accompanied the taupe frock.

What to Use on Floor.

Handsome hardwood floors are the joy of a proud housewife. Likewise, they please the maid, for the amount of care they require is negligible in comparison with that demanded by the old fashioned carpet, when any pretense of keeping the house clean and sanitary was made.

The passing of the carpet marked the beginning of a new epoch in house building. Formerly, only the kitchen floor was considered of special importance; now, all the flooring must be good, because, with the general use of rugs, large and small, it is all more or less exposed to the visitor's gaze. As for the kitchen floor in these times it is more likely than not to be covered with high grade linoleum, laid in cement designed for that special purpose and making a seamless covering that may be washed with soap and water and that [illegible] many a wooden floor, if given a coat of linoleum varnish once or twice a year.

MIXED FARMING AND FACTORIES

A Factor in the Raising of Food Supplies for Large Cities

It is worth while noting that where manufacturing has progressed most rapidly in the West, there also the greatest amount of attention is being paid to mixed farming and the raising of food supplies for the growing towns and cities. For instance, in Manitoba, where the industrial expansion has been greatest, during the last ten years, food products have been supplied most abundantly. The recent census reflects a condition in Manitoba that is striking indeed. Of the net increase in population of that province during the last decade of nearly 200,000, about 109,000 people went into the towns and cities while only some 90,000 entered the rural districts. This kind of growth has been dependent largely upon an increased supply of food, and in Manitoba the idea of mixed farming is being adopted very readily. It was not an uncommon sight from the car window or in driving along the trails last summer to see here and there waving fields of luxuriant corn. Root and hay crops are also being grown more extensively and in consequence, the output of dairy produce, meats and poultry have become an important feature in the agricultural account of Manitoba. Last year potatoes and roots were harvested to the extent of over 8 million bushels. The yield of cultivated grasses amounted to nearly 150 thousand tons. Dairy and creamery butter and cheese, worth a million and a half dollars, were marketed by the farmers of the province in the year. In addition to the dairy products, the farmers disposed of 91,000 turkeys, 53,000 geese and 465,000 chickens, and the number of head of horses, cattle, sheep and swine in the province was 735,000. These items in the agricultural output of Manitoba have a great deal to do with the fact that industrial activity is more pronounced in that province than in either Saskatchewan or Alberta, even though the natural facilities for manufacturing in the last named province are of the very best in the whole Dominion.

THE CANADIAN IDEA

Interest in Work and Ability to do Work Well

We can all do something in the moulding of the Canadian Idea, by creating and encouraging in Canada a national appreciation of all things which are our own. The time was when a Canadian travelling in a compartment car in Europe was very glad to say that he came "from America." The time was when we knew nothing about the meaning of "Manitoba No. 1 Hard." The time was when the salesman calling upon his customer in Canada was proud to boast that the article that he showed was produced in a foreign land, by a foreign workman. That day is fast going. Canadians can sit comfortably to-day in European coaches and say that they are Canadians. "Manitoba No. 1 Hard" needs no word of commendation from anyone; and the Canadian article is growing upon the hearts of the people who make it. There is something more than material and process in what we buy. There is that finer human element, the brain, the moral fibre, the heart of the workman, that is woven into and moulded and impressed upon the finished article; and the hearts of Canadians, their interest in their work and their ability to do their work well, are equal, if not superior, to the people of any other country.

Money is as loose in its morals as human nature; the Devil can borrow money with which to buy brimstone for his furnaces, if he had security.

JHHN BUNNY FAMILIAR TO ALL "MOVEY" HABITUES

London Actor With the Big Head and Amazing Face Leaped From Comparative Obscurity Into a Position of Affluence as a Cinematograph Performer — He Is a Cornishman and a Jolly Old Soul.

Everyone who goes to cinematograph theatres must know John Bunny, says London Tit-Bits He has the most striking face that ever appeared on a moving-picture screen.

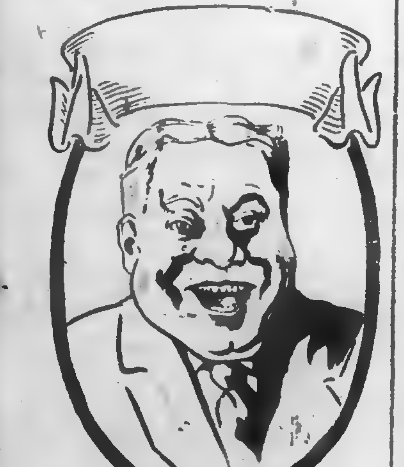
For one thing it is so abnormally big. The hair, thin on the temples, leaves a vast expanse of forehead bare; the nose is frankly huge, and the mouth, a wide mobile slit, and the great double chin, complete a face which is its possessor's fortune.

His face being his fortune is probably why John Bunny is usually smiling. You or I—anyone—would smile if we could make as much money by our face as John Bunny does by his.

John Bunny is as jolly in private life as he is "in the pictures." He is a dear, genuine old chap, who makes you feel as if you had known him for weeks after five minutes in his company. That, at any rate, is the effect he had upon me when I met him recently.

John Bunny hates talking about himself. He tries to sidetrack the conversation on to philosophy, travel, religion, the wonders of London, anything but himself, but gradually, bit by bit, I managed to draw him.

"Why, yes, my name is John Bunny right enough, and I come of good old Cornish stock," he said. "I have never seen it, but I am told there is a Bunny's Point in Cornwall, somewhere near Land's End.



JOHN BUNNY.

"I am the first of the Bunnys not to follow the sea. Some of them served in the royal navy, and, although I like the sea well enough, it was the stage that attracted me as a youth."

He did not tell me so himself, but I understand that John Bunny was an excellent actor in America. So good was he, in fact, that he was preferred to Nat Goodwin on one occasion when a special "all star" Shakespeare show was given in the States.

But although he rose to a good position in the theatrical world he gave up the stage.

"You can't get engagements all the year round. There always comes the 'resting' period," he explained, "and as the dollars didn't come in steadily enough to please me I began to look about for something else to do.

"Two years ago I tumbled to the fact that there was continuous work—and continuous salary—in the moving-picture business, and I made up my mind to try my hand at it."

So he "tried his hand" and got in on his face. Not at once, however. Armed with a list of the leading cinematograph picture-producing firms, he went forth and offered his services. For a long time he offered in vain; no one wanted his services, no one saw the fortune in his face.

It is almost incredible—yet John Bunny assured me that it was a fact, however—but he had got down to the last firm on his list, the Vitagraph Company, before he found any practical sympathy and interest in his form what I professed," he said. "But they wouldn't do business that way. 'No,' they told me, 'we don't want anything for nothing. We'll put you in a picture and pay you, and see how you get on.'"

So they put him "in," and before the picture was finished they asked him to take part in another. John Bunny's chance had come. He had stepped on to the first rung of the ladder which was so swiftly to take him to the top of the tree, to the position of the best-known and most popular picture-actor in the world.

In the two years that he has been playing to the camera he has taken part in between eighty and a hundred different pictures—he is not certain of the exact number himself—and although he has run risks he has not, to quote him, "had even his feelings hurt."

"I have jumped off the top of a house and landed on my feet, although I weigh about twenty stone. I have dangled in mid-air from a fourth storey window, and I have dived into a pond after a girl who could not swim and brought her out safely—for the pictures," he told me in a casual, matter-of-fact way.

John Bunny made light of his adventures, but he did seem rather exercised about the way in which he is recognized wherever he goes.

The Talipot Palm.

The leaf of the Ceylon talipot palm which grows to 100 feet in height is so wide that it will cover twenty men.

A Gigantic Robbery.

A remarkable theft of $50,000 in gold coin from a consignment of $1,000,000 despatched from the Bank of England to the offices of the Credit Lyonnais at Alexandria, Egypt, is bewildering to the police.

The crime is believed to have been carried out by a gang of international thieves, to whom information of the intended consignment leaked out by some unknown means. It is not yet known at what point en route the money was stolen.

When the cases were opened at Alexandria, the heavy seals put on at London were apparently intact.

The whole $1,000,000 was first packed in strong bags, each containing $5,000, and five bags were placed in each case. There were, therefore, forty cases, and eight seals were placed on each case The entire work was carefully superintended by representatives of both banks, and the cases were finally handed over to the representatives of the Credit Lyonnais.

The specie was despatched from the Bank of England on Nov 12.

When the boxes were opened, instead of the gold, the officers found lead. Police inquiries lead to the belief that the substitution took place on the train journey between Bremen and Trieste.

She Was Her Mother's Mother.

Many ingenious complications in genealogy have been compiled; but the following one has the merit of being definite as to time, place and people It concerns a family living at Faversham in Kent, Eng., in February, 1760. Old Hawood had two daughters by his first wife, of whom the elder was married to John Cashick, the son, and the younger to John Cashick, the father.

Cashick senior had a daughter by his first wife. This daughter Old Hawood married and by her had a son, which led to the complications summed up in the following distich, supposed to be spoken by Cashick's second wife

'My father is my son, and I am my mother's mother.
My sister is my daughter, and I'm grandmother to my brother.

The effect of the bill if it is passed will be to close not only cotton gambling shops but also the betting establishments in which business is done on English and Indian horse racing. CATTLE MARKET.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended Dec. 7, were 2200 cattle, 1100 sheep and lambs, 3100 hogs and 400 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1600 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1425 hogs and 250 calves.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for cattle and prices were fully 25c per cwt. higher than a week ago, which was attributed to the more favorable weather for this season of the year. The demand was good and an active trade was done Some picked lots of choice steers sold as high as $6.75, but the bulk of the trading was done at $6.50 while full car loads brought $6.25 to $6.35 and light stock $5.50 to $5.75 per cwt. Canning stock is in good demand at from $2.50 to $3 per cwt.

A feature of the small meat trade continues to be the strong undertone to the market for lambs and prices have scored a further advance of 25c per cwt., which is attributed to the smaller supplies coming forward and the good demand for the same, consequently sales were made freely at $6.75 to $7 per cwt. The tone of the market for sheep was firm and prices unchanged. The trade in calves was fairly good.

The tone of the market for hogs was easier and prices were 25c per cwt. lower than a week ago, owing to the more liberal supplies coming forward, but at this reduction the demand from packers was good and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $9 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 to $6.75 medium, $5.50 to $6, common, $4 to $4.50 canners, $2.50 to $3, choice cows, $5 to $5.25, bulls, $2.50 to $4; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90, common and medium, each, $70 to $80 springers, $55 to $65

Sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50, bucks and culls, $3.75 to 4; lambs, $6.75 to $7.

Hogs, fed and watered, $9.

Calves, $3 to $12.

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

THE LIBERAL POSITION

The latest from the Liberal camp at Ottawa says that the Laurierites will oppose the Borden naval policy with vigor. If they do, there is little reason for either the Borden Government or the Conservative party at large to feel put out. If the Liberals want to make themselves an anti-imperial little Canadian party, so much the worse for them in the eyes of the country. In fact, nothing would assure the stability of the Borden administration more than that the Liberals should adopt the attitude which it is known that Sir Wilfrid Laureir proposes.

The Admiralty memorandum showing the serious straits into which British naval policy had placed the Empire's sea power, came as a knock-out blow to the Liberal contention that there was no immediate justification for a special grant to aid the naval program. That memorandum showed that Britain wanted naval aid from Canada, that the only sea on which the British navy was supreme was the North sea, and that the way Canada could most effectively aid, was by a contribution of battleships, the largest money and science could supply. That memorandum is sufficient to establish Mr. Borden's case in the fullest degree. It is evidence that can neither be ignored, or impugned. On the face of what it asserts, if the Liberals commence to obstruct the Borden contribution at their peril. It would be splendid campaign tactics to read that memorandum or sections of it along with the record of Liberal opposition to the granting of the aid the Admiralty desires. The Montreal Herald has seen the danger, and not only in its special letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier did it urge the Liberals to agree with the Borden contribution, but since the announcement of the policy it has not ceased to declare against any factiousness. It said on Saturday: "It appears to us that it would be better for all concerned if Mr. Borden were not forced to fight it through, but that the action of Canada in so epoch-making occasion, should be marked by unanimity." The naval question will come up either Tuesday or Friday, but the real discussion will take place after the parliamentary recess. Certainly the present parliament is a maker of history.

MR. ROWELL'S BLUFF

In most respects the leadership of Mr. Rowell has fallen very flat. He has made a success neither with his Abolish the Bar policy or his Workmen's Compensation agitation. But he takes a line very few people will on principle, at least, care to dispute when he denounces the pernicious activity of corporations in politics. Said Mr. Rowell at Woodstock on Saturday afternoon:

"We should, to the full limit of the legislative and administrative power of the government, prevent corporate power from being used to influence elections or to control the course of legislation or the administration of our public affairs. We should prohibit, under the severest penalties, all contributions by corporations for political purposes, and make adequate provisions for the investigation at the public expense of all charges that corporations have contributed for political purposes. We should see that the criminal law against unlawful combinations to restrain trade, to stifle competition and to enhance prices to the consumer, is vigorously enforced. We should see that the capitalization of railways and other public service corporations within our jurisdiction is brought under government regulation and control."

The only question that this statement raises is whether Mr. Rowell in office would not fail to carry out so far as his position permitted, the ideas he here enunciates. It is notoriously easy for the leader of an Opposition, a man in utterly irresponsible capacity to say he believes this and would do that. In office his practises are entirely different as a rule. Take the case of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for instance. When Sir Wilfrid was in opposition, previous to 1896, he went up and down the country declaring a protective tariff to be a "delusion, snare and robbery." In office after 1896 his Finance Minister made few changes from the existing Foster tariff. In fact in the fifteen years of Laurier administration the tariff reductions averaged only 1 per cent. The National Policy was retained practically intact. Except cement—of course! In that the Liberals boosted the tariff until they had it up to 60 cents a barrel. So here we have, in a most flagrant case, an utter reversal of policy in office. If Mr. Rowell got into office as Premier of Ontario, would he put these ideas of his into operation? Some of the most prominent business men of the country are Liberals, theoretically, at least, and have immense political power. Would he alienate these as he thought he would alienate Liberals in the liquor business? We beg to express grave doubts. If Mr. Rowell has personal sentiments "agin" the corporations his corporation connections in a legal manner might not embarrass his public action in the least, but it is certain that in actual practice his personal views would not carry him very far, whatever the principle they were founded on.

ENTERPRISE IN BERLIN

A conference on town-planning will be held at Berlin to-morrow. The principles of good town-planning are the same for a large city as for a small one. By planning for future growth, Berlin hopes to avoid the troubles which beset Toronto, Hamilton and other large cities. The discussion may help to point the way to many growing municipalities how to avoid these errors. Civic fathers of Peterborough would do well to follow closely the deliberations at Berlin, as there is no doubt this city is on the verge of a boom. With a boom, comes the sub-division real estate man, who seldom has any care about the future—he is on the spot to make ready money and as quickly as possible. The restrictions in regard to size of lots and regulations as to improvements to be made by the owners, should be well considered before the plans are approved by the City Engineer and City Council.

LAWYER RESENTS REMARK "YOU ARE OFF YOUR NUT",

Mr. Gordon Thornton, Formerly of Peterborough. One of the Principals in Turbulent Scene in Winnipeg Police Court

The following report of Police Court proceedings, taken from the Winnipeg Free Press, will be of interest, as counsel for plaintiff, Mr. Gordon Thornton, is an old Peterborough boy, who has many friends here. While visiting in the city this past summer he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A .E Micks:

A turbulent scene was enacted in the provincial police court before Magistrate McMicken in a private case yesterday afternoon, when two lawyers, a female witness and the magistrate himself played leading parts. When the case opened it proved to be a family squabble. H. P. Blackwood appeared for the defence and Gordon Thornton for the plaintiff, who was a mother claiming to be abused by her slight 17-year-old son.

After exciting passages had been freely indulged in by both counsel, amid protests by the magistrate, Mr. Blackwood took occasion to remark to his opponent, "I think you are off your nut." This was resented by Mr. Thornton, who asked the magistrate whether it were counsel or a blackguard who was opposing him, which elicited a repetition of the former charge. Magistrate McMicken declared that this was the worst scene he had ever witnessed and said to Mr. Blackwood: "I'll get up and leave this chair if you don't hurry."

"I'll not," said the counsel for the defence.

"Well, go on," came from the bench.

"I will call up the attorney-general and complain that I can't get a fair hearing in this court," said Mr. Blackburn, when the magistrate attempted to make him rush through with the cross-examination of Mrs. Harvey, the plaintiff.

When peace had been restored the defence continued the cross-examination when he was interrupted by the lawyer for the plaintiff. "Well, there you are," said Mr. Blackwood, "you can't ask a question without this fellow jumping up and interrupting."

After the cross-examination had continued in a stormy manner for some time with the bench mixing words vehemently and freely with the counsel and the male witness, Magistrate McMicken rose in his chair and shouted, "Say, you're not running this thing," and to Mr. Thornton, "you'll get a hearing, and so will this woman."

Peace, however, did not prevail, and in an instant when tempers were showing the ragged edges again, Mr. McMicken once more jumped up and asked the counsel if they wished to fight, and that he would be delighted to accommodate either or both of them. "I'll take you out myself," he said. Then he offered, if the lawyers wished to continue it, that he would have the chairs and tables removed from the court and they could settle it that way. When the two members of the legal fraternity got down to business again Mr. Thornton interrupted, when Mr. Blackwood said, "Now then, you shut up."

The following dialogue was the result between the magistrate and the counsel for the accused:

"Are you through?"

"No!"

"Then go on," in louder tones.

"I won't until——"

"Then I'll get up and adjourn this," declared the magistrate, and suited the action to the word by commencing to gather the papers to leave the bench.

LAWYERS AS PEACEMAKERS.

Immediately both lawyers became peacemakers, and apologies floated around. The case went on with but little trace of the trouble which had disrupted the court, save once when Mr. Blackwood objected that he was not getting a fair deal, that the stenographer was not noting his objections, and that the magistrate overruled every objection he made.

John Harvey, son of the woman who made the accusation against him, and his brother and step-sister, and several other witnesses were called, but the magistrate finally dismissed the case, reading lectures to both principals, and advocating a greater use of the Bible in the home. The woman declared that she would not live with her husband, or have anything to do with her step-sons, and left the court laying plans to take further action against the boy in question.

THE FATE OF DOROTHY ARNOLD

Family Has No Information as to Missing Girl

New York, Dec. 10.—F. R. Arnold, the father of Dorothy Arnold, refused to add tto the statement made by James Lees Laidlaw, to the effect that the Arnold family now realised that Miss Arnold might have been a white slave victim. News of the recurrence of the subject in the newspapers was kept from Mrs. Arnold who, according to one of the employes in the household, was extremely nervous with the approach of the end of the second year of Miss Arnold's disappearance.

When Mr. Laidlaw was asked yesterday what further information he had as to the final theory of the disappearance accepted in the Arnold home he said:

"Mrs. Arnold believes that the worst has happened to Dorothy. She admits, of course, that she has no definite proof of her daughter's fate, but she would rather have her dead than believe that she had been living under duress for these two years. The Arnold family is of the opinion, as we all are, that Dorothy must have been kidnapped in Central Park undoubtedly by means of a taxicab or one of those night-hawk cabs.

"I am certain that the family has no definite information as to where the poor girl was taken or what eventually became of her, but the fact that she has not communicated with her family is to them conclusive proof that she is dead."

SPECIAL ACT FOR YORK LOAN

To Facilitate the Distribution of the Assets

Monday, December 16th will be the seventh anniversary of the liquidation of the York County Loan & Savings Company. By way of celebrating the occasion the liquidators, the National Trust Company, announce their intention of applying to the Dominion Parliament this session for a special act to facilitate the distribution of the assets. The purpose of the act will be to distribute among the known shareholders the dividends set aside for those shareholders, who have made no claim and of those whose addresses are unknown.

The York County Loan went into liquidation on December 16, 1905. Two years later the assets of the organization were estimated at from 1,875,000 to $1,050,000, and it looked as though the shareholders would get 30 cents on the dollar.

BETTER THAN EXPECTED

Fortunately the assets have realized much better than expected and there have been already two dividends of 25 cents on the dollar each. Over $1,565,000 has been paid out to the shareholders. There is a prospect of a third dividend of an amount not yet determined. There is now $160,000 lying in the bank bearing interest. This sum is constantly being augmented by deferred payments for real estate, and on the realization of other assets.

When the York County Loan closed its doors, there were on its books 114,000 shareholders to whose credit there stood payments of $4,076,800. Of these shareholders, 16,543 made no claim, though some $125,327 stood to their credit.

$92,000 NOT CLAIMED

There is waiting for the 16,543 shareholders who have not sent in their passbooks, dividends amounting to $30,257. There is also waiting for those who have sent in their books, but who have not cashed the dividend cheques sent to them, the sum of $21,000 on the first dividend and $42,000 on the second dividend. These three sums together total $92,000. It is estimated that by the time of the final dividend the total will have been reduced, by the sending in of passbooks and the cashing of cheques to $82,000.

The purpose of the special act for which application will be made at Ottawa is to allow the liquidators to distribute among the other shareholders the $82,000 not claimed by shareholders who have not sent their books or who have not cashed their dividend cheques prior to March first 1913.

City Gives Assurance of New Sewerage System

At last night's Council meeting, Mayor Bradburn reported that the township of North and South Monaghan and Otonabee, had dropped proceedings against the city on the assurance that the city give assurance that a new sewerage system would be completed by December 1 1913. The Council decided that this assurance be given.

BOARD OF WORKS

The Board of Works recommended last night that the City Engineer be authorized to advertise for tenders for 350 cords of stone for street purposes. The Board were also empowered with authority to purchase that amount, and Engineer Hay asked to secure information relative to the cost of trap rock laid down in the city.

CLEVER WORK IN TRIAL BY JURY

Pleasing Presentation at Conservatory Hall

There was some very clever work in the presentation of the operetta "Trial by Jury" as given at the Conservatory Hall, last evening, by a large company, under the direction of Mr. Gliddon, and no doubt a large audience will be present to-night.

The audience was most appreciative. Miss Olive Howell as the Plaintiff, increased in popularity as a vocalist. Miss Howell had a difficult role, but never once did she falter as she pleaded before the Judge and Jury. Her Counsel, Mr. Vernon Morphet gave able assistance throughout, his spirited objections on behalf of his client, being an important factor in the success of the presentation. As the Defendant, Mr. Barnaby Nelson of Toronto, won frequent applause. His wide experience in operetta work, made him a valuable acquisition to the caste and his presence had the effect of adding confidence to the principals and other members of the company. In essaying the part of the Judge, Mr. Asa Huycke, displayed ability that was at all times pleasing. It would be a difficult matter, to find a vocalist, better qualified to assume the exacting role of Judge. The work of Mr. Ed. Hanrahan and Mr. David Fleming, as Usher and Foreman of the Jury, was also well received. The chorus work could hardly be improved upon.

Preceding the presentation, the Conservatory Orchestra was heard in two selections, executed in faultless style, and Mrs. Greenslade, Mrs. Perks, Mr. Flemming and Mr. Morphet contributed a quartette number.

WILL TELL STORY OF HIS CONVERSION

Mr. Hatch Will Tell Why He Left the Footlights

The meetings at Park street Baptist church continue to grow in interest. The faithful gospel preaching of the Rev. Harry Taylor is both edifying to the Christians who attend, and also brings conviction to the hearts of the unsaved. Quite a number have already come out for Christ. Last night Mr. Taylor spoke of the woman who touched the hem of Christ's garment and was healed. It was the touch of genuine faith, and that touch always results, not only in the healing of the body, but the soul.

Mr. Hatch will tell the story of his conversion on Friday night. He was an actor for some years.

OLD ESTABLISHED FIRM IN ENGLAND TO OPEN MANUFACTURING BRANCH IN PETERBORO'

Manufacture Steel Casings and Window Sashes—Would Employ Fifty Hands First Year — Factory to be Located North of De Laval Company—By-law to be Voted on in January

It will be good news to the residents of Peterborough to know that everything looks favorable for a new industry being added to the city's already enviable list. That the city was negotiating with another industry has been commonly current on the streets, but accurate and definite information about the matter was lacking. In accordance with the policy of those behind the work of securing industries, no information was given out officially until all arrangements had been discussed and the preliminary matters settled. Last evening the City Council gave a by-law two readings to aid the Henry Hope and Sons Company, Limited, of Birmingham, England, to establish a factory in Peterborough.

Now that the cat is out of the bag, the remainder of the facts concerning the proposed industry may legitimately be published.

The Henry Hope and Sons, Limited, propose to erect a one storey building, 80 x 200 feet, of brick and steel, on a site immediately north of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company. It is proposed that the firm and Alexander Young, of Toronto, incorporate a company with $240,000 capital and build a factory here, and install machinery, the total valuation being estimated at $60,000; said structure to be completed and operations under way by January, 1914. For the first year the Company promises to employ fifty hands, and in the following nine years at least fifty more each year.

The concessions asked from the city appear to be extremely reasonable. Briefly they are:

Exemption from taxation, save for school and local improvements, for ten years.

A site sufficient for the building of the factory.

To do this it will be necessary for the city to borrow the sum of $11,500 and place a by-law to the ratepayers authorizing the issuing of debentures for that amount.

Out of the $240,000 capital of the Company, $120,000 is preferred stock, and of the latter sum, $20,000 has been bought up by local citizens.

In event of the Company failing to live up to the terms of the by-law they agree to repay the city the cost of the site and the taxes. However, with such a strong backing and with a brisk demand for their production the Company should prove to be a very valuable asset to the city.

They have no other branch in Canada, and the steel casings and window sash which they manufacture are used in the new Bank of Toronto building in Toronto, and on other large buildings, giving splendid satisfaction in every case.

The Henry Hope Company, of Birmingham, England, is nearly one hundred years old, being commenced in the year 1818. They give employment at home to between five and six hundred people, and their establishment covers about six acres of land.

Negotiations have been taking place with the firm for nearly a year. Ex-Mayor Morrow, Senator George A. Cox and Acting Industrial Commissioner S. R. Armstrong have been the "powers behind the throne," and it is largely due to their activity and energy that the firm were finally persuaded to regard Peterborough as the most suitable location for their Canadian branch.

The by-law will be submitted on January 6th.

HAMILTON COMPANY BUYS PROPERTY IN PETERBORO

The Hamilton Herald says: it is said that the Gore Realty Company of this city has purchased a very large tract of land in Peterboro, Ont., near the river front, and that the residents of Peterboro take this and other manifestations as indicating the opening up of a big boom in the spring. The Gore Realty Company has a big stake in Hamilton and has had a great deal to do with the development of real estate in this city and the surrounding country. Its venture in Peterboro is said to be large, but no details could be secured to-day from D'Arcy Martin and George E. Mills, who are interested in the concern.

PROTECTION NO BENEFIT TO THE LABORING MAN

"Resolved that Protection is not a benefit to the Laboring Man," was the outcome of the debate by the Young Men's Class of St. Paul's Church, held in the Sunday school hall last night.

The speakers were all young men under twenty and for most of them it was their first public appearance. As Mr. J. R. Stratton, Mr. H. E. Cowan and the Rev. Robert Pogue afterwards remarked, the opposing speeches showed much ability and were intensely interesting, giving proof of hard work.

The affirmative were—Messrs. C. H. Patterson, captain; H. Taylor, J. Gibson, S. Quick.

The negative were — Messrs. B. Johnston, D. Loucks, S. Goodfellow, and A. Brown, captain.

Each man was given 10 minutes to speak.

The judges were Rev. Robert Pogue, W. J. Chisholm and G. E. Thompson.

FRITZI SCHEFF IS COMING

Miss Fritzi Scheff, the light opera star, under the direction of Jos. M. Gaites, in a new light opera, "The Love Wager," will appear at the Grand next Tuesday. Miss Scheff's new opera is adapted from the new Hungarian comedy, "Seven Sisters." The book is by Edith Ellis, with lyrics by William C. Duncan, and music by a new composer, Charles J. Hambitzer, whom Miss Scheff claims as her own protege.

The story concerns a wager made by Mitzi (Miss Scheff) the fourth daughter in a Hungarian family of seven sisters, that she will have a certain handsome lieutenant one kiss for each of her elder sisters, whom he succeeds in marrying off. With the three elder sisters out of the way, Mitzi would be the next eligible candidate for matrimony. Through the scheming of Mitzi and the lieutenant the three elder sisters are married off but when the lieutenant comes to claim his three kisses there is an unexpected and dramatic climax. Of course, ultimately the lieutenant gets his three kisses and also the charming Mitzi. There are 22 musical numbers in "The Love Wager."

THE FORTUNE HUNTER

All things theatrical center in New York, and a play with a New York endorsement of two years continuous success must have unquestioned merit. Such a play is "The Fortune Hunter," coming to the Grand next Saturday, with John Meehan in the leading role.

"Assume a virtue if you have it not," is its text. Nat Duncan, reared in luxury, is suddenly cast on his own resources and fails at whatever he tries. A college friend outlines a sure plan for becoming a millionaire.

Duncan accedes to this mercenary plan, and the second act reveals him as a drug clerk so elegant and mysterious that the daughter of the richest man in town loves him. Fellow feeling for the aged druggist, who has employed him, as one who has made more failures than himself, enlists his sympathies, and he uses the $500.00 loaned him as a "stake" by his college friend, to save the old druggist from bankruptcy, restocks the store and sends the druggist's daughter to school. He is saved from marrying the heiress from the latter's renouncing him on the false denunciation of a jealous rival and the curtain falls on a love scene with the druggist's daughter and a fortune in sight from an invention of the druggist's and the business Nat has built up.

"On Satan's Knees."

A little girl of five or so was much puzzled on hearing the lines of the old hymn:

And Satan trembles when he sees
The weakest saint upon his knees.

"Whatever," she asked, "did they want to sit on Satan's knees for? I'm sure I should not like to sit on Satan's knees at all, and why should he tremble if they were so little?"

WELL DESERVED COMPLIMENTS

Were Tendered at the Council Meeting

City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, who is successfully discharging the duties of an Industrial Commissioner in conjunction with his regular work was the recipient of deserved praise last evening, at the last regular Council meeting of 1912.

Alderman Johnston drew attention to Mr. Armstrong's indefatigable work in connection with the Industrial Commissioner Department. He maintained that the City Clerk was justifiably entitled to a very large share of credit for the cheerful and energetic manner in which he fulfilled the duties of both offices. He thought next year the City Council should make arrangements to empower Mr. Armstrong with more authority and scope seeing that he was serving the city so faithfully in two capacities.

Mayor Bradburn and the whole Council warmly endorsed Alderman Johnston's remarks.

It was Mayor Bradburn's turn next to hear nice things in reference to his year's work and assistance in the capacity of Chief Magistrate.

Alderman Butler pronounced His Worship to be the best Mayor the city has ever had, a statement that was ably supported by Ald. Johnston. The latter hoped to see Mayor Bradburn in the chair again next year.

In replying, Mayor Bradburn said the he did not know just how good or how bad a Mayor he had been. He simply had endeavored to perform his duty and he assured the aldermen that it had afforded him great pleasure to work hand in hand with them. He anticipated great things for Peterborough. In closing he referred to the value and capability of City Clerk Armstrong, whom he had always found willing to shoulder his share of the work, and assume all reasonable responsibility.

The Mayor resumed his seat amid hearty applause.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS AT COUNCIL MEETING

Officials of "Model City" Received Some Tips

The Council of the "Model City" of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Department were interested visitors at last night's City Council meeting. The boys were wide awake and nothing passed their notice, and their own meetings will hereafter undoubtedly be carried on according to the ideas they received last night. The boys of the "Y" are citizens-in-the-making, and instruction such as they received on this visit, cannot but help to make them "Good Citizens."

CHARGES ARE MADE

Against the M.H.O. by W.A. Fife of Division Street

Charging Medical Health Officer McPherson with a serious deviation from duty, a resident of Division street, W. A. Fife, appeared before the City Council last night and lodged his complaint.

Mr. Fife related the circumstances leading up to his little girl being attacked by scarlet fever on October 7th last. His child returned home from school on a Friday, feeling very unwell, and he administered simple remedies. She continued getting worse, however, and finally fever developed. Dr. Halliday was called in, and after an examination, pronounced the little girl to be suffering from an attack of scarlet fever. The M. H. O. was notified, so Mr. Fife claimed, about the case, and did not put in an appearance until quite a long period afterwards, nearly four hours, so Mr. Fife said. Dr. Halliday told the complainant at the time that the girl would either have to go to the Isolation Hospital for treatment and her father and the rest of the family be put under quarantine for the usual ten days.

When the Medical Health Officer called, Mr. Fife said he sauntered up leisurely, and when spoken to about being so long in coming, he replied in a flippant manner, using the words, "What is it to me, anyway?" Mr. Fife said that Dr. McPherson then went in and looked at his little girl and said that she was suffering from scarlet fever all right and that she must go to the Isolation Hospital, or else be quarantined for six weeks at home.

Mr. Fife also claimed that Dr. McPherson told him to slip out the same night and procure the placard for the house, and this he thought was grossly wrong, the other residents on the street knowing at the time that his little girl was afflicted with the fever.

Some time after Dr. McPherson happened to be near his place, and seeing a sister of the sick child outside, he contended himself by asking how the patient was getting on, without troubling himself to go and find out personally.

All this Mr. Fife described in warm tones.

Mayor Bradburn assured Mr. Fife, as politely as possible, that if he put his charges in writing, they would be thoroughly investigated by the Council.

M. H. O. IS SILENT.

Dr. McPherson, when seen to-day, would not discuss the matter. He gave the impression, however, that his actions had not been such as to warrant any complaint being made.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Dick Simons, brother of Mr. Fred Simons, the local tailor, takes the part of Tracey Tanner in "The Fortune Hunter."

Mr. E. Worth of the Bonner-Worth Co. has taken the home of Mr. J. Dillon for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Dillon are leaving for Jacksonville, Fla., where they will remain until spring.

PASTOR RUSSELL MAKES CHARGE

Hamilton Clergyman is Accused of Criminal Libel

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 10.—Rev. J. I. Ross, pastor of James street Baptist Church, and formerly of Dovercourt Road Church, Toronto, has been called into court by Pastor Russell The renowned preacher of the Gospel Tabernacle, Brooklyn, claims that certain pamphlets of Rev. Mr. Ross, for instance, "The Prophecy on Olivet," which is sold in Hamilton and Toronto at 50 cents per hundred, contain a criminal libel on his character. A summons has been issued by Magistrate Jelfs and cites portions of the leaflet in question, which Mr. Ross had distributed in front of the I.O.O.F. Temple here on the night that Pastor Russell spoke there. Certain quotations of the work, as contained in the official summons, are as follows:

BASES OF COMPLAINT.

"Though the name of Russell is quite familiar, very little is known about the man himself. We first heard of him selling shirts in Allegheny, Pa., having inherited this business from his father. He lectured on religious subjects from time to time in various halls and churches, becoming known as the preacher. He got a considerable following of the baser sort, and sold out the stores he owned, thenceforth giving all his time to teaching the peculiar doctrines and giving out that he himself was some great one.

"He never attended the higher schools of learning, knows comparatively nothing of philosophy, systematic or historical theology, and is totally ignorant of the dead languages and yet he is successful in making his disciples believe that the most difficult passages in the Bible are as a simple sunbeam to him. Pastor Russell was never ordained and has no church affiliation. He would not be given a place in the pulpit of any Evangelical Church on the American continent or any other country where he or his views are known."

Allegations concerning a divorce are also complained of.

PETERBORO WILL BE REPRESENTED

At Meeting of Canadian Baseball League To-morrow

The Peterborough Baseball Club will be represented at the meeting of the Canadian Baseball League at Toronto to-morrow.

It is proposed to combine the offices of President and Secretary, with President Fitzgerald holding the position. Judging from reports from the eight clubs, all will be in line again next season with stronger teams. The league has weathered some rather stiff gales, and, as experience in baseball as well as in other operations is a good backer, each of the clubs should reap benefits.

The Canadian League is a fixture on the baseball map.

TWO CASES ARE BEING HEARD

At December Sittings of the County Court

The December sittings of the County Court commenced to-day before His Honor Judge Huycke. There were two jury cases, but no non-jury.

G. N. Gordon represented Huffman, and D. O'Connell acted for plaintiff.

Chief Constable Kidd, of Brampton, was one of the witnesses in the case, which went to the jury at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The other case was an action by the same plaintiff against Page for damages to his character, arising out of the arrest.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER APPROVES OF NAVAL POLICY

Vancouver, B.C., December 10.—Sir Charles Tupper, who now resides in Vancouver, enthusiastically endorses Mr. Borden's naval policy.

"The position taken by the Borden Government is an admirable one from beginning to end," he said. "It has my hearty approval, and I belive it will have the hearty approval of all Canadians, and I do not except the leader of the Opposition.

"It affords a happy solution of a difficult question. Every valid objection is met and it marks an immediate step forward in establishing satisfactory relations between the Mortherland and the Dominion.

"I hope it will be adopted by Parliament by an overwhelming majority, and show the world that Canada stands shoulder to shoulder with the rest of the Empire whether in time of peace or war."

POWER HOUSE AT BOBCAYGEON WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

A disastrous fire occurred at Bobcaygeon on Sunday morning, when the village electric light power house, situated at Little Bob, near the site of Boyd's old mill, was entirely destroyed; all that is left is the water wheel.

The power house was a frame structure with a foundation of cement. The plant was a municipal one and has been operated by a Commission since the fall of 1906. Two small motors furnished street and domestic lighting for the village.

The loss is estimated in the neighborhood of $5,000 with insurance amounting to $2,700.

The loss has greatly inconvenienced the village, which is now without light. A meeting of the Commission was held this morning to consider the situation, and it is understood that the secretary was instructed to communicate with the Hydro-Electric for information that would help them to solve the problem.

WORK ON THE G. T. PACIFIC

The Hudson Bay Company's post at Fort George, British Columbia, are laying their plans and making arrangements to have their next season supplies come in by way of Edmonton and Tete Jaune Cache, over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This arrangement marks a new feature in transportation over that country, as heretofore all freight had to be drawn in by waggon over the old cariboo road for a distance of 167 miles, and thence by steamer for another 150 miles.

Every day brings us nearer to the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This is emphasized by the fact that passengers can now leave Edmonton at 10.00 p.m. in Pullman Sleeping Car, arriving at Fitzhugh, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, Alberta, at 9.20 the next morning, and Tete Jaune Cache on the Fraser River, in British Columbia at 2.00 o'clock the next afternoon, 16 hours to do the journey. This is remarkable when it is considered that two years ago last summer, an exploration party in charge of Mr. H. R Charlton, General Advertising Agent of the Company, penetrated the forests and followed the trails through the Yellowhead Pass, which trip occupied 37 days of continuous travel by pack train between Edson and Tete Jaune Cache.

Galt's Gas Service Poor.

Galt, Dec. 10.—The natural gas service since the cold snap has depreciated to such an extent that all consumers are greatly inconvenienced and in cases where the motive-power depends on the supply, are seriously handicapped and put to loss. Complaints are so universal and insistent that the council consider taking decisive action to redress the grievance. The gas company assign no reason for the shortage and do not seem disposed to exertions to relieve the distressing situation.

Deplores the Navy Vote.

Kingston, Dec. 10.—Preaching at Sydenham Street Church, Rev. G. I. Campbell touched on the Borden Navy Bill. He said that while the people of Canada were loyal British subjects, he believed that we should and did deplore such a contribution, in variance as it was to God's will, it's object being the slaughter of mankind

Shot Big Wild Goose.

Galt, Dec. 10.—A large wild goose shot on the farm of Cameron Scott, near Branchton, measured 7 feet from tip to tip of the wings and weighed twelve pounds.

CRIME AMONG BEASTS.

Enemies to Law and Order Among Animals of Lower World.

Those in a position to speak authoritatively assure us that crime is to be found among the lower as well as among the higher animals—men. In the lower orders it appears there are individuals, like men, that seem incapable of living and satisfying their wants without doing harm to their fellows. The school of Lombroso goes so far as to assert that almost every variety of human wrongdoing finds its counterpart in the crimes committed by animals.

Among bees there is much theft. The "light-fingered" gentry of the hives, in order to save themselves the trouble of working, attack the masses, kill them, rob the hives and carry off the booty when they cannot obtain it by stealth. Sometimes, having acquired an incurable taste for robbery and violence, they form regular colonies of bandits.

It has been pointed out that, extraordinary as it may seem, it is quite possible to produce artificially these tiny enemies to law and order by the simple process of giving working bees a mixture of honey and brandy to drink. They at once become morose and irritable, and after a short course of the mixture lose all desire to work. Finally, when hunger stirs, they attack and plunder the well-supplied hives.

Dove owners assert that in almost every dove cote there are birds that try to obtain material for their nests by abstracting straws that have been collected by others. These mild thieves are not only lazy, but unamenable to discipline by their fellows.

Murder is not uncommon among animals, "murder" in this sense being applied to that kind of killing that has nothing to do with the struggle for existence, but which arises from malice, pure and simple, or from downright passion. Storks, it seems, frequently kill members of the flock which at the time of migration either refuse to follow them or are unable to do so.

A veterinary surgeon has testified that in every regiment of cavalry one may find horses that rebel against discipline and let no opportunity escape them of doing harm either to man or their well-trained fellows. In dealing with these "bad actors" it always is necessary to be on one's guard, and it often is imperative to separate them from the others in the stable, as they try to steal their companion's food. What is still more curious is that their skulls show an abnormal formation, the forehead being narrow and retreating.

Animal Ventriloquists.

Ventriloquism is not confined solely to the human race. There are many birds whose notes it is almost impossible "to place." Take the corn crake, with its harsh "crake, crake!" One moment the sound is by your feet, the next fifty yards away. The grasshopper is another offender in this respect. Its sibilant note is hard to locate.

Greeks' Worship of Lightning.

The Greeks were so much afraid of lightning that they worshiped it. They endeavored to avert its malignant influence by hissing and whistling at it. In places which had suffered by it altars were erected and oblations made to avert the anger of the gods, after which no one dared to touch or approach them.

Wet Shoes.

If shoes have been thoroughly wet don't attempt to dry them near the stove. Rub in plenty of vaseline or plain lard and let stand in a cool place several days, and much of the original oil will be restored.

TO FIGHT AVIATORS.

Eagles Will Be Used to Upset Aeroplanes In War.

As a result of the amazing success of the aeroplane in recent military manoeuvres in Europe, army experts are busy trying to discover some methods of spoiling the efficiency of airships as spies. Several varieties of guns have been invented for the purpose, but experiments have proved that these inventions are of little value, as it is more difficult to hit a flying airship than one would think. Under present conditions apparently an army must either fight aeroplanes with aeroplanes or permit them to fly away untouched after doing all the harm they can and after spying out the army's dispositions. Even with pursuing aeroplanes disaster is more probable than success to the pursuer.

But it has been found that a very slight injury to the driver of an aeroplane will destroy his control and send him toppling to his death. The late Galbraith Rogers, a very brilliant aviator, is said to have met his death because a seagull accidentally flew against him and disturbed his control of his machine. If such a modest-sized bird as a seagull could wreck an aviator, what could an eagle do?

The Swiss eagle is a very powerful bird. The French aviation officers stationed at Nice, which is within a few miles of the Alpine home of eagles, have trained six great eagles to fight the soldier aviator. The officers have constructed machines resembling aeroplanes in shape, but supported by balloons. To these they attach chickens, mice and all sorts of live prey that the eagles love.

The aeroplane balloons are then sent up, and the eagles are let loose. With fierce cries and flapping of their wings they attack an aeroplane and tear the living prey from it. In their eagerness they fight one another, and the aeroplane is sometimes turned upside down in their struggles. It is inconceivable that any men in an aeroplane, even if there were three or four of them, could retain control of their machine in face of such an attack.

No one who has watched an eagle only on the ground can have any conception of it power. The bird is at a disadvantage on the ground, because it was made to fly and not to walk, and because it does not develop the full power of its tremendous wings until it has had space in which to work them. But in its natural realm, the upper air, an eagle will be capable of upsetting any flying machine.

The eagles are capable of pursuing an aeroplane to any height, and following it to any distance. Any gun is practically useless against an aeroplane which has risen above five hundred yards, and, of course, the bullet cannot pursue an object after it has once missed its mark.

The Saturnalia.

The saturnalia was a midwinter feast of the Romans in honor of Saturn, beginning Dec. 17. On this occasion great license was given to every one to do what he pleased, and even the slaves were permitted much liberty of speech and action. All work was suspended, the houses and temples were decorated, congratulations were exchanged and presents sent.

The Cat's Toilet.

Cats are noted for the carefulness of their toilet. The lion and the tiger wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, india rubber-like ball of the forefoot and inner toe and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a sponge and a brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares "Nerviline" Is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. I. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P. E. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

Nerviline CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs, and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 50c, trial size 25c, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

AUTOMATIC SPOTTER TO ELIMINATE PIN BOYS

The pin-boy, prominent feature of all bowling alleys, is due to pass, if a recent invention, perfected in Muskegon, Mich., pans out as expected.

An alley in Muskegon has been equipped with the invention. It has worked perfectly and it is probable that several Milwaukee alleys will be so equipped before long.

The contrivance is simple in principle and is operated by the player by means of two electric push buttons which cause the removal of the pins and replace them in their proper positions.

A small motor furnishes the power and three seats of pins, manipulated by unique devices, makes almost continuous playing possible. The whole apparatus, which is very compact, is handily placed at the end of the alley in such a manner as not to take much room or interfere with the playing.

After each play the bowler touches a button and the slide descends nearly to the top of the pins. The surface of the slide is highly magnetized, and inserted in the top of the pin is a small piece of magnetized iron. As the slide rises it carries with it the pins that were left standing, and immediately a sweep passes over the floor, carrying the deadwood and ball into a moving elevator. The pins left are instantly replaced, the slide descending automatically. In the meantime, the pins not on the board are being continuously arranged by an automatic device, so that as soon as the turn of the next player comes a complete set of pins is placed in position.

The machine operates with the greatest accuracy and the pins are placed in exactly the same place designed.

The groupings for the three series of the O.H.A. were arranged at a meeting of the Executive, which met in Toronto last night. There are thirteen senior, fifty intermediate and forty-two junior teams entered for the 1912-13 season. Mr.

A meeting of the local executive will be held in President Ray's store this evening at 7.30 o'clock, when important business will come up for consideration.

CECIL IS HYSTERICAL.

Excitable Conservative Lord Is Striking Figure In British Commons.

Lord Hugh Cecil was the recipient of many congratulations on celebrating his forty-third birthday. He has been living the strenuous life of late, for many political measures in which he takes the keenest interest have been to the fore, and he does not spare himself in opposition.

His political career has not been free from vicissitudes, for he fell foul of the Tariff Reformers, and lost his seat as member for Greenwich at the 1906 election. He now represents Oxford University, but as he still refuses to walk the main plank in the Unionist policy, viz., Tariff Reform, his relations with members of the Opposition are not distinguished by their cordiality.

Lord Hugh Cecil competes with Mr Keir Hardie for the distinction of being the worst-dressed man in the House. In fact, he appears to delight in his shabbiness. It is related that being on one occasion invited to a political party his hostess was so ashamed of his appearance that she kept him in an ante-room until the more important of her guests had departed. There is a strain of asceticism running through his character and he has the temperament of a true visionary. He is recognized as the chief apologist and defender of the Church of England in the House of Commons, and is in great favor with the Anglican bishops.

As a speaker he is full of mannerisms. In fact, his matter is a deal better than his manner. An incisive thinker, he is also a very clever phrasemaker, and is as ready to attack members of his own party as Radicals. Mr. Balfour, when Prime Minister, found this tendency to insubordination in his cousin very trying, and more than once severely snubbed him. But Lord Hugh refused to be crushed. He once jeered at the "urbane effrontery" of his relative and leader, and on another occasion he referred to one of Mr. Chamberlain's Tariff Reform arguments as "a bold bid for the unanimous support of the Horse Marines." But Lord Hugh weakens his position in the House and amongst his own party by his excitable temper. He flies into passions, shakes himself like a reed, and gives every evidence of hysteria whenever one of his articles of faith is attacked. And the House of Commons has ever been averse to hysteria.

WEDDING RINGS.

Some Curious Customs In Heathen and Civilized Ages.

The universal custom of using the fourth finger of the left hand for the wedding ring is one of the many survivals of the ancient past, and there is still a tradition that the fourth finger was formed without the power to be stretched forth by itself in order to signify that only by marriage could a woman advance. Even in very ancient graves a ring has been found upon this finger, but anthropologists have claimed that the cause of this was for the protection of the ring, since the left hand is less used for labor than the right, and because the fourth finger is protected by the need of other fingers being associated with it in whatever work it may have to do.

There used to be a belief—which exists still as a superstition in some places—that there was an artery in that finger which proceeded directly from the heart, and in consequence of this a great deal of witchcraft was associated with this finger. The famous Dead Man's Hand, which was supposed to have the power of opening every kind of lock and bolted door, was supposed to be composed of the fourth finger of the left hand of four women who had murdered their husbands and the thumb of a man who had strangled his wife. The manufacture of such a Dead Man's Hand, it will be noted, was a matter of some difficulty, as the materials were not always easy to find.

The use of the wedding ring existed long before Christianity, and it was for this reason that the fanatic Protestants during the days of Cromwell tried to abolish it. One Puritan minister was imprisoned for marrying a couple with a "heathen ring." In early English books of religious rites the ring was to be put by the minister or priest first on the thumb, then on the first finger, then on the second finger, and on the third, in token of the blessing of the three persons of the Trinity, after which it was to be put on the fourth finger at the "Amen," in which the bride must join. In some countries the use of the ring is compulsory, but need not be worn after marriage, and many a couple have been married with the ring-like handle of the big key of the church door being used for the wedding symbol.

As a matter of fact it was not considered at all necessary at one time for the bride to wear a wedding ring, the only need of the ring being during the ceremony as a symbol of endless loyalty and affection.

It is told in one of the tales of the middle ages when knighthood was in flower how a brave knight rescued his lady love from a tower, and, taking her on his horse to the nearest priest, they were married. The story tells in detail that the lady's jewels had been taken from her in the tower, the knight had no ring, and the priest had no such baubles. The clever knight, however, took the iron ring from his horse's bridle and they were were married with that.

Marriage Bargains.

George A. Birmingham, the well-known writer, says there is no country in the world where marriage, at least in the peasant class, is more a matter of bargaining, and yet shows a higher average of stability and content, than Ireland. Sometimes the man has never seen the woman before they are brought together, the precise number of pounds, cows, or pigs to be handed over having been by that time settled.

This is illustrated in personal recollections just published by an Irish lady. She was visiting with an aunt a cottage in the neighborhood, and admired a fine mahogany chest of drawers.

"'Twas for that I was married," said the mistress of the cottage. "A young farmer had also seen and admired. A bargain was struck. There was no money, but the bride was to have a couple of sheep, a yearling bullock, and the chest. The prudent young man measured it, and then turned and asked.

"An' which o' thim little girls is it?"

She was the oldest unmarried—"nixt the doore," as the phrase was. "An' so I wint," she said, "and was happy ever afterwards."

Co-operative Milking.

"Share-milking," as known in New Zealand, has proved itself to be a most satisfactory system in the Taranaki district, both for the employer and employe. It is an arrangement made between the farmer and his milkers on the co-operative basis of an equitable division of the milk, calves, and pigs in proportions varying according to the quality of the land. The farmer provides the land, stock, houses, and necessary buildings; the milkers provide all labor and, in most cases, their own horses, wagons, and cans, and pay a proportion of the cost of hay and other winter forage.

The system finds favor with the farmer, who is relieved of all labor responsibilities, while the milkers, and especially those married couples who have strong, healthy families able to help in the work, can earn good wages (from $1,200 upwards per annum), with free house, garden, milk, and grazing for horses. Many families, after a few years of "share-milking," have purchased farms for themselves out of their savings, and are now enjoying the comfort of their own freehold estates.

Costly Stamps.

We are accustomed to think of postage stamps as penny or halfpenny things until they become old, but stamps of the face value of $25 have been issued in Great Britain and are still common in other countries. British South Africa until recently had one for $50. The highest-priced stamp ever issued was the rectangular pink $500 stamp of Victoria, Australia.

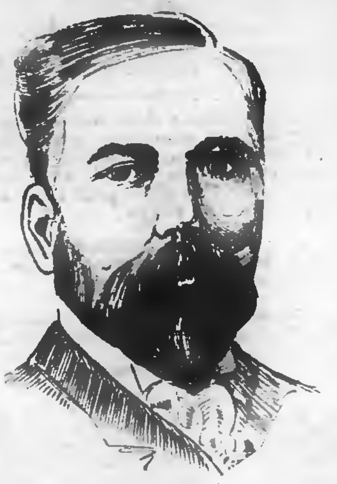
LATE ROBERT BARR CAME HERE AT AGE OF THREE.

In His Early Manhood the Novelist Was a School Teacher In Toronto —He Entered Journalism and After a Time Made His First Hit In Literature—He Was an Extensive Traveler and an Indian Freeman.

Death has closed the adventurous life of Mr. Robert Barr, the well-known novelist, who passed away recently at the age of 62, at Woldingham, Surrey, England. Born in Glasgow, Robert Barr was taken by his parents to Canada in his fourth year, and in early manhood he became a master in a Toronto school, later on obtaining a headmastership. Leaving the Dominion for the United States, he joined the staff of The Detroit Free Press," and under the pseudonym of "Luke Sharp" his writings commanded a considerable share of attention on that side of the Atlantic. In 1881 he went to England, and eleven years afterwards he joined Jerome K. Jerome in the editorship of The Idler, for the foundation of which paper they had been together responsible. "In the Midst of Alarms" was the first of his novels to gain him any fame; it was a tale of rural life in Canada, and it sought to depict the terror of the country people at a threatened incursion of Fenians from across the borders. This was followed by "A Woman Intervenes," "The Mutable Many," and "The Countess Tekla," a story of mediaeval times in Rhenish Germany, which is considered by many to be the best of his books. Among his later novels were "The Unchanging East" and "The Tempestuous Petticoat," both of which attracted some attention. Apart from his literary work, or in conjunction with it, Mr. Barr traveled extensively, and met with a sufficiency of adventures. Once, when in Syria on a visit to some mines, he was thrown into prison by the Turkish authorities, but much earlier in his career he had dealings with the Iroquis Indians, with whom, however, he became on most friendly terms. He went amongst them as a representative of the Canadian Government, and pleased them so well that he was made a freeman of the tribe.



MR. ROBERT BARR.

Raising the Hibernian Wind.

Mr. William Redmond, who has lately been touring through the states on behalf of the Nationalist cause, and obtaining both moral and financial support for his party, has long been a familiar figure at Westminster. It is nearly thirty years since he entered the House of Commons as member for Wexford, and he has never been without a seat, though in 1885 he transferred his affections to County Fermanagh, and proceeded from there to East Clare in 1892, which constituency he still represents.

Mr. William Redmond is just ten years younger than his brother, Mr. John Redmond. Like his more famous brother, he is a barrister, though he has never practiced. He is a very eloquent speaker, but he differs considerably in temperament from Mr. John Redmond. In fact, the two brothers provide a striking contrast. Mr. William Redmond is excitable, and easily aroused to passion. On more than one occasion he has startled the House by his oratorical outbursts, and he is quite devoid of the majestic manner for which the National leader is famous. But withal, the younger Redmond is a force to be reckoned with, and his high spirits and Hibernian wit have made him a popular figure in the House of Commons.

Curzon's Bad Fist.

Lord Curzon, when a young man at college, once found his bad handwriting stand him in good stead. Writing two letters, one to a relative, the other to a chum, he enclosed them in the wrong envelopes. It chanced that in the second letter he had made some uncomplimentary reference to his relative, and on discovering the mistake he had made he awaited developments with anxiety.

There presently came a letter from the uncle. "I have tried hard to decipher your epistle," it ran, "but your writing is so atrocious that I cannot make head nor tail of it. However, I guess the drift of it to be that you need some money, you rogue, so I enclose a check."

The Boss' Favorite.

"The trouble is that my boss has favorites. You can't deny it."

"I won't deny it. But have you noticed that his favorites do all the hard work about the place?"

Mixed.

A professor at one of the Australian universities informed his class that "the darkest hour in the day is in the middle of the night at 3 o'clock in the morning."

London and Money.

London has one thing all its own. It is not only a place of manufacture, but of all manufactures. All trades, mechanical industries, textile industries, find a roost in London, till it is said "London has no staple industry," because London has all sorts. The rateable value of the metropolis is nearly double the rateable value of Lancashire.

The bulk of its population is commercial, and is massed at the rate of 40,000 to square mile. The docks are the dumping ground of the drift population of several countries. Imports arrived at them worth $2,825,000,000; exports worth $1,645,000,000 departed in 1905. London monopolizes the Mint and stamps the coinage for 40,000,000 people. And yet we are gravely told that "very little actual gold is needed to carry out the multitudinous transactions of a trading people."

We must not take this too literally. Many a small country would count itself prosperous if its revenue equalled the gold coinage circulating in London only. But the bill-brokers and banks put gold in the shade by the magnitude of their transactions in bills of exchange. Financiers say that the London Clearing House handles seventy billion dollars in checks —"the real money of England. Coin is only odd change."

These dollars are nigh on fourteen billion pounds. Every spring John Bull has about twenty billion pounds to invest in the miscellaneous enterprises of the world. Is it not prodigious?—T. P.'s Weekly.

No Use for It.

Judge Parry says in his book that the uneducated man in the street is a better witness of outdoor facts than a clerk or warehouseman, having a more retentive memory. He tells a story of a blacksmith who went to the farriery classes held by the Manchester education authorities. The clerk in charge gave him a note-book and a pencil.

"Wot's this 'ere for?" asked the blacksmith.

"To take notes," replied the clerk.

"Notes? Wot sort o' notes?"

"Why, anything the lecturer says which you think important and want to remember you may make a note of it," said the clerk.

"Oh," was the scornful reply, "anything I wants to remember I must make a note of in this 'ere book, must I? Then what do you think my bloomin' yed's for?"

Bisley Changes.

That the central scoring system which is now operative only in rifle match competitions shall be abolished entirely at Bisley is the decision of the council of the National Rifle Association.

There has been a general feeling among competitors that the award of an extra point for placing a shot within a ring, which was invisible from the firing line, resulted in many instances in contests being largely decided by luck, and now that the system has gone altogether few marksmen will regret its disappearance.

The decision of the council was made known recently in a communication received from the secretary Lt.-Col. Crosse, who also reported that the regulations for service rifle sights would be similar to those in operation at the last Bisley meeting. For match rifles the regulations will be as for 1912, but it is probable that in 1913 there may be modifications in the conditions as to bore and ammunition. It has also been decided in individual competitions to introduce one man firing at a time with a time allowance, but this will not apply to shoulder-to-shoulder competitions.

Was Hot For Once.

During one of Queen Victoria's stays in Balmoral many years ago the Queen dropped in unannounced at a cottage and asked for a cup of tea. The good wife bustled about and soon set a plate of hot buttered toast before Her Majesty, saying apologetically that she feared it was not what the Queen was used to. "No, indeed, it isn't," said the Queen. "I have never known what hot toast was before. The worst of living in a big house is that the kitchen is such a long way off. My toast is always half cold by the time I get it."

Kuntz's ORIGINAL LAGER

It's More Refreshing

"Did you ever notice how much more refreshing Kuntz's Original Lager is than ordinary lagers?" remarked a man to a friend, as they were enjoying a bottle the other day. "Yes," replied his friend, who, by the way, was a physician, "and the reason is because Kuntz's Original Lager is brewed from naturally pure spring water, instead of ordinary or city waters which require to be artificially or chemically purified."

Let your next bottle be Kuntz's Original Lager. See how much more enjoyable and refreshing is this famous spring-water lager. 66

PUBLIC UNAWARE OF THE TROUBLES OF COUNCIL

Says Ex-Mayor Morrow in Reply to Vote of Thanks From City Dads.

Last evening was probably the last gathering of the City Fathers for the year 1912, unless a special meeting should be called for some unforseen business. All the members were present save Alderman Morgan.

Ex-Mayor Morrow dropped in about nine o'clock and occupied a chair on the platform with Mayor Bradburn. Alderman Buller referred to the pleasure it afforded the whole Council to see the ex-Mayor back in what was once his accustomed place. He took occasion to refer to the valuable assistance that the ex-Mayor had given, together with Hon. George A. Cox in the work of inducing the Henry Hope Company to consider Peterborough as the location for their proposed Canadian factory.

"It is a growing industry," said the Board of Works chairman, "and we were given to understand that only skilled labor would be required—that is they would train men in the particular line of work necessary for their business." Considering therefore what ex-Mayor Morrow and Hon. George A. Cox had done for the city he took much pleasure in moving a hearty vote of thanks to both gentlemen for their interest and kindness.

Judging from the applause, the sentiments expressed by Alderman Buller were entertained by all the other councillors.

Mayor Bradburn conveyed in a few suitable words to ex-Mayor Morrow the council's vote of thanks, which Mr. Morrow appropriately acknowledged on behalf of his uncle Hon. George A. Cox, and himself. He stated that he always would endeavor to perform everything in his power to further the interests of the City of Peterborough. He realized that the City Council was striving to do its best to advance the interests of Peterborough, although the general public was too frequently unaware of the trouble that is encountered by the Mayor and civic officials in the efforts to secure industries. He remarked briefly upon the tremendous amount of competition that exists between cities in the fight for the acquisition of new industries.

He was warmly applauded upon resuming his chair.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Ratepayers to Pass on Three Money By-laws

The ratepayers of the city will be given opportunity to vote on three money by-laws on January 6th, authorizing altogether the raising of $141,000.

There will also be the local option by-law which is bound to prove interesting.

The Mayoralty chair will be awarded by acclamation to Mayor Bradburn who has so successfully discharged the onerous duties during the past year. At present there is not the slightest intimation that he will be opposed.

The aldermanic elections will cause a little excitement and the contests in the north ward promises to be interesting.

The retiring members of the Board of Education this year will be Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Robert Fair, Dr. M. A. Morrison and V. Eastwood.

The Water Commissioners are again expected to be re-elected by acclamation, the three members, Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Hill and W. H. Moore K.C., handling the duties most capably every year.

The money by-laws are for the following purposes:—

$120,000 for the distribution of electricity in Peterborough.

$10,000 for the purchase of land and the erection of an incinerating plant.

$11,500 for the Henry Hope & Sons, Limited new industry.

The three will all be on one ballot for convenience.

Landry Appointment Discussed Again—Recess For Christmas Will be Taken Dec. 19—Hon. Dr. Pugsley Says Preference Should be Given Only to Goods Entering Canadian Ports.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—The House yesterday advanced through committee the legislation necessary to bring into effect the trade agreement between Canada and certain of the British West Indian Islands. The debate was resumed upon the Landry appointment at Descouse, N.S., and a number of Liberal members took occasion to repeat their complaints about the dismissal of office holders on the ground of offensive partisanship. The House will probably adjourn on Thursday, the 19th inst., for a shorter holiday recess than usual.

The Premier and Hon. Mr. Doherty replied to the charges made in the House Monday by Mr. G. W. Kyte of Richmond, N.S., in regard to the appointment of Capt. Andrew Landry of Descouse, N.S., to a position as wharfinger and caretaker of buoys at that port.

Both asserted that the mistake in appointing him had been an unwitting one, and that his release from jail had been according to regular procedure, owing to the prisoner's illness, and not owing to any political pressure. At the same time they insisted on the rule against making public the papers on file in the Department of Justice dealing with applications for release.

On the Liberal side Mr Kyte and other speakers, while holding the Minister of Justice personally guiltless in the matter, pressed for the production of the papers, and pointed the moral that appointments should not be made to the public service solely on the recommendation of the defeated candidate who held the patronage of the riding.

Mr. Foster put through the committee stage the tariff resolutions upon which a bill will be founded ratifying the reciprocity agreement between Canada and a number of the British West Indian colonies. The agreement in effect gives a preference of twenty per cent. to the colonies affected upon certain imports into Canada, mainly tropical fruits. These already enjoy a preference of thirty-three and one-third per cent. under the British preference. The treaty does not take away this preference which might be taken away any time by act of Parliament, but guarantee them a preference of twenty per cent. in any event for the next ten years.

The colonies now parties to the agreement include British Guiana, Barbados, Trinidad, St. Kitts, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Dominica, Montserrat and Antigua. Other West Indian colonies not parties to the agreement but which will enjoy its benefits for three years include Bermuda, Bahamas, British Honduras, Jamaica and Granada.

The colonies party to the agreement give to certain imports from Canada a preference of twenty per cent. The agreement does not affect the preferences already given to West Indian sugar by Canada.

Hon. William Pugsley called attention to those provisions in the agreement which permit the Governor-in-Council by proclamation to restrict the preference to goods entered from the West Indies at Canadian ports. He declared that the British preference should be restricted to imports entering Canadian seaports.

Hon. Mr. Foster said he cordially agreed with this principle, and hoped to see the day when all goods from the United Kingdom and the British possessions would be compelled to come across the sea direct to Canadian ports. At present he did not think it would be feasible to attempt such a policy. The West Indian colonies had protested that a preference would do them no good if they were compelled to ship to Canada direct, because the steamship company would bag the preference.

It was therefore agreed that the Governor-in-Council should not issue his proclamation until the Canadian Government has acquired the right and power to regulate the rates. Such regulation could only be brought about through subsidizing a line of vessels.

The Trade and Commerce Department had called for tenders for a steamship service from Montreal to the West Indies via Halifax and St. John in summer and from Halifax via St. John in winter. The result had been most disappointing. The tenders, he said, showed no breadth of competition and were quite indefinite as to specifications. Just now steamers and steamship companies were reaping a golden harvest, and it was hard to interest them in experimental enterprises like the Canadian and West Indian trade. New tenders had been called for, however, which would be opened on the 15th inst.

A. K. MacLean, the Liberal member for Halifax, regarded the agreement in itself as quite important. Canada could build up a trade with the West Indies by having a good steamship service. In his opinion it was childish to subsidise the service from Montreal to the West Indies. Sometimes the ship lost a couple of weeks sailing between Halifax and St. John and taking cargo at both places. A successful service could only be built up from Halifax to the West Indies.

Mr. Carvell Carleton, N.B.) said the policy of the Government was to force trade into unnatural channels, and that could only be done by a big expenditure. From Toronto west, the Canadian trade was faced with United States competition in the shape of a shorter land haul from New York as well as better steamship service. He suggested subsidizing the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. in order to build up a trade between Canada and the West Indies by rail and boat via St. John, N.B.. The resolutions were approved without further discussion.

TWO DUCK HUNTERS ARE MAROONED ON ISLAND

Spectacular Rescue of Men by Crew of Steam Tug.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec 11.—After one of the most spectacular and hazardous rescues ever witnessed in this vicinity, George Durham and John Symmes, residing in this city, who left Chippawa Monday on a duck-hunting expedition, and who were reported as having been carried over the Horse Shoe Falls Monday night, were yesterday shortly after four o'clock rescued from Navy Island, where they had been compelled to spend the night in the open. The rescue was effected by the crew of the steam tug Elk, of the International Paper Co., and Harry and John Williams of this city.

Lashed by the 75-mile-an-hour gale that swept Niagara Falls, the river was the roughest in years. The stream is more than two miles wide at this point, and the waves were piling up five feet high when the little steamer Elk bearing the rescue party left Slosser's dock at Echota, N.Y., yesterday afternoon on its charitable mission. The tug had a very rough passage and narrowly escaped capsizing several times. Under the guidance of Captain Swift, the only man on the river who could be induced to attempt the trip, the boat reached the channel between Navy and Buckhorn Islands.

It was found impossible to effect a landing, and two of the crew, the fireman and a dock hand, volunteered to take one of the lifeboats and search the island for the missing men. Suffering from cold and hunger the men were finally located and taken aboard the tug, which was compelled to lie 200 feet from shore. The rowboat was worked back to the tug, but owing to the high wind and the rough water the occupants were drenched and in an exhausted condition.

Suffragettes' New Trick.

London, Dec. 11.—Numerous false alarms of fire were sent out last night in various districts of London through public telephone and the fire alarm system.

The fire brigades turned out, only to discover that they had been hoaxed by the militant suffragettes.

One woman caught in the act of turning in an alarm was arrested.

LABOR LEADER ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

JOSEPH J. ETTOR.

Joseph J. Ettor is the labor leader who is accused of the murder of Anna Lopizzo, who was killed in a strike riot at Lawrence, Mass. With his companion, Arturo Giovannitti, also accused of murder in the famous textile strike, Ettor is now on trial at Salem, Mass.

CHILDREN WITH TUBERCULOSIS

Number of Cases Has Decreased in London.

London, Dec. 11.—As a result of the good work done by Hon. Adam Beck and his committee in the management of the Alexandra Sanatarium for Consumptives, tuberculosis in the city, according to statistics, has decreased 25 per cent. in the past year.

The committee in charge of the work is asking the City Council to grant $15,000 to build an addition for children only. It is likely that the council will send the bylaw to the people.

There are at present 22 tubercular children attending the public schools.

HON J. D. HAZEN

He may serve on the Imperial Defence Committee.

MAY GET NEW HORSE ARENA

City of Guelph Will Give Free Site.

Guelph, Dec. 11.—From the remarks uttered yesterday at the winter fair luncheon given by the city to the visiting horsemen, it is reasonable to conclude that within another year a new horse arena will grace the fair. The executive board has not yet decided upon the erection of a new building, as the Provincial Government has not considered the matter, but the city has thrown down the gauntlet, so to speak, and the Department of Agriculture must pick it up or disappoint both the city and the horse breeders of Ontario.

The announcement regarding the proposed arena came from Mayor Thorpe, who in speaking of the support Guelph had given in the past and of the present need of the fair, said that the city would offer a free site for an octagonal arena across the railway tracks. "If the Ontario Government can make a grant of $50,000," said the mayor, "Guelph will do her share and the arena will be built."

In case the proposed building is put up it will be used for exhibiting the horses and the present ring in its entirety will be handed over to the cattle men.

Robert Elliott, son of W. R. Elliott of Guelph, was made the happiest and most popular man in the city when he was awarded the grand championship Prince of Wales' prize of $50 for the best animal shown in the beef cattle department. With the same animal Mr. Elliott also won the Zenoleum silver service, awarded for the best animal in the show.

To name the feature attraction to yesterday's program is a task. To the horsemen, and there are more here than in any previous year, the beautiful collection of dappled gray Percherons exhibited in the afternoon must have made a strong appeal. In one class 17 Percheron mares were led out into the ring to compete for five prizes.

Stock Show at Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 11.—The third annual review of prize live stock at the Union Stock Yards started yesterday and will be concluded to-day. With the growth of the West Toronto yards, the yearly fat stock show has kept pace, and although the Guelph show is also on this week the entries at the Union Yards were well in advance of those of a year ago. Neither did the qaulity of the exhibits suffer. In the various classes, and especially cattle, the contests were exceedingly keen and the judges had no sinecure in awarding the various ribbons. The judging, which started at one o'clock, was keenly criticised by a large concourse of farmers, drovers and live stock raisers; and different to most shows, the judging has not only to pass a scrutiny of this character, but has again to meet the comparison of valuation placed upon the various animals at the auction sale, which takes place to-day.

Wines and Temperance.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—That the importation of absinthe into Canada should be prohibited, was a request made before the royal commission appointed to discuss the license situation in the Province of Quebec by Father Doyon, a Dominican priest, invited to appear. He declared that much harm had been done in France, and that the evil is spreading in Quebec.

F. J. Bisaillion, K.C., on behalf of the French Chamber of Commerce, made an appeal for reduction of licenses on places selling French wines, saying that their use was an aid to temperance.

SPANISH FLEET TO BE ENLARGED

Will Include Building of Three Dreadnoughts.

Paris, Dec. 11.—The Spanish naval program has just been decided on, according to a special despatch from Madrid. It will comprise three dreadnoughts of 21,000 tons each, two of the latest types of destroyers, nine torpedo boats and three submarines.

All the vessels are to be constructed in Spanish shipbuilding yards. The work is to be begun as soon as the battleship Alfonso XIII. has been launched at Ferrol.

The new dreadnought Espana, which was launched early this year, is to be delivered in April next.

WAR MOVE IS DENIED

But Europe is Not Easy Regarding Austria.

London, Dec. 11.—Official quarters in Vienna deny that any warlike significance attaches to the military changes, but these assurances fail to allay the uneasiness created by the fears that the powerful military party in Servia may force the hands of the Government.

Gen. von Hoetzendorff, the new Austrian chief of staff, is credited with being the sworn enemy of Servia, and to have been for a long time possessed of the conviction that nothing but the sword can settle the differences between Austria and Servia.

Further proof has reached London that Austria-Hungary is mobilizing. Many Austrian and Hungarian residents of London, including Count Geo. Apponyi, and the noted artist Philip Laszio, have been called to the colors.

According to one report, Austria intends to demand a diminution in the present strength of the Servian army—a demand to which Servia, in her present temper, is hardly likely to agree.

All arrangements for the peace conference in London are now complete. Besides being received by the King, the delegates will be honored with other entertainments, including a luncheon by the Lord Mayor at the Guildhall.

No Likelihood of War.

New York, Dec. 11.—It was on the assurance that there was no likelihood of a war between the great powers of Europe, that New York bankers, it was learned yesterday, undertook the flotation of a $25,000.000 Austrian loan in this country, as announced at Vienna.

The contracting firms have been assured that the political situation is much improved and that there is no reason for apprehending warlike developments between the great powers. The larger part of the proceeds of the loan will not be withdrawn until the middle of January, 1913."

DOUBLE PAY FOR THE CREW

Men Have Consented to Sail on Royal George.

Quebec, Dec. 11.—The Royal George, which was to leave Quebec early yesterday morning, is still moored at her wharf in the outer basin. The officers are waiting for Captain Lindsay's finding on the investigation held last week in this city. The Government steamer Montcalm, will accompany her as far as the upper traverse, and she will sail alone from there to Halifax.

The Royal George has now all its crew on board, the four sailors sentenced to jail being released on condition that they return to the ship. The rest of the crew have consented to sail on her. They have been promised double pay.

EARTHQUAKE AT ST. JOHN

Canadian Press Despatch

SIR EDWARD GREY

He will preside at the Peace Conference.

THE PROTEST IS DISCUSSED

Sharp Practice in Panama Dispute Rejected by Cabinet.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Whether Great Britain's protest against free passage of American ships through the Panama Canal is to be submitted to The Hague is to be finally determined by the Senate in any event. It was intimated yesterday that President Taft, consistent with his attitude as a principal champion of arbitration of disputes between nations, might recommend such a course should he and Secretary Knox not hold the question a purely domestic and internal one and therefore not arbitrable. There was considerable leaning to such a view among Senators to-day.

The British Government's note was discussed informally by President Taft and his Cabinet yesterday, but it was said that until Secretary Knox had time to study it at length and probably had outlined his reply, it would not be taken up formally. That probably will not be for several weeks.

A suggestion that the question might be kept from arbitration by delay until the existing arbitration treaty with Great Britain expires by limitation by June, was repudiated yesterday by a number of Senators. Senator Lodge, a prominent member of the foreign relations committee, declared that the "United States would not stoop to tricks." Senator Sutherland declared the question purely a domestic one and therefore not subject to arbitration.

HYDRO POWER IN DOON VILLAGE

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 11.—The village of Doon is the latest to take hydro power and will start off with 200 horse-power.

The Doon Twine & Cordage Co. will be the largest users. They will use it for both generation and lighting purposes. It will be transmitted from Preston, four miles away.

Berlin's Big Water Tower.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 11.—The Berlin Water Commission has just completed the erection of the largest water tower in America, which they will use for the first time about Christmas. It is capable of holding 2,500 tons of water. It has a capacity of half million gallons and cost $23,000.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN OPENS IN EARNEST SUNDAY

Next Sunday the campaign in favor of Local Option in Peterborough will open in earnest. It will be continued with vigor until the last vote has been polled on January 6th next. The campaign this year will be considerably shorter than the one held three years ago. The temperance workers report that there is not the same need for an educational campaign now as there was then, and that they are going to win this campaign, with hundreds of votes to spare, as their canvass has shown that there has been a great change in public opinion in favor of local option since the last vote was taken.

On Sunday next the first public meetings will be held. In the morning, Laymen, representing the citizens' Local Option Committee, will give addresses in most of the city churches, including the Murray and Park street Baptist churches, the George, Charlotte and Mark street Methodist churches, and the St. James' Methodist church and the Free Methodist church. In the evening speakers from the committee will speak in St. Paul's Presbyterian church. Last Sunday services were held in Knox and St. Andrew's Presbyterian churches. The speakers will be Laymen who have been chosen from the different churches. Two will speak in each church. Among the speakers will be City Magistrate Dumble, who will speak in the evening in St. Paul's church. At three o'clock in the afternoon speakers will address the Salvation Army, in the Salvation Army Temple.

OPERA HOUSE MEETINGS.

The First Opera House meeting will be held next Sunday afternoon at a quarter past four sharp. The main speaker will be Ex-Controller F. S. Spence, of Toronto. This meeting will be for men only. It will be presided over by a member of the Citizens' Local Option Committee, who will make a brief statement on behalf of the committee relating to the present campaign.

In the evening another meeting will be held in the Opera House at a quarter after eight. This meeting will be open to men and women. It also will be addressed by Mr. Spence. Mr. Spence has not only had an intimate connection with many Local Option Campaigns throughout Ontario and thereby is in a position to speak authoritatively as to how Local Option is succeeding where it is being tried, but he was also the representative of the Canadian Government at the recent World's Conference at the Hague, on Temperance, and thus is in touch with the world's temperance situation.

GOOD SINGERS

A feature of the afternoon and evening meetings at the Opera House, as well as St. James' Methodist Church in the morning and St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in the evening, will be solos by Mr. Ruthven McDonald, of Toronto, one of Canada's greatest singers, who is frequently paid $50 a night for concert purposes. The Citizens' Local Option Committee is arranging to have singers of national importance present at every Sunday afternoon and evening service in the Opera House from next Sunday to the end of the campaign.

As great interest is being taken in this year's campaign, large audiences are expected at the meetings next Sunday. Those who intend to attend are advised to be present early.

DECKS CLEARED FOR THE DEBATE ON THE NAVY BILL

Gossip at Ottawa Says Hon. J. D. Hazen May go to London as Resident Minister There With a Newly-Created Portfolio.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—The naval debate will apparently absorb all the time of Parliament from Thursday next until the adjournment for the Christmas holidays. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Borden moved the House into committee of the whole to consider his resolution authorising the expenditure of $35,000,000 for the construction of battleships to strengthen the naval forces of the Empire. The resolution went through committee without discussion and was reported to the House. Mr. Borden then moved that said report be considered on Thursday next and have precedence over all other business until the Christmas recess. This was agreed to without discussion.

Mr. Speaker Sproule took occasion to say that the naval bill should have been preceded by as well as founded upon the resolution. The House, however, having directed the first reading of the bill, he was of the opinion that the error could be corrected by passing the resolution now and reporting this action to the committee of the whole House when the naval bill reached committee stage. He announced, however, that this action should not be construed as a precedent. The rule undoubtedly was that bills appropriating money must be founded upon a resolution submitted to and approved by the committee of the whole.

There is a great deal of discussion here as to what Minister of the crown will be detailed to serve on the Imperial defence committee. Naturally, Hon. J. D. Hazen, as Minister of Naval Affairs, has been mentioned, as also has Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence. It is generally understood, however, that a new portfolio will be created to be held by the Minister representing Canada on the Imperial defence committee. This does not mean that Mr. Hazen will not be appointed, and many believe that he is the most likely candidate.

There is also a curious story afloat to the effect that the Canadian representative on the Imperial defence committee may not be a Minister of the crown, but that this most important position will be held by a Canadian statesman of international reputation.

It is understood that no time will be lost in having Canada represented upon the Imperial defence committee, and some gossip about possible Cabinet changes is already current.

GUELPH'S CHIEF MAGISTRATE GOES FOR HIS ASSAILANT

At Special Meeting of the City Council Mayor Thorpe Takes Occasion to Reply to Alderman Sam Carter and Says Latter is Trying to Mislead Voters.

Guelph, Dec. 11.—At the conclusion of a special meeting of the City Council last night, Mayor Thorpe undertook to reply to the statements made by Light and Heat Commissioner Sam Carter, reflecting on himself and the civic officials, at a public meeting held last Thursday night. He went fully into every charge made against the administration of the present City Council and contended that Mr. Carter was endeavoring to mislead the people in order to get himself elected mayor in 1913. He classed Mr. Carter as a biased temperance agitator, who would apply methods contrary to the good of the city and would endeavor to secure a reduction of the licenses, a thing the city could ill afford to stand, as was evidenced by the present overcrowding of every hotel in the city during winter fair week.

He attacked the methods of Mr. Carter in the management of the light and heat commission during the past five years, and contended that the citizens of Guelph should only be paying for street lighting at the rate of 38 cents per head, whereas they were now paying at the rate of 73 cents. He quoted the city of London, which is paying only 68 cents, even though it had to pay a higher rate for its power on account of being farther away from the source of supply. He also contended that the present population was being compelled to pay these high rates instead of letting posterity pay its share.

A number of the aldermen followed the mayor in defending the city from the allegations made against it.

Ald. Carter attacked the water commission for failure to live up to their agreement, and announced this intention to run for commissioner if their agreement was not forthcoming before nomination day.

VOLUNTEERS FOR HANGMAN'S JOB

Applications From Men Who Would Undertake the Execution.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—Notwithstanding official notification has not yet been received from Ottawa that the Minister of Justice will not intervene to save the life of Antoni Farduto, a murderer whose execution has been fixed for next Friday, Sheriff Lemieux has received a number of applications from men anxious to undertake the task of execution. Each of the applicants, after mentioning the sum he expects for the work, assures the sheriff of his prowess. As Hangman Ellis is in the west it is thought that the sheriff will be compelled to select a man from among the applicants.

Berlin's City Ideas.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 11.—As a step towards town planning, which will be discussed at the Ontario Planning Congress here to-morrow, the City Council has decided to appropriate a six-foot strip of land on the north side of King street from Young to College, for the purpose of widening King street, the city's main thoroughfare.

NAME PRINCE VICTOR AS ALBANIA'S HEAD

PRINCE VICTOR NAPOLEON

Reports are current in Bonapartist circles that Prince Victor Napoleon, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, will be named as sovereign of the future State of Albania. It is said that with the support of Austria Italy has obtained the Prince's candidacy, and that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria approves it. These reports, however, lack confirmation.

Militant Suffragettes Have New Scheme to Draw Attention.

Canadian Press Despatch

London, Dec. 11.—Elsie Hewey, a militant Suffragette, was sentenced to two months in prison this morning for her part in false fire alarms last night. She told the magistrate that the only way to stop depredations was give women votes.

Numerous false alarms of fire were sent out last night in various districts of London, through public telephone and the fire alarm system.

The fire brigades turned out, only to discover that they had been hoaxed by the militant Suffragettes.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED BY HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT 19[illegible] BY H. K. FLY CO.

Seeing them together, Mrs. Temple watched the embrace with her daily renewal of joy that the last night's quarrel had not proved fatal. She nudged her husband:

"See, they're making up again."

Dr. Temple was moved to a violent outburst for him: "Well, that the darnedest bridal couple—I only said darn, my dear."

He was still more startled when Mr. Baumann, cruising along the aisle, bent over to murmur: "Can I fix you a nice divorce?"

Dr. Temple rose in such an attitude of horror as he assumed in the pulpit when denouncing the greatest curse of society, and Mr. Baumann retired. As he passed Mallory he cast an appreciative glance at Marjorie and, tapping Mallory's shoulder, whispered: "No wonder you want a marriage license. I'll be in the next car, should you need me." Then he went on his route.

Marjorie stared after him in wonder and asked: "What did not person mean by what he said?"

"It's all right, Marjorie," Mallory explained, in the highest cheer: "We can get married right away."

Marjorie declined to get her hopes up again: "You're always saying that."

"But here's the license—see?"

"What good is that?" she said; "there's no preacher on board."

"But that man is a justice of the peace and he'll marry us."

Marjorie stared at him incredulously: "That creature!—before all these passengers?"

"Not at all," Mallory explained. "We'll go into the smoking room."

Marjorie leaped to her feet, aghast: "Elope two thousand miles to be married in a smoking room by a Yiddish drummer! Harry Mallory, you're crazy."

Put just that way, the proposition did not look so alluring as at first. He sank back with a sigh: "I guess I am. I resign."

He was as weary of being "foiled again" as the villain of a cheap melodrama. The two lovers sat in a twilight of [illegible] melancholy, till Marjorie's mind dug up a new source of alarm:

"Harry, I've just thought of something terrible."

"Let's have it," he sighed, drearily.

"We reach San Francisco at midnight and you sail at daybreak. What [illegible]

Mallory had no answer to this problem, except a grin: "I'll not desert you."

"But we'll have no time to get married."

"Then," he declared with iron resolve, "then I'll resign from the army."

Marjorie stared at him with awe. He was so wonderful, so heroic. "But what will the country do without you?"

"It will have to get along the best it can," he answered with finality. "Do you think I'd give you up?"

But this was too much to ask. In the presence of a ruined career and a heroless army, Marjorie felt that her own scruples were too petty to count. She could be heroic, too.

"No!" she said, in a deep, low tone, "No, we'll get married in the smoking room. Go call your drummer!"

This opened the clouds and let in the sun again with such a radiant blaze that Mallory hesitated no longer. "Fine!" he cried, and leaped to his feet, only to be detained again by Marjorie's clutch:

"But first, what about that bracelet?"

"She's got it," Mallory groaned, slumping from the heights again.

"Do you mean to say she's still wearing it?"

"How was I to get it?"

"Couldn't you have slipped into her car last night and stolen it?"

"Good Lord, I shouldn't think you'd want me to go—why, Marjorie—I'd be arrested!"

But Marjorie set her jaw hard: "Well, you get that bracelet, or you don't get me." And then her smouldering jealousy and grief took a less hateful tone: "Oh, Harry!" she wailed, "I'm so lonely and so helpless and so far from home."

"But I'm here," he urged.

"You're farther away than anybody," she whimpered, huddling close to him.

"Poor little thing," he murmured, soothing her with voice and kiss and caress.

"Put your arm round me," she cooed, like a mourning dove, "I don't care if everybody is looking. Oh, I'm so lonely."

"I'm just as lonely as you are," he pleaded, trying to creep into the company of her misery.

"Please marry me soon," she implored, "won't you, please?"

"I'd marry you this minute if you'd say the word," he whispered.

"I'd say it if you only had that bracelet," she sobbed, like a tired child. "I should think you would understand my feelings. That awful person is wearing your bracelet and I have only your ring, and her bracelet is ten times as big as my r-i-ng, boo-hoo-hoo-oo!"

"I'll get that bracelet if I have to chop her arm off," Mallory vowed.

The sobs stopped short, as Marjorie looked up to ask: "Have you got your sword with you?"

"It's in my trunk," he said, "but I'll manage."

"Now you're speaking like a soldier," Marjorie exclaimed, "my brave, noble, beautiful, fearless husband. I'll tell you! That creature will pass through this car on her way to breakfast. You grab her and take the bracelet away from her."

"I grab her, eh?" he stammered, his heroism wavering a trifle.

"You just grab her."

"Suppose she hasn't the bracelet on?" he mused.

"Grab her anyway," Marjorie answered, fiercely. "Besides, I've no doubt it's wished on." He said nothing. "You did wish it on, didn't you?"

"No, no—never—of course not—" he protested. "If you'll only be calm, I'll get it if I have to throttle her."

Like a young Lady Macbeth, Marjorie gave him her utter approval in any atrocity, and they sat in ambush for their victim to pass into view.

They had not had their breakfast, but they forgot it. A dusky waiter went by chanting his "Lass call for breakfuss in Rining Rar." He chanted it thrice in their ears, but they never heard. Marjorie was gloating over the discomfiture of the odious creature who had dared to precede her in the acquaintance of her husband-to-be. The husband-to-be was miserably wishing that he had to face a tribe of bolo-brandishing Moros, instead of this trivial girl whom he had looked upon when her cheeks were red.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Mr. and Mrs. Little Jimmie.

Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb had longed for the sweet privilege of squaring matters with Mrs. Jimmie Wellington. Sneers and back-biting, shrugs and shudders of contempt were poor compensation for the ever-vivid fact that Mrs. Wellington had proved attractive to her Sammy while Mrs. Wellington's Jimmie never looked at Mrs. Whitcomb. Or if he did, his eyes had been so blurred that he had seen two of her—and avoided both.

Yesterday she had overheard Jimmie vow sobriety. Today his shining morning face showed that he had kept his word. She could hardly wait to begin the flirtation which, she trusted, would render Mrs. Wellington helplessly furious for six long Reno months.

The Divorce Drummer interposed and held Jimmie prisoner for a time, but as soon as Mr. Baumann released him, Mrs. Whitcomb apprehended him. With a smile that beckoned and with eyes that went out like far-cast fishhooks, she drew Leviathan into her net.

She reeled him in and he plounced in the seat opposite. What she took for bashfulness was reluctance. To add the last charm to her success, Mrs. Wellington arrived to see it. Mrs. Whitcomb saw the lonely Ashton rise and offer her the seat facing him. Mrs. Wellington took it and sat down with the back of her head so close to the back of Mr. Wellington's head that the feather in her hat tickled his neck.

Jimmie Wellington had seen his wife pass by. To his sober eyes she was a fine sight as she moved up the aisle. In his alcohol-emancipated mind the keen sense of wrong endured that had driven him forth to Reno began to lose its edge. His own soul appealed from Jimmie drunk to Jimmie sober. The appellate judge began to reverse the lower court's decision, point by point.

He felt a sudden recrudescence of jealousy as he heard Ashton's voice unctuously, flirtatiously offering his wife hospitality. He wanted to trounce Ashton. But what right had he to defend from gallantry the woman he was about to forswear before the world? Jimmie's soul was in turmoil, and Mrs. Whitcomb's pretty face and alluring smile only annoyed him.

She had made several gracious speeches before he quite comprehended any of them. Then he realized that she was saying, "I'm so glad you're going to stop at Reno, Mr. Wellington."

"Thank you. So am I," he mumbled, trying to look interested and wishing that his wife's plume would not tickle his neck.

Mrs. Whitcomb went on, leaning closer: "We two poor mistreated wretches must try to console one another, mustn't we?"

"Yes,—yes,—we must," Wellington nodded, with a sickly cheer.

Mrs. Whitcomb leaned a little closer. "Do you know that I feel almost related to you, Mr. Wellington?"

"Related?" he echoed, "you?—to me? How?"

"My husband knew your wife so well."

Somehow a wave of jealous rage surged over him, and he growled: "Your husband is a scoundrel."

Mrs. Whitcomb's smile turned to vinegar: "Oh, I can't permit you to slander the poor boy behind his back. It was all your wife's fault."

Wellington amazed himself by his own bravery when he heard himself volleying back: "And I can't permit you to slander my wife behind her back. It was all your husband's fault."

Mrs. Jimmie overheard this behind her back, and it strangely thrilled her. She ignored Ashton's existence and listened for Mrs. Whitcomb's next retort. It consisted of a simple, icy drawl: "I think I'll go to breakfast."

She seemed to pick up Ashton with her eyes as she glided by, for, finding himself unnoticed, he rose with a careless: "I think I'll go to breakfast," and followed Mrs. Whitcomb. The Wellingtons sat dos-a-dos for some exciting seconds, and then on a sudden impulse, Mrs. Jimmie rose, knelt in the seat and spoke across the back of it:

The Fifth Nerve.

Sneezing is averted by pressing the upper lip, because by doing so we deaden the impression made on a certain branch of the fifth nerve, sneezing being a reflex action excited by some slight impression on that nerve. Sneezing does not take place when the fifth nerve is paralysed, even though the sense of smell is retained.

Ancient Cannibals.

Historians relate that in Scythia, in India, and among the early inhabitants of Britain cannibals were found. Columbus found them among the Caribbees, and from the name Caribee the term cannibal was derived.

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."—Mrs. JENNIE GREEN, Covington, Mo.

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

Inexpensive Recipes

Tutti Frutti Chocolate Cake.

Have ready three-quarters of a cupful of butter creamed with one cupful and a half of brown sugar, a cupful of chopped nuts and fruit mixed—almonds, raisins and citron in proportions to suit the taste; two eggs, a cupful of sour cream in which half a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved, three cupfuls (one pint and a half) of pastry flour which has been sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. This recipe also calls for a sirup prepared from a quarter of a cupful of light brown sugar, a quarter of a cupful of hot water and a square of chocolate. The eggs, beaten till light, should be folded into the creamed butter and sugar, the sour cream and the soda then added to them and this mixture stirred into the flour, baking powder and spices. The chocolate sirup, the nuts and the fruit are added last. The nuts may be left out when not conveniently at hand and extra raisins substituted. This cake may be baked either in loaf or layer form, but it is perhaps better in layers, with a white icing between them and on the top.

Mock Oyster Bisque.

Scrape and trim a bunch of oyster plant, cut into inch lengths, and after leaving it in cold water half an hour cook very soft in a pint and half of salted water. Drain and rub the vegetable through the colander or "press" back into the water in which it was cooked. Set over the fire and bring to a gentle boil. Season with celery salt and white pepper before stirring into it two cupfuls of hot milk scalded with a bit of soda dropped in to prevent curdling. Lastly, stir into the saucepan a white "roux," made by heating two tablespoonfuls of butter in a pan, working into it while it is over the fire a tablespoonful of flour and stirring smooth. Give a final boil of a minute, beating and stirring meanwhile, and pour out.

The taste is so much like that of oyster bisque that one hardly regrets the absence of the bivalve, and it costs one-third as much.

Pumpkin Pudding.

To a pint of stewed pumpkin that has been put through the colander add the beaten yolks of four eggs and a cupful of sugar. Stir into this a quart of milk, a teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, mace and nutmeg mixed and, if you like, a little ginger. Lastly, stir in the whites of two eggs whipped stiff. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake, covered for half an hour, then brown. A few minutes before drawing it from the oven spread on the top a meringue made of the reserved whites, two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Shut up in the oven long enough to form the meringue and to tinge it lightly with golden brown. Eat cold.

Macaroni Pie.

Macaroni pie is a good dish, easily made. Chop any kind of cold meat that you have on hand, add to it salt, pepper, a little Worcestershire sauce, an onion cut up rather small and a half cupful of stock. Put this in a pie dish. Fill it up with macaroni which has been boiled and drained. Cover with grated cheese, sprinkled with pepper, salt and little bits of butter. Bake in a quick oven.

A New Salad.

Small bananas peeled, dipped in mayonnaise, sprinkled thickly with finely ground peanuts and served on lettuce make a salad that the girls and boys are sure to like, and most of the grownups will find it good. Chopped English walnut or pecan meats may be used instead of the peanuts.

Cranberry Sauce.

Wash and pick over carefully a quart of cranberries. Put into the inner vessel of a farina kettle. Add a cupful of water and cover. Fill the outer boiler with hot water and cook until the berries are soft and broken to pieces. Now stir in sugar to taste. Cook for a minute, no longer, and turn out into a bowl.

Taxes Paid In Wax.

Corsica produces the largest quantity of wax of all the countries in Europe, if not in the world. In ancient as well as in medieval times the inhabitants paid their taxes in wax and supplied 200,000 pounds annually. Since wax is to honey in quantity as one to fifteen the Corsicans must have gathered each year 3,000,000 pounds of honey.

SUNDAY AT WAYCOCOMAGH AS A COVENANTER AIR

The Gael and the Sassenach Are Represented In Separate Services and Sacrament Day Comes Once a Year When the Whole Countryside Is Represented at the Little Cape Breton Church.

A recent article by Alberta Coutts in Toronto Saturday Globe contains much that will recall old days to the down-east Presbyterians who are scattered over the length and breadth of Canada. It describes a visit to Whycocomagh, Cape Breton, one of the oldest Scottish settlements on the coast.

Sunday dawned fair and clear. Surely our luck-god had been kind, for of all the year this chanced to be the great Sunday in Whycocomagh, the day of the annual sacrament in the Presbyterian churches. Our landlord, who was an elder, became, in our eyes, an acquaintance of whom to be justly proud. One congregation, one pastor, but two churches divide between them a service in Gaelic and a service in English, and we learned that many of the hearers drive every year a distance of twenty-five miles, while people over seventy years of age walk ten or twelve miles to be present. Before the church in which the English service was held was built the older edifice could not accommodate the crowd which came from all parts, often so far as forty miles, and the service was held in a glen near the church which formed a perfect natural amphitheatre. In the centre the tables were served, and the congregation sat on the slopes. Twenty-five years before it had been no unusual thing for two thousand teams to be tethered near, while five thousand people took part in the ceremony.

At the present time the services begin on Thursday, which is Fast Day; Friday is Questioning Day; Saturday, Preparation Day; Sunday, the Sacrament Day; and Monday, Thanksgiving Day. On Sunday many people do not break their fast before the service. Can this be the Presbyterian Church in Canada in the year 1912? Is it not some rigid hamlet in Scotland in the days of our grandfathers? That "Questioning Day" has such a penitential sound, such a smack of oatmeal porridge and the Shorter Catechism, and hard wooden benches, and "Tenthlies"! And Preparation Day! when no irreverent thought dare wander to the blueness of the sky or the bursting of a bud on the hillside. The beliefs and practices under which our fathers squirmed, and for which squirms they suffered by the good birch rod, here in the flesh to-day! No wonder we were surprised to learn that among a people so constant to the forms of their religion the recent vote on church union stood 361 for union and 15 against!

An hour before the time for opening we ventured along the road leading to the English church, where we saw many teams already tied. The waters of the bay danced in the morning sunlight with a most unsabbathian frivolity, but the hills rose solemnly grand with a cathedral-like calm. On the bridge leading to the Indian Reserve we paused to watch the carriages of those bound churchwards winding down the mountain-sides in all directions. They passed us with a pleasant "good morning," these people of fine face and dignified bearing, whose Sunday "blacks" were well covered to protect them from unseemly dust. Moreover, it was impossible not to notice, despite the time and place, the magnificence of the horses and the beauty of their appearance and gait. As we retraced our steps, we found that the line of buggies extended for a distance of half a mile from the church door, the horses for the most part unharnessed and in many cases eating the fragrant hay that had been brought for them from the home stable. Later, during a stroll past the Gaelic church, with its even longer string of waiting vehicles, the wild, weird chant of a psalm, led by the precentor, came to our ears, for here no organ has ousted that worthy from his time-honored place.

The English service has attained to the modernity of an organ, at first regarded as a doubtful innovation by the older members of the congregation, but now a valued adjunct that would not be dispensed with for any consideration. As we moved slowly on our way, the still air held and reverberated again and yet again to the Gaelic chant, which lingered in our ears even after distance had placed it beyond the power of transmission.

After dinner, we rested in the hotel parlor until the midday heat should be somewhat spent. Here, in a place of honor, we beheld autographed photographs of Lord and Lady Aberdeen. Underneath the signature "Aberdeen, Governor-General," appeared the name of the hostess, and "With all good wishes for Whycocomagh, October, 1897." So the great and illustrious of the land had penetrated to little Whycocomagh, and brought their wide experience and keen and traveled sense of beauty to bear upon her simple merits. How stood she the test, I wonder? What place did they give her among the many bits of glorious landscape and fair water they could call to mind at will? I hope they ranked her high. It would be a terrible thing to be so sated with this world's beauty as to be dissatisfied with or indifferent to Whycocomagh.

On the walls of the sun-room, into which we wandered, we spied two crossed swords, which had seen service at Waterloo. Who, in a region still rampant with the spirit of the Gael, could doubt that the brass helmet above the swords had come from Flodden Field?

A Terrible Name.

The most burdensome name ever bestowed on a child was that given by Arthur Pepper, a laundryman, of West Derby, Liverpool, to his daughter. It comprised one name for every letter of the alphabet, and was certainly ingenious in its way, running: Anna Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louise Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysis Venus Winifred Xenophon Yetty Geno. P., of course, was provided in the surname, Pepper.

Post Yields Fruit.

Two years ago a damson tree in Tiptree, Essex, Eng., garden was taken up, and after being laid aside for some time was converted into posts. One of these this year produced a shoot which blossomed and bore fruit.

An English Error.

Ask any hundred English men, women or children what is the name of a capital of Russia and every one of them will reply, "St. Petersburg." It may be a small matter, but in point of fact the proper name is "Petersburg." The English are the only folk who insist upon the "Saint." The city was founded by Peter the Great and is named after him. It is quite true that Peter was one of the most extraordinary men that ever filled a throne, but no one would have been more astounded than himself at being dubbed a saint. He neither lived nor died in the odor of sanctity, and it is hard to find out how it became the English fashion to miscall the splendid town he founded.—London Mail.

A Sunday Station.

Railway stations have been erected for a variety of purposes, but it is doubtful whether there is any other instance in the world where a station is used only for church traffic on Sunday mornings like that of Kirk Braddon, in the Isle of Man. This is the first station on the line from Douglas to Peel. It is opened solely on Sundays during the holiday season for the large number of people attending morning service at Braddon Church. On these occasions the station is in charge of a relief station-master, but otherwise it is idle.

His Love Letters.

Two thousand three hundred love letters, dating from the year 1839 onwards, arranged in bundles of fifty tied with jewelled silver chains, and written by six different girls, were found preserved in an ivory casket in the bedroom of a lonely bachelor, who has just died at Melbourne at the age of eighty-two.

An Instance.

Hewitt—I was once kicked by a [illegible].

Jewett—We often hear of people kicking themselves.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 10.—There was some pressure at the opening with prices ½d to ¾d lower as a result of the break in American markets yesterday and the bearish interpretation placed upon the American Government report. These, however, were offset by private reports of light rain in Argentine, where harvesting is in progress, less favorable European crop advices and a good decrease in the European visible. There was no pressure to sell by Plate shippers and cargoes were in better demand. December shorts covered on the small tenders on contract.

Corn ½d lower and further declined on the large tenders of Plate on contract and the weakness in spot. The decline was checked by bad reports from Roumania.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Wheat made a rally today after the recent continuous decline. There was a firm close at a net advance of 1-4 to 3-8c. Corn gained a shade to 3-8c over last night and oats 1-4c to 3-4c. Provisions dropped 2 1-2c to 15c.

BARR AND LODORE.

The Celebrated Falls Were Scarcely What He Expected.

Many good stories have been told by and about the late Robert Barr, one of the most prolific writers ever born in Canada; more versatile than Sir Gilbert Parker, who, like Barr, also left Canada as soon as he became famous, to live in England. Barr was a famous character in the Western Ontario Peninsula. It was there, while school-teaching in Windsor, that he got his entree into public print in "A Rough Ride Round the Lakes," a series of sketches in The Detroit Free Press, depicting Barr's rollicking experiences on a summer vacation on the northern lakes. For years afterwards Barr was a regular contributor to The Free Press. He was a close friend of Dr. James Samson, now of Windsor, who has often told the story which Barr told him and which Barr told about himself at the dinner given to Premier McBride in London in 1907. R. E. Gosnell, another old Kent County boy, now proprietor of The Victoria Times, tells the story in a recent issue of his paper, and it runs as follows:

"He had read in his school books about the cataract of Lodore, and readers will remember the description in Southey's well-known poem, a portion of which reads:

'And dashing and flashing and splashing and clashing—
And so never ending, but always descending,
Sounds and motions forever and ever are blending,
All at once and all o'er, with a mighty uproar—
And this way the water comes down at Lodore.'"

Then and there he made up his mind that when he was old enough and had money enough he would go to England and see the waters that had so excited the poet's admiration "Them are falls," he mentally cogitated. "Well," added the humorist, "I did grow old enough and did get money and I took the first opportunity thereafter to gratify my ambition. Upon arriving in London I took the next train for Cumberland and a ticket for the nearest station, and as I handed my bag to a clerk at the inn to which I had been directed, I asked breathlessly, 'Where are the falls of Lodore?' 'If you take the road, sir, and follow that stream for a bit, five or six miles, sir, you will come to them, sir,' he replied. It was a warm, muggy afternoon in August and I started out to walk. After walking for what appeared to be an interminable distance, I was hot, sweaty, tired and footsore. Taking off my boots and socks, and rolling up my trousers, as I used to do long ago, I decided to wade into the stream and ease my aching feet. Just ahead of me was a rock in midstream with a swirl of water about it, and I went forward to rest myself and wait for some passer-by who could give me definite and quieting information on the subject of my quest. Presently a pedestrian, one of the farm laborer class, hove in sight, and when near enough I megaphoned to him: 'Can you tell me where are the falls of Lodore?' In blank, stupid amazement, he gazed at me and finally recovering his wits, he shouted back, 'You fool; you are sitting on them'."

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

The coldest place on earth inhabited by man is Verkhoyansk, above the arctic circle, in northeastern Siberia. The thermometer there drops to 90 degrees below zero in January, but sometimes rises to 86 degrees above zero in the shade in July, dropping, however, to the freezing point on the warmest summer nights. The hottest place in the world is the interior of the great Sahara desert, in Africa, where the thermometer rises to 122 degrees. The wettest place is Greytown, Nicaragua, where the mean annual rainfall is 260 inches. The place of least rain is Port Noloth, in South Africa, where less than an inch sometimes falls in a year.

Endurance of Migrating Birds.

The vigor and endurance that birds display upon the wing are astonishing. Nearly all the migratory species of Europe must cross the Mediterranean without resting. The little bluebird pays an annual visit to the Bermudas, 600 miles from the continent, and Wilson estimated its very moderate flight at more than a mile a minute. Remarkable stories are told of the long flights of tame falcons, going 1,300 miles in a single day. Jawel mentions carrier pigeons that flew from Rouen to Ghent, 150 miles, in an hour and a half, and a certain warbler must wing its way from Egypt to the Baltic, 1,200 miles, in one night.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Montreal pigeon fancier has re- ceived word of the return to England of a homer he imported some time ago. The bird took twelve days to make the Atlantic passage. A pigeon with greater intelligence would have taken a faster steamer.

No official notice will be taken by Germany of the doggerel written by a United States officer which ridicules the result of the German instruction in the Turkish Empire. Official Germany has a greater sense of humor than she has been credited with.

It's all very well to talk of having Canada "man" those three battleships; but it is too early to forget that Canada couldn't "man" the two little cruisers which, up to date, constitute the Canadian navy. Canada would have to hire and pay British tars to man those battleships. And what's the difference in principle between paying for ships and paying the wages of their crews?

THE PRAIRIE BACHELOR

He Has a Hard Time on the Plains If He Works Alone.

They live apart and lonely, those solitary ones, defying with a gloomy shake of the head nature's most insistent appeals, says Robert Halton in a recent article in Toronto Globe on the prairie bachelor. Wanderers from the beaten paths of this old world: Ishmaelites they are, whose hearts feed on loneliness, whose only solace is a well-seasoned "briar." Out on the ranges, far from the haunts of men, you will find them living in "shacks" that sullenly face a wilderness of brush and "muskeg." They represent all nations under heaven from Russia to California, from Norway to the Cape of Good Hope. A motley army, patched, ragged and miserable, all kinds and classes are represented here, and, as if they know themselves better or felt themselves worse than the other children of men, they hold aloof and pursue their solitary way.

I knew Macdonald well, and many a good talk we had together. He had been in the west country nine years, and lived on a bare hillside, where his "shack" of sods was the only object to meet the inquiring eye. As a regular in the British army, the U. S. army, and finally as a seaman in the royal navy, he had served, and he cut off his story abruptly to show that the closed chapter was his own affair. When I sought his eyes they were following the solitary Buck Lake Trail, which wound away to the northwest. Then our ways parted and he went on to his house of sods.

There was Jack Woods, a man of massive mould, a giant of five and twenty, with the shoulders of Hercules. His strong, white teeth showed as a somewhat rare smile lightened for a moment his overshadowing brows; then the clouds closed again and all was gloom. Jack's crown was a tattered hat of felt, pierced with many holes, through which tufts of black hair grew to meet the sky, and waved triumphantly in the fitful breezes (Bully for Jack!) We entered the shack together, he drawing the latch with a piece of cord, then driving out the little pigs and chickens, which entered by some unguarded holes. Jack briefly pointed out the total impossibility of keeping these creatures out, and having delivered himself thus, proceeded with the more serious business of making hotcakes, "flapjacks" or pancakes. In silence he tramped the floor, the rough planks yielding to his heavy tread, his long hair just escaping the low rafters. All around were the proofs of hasty meals and deeds half done—flies on the table, filth upon the floor and dust on everything.

Jack Johnson is one of twelve. For four years he has been homesteading. A big, shambling fellow with round shoulders, a somewhat low brow and a turned-up nose. If you wish further particulars, his toes turn out badly, and his walk is an exaggerated swagger. When he sits cutting his tobacco those little eyes of his look out at you in a glittering, doubtful way which is somewhat unnerving to strangers. Poor Jack, he has heart trouble, and may be found dead any day.

Verily they are a mournful army, those bachelors. Come at it as you will, their life has hardly a bright side to it—a melancholy, prosaic business at the best. Such an army lacks enthusiasm. Seldom will they win a signal victory. It is not good for a man, then, that he live alone. It is not good that his soul be starved, or that he defy nature. How long, think you, has emigration to be a matter of mere chance, imperfectly controlled, with no one to take an interest—a real, vital, living interest—in the living souls of men? How long will souls starve on the frontier farms and the lonely ranges for lack of a few creature comforts and healthy companionship?

Many people have a fatal passion for excellence in others.

Jim Jipson says he doesn't see how his other shirt is going to last till Christmas, but he supposes it will have to.

UNCONQUERED BY CLIMBERS

Mount Robson Has Defied the Efforts of the Climbers.

It has been said that discovery and conquest form the very science of mountaineering, says Mabel Burkholder in Toronto Globe. That is why the attention of mountain-climbers the world over is turning to the Canadian Rockies. Switzerland assuredly possesses mountains infinite in variety and ideal in grandeur. But at each turn of the trail a wooden hand points out the beauty spots, and the most illiterate guide may know all there is to be known about the scenery. There are no virgin peaks to conquer, no unexpected lakes reward the adventurer with sudden flashes of emerald or turquoise. Two generations of climbers have tamed the Alps and harnessed them. So nowadays, though the mountain-climber may take his first lessons in Switzerland, he afterwards goes afield, and often ends up in that wildest and most untamed of mountain districts — the Canadian Rockies.

Of all Canadian peaks Mount Robson at present provokes the most interest. No other is so enchantingly beautiful, so vexatiously inaccessible. It will doubtless be years before this monster is brought into thorough subjection to man. There is so much of interest around its base and up its slopes that the explorer stops there, content to examine its mineral wealth, its glaciers, its lakes, its sweeping torrents.

The general effect of the Yellowhead Pass, near which this mountain is situated, is one of great spaciousness. The valleys are low and broad, and the mountains rise abruptly to great heights, the views being unobstructed almost to their base.

Therefore to the traveler on the Grand Trunk Pacific over the Yellowhead Pass route the Robson Peak strikes the eye as a sudden wonder, a monstrous pile standing forth in glorious isolation. The railroad makes a hundred-mile circuit around its base, yet only when the road crosses the Grand Forks, a short and dashing tributary to the Fraser, born of Robson glaciers in the hills above—only then does the traveler see the mighty pyramid rising in a sheer face of over eleven thousand feet of rock. Mount Robson in all is 13,700 feet above the sea, and the valley is so low — only 2,700 feet — that practically the whole mountain lifts itself in the air.

The appearance Mount Robson presents from the Fraser Valley is a face of black rock, plainly marked off by horizontal ridges of snow. A cloud usually veils his august head. This is due to the fact that the peak catches all the moist winds from the Pacific, but it looks as if he disdained to show himself to the clamoring intruders who lately have invaded his eternal silence.

Concentrated within the sweep of vision from one of Robson's flanks are more beauty spots than those which have combined to make dear such names as Banff, Yoho, Field and Glacier. Its glaciers dipping their noses into the lakes; those lakes of exquisite color, rivaling all the gems from turquoise, and sapphire to emerald and topaz; the torrents, glacier-fed and frothing with madness—all is on a stupendously magnificent scale.

Six glaciers mingle their streams in Berg Lake alone. These range from a quarter of a mile to a full mile in width, and all day long huge hunks of ice come rattling down the mountainsides with a roar like thunder. They lodge in the lake like miniature icebergs, and do not easily melt, even in warm weather.

A letter closed with the white of an egg cannot be opened by the steam of boiling water, as the heat only adds to its firmness.

WARNS CLERGY AGAINST SIGNING

The Appeal on Behalf of Christian Unity

Warning has been issued by the Anglican Bishop of Quebec to the clergy of the Church of England in Canada against the signing of a petition to which the names of Rev. Dr. Symonds, Rev. H. P. Plumtre, Rev. A. P. Shatford and others are attached, and which is called "an appeal on behalf of Christian unity."

The bishop traces the discussion which has been going on the subject of church union, and points out that the conclusion of the authorities of the Church of England has been that, while the church could agree with the non-conformist bodies on the cardinal points of doctrine, the fourth (usually known as the doctrines of "apostolic succession") cannot be sacrificed by the Church of England, as it is one of the basic principles.

"In short," says the bishop, "the methods proposed by this 'appeal on behalf of Christian unity,' so far from promoting the unity of Christians, would, in our judgment, seriously hinder the same, and would, moreover, create sad discord and disunion within our own branch of the holy Catholic church".

Did You Ever Consider

How much your earning ability represents? What is your income? Is it $1,200, $3,000 or $5,000 per year? How much capital at 6 per cent. interest would it require in order to equal your present income? $50,000 at 6 per cent. interest equals $3,000 per year.

Your earning capacity is your family's capital. How long would it take to accumulate a sum which, at interest, would provide sufficient income, in the event of your death, to support your home and educate your children?

You, no doubt, believe that if you do not die you will be able to create an estate. Statistics show that the majority of people die leaving nothing. Are you positively sure that you will live to create this estate?

Life is uncertain—men apparently in the best of health die suddenly. In order to make provision in the event of your death the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will, by your depositing a comparatively small amount each year for a definite number of years, pay to your wife or child, or estate, immediately upon receipt of proofs of death, a certain amount of money. This offers you the means of creating an immediate estate in the event of your death.

The two illustrations herewith will show the benefits of a policy of Life Assurance as issued by this Company.

POLICY No. 263187

Issued October 10th, 1911. Assured died June 26th, 1912. Annual Premium $113.00

Sum Assured - - - $5,000.00
Premium Paid - - - 113.00
Return over Cost $4,887.00

The Assured's Expectation was 36 years 9 months, but he lived only 8 months.

Consider the SMALL payment to the Company and the LARGE amount the Company paid to the Beneficiary

THE FOLLOWING IS AN ACTUAL RESULT of a matured policy on the life of a resident of Montreal

POLICY No. 31602

ENDOWMENT 20 R D 20

Issued 1891. Matured 1911. Age 25. Amount $2,500. Annual Premium $110.15

Cash received at the end of 20 years - - - $3,079.95
Total Payments to the Coy. 2,203.00
Return over Cost $876.95

Which means the return to the assured of every premium paid to the Company with over 3 per cent. compound interest

MUNICIPAL TALK AT NORWOOD

May be New Candidates for the Council

Special to Review.

Norwood, Dec. 11.—There is beginning to be some talk about municipal matters. It is said that most, if not all, the old Councillors will stand for re-election. The names of Messrs. Bert Squire and W. E. Pakenham are being mentioned as possible aspirants to the office of Councillors. It is likely that the present Reeve will be returned by acclamation.

Special to Review.

Keene, Dec. 11.—Mrs. (Dr.) McWilliams had a narrow escape from serious injuries while driving to Keene station. The harness broke and the horse ran away, throwing Mrs. McWilliams and Miss Fletcher to the ground, and leaving the vehicle in a dilapidated state.

RECOGNITION OF CIVIC ABILITY

The man of ability who makes himself known by coming forward when the public need his aid, who makes himself heard always in the public interest and never against it, who repeatedly stands up for public rights against corporate or private interests, who fights the fight of the people against open and covert enemies, will soon gain a recognition more potent to win public trust than is the personal familiarity secured through fraternal societies and other organizations.—Toronto Globe.

OBJECTION IS TAKEN TO SECOND LETTER FROM THE SANITARY INSPECTOR

Wm. Langford Complains to Board of Health About Tone of Second Letter—He was Asked to Improve Sanitary Conditions in House on Stewart Street.

BOARD AFTER THE CHINAMEN

Practice of Farmers Bringing Meat to the City, Wrapped in Horse Blankets will be Prohibited—Fish Must Not be Exposed Outside Stores

William Langford, of Water street, waited upon the Board of Health yesterday afternoon to complain about the tone of a letter sent him by Sanitary Inspector Spence, asking to have four of his houses put into a more sanitary condition. Mr. Langford has tenants occupying houses on Stewart street, and claimed that they were producing him very little rent, and that he intended to make the sanitary changes demanded by the Inspector in the spring. It appears that Inspector Spence visited the premises first and noted the conditions of the houses, which he considered to be unhealthy and unsanitary for the tenants. He ordered Mr. Langford to make the necessary improvements, but no notice was taken by the owner.

Mr. Langford resented the peremptory tone of the Sanitary Inspector's second letter, and he did not wish to comply with such an order.

"I have lived in this city long enough and paid taxes long enough to be known here," said Mr. Langford, "and I don't feel like taking an order like that from a man who I believe does not pay a cent of taxes."

Mr. Langford claimed that Mr. Spence had insinuated that he was a blood-sucking landlord.

AN OFFICIAL NOTICE.

Dr. McPherson informed Mr. Langford that he should have remembered that the notice served him came from a public official, who had the by-law behind him, and that if he failed to remedy the unsanitary conditions, the Board was empowered with authority to close up the houses. He further stated that it had been at the request of himself that the second letter had been sent to Mr. Langford.

Mr. Langford somewhat warmly contended that Sanitary Inspector Spence was overstepping the duties of his position. Mr. Langford retired after the Board had promised to investigate his complaint.

Dr. McPherson was firmly of the opinion that Mr. Langford should be compelled to comply with Mr. Spence's orders. He thought that the Board of Health was sometimes too lax in dealing with such important matters pertaining to the public health. It was up to the Board of Health to take an attitude that insisted upon sanitary measures being adopted.

"It is part of our duty to see that the people live under proper healthful conditions, and it was principally with that purpose in view that the formation of the local Health Association took place," he said.

The M.H.O. held that if the houses owned by Mr. Langford were not fit and proper places for people to live in, they should be closed up.

It was finally decided to request Mr. Langford to install proper sanitary equipment in one of the houses most urgently needing same, and to allow him five months in which to improve the others on condition that sewer connections be made.

PRACTICE OF CHINAMEN IS CONDEMNED

The M.H.O. also condemned the practice which the Dominion Chinese Cafe employes have adopted of sleeping in the basement below their place of business. The matter was talked over as it was considered to be somewhat in opposition to health and sanitation, sleeping in an ill ventilated and sunless room.

It is altogether probable that they will be asked to discontinue the practice.

MEAT WRAPPED IN HORSE HORSE BLANKETS

Another important matter dealt with was the habit of farmers bringing meat to market wrapped in horse blankets and other unsavory coverings.

The Medical Health Officer was asked to prepare a by-law containing clauses, prohibiting the exposure of fish and other edibles, to dust outside of stores and also compelling farmers to be more particular in providing proper coverings for their produce.

Those present at the meeting were—Robert Neill, acting chairman; Jos. Metheral, D. H. Kernaghan, Dr. McPherson, Mayor Bradburn, and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

ANNUAL MEETING HEALTH ASS'N

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Health Association will be held in the Council Chamber, Friday, December 13th, at 4 p.m., when reports will be presented and officers elected. The members of the Health Association are asked to be present.

Heroic Dog Dead.

Although he saved the life of his master by his barking, Bert Russell's dog, "Nigger" is dead.

Fire which broke out in the basement of the Empire theatre, Edmonton, about half-past two the other morning, sent dense volumes of smoke upstairs into the front room where Manager Russell sleeps and the alert nose of the little dog was the first to detect the danger. His barks awoke Mr. Russell none too soon, for the whole building was filled with smoke and escape by the stairs was an impossibility.

While "Nigger" crawled under the bed to find his safety, Mr. Russell smashed the window and shouted for help. Two nearby policemen heard, and while one turned in the fire alarm, the other attempted ineffectually to relieve the perilous situation in which the manager of the theatre was placed.

The firemen's ladder finally gave him an opportunity to get to ground almost exhausted, but "Nigger" remained under the bed and his little body was found afterwards with life extinct.

How to Cook Carp.

While in Orillia recently Rev. Canon Greene told The Packet a recipe for cooking the carp which were so plentiful in the lakes this season. It was given to him by Mr. Housey, of Housey's Rapids, who now lives at Toronto. Anyone fond of fish can be assured of a most delicious repast if the instructions are followed closely. Take a carp, clean and wash it well, then cover freely with butter. Secure a piece of oak plank large enough to hold the fish, and place them in the oven. Cook well with steady, hot fire for two hours, then take out of the oven, throw the fish away, and eat the plank.—Orillia Packet.

Left In the Banks.

A blue book tabled in the Commons gives a list of unclaimed balances in Canadian banks. It shows that some thousands of depositors throughout Canada have for some reason or other left with the banks a total of $676,147, to which no one has laid claim for years.

The unclaimed balances run from a few cents up to several thousand dollars, upwards of a score being over two thousand dollars and several being in the neighborhood of five thousand dollars.

CHAMPLAIN SOCIETY

The Champlain Society, organized in 1905, is the most exclusive cult devoted to book-publishing in Canada. Its aim is to publish "valuable and practically inaccessible material relating to the history of Canada." Its president is that indispensable head to financial and art associations, Sir Edmund Walker. The volumes published by the society are not sold to the public. The actual number sold is 500, which go to subscribers only—men of means as it may be surmised, who can afford the luxury of high-class works on Canadian history. There are two secretaries—Prof. G. M. Wrong and Eric Armour. The latter is a lawyer with considerable musical aptitude, and a strong interest in financial affairs. The former is well known as senior professor of history in Toronto University. The treasurer is A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education, for many years a most able journalist, a man of ripe scholarship in a general way, and much interested in the needs of the general public. Vice-presidents are Sir Louis Jetty, Sir D. D. McMillan, Sir Richard McBride, President Falconer, and C. W. Colby. Councillors: A. G. Doughty, Dominion archivist; Adam Shortt, chairman of Civil Service Commission; James H. Coyne, of the Elgin Historical Society; H. H. Langton, University Librarian, and Walter C. Murray.

Seven volumes have already been published at the rate of one a year.

Work of Labor Bureau.

The annual report of the Dominion Department of Labor notes an upward tendency in wages, attended by an increase in the cost of living.

The success of the Industrial Disputes Act is indicated in the fact that in five years 124 disputes, in which it was invoked, have arisen, and only in 14 cases did the conciliatory proceedings fail to prevent a strike. Last year there were 97 industrial disputes as against 94 in the year previous. Building trades predominated in those difficulties. The report explains and reviews at length the work of the Department, an important feature of which is the regular investigation and reports of wholesale prices in relation to the cost of living.

He Won the Medal.

When the cat show was for the first time made a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, J. B. Carlisle, the former Toronto insurance magnate who died in Toronto recently, presented a medal for the exhibitor showing the greatest number of cats. Harry Bray, a traveler for the Tuckett Tobacco Co., took advantage of this and hired a squad of street urchins to hunt up a legion of back fence prowlers. They secured more than 60 of the toughest cats in Toronto by nature and appearance, but they were strong in the matter of numbers, if nothing else, and won the medal.

TALES OF STRONG MAN

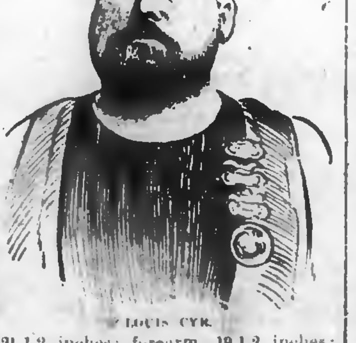
LATE LOUIS CYR WAS WORLD'S SAMSON IN HIS DAY.

The Lifter of Heavy Weights Began His Career by Defeating David Michaud—He Was Later a Circus Man, a Restauranteur and Finally Died of Heart Failure—Once a Policeman.

Louis Cyr, the world's greatest strong man, died recently in Montreal. He was born at St. Cyprien, province of Quebec, in 1863, attributed his great strength almost entirely to the magnificent physique of his mother, who stood 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighed 267 pounds. When only 18 years of age he met and defeated David Michaud in Quebec in 1881. Michaud, who was a dozen years older than Cyr, was considered at that time to be the champion strong man of the country. Cyr lifted a stone weighing 480 pounds, which Michaud could not raise an inch.

Under the management of the late Harry Phillips, Cyr later toured Canada, the United States and Europe, meeting and defeating scores of strong men. His greatest feat was lifting with his back a platform on which stood 20 or 25 men, totalling in weight about 4,500 pounds. It is said that his record for that feat was 4,562 pounds, made at Sohmer Park in Montreal eighteen years ago. He also had a record for raising slowly from the ground above his head a dumbbell weighing 347 pounds. Cyr retired from active competitions seven years ago, handing his title over to Horace Barre, of St. Henry.

Before he fell ill two years ago Cyr weighed 365 pounds, was 5 feet 10 1-2 inches tall; had a chest measurement of 59 1-2 inches; expansion of chest, 7 inches; waist 47 inches; biceps, 21 1-2 inches; forearm, 19 1-2 inches; thigh, 33 inches; calf, 20 inches—really a wonderful physical development.



LOUIS CYR.

In the twenty-eight years he has been in the public arena, as champion strong man, and in this capacity as well as in business as a restauranteur and a circus proprietor, Cyr managed to amass a tidy competence. Twelve years ago, the deceased entered upon a regime, and took no other food than milk. For fifteen years before his death he had never lain on a bed, but was forced to take his night's repose in a Morris chair. He suffered from heart trouble, as well as from asthma, these maladies rendering it extremely difficult for him to take a reclining position.

He became a member of the Montreal police force, and figured in several noted captures of criminals and stick-up men. Early one morning he walked into the station and handed over three husky toughs whom he had arrested in the down-town section. At first the arrested ones had endeavored to put up a fight, but Cyr, taking one under each arm, and carrying the other in a vice-like grip in front of him, marched off to the station with all three prisoners clear of the ground.

She Lost No Time.

A colored attorney walked rapidly into the courtroom the other day, followed by a large colored woman. She had her sleeves rolled up to the elbows and appeared to have come from the washtub. Her manner was business-like.

"Ah wants to probate mah husband's will," she said.

The judge went through the usual procedure. He read the will and asked the usual questions. Then he began making the usual notations.

"And when did he die?" the judge asked.

"Jes' about a half hour ago," was the reply.

The Shape of Smoke.

What is the shape of smoke? This is not one of the numbered foolish questions, but a subject dealt with seriously in the first bulletin issued by the smoke investigating commission in Pittsburgh. The commission experts say that it is necessary not only to know the chemistry of smoke and how it acts harmfully upon metal work, masonry and building materials generally, as well as vegetation, but it is important to know also the shape and size of smoke particles, how the different kinds vary, whether they are electrically charged and how they form nuclei for the condensation of fog and rain.

The Scapegoat.

"You say the boy's maternal grandfather was a highwayman?"

"Yes."

"And his paternal grandfather was charged with arson?"

"Yes."

"And his aunt is a shoplifter and his uncle a counterfeiter?"

"Yes."

"Then to what do you ascribe his waywardness?"

"Why, to moving pictures, of course."

Houses In China.

The Chinese, as a rule, are poorly housed. In the towns the buildings are mostly brick with tiled roofs, but many are built of wood. There is practically no attempt at internal decoration. The windows are papered, but glass is coming into use among the well to do. The laboring classes live in mud or wattle huts, tiled, thatched or roofed with matting.

Ventriloquism In the Bible.

Ventriloquism has its first historic mention, as far as we are aware, in Isaiah xxix, 4. "And thou shalt be brought down and shall speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be as one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust."

CENTRAL SMITH FARMERS ENTER SEVEN DAY TEST

Are Strong Believers in the Cow Testing Work Being Carried on.

To J. K. Moore & Son, of Central Smith, belongs the honor of being the first farmers in West Peterborough to enter their cows in an official 7 day test.

To those who are not familiar with the 7 day test and how it is conducted, it might be well to explain that some years ago when the pure bred Holsteins were not popular with the general public owing to the alleged small percentage of fat contained in the milk, the Holstein breeders realized that if it could be proved to the public that the Holstein was really producing milk of fair quality, and also producing such a large quantity that this breed were great profit producers, that there would be a great demand for Holsteins.

Following up this idea the Holstein Association asked the Agricultural Colleges and Dairy Schools to appoint and supervise the work of men whose business it would be to go to farms where it was desired to conduct a test, to be present at every milking, weigh the milk and test for fat, and as these men worked under the instructions of the Agricultural Colleges and were not responsible to the owner of the animals tested, the tests were known as official.

When some work had been done along this line and some excellent records published, showing that the Holstein could in addition to giving a large quantity of milk also produce a large amount of fat, this breed became very popular.

Three cows were entered in the test recently by Messrs. Moore with the following results:

Cow No. 1.—Six years old, in the 7 days gave 428.6 lbs. milk and 18 lbs. butter.

Cow No. 2.—Five years old, gave 404 lbs. milk and 17.1 lbs. butter.

Cow No. 3.—Three years old, gave 417 lbs. milk and 17.3 lbs. butter.

The test was conducted by Mr. D. A. Oakley, official supervisor for the Kingston Dairy School.

Messrs. Moore are also strong believers in the cow testing work as carried on through the Associations, having been members of the Central Smith Association ever since it was organized and they are to be congratulated on having developed animals capable of making such large records.

What's In a Name?

According to The Winnipeg Post there are some odd names to be found in the postal guide. It quotes "some curiosities" from among the more recent titles approved by the P. M. G., saying:

"One new postoffice in British Columbia is actually called Molly Gibson. Glen Campbell is also to be immortalized, and one of the postoffices of Nova Scotia is called after the former Dauphin member. Unless you are Scotch, here is a nice mouthful, a postoffice called Craigellachie. Here are several gems: Debrecan, Pokesudi, and Uig. Zant and Zoria are the names of two new postoffices in the Dauphin district, and a Nipissing postoffice is called Zeta. Ground Hog is the classical name of a new British Columbia postoffice, and there is a Waterloo near Edmonton.

Has an Easy Time.

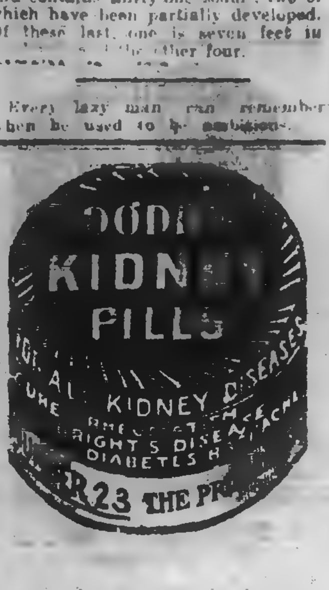
Since W. R. Travers, former manager of the defunct Farmers' Bank, was sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary he has spent but a short time in that institution. In fact, most of his time has been spent in little jaunts to Toronto, to stay there for a few weeks, and then back again to Kingston, and to Toronto again to give evidence.

Travers' routine for the day is: Breakfast about 7 o'clock, lunch at noon, and supper about 5 o'clock. His meals are eaten at the jail, except when he is at court. Then he dines at a hotel, but the county officers are in charge of him.

Rich Coal Strike.

Fresh evidences of the unsurpassed mineral wealth opened up by the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in Western Canada are brought to light almost day by day and the latest find is mentioned in a report just received from Hazelton, B.C., which states that a body of high-grade coking coal has been discovered lying south of that town. The property in question is on the Kitsegukla River, twelve miles from the G.T.P., and contains thirty-one seams, two of which have been partially developed. Of these last, one is seven feet in [illegible] the other four.

Every lazy man can remember when he used to be ambitious.



OUR POLYGLOT PRESS.

Many Languages Stand In the Way of Canada's Literature.

"The great hindrance to Canada's literature," a literary friend of mine the other day remarked, "is the fact that we are a bilingual nation. Look at Belgium, for example, there you have a bilingual nation, and just think what years it took her to produce a Maeterlinck."

I replied by alluding with patriotic pride to our noble array of writers, already a goodly host, and wound up by stating my firm belief that we were big enough to support two or even three languages under the same flag.

"My dear fellow," was his answer, "you say 'two or even three languages.' Have you any idea in how many languages publications are issued in Canada?"

Not being a walking encyclopaedis, I had to answer negatively, and that was his chance. He simply douched me under a shower bath of facts. And when I recovered my breath and was able to reappear again in the world at large, I had some of the following ideas on our polyglot press:

First of all, of course, at the present time, there are more English dailies, weeklies and monthlies than French; but the French are by no means a bad second. Quebec issues about 88 publications in its provincial language, Ontario has eight French or semi-French newspapers, Manitoba has three, New Brunswick two, and Prince Edward Island and Alberta one each.

Besides English and French, newspapers are published in the following languages in Canada: Slavic, Japanese, Chinese, Icelandic, German, Polish, Swedish, Ruthenian, Magyar, Danish, Finnish, Hebrew and Italian. Spanish and Russian seem to be the only two major European languages unrepresented.

However, with our fifteen printed tongues we do pretty well. Nova Scotia and the Yukon press are the only two provinces that can claim pure, uncontaminated English. The Acadians have left, it would seem, no vestige of their language in the modern printed paper in the land of Evangeline, while it must be admitted that the Yukon only runs three news-sheets.

Quebec is, of course, more French than English, Montreal being the centre of the French publishing world just as Toronto is of the English. New Brunswick is practically pure English, Shediac with its "Moniteur Acadien," and Moncton with its "Evangeline," alone varying the English. Ontario produces more printed matter than the rest of Canada, and it is practically all English, with a mild sprinkling of French and German, a Danish paper, "Danebrog," at Ottawa, and the "Tyokansa," a Finnish publication at Port Arthur.

The farther west we go, of course, where the most recent immigrants have located, the more varied becomes this Babel Tower of tongues. Manitoba has a French patch at St. Boniface; otherwise its second printed tongue is easily Icelandic, Winnipeg alone producing five publications in this language. British Columbia is pure English with the exception of some Oriental newspapers such as the "Tai-Hon-Yat-Bo" (Chinese), and the "Tairika-Nippo" (Japanese), of Vancouver. Of the newer provinces Alberta is evidently German, and Saskatchewan very English, as it has only three foreign papers.—Bernard Muddiman in Canadian Courier.

Wild Bison Herd Found.

Harry V. Radford, the explorer, has discovered more than 250 wild buffalo in the Slave Lake district of the Hudson Bay country, probably the only herd of wild bison in the world.

Outside of a few collections of domesticated bison, there are no known living specimens of the buffalo in the country and the last wild herd in Canada is believed to have been exterminated. For many years reports have come out of the Hudson Bay country concerning the existence of a new and distinct species of buffalo, but only within the last ten years have scientists agreed that this species is a different variety from the American bison.

One of the herd, killed by Mr. Radford, weighed 2,400 pounds and the skull and skeletons were very massive specimens, larger and broader in every way than any of the prairie bison skeletons.

To keep starch from sticking use flat-irons that are perfectly clean—a thorough wash in soda water insures this—and when making the starch add a large pinch of borax and stir with a tallow candle.

UTE JOHN

He Was a White Boy Brought Up by Indians

By MILLARD MALTBIE

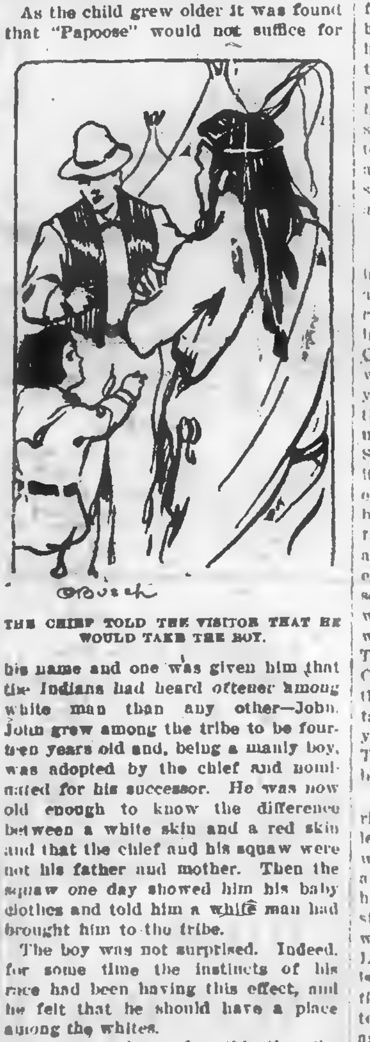
A man riding on horseback over that region lying west of the Missouri river called "the plains," with a curly headed boy about three years old before him, coming to an Indian village dismounted and carrying the child to the chief said to him:

"I'd like you to take this little feller and bring him up as an Indian. And be sure he stays an Indian. Here's enough money to buy firewater with to last you a long while. Is it a bargain?"

The chief told the visitor that he would take the boy, but would make better use of the money than to spend it for firewater. Then the man rode away, muttering to himself: "Reckon that youngster's pretty well lost. He's too young to know who he is, and if he ever joins the whites they can't find out who he is neither. Lucky I caught sight of this thing," taking a gold locket and chain from his pocket; "it might have identified him." He opened the locket and found its contents a tiny lock of auburn hair. Three letters were cut inside the locket—M. E. W. "That would have been a dead give away," he continued, "and if I hadn't caught a glimpse of the chain I'd never have seen the locket."

The chief with whom he had made the bargain turned the child over to his squaw, who proceeded to take off the fine linen in which he was clothed with a view to putting them away for future use, while the boy was to run about naked. She was admiring an undergarment edged with lace when her eye caught sight of some letters embroidered upon it. She did not know what they meant, but had a glimmering in her stupid brain that the clothes bearing the hieroglyphics might be of some value at some future time.

As the child grew older it was found that "Papoose" would not suffice for his name and one was given him that the Indians had heard oftener among white man than any other—John. John grew among the tribe to be fourteen years old and, being a manly boy, was adopted by the chief and nominated for his successor. He was now old enough to know the difference between a white skin and a red skin and that the chief and his squaw were not his father and mother. Then the squaw one day showed him his baby clothes and told him a white man had brought him to the tribe.



THE CHIEF TOLD THE VISITOR THAT HE WOULD TAKE THE BOY.

The boy was not surprised. Indeed, for some time the instincts of his race had been having this effect, and he felt that he should have a place among the whites.

It was not long after this that the Indians broke loose from their reservation and in a fight with United States troops were defeated and John was captured with the Indians. When all were released the boy wished to go with them, but the officer in command questioned him and, learning the circumstances of his introduction among the Indians, persuaded him to remain with his own race.

At this time John knew not a word of any language except that of the tribe to which he belonged—the Utes—and was questioned through an interpreter. He possessed all the reticence of an Indian, having been brought up in that school, and very little was gained from him. When his squaw foster mother learned that he was to remain with his own people she sent him his baby clothes. They made but a small parcel and when given to John attracted no attention. He put them away without saying anything about them.

Edith Trowbridge, the daughter of one of the captains serving at the fort, was a black eyed little girl of twelve. Notwithstanding the fact that Ute John had been brought up as a son of the forest, his skin was fairer than Edith's, and, while her hair was like the raven, his was like the robin. The two were permitted to be companionable for some two years, when one of those periodic changes which are a part of army routine came about. The command was transferred to a station in the middle west. The colonel had meanwhile been considering what to do with John, and the officers of his command, who considered the boy their protege, made up a purse to give him a couple of years' schooling, the colonel heading the subscription.

Before parting with Edith Trowbridge she and John had a boy and a girl lovers' interview, which was especially painful to both and would probably have been painful to Edith's parents had they known anything about it. John never told of it himself, and as for the girl, being still a child, she was not likely to confess a childish love.

When Ute John had had a couple of years' schooling—he proved an apt scholar—he was old enough to think for himself and a career in the line of a white citizen of the United States. He desired to go to college, but this was not to be considered unless he paid his own way. It was then that the idea of trying to discover his identity, which had often occurred to him, took a firm hold, and spreading his baby clothes, which he had carefully preserved, on a table before him he proceeded to examine them and to think. He was at once struck with the fine texture of their fabric and with the fact that the child who had worn them must have been born of parents among the upper classes. And he now realized for the first time the letters (C. L. W.) embroidered on them must be the initials of his own name. He regretted that he had kept the secret of these clothes, for he now knew that if he had given them to those interested in him they might by this time have discovered his identity.

He was now sufficiently developed to act intelligently. He took the clothes to an attorney to whom he told the story given him by his squaw foster mother of his introduction to the Ute Indians; namely, that he had been brought to the chief by a white man who had paid the former to keep him and not let him get back to civilization. The lawyer agreed to open an investigation at his own expense by advertising the story in a number of newspapers.

Since nothing came of the advertisement, John entered college resolved to pay his way by attaining scholarships and earning money by work. He had finished his first year of study when the lawyer who had taken his case sent for him and told him that he had heard from the advertisement, which he had kept inserting from time to time. A man named Markland had replied to it, saying that he had long been seeking a child who had been stolen about the time John was taken to the Indians. This person had called at the attorney's office and when he saw the baby clothes marked C. L. W. at once exclaimed:

"Found!"

He told the following story: Cuthbert Whitridge, a wealthy gentleman and his wife for years after their marriage had no child. Then a son was born to them whom they named Charles Louis. Mrs. Whitridge died when the boy was not quite three years old and shortly after her death the boy disappeared. Every effort was made to trace him without avail. Since no demand for ransom was made it was supposed that the child had either fallen to his death or been taken by gypsies who had adopted him. His father, Cuthbert Whitridge, had made a will naming Edward Markland executor, leaving his property to his son provided he appeared to claim it within twenty years. After that it was to go to the testator's brother. This brother, Ambrose Whitridge, after Cuthbert's death, had striven to break the will to secure the property, maintaining a legal contest for fifteen years, but meeting repeated defeats. The suit had been expensive to defend but the estate was very valuable.

Ute John, or Charles Louis Whitridge, finding himself heir to a fortune, learned his sweetheart's address and wrote her of his changed condition. He and his counsel believed that his uncle had stolen, or employed some one to steal, him when a child and take him west and lose him among the Indians. Louis Whitridge being desirous to punish his uncle, if guilty, after consultation with his counsel, employed a detective to endeavor to get evidence against him. This was also necessary since the uncle would not acknowledge him as heir to his property. The detective bribed a housemaid to admit him to the premises when her master was away, and he found in a desk a letter containing a locket, the letter stating, "The job is done—send me the balance." No name was signed to the letter. The locket contained a lock of auburn hair, and the letters M. E. W. were engraved within it. Louis' mother's hair was the exact color of this lock and her name was Mary Elizabeth.

In this discovery there was evidence to show that Ambrose Whitridge had been instrumental in the abduction of the child who stood between him and a fortune and had hired a man to lose him to the world. Louis, acting on the advice of his lawyer, invited his uncle to meet him for a conference in the attorney's office for the purpose of a compromise. When Ambrose Whitridge arrived he learned that the compromise intended was his signing off all claim to the disputed property or being prosecuted criminally for abduction. He chose the former.

Before returning to college Louis Whitridge visited the military station where Captain—now Lieutenant Colonel—Trowbridge served and met his sweetheart, whom he had not seen for several years. Since the girl had remained constant to her "Ute John," the meeting was a happy one. She consented to John's applying to her father for her, and his consent was granted on condition that the pair wait till Edith came of age and Louis had been graduated from college.

Lots of men are born generous but they soon have it trained out of them.

Somewhat Dubious.

"I wonder would the judge consider a plea of insanity?"

"Doubtless he would. Why do you hesitate?"

"Well, my client only stole twenty-five plunks."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MANAGERS FOR HOCKEY TEAMS

H. P. Morgan will have the management of the senior and intermediate O.H.A. teams this season, while F. D. Craig will look after the juniors.

These two appointments were made by the Executive at a meeting last night. Mr. Morgan is in Toronto to-day to meet representatives of No. 1 senior group and arrange dates.

Mr. Morgan should be of great assistance to the teams, and no doubt the players will be glad to learn that he has consented to take charge. Mr. Craig has always been actively engaged in promoting the welfare of the juniors, and he was to a great extent the man behind when the youngsters went to the semi-finals last season. He is popular with the juniors, and if anyone can induce them to do their best, he is that person.

Len Dobson will go to Port Hope to-morrow as the club's representative for the arranging of the junior and intermediate schedule.

Rink Manager Meharry has men engaged in preparing the rink floor for ice, and with a continuance of cold weather, the ice works should be running at full blast in a short time. Meanwhile the players are asked to attend training classes.

MR. H. P. MORGAN

He will manage and coach the Senior and Intermediate O. H. A. teams.

AD. WOLGAST CAN AFFORD THE TITLE OF EX-CHAMPION

San Francisco, Dec. 11. — Ad Wolgast has been deprived of his lightweight crown, but he has enough of earthly wares to act as somewhat of a balm. Manager Tom Jones made the statement yesterday that during the three years that Wolgast was the lightweight champion of the world he made $240,000. Half of this big fortune was made up in purses and the rest was accumulated in bets, theatrical engagements and outside investments.

"The beauty about it, too," said Jones, "is that the German has been shifty enough to keep the major part of it. I venture to say that he is worth close to $200,000 to-day. He has property in Los Angeles valued at $161,000, and he has his ranch in Michigan. His money has been wisely invested and Wolgast has never handled more than $500 in his life.

"Wolgast will be one champion who will not go the ways of his predecessors. He is far from through with the boxing game, but when he does retire he can settle down and be comfortably fixed for the rest of his life."

EDDIE WRIGHT WANTS HIS RELEASE FROM SAINTS

St. Thomas, Dec. 11.—The president, Mr. Stanley, of the St. Thomas Baseball Club said the other day: "Did it ever strike the fans of this city that we are the only club that has not sold a player or had one drafted from us during the last two years of the Canadian League existence?" Mr. Stanley blames the newspapers in his town for not boosting enough, although he states the club may be to blame in another way, and cites an instance of when a scout was in their city with the object of looking over Powers, the little Cleveland catcher, but the scout had to go away dissatisfied because the player was not worked in any of the games, although the management knew who the big league man was looking for.

"What are you doing about a manager for next season?" he was asked.

"We have at the present time several applications for the job but have as yet not made any pretence of choosing one."

St. Thomas will have a leader in 1913 that will fill the bill, and the one thing that the management will insist is that no more "joy clubs" will represent this city in the Canadian League. If players fall from the "straight road," they will be set down for a week or so without salary, and we are content that this will stop any more side-stepping, because that is where the "shoe pinches." After a player's money and he will soon tread the straight road.

Eddie Wright wants to get away this winter again from the club and threatens to hold out if he isn't given his release.

St. Thomas had a good team last year, and had not injuries set them back just when things were brilliant for a winning streak, the club would have finished up higher than they did. We are out to win the rag next year. Watch us.

WHITE CAPS FOR FIRST DIVISION

In discussing the Canadian League an Ottawa exchange says:

"President Denham of the Peterborough club announces the White Caps will be a first division team from the clang of the bell next summer. President Denham admits at the start of last season his club was caught napping. They did not believe the league was as fast as it turned out to be, and with only mediocre players in charge of a poor manager got away to a distressing start. While the reorganization was late in coming, when it did land the Petes were there with a real ball club. Next year they will have the pick of last season's men, including Manager Dave Rowan, Jimmy Beard and Barthold the latter being one of the best hitters in the Canadian League this season, as well as a .330 clouter in the Tri-State three years ago. The pitching staff will also be intact, with a couple of additions. Peterborough should retrieve this season what they lost last year.

JIM FLYNN.

Luther McCarty disposed of him in the fifth of a twenty round bout at Los Angeles last night. McCarty is a new comer and had the better of the short battle.

Men never approve of women who can use words of more than two syllables.

A woman without any decision of character always assumes an air of superior virtue for not having the courage to stand up for her own rights.

SPORTING NEWS

Canadian League statistics, about three months overdue, will be brought down this week. Jack Fryer, of Guelph, was the leading batter while Joe McManus had the best record of the pitchers. Schwian led the shortstop and Eddie Wright had it over every other third baseman.

Mike Callahan of the Ottawa champions is putting in the winter as clerk in the Chicago post office. He says he may drop out of baseball altogether.

Frank Heffernan didn't play in the Slee Benefit match Saturday. He has a sprained ankle as the result of strenuous gymnasium work.

Manager Ridpath of the Toronto pros. has cut his strings on Ben Dusty. Allan Davidson, who was a member of the champion Kingston Frontenacs two years ago, will likely land a berth.

The Canadian League annual meeting will not be held till Friday. It was found necessary to change the date from to-day.

Parkdale, with Addison, Code, Lawson, Hunter, Ridpath, Evans, Davidson, Bartlett, Edwards and Denison, will surely cut some factor in the O.H.A. senior race. Denison is a cousin of Fred Denison who will play for the Alerts and hails from Lindsay. Ridpath is a Lakefield lad, while Code, Hunter, Evans and Davidson, the well known Beulah, need no further introduction.

Peterborough fans will recall big "Babe" Schumann, the massive twirler, pitcher. In 1909 "Babe" was the second leading pitcher of the Hartford team in the Connecticut League and, coupled with Ray Fisher, now of the New York Americans, practically won the pennant for Hartford that year. He won 18 and lost 10 games. At the end of the season Schumann was billed for the big show. He had a predilection for pancakes, fried chicken and other delicacies, however, and during the winter months ran up his poundage to about a quarter of a ton. By the time spring training time came around "Babe" had developed a spacious front verandah and two grand piano legs. It queered him for the majors and while he has tried his best to get down to normal weight ever since he has been unable to do so.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—The players of the Wanderer Hockey Club will be the first to turn out for practices, and will make their debut this season to-night. Walter Miller, who is one of the new acquisitions to the team, will not arrive until Saturday morning, he being the only one who will not answer the call on Wednesday. Miller is said to be one of the fastest forwards playing the game this season, and will be a useful man to the Wanderers' make-up.

Curiosities on the Cards.

At one time or another most of us have been amused by the quaint inscriptions on visiting or business cards. But we shall have to yield the palm in this respect to France, where, for example, a young woman named Martha adds after her name on her visiting card the fact that she is "chamber maid to the wife of Senator So-and-so."

A negro from Hayti, in the same gay country, describes himself as "hairdresser to the president of the law court," and a man named Poiret is a "professor of the art of getting about the streets of Paris without suffering bodily harm."

A very modest countryman's card bears the words, "M. and Mme. Benard and their young lady, local postman"; a Count de V. describes himself as "aggressive, assertive, and impertinent philosopher"; while Auguste D. has the honor of being "the first one to proclaim the Republic in Algeria."

Some people have the words "courtesy, business, thanks, condolence," printed on the back of their cards, one in each corner, so that when the subject of the call is out they can turn down the suitable corner, and thus disclose the object of their visit.

WORK ON THE G. T. PACIFIC

The Hudson Bay Company's post at Fort George, British Columbia, are laying their plans and making arrangements to have their next season supplies come in by way of Edmonton and Tete Jaune Cache, over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This arrangement marks a new feature in transportation over that country, as heretofore all freight had to be drawn in by waggon over the old Cariboo road for a distance of 167 miles, and thence by steamer for another 150 miles.

Every day brings us nearer to the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This is emphasized by the fact that passengers can now leave Edmonton at 10.00 p.m. in Pullman Sleeping Car, arriving at Fitzhugh, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, Alberta, at 9.20 the next morning, and Tete Jaune Cache on the Fraser River, in British Columbia at 2.00 o'clock the next afternoon, [illegible] hours to do the journey. This is remarkable when it is considered that two years ago last summer, an exploration party in charge of Mr. H. R. Charlton, General Advertising Agent of the Company, penetrated the forests and followed the trails through the Yellowhead Pass, which trip occupied 37 days of continuous travel by pack train between Edson and Tete Jaune Cache.

An Old Favorite.

With the name of nearly every British or Canadian legislator there has, at one time or another, been something of the humorous attached.

"Reminiscences," by Sir Richard Cartwright, just published, brings to mind a story in which Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Richard Cartwright are said to have figured. It is probable that the same story has been told about other Parliamentary lights.

At any rate it is related that Sir Richard wagered five dollars with Sir John that the latter could not say the Lord's Prayer.

The bet fully arranged Sir John proceeded: "Now I lay me down to sleep ——"

Whereupon Sir Richard quickly broke in with this remark: "Never mind, Sir John. The money is yours. I didn't think you knew it."

A STRANGE CENSUS

The Canadian Government have essayed the gigantic task of making an official census of all human life in the 600,000 square miles of wilderness, and polar barren that extend from the outposts of civilization to the Arctic boundary. The work was begun more than two years ago, but it isn't completed yet, except in the 100,000 square miles along the west shore of the great Hudson Bay.

There have been few undertakings more filled with the elements of romance and adventure, of hardship and the picturesque, than this taking of a census in a country of savagery and desolation, where human life is enumerated at just about the rate of one man, woman or child to every 50 square miles. In it have played their parts the old Hudson Bay Co.'s factor, the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, adventurous traders and explorers, dogs and sledges, canoes and snowshoes; to say nothing of that other still more picturesque part of the "game," the people whom the Government is seeking. Kogmollocks, Nunatalmutes, Crees, Chippewayans, half-breeds, French, and Indians of a dozen different tribal names are now down in black and white in what is without doubt the world's most interesting and unusual census.

Dan Cupid and the Piano.

Dan Cupid is credited with a romance a bit out of the ordinary in the lives of a prominent Canadian piano manufacturer and his better half.

The story goes that, when a young man, the hero of the tale was sent by his firm to take a piano out of a home because a few payments were overdue and the money was not in sight.

When he arrived at the house and entered the drawing room he saw a young lady seated at the piano, playing in a pleasing manner. Right there cupid seized the psychological moment and sent his barbed arrow home to the heart of the piano man.

There was some diplomatic discourse, and the net result was that the piano remained in the home. But the fair player did not.

Deathly Cramps, Stomach was Bloated

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

"The distress I suffered from cramps last summer was so severe I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emerson, of Guys Hill, P. O. "I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

NERVILINE

AN INSTANT RELIEF

No Poisonous Lead or Sulphur In Parisian Sage Hair Tonic

Banishes Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair or Money Back.

If you want a good, clean, delightful hair dressing, free from harmful ingredients, one that will stop falling hair, itching scalp, banish dandruff and add lustre to dull, faded hair, then ask for Parisian Sage and see that you get it.

The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton and bottle of Parisian Sage which is manufactured in Canada by the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Price only 50 cents at drug and department stores and all counters where toilet goods are sold. Here's more proof:

"It is indeed with pleasure that I wish to advise you of the great benefit received from the use of your Parisian Sage. I suffered from dandruff and falling hair; in fact was almost bald in spots. Parisian Sage was recommended to me so I purchased three bottles, having finished the last about ten days ago. My head is now free from dandruff and my hair is certainly much thicker than before I began using your wonderful tonic. Might state, too, that all other so-called remedies for dandruff which I tried were of no benefit. I cannot speak too highly of the merits of Parisian Sage and gladly endorse its use where the above mentioned conditions exist." G. Knight, Underwood, Ontario. Wm. Madill, druggist, guarantees it.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Doughty, 132 Park street, when Mr. Sidney Fergusen was united in marriage to Miss Hazel Gertrude Doughty by the Rev. W. C. Riddiford, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The bride was prettily attired in cream voile over a silk gown and was given away by her father. Mrs. Robert Wrightly, Havelock, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march, and Messrs. Harry and Edward Payne, of Lakefield, accompanied on the harp and mouth organ. The bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Lundy, while Mr. Wm. Doughty, brother of the bride, assisted as groomsman.

The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome presents, among which was a beautifully upholstered Morris chair to the bride, from the lamp department of the C. G. E., and a clock from the employes of the Canadian Canoe Factory, to the groom. The gift from the groom to the bride was a bar pin, set with amethysts. After the ceremony the party sat down to a wedding repast. The house decorations presented a very pretty scene. About fifty guests were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Fergusen will reside on Park street.

TRIAL BY JURY WELL PRESENTED

Appreciative Audience at the Second presentation

"Catchy music, spirited acting and fine vocalism featured the second presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan's charming opera "Trial By Jury" at the Conservatory Music Hall last evening. The attendance i anything exceeded that of Monday evening and the frequent applause was expressive of appreciation.

The Conservatory of Music orchestra supplied the accompaniment very satisfactorily, under Mr. Gliddon's direction. The Conservatory Orchestra never played to a more appreciative audience than that of last evening and in a couple of selections previous to the trail, they were liberally applauded.

Rehearsals by the Madrigal Club will be discontinued until after the holidays.

FRITZI SCHEFF IN "THE LOVE WAGER"

Miss Fritzi Scheff, in a new light opera offering her exceptional opportunities for the display of her own piquant personality, will appear at the Grand, next Tuesday, Dec. 17th, in "The Love Wager," under the direction of Jos. M. Gaites. Miss Scheff's role is that of a 14 year old girl suddenly transformed into attractive young womanhood, and in the course of the three acts she wears seven different gowns appropriate to the age she is at various times supposed to represent. "The Love Wager" is a charming operetta based upon the famous Hungarian comedy "Seven Sisters" yet offering an entirely new treatment of a familiar theme. The book is by Edith Ellis, with lyrics by Cary C. Duncan while the music is the work of a new composer, Charles J. L. Hambitzer of Milwaukee. A large singing company will appear with Miss Scheff.

New Haven Line a Monopoly.

Washington, Dec. 11 —Picturing the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad as a mighty monopoly, controlling all New England railroad and coastwise steamer traffic as well as thousands of miles of electric lines, state and city officials of New England yesterday appealed to the House rules committee to act favorably on the resolution of Representative O'Shaughnessy of Rhode Island to provide for a Congressional investigation of the alleged deal between the New Haven and Grand Trunk systems, through which work on the proposed extension of the latter, the Southern New England Railway, has been suspended.

Nearly a score of people were waiting to be heard when the committee adjourned last night, and the hearing probably will not be concluded before Thursday.

Mock Roast Duck.

Grind or chop together a pound of lean raw beef and half a pound of sausage meat. Shell and blanch half a pound of almonds, let them dry out in an open oven and grind them fine. Mix all these together and season with a teaspoonful of powdered sage, one of strained onion juice and salt and pepper to taste. Form with your hands into an oblong roll. You may exercise your ingenuity by molding it into something that may be recognized as the form of a duck. Sift fine crumbs all over it and lay in the covered roaster. Strain a ten cent can of chicken soup. Heat it to boiling and pour about the "duck" when he is in place. Bake slowly for an hour, covered, basting six times carefully not to dislodge the crumbs. Then uncover and cook half an hour longer, basting often. Transfer to a hot platter and set over boiling water, while you thicken the gravy in the pan with browned flour, adding a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Boil up and pour a few spoonfuls over the "duck," the rest into a gravy boat.

LAKEFIELD MAN KILLED IN WRECK

Fireman Ridpath Scalded to Death in Railway Collision Near Waubaushene --- Snowstorm Was Contributory to Cause of Bad Accident---Fireman Elliot, Nephew of Mr. T. C. Elliot, Was Severely Injured.

Lindsay, Dec. 12—A shocking pitch-in fatality occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway at 10.55 o'clock yesterday morning at Tanner's siding when Fireman Ridpath was scalded to death. Engineers Herb Elliot and E. Lynde and Fireman Wetherup being also severely scalded.

It appears that engine No. 2042, in charge of conductor Geo McElroy and Engineer Alger, of Lindysa, east bound way freight, was switching at Tanner's siding, about two miles from Waubaushene, when without any notice the double-header extra east, pitched into them from the rear header. The double header (engines Nos. 2019 and 2020) was in charge of conductor J. Mark of Lindsay, engineer Herb Elliot, and Fireman Ridpath being on the leading mogul, and Engineer E. Lynde and Fireman Whetherup on the second engine.

SNOWSTORM PRESENTED VIEW OF FREIGHT TRAIN

It appears that a blinding snowstorm prevented Engineer Elliot, and Fireman Ridpath from seeing the train ahead in time to prevent the pitch-in. The slippery rails also handicapped the engineer from bringing his train to a stop.

Fireman Ridpath, it is stated, was terribly scalded and died almost instantly.

Fireman Ridpath came from Lakefield, and was, it is said, on his trial run. Herb Elliot resided in Lindsay. He is the son of Wm. Elliot of Madoc, who is a brother of Mr. T. C. Elliot, proprietor of the Beehive. Another brother, also a G. T. R employe, was injured at Uxbridge, this week.

Mr .Elliot telephoned to Lindsay this morning and was informed that while the injuries received by Herb. Elliot were serious, fatal results were not anticipated.

PUT STAMPS ON THE BACK

Special Christmas Stamps Permitted This Year.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—With stamps with a face value of twenty thousand dollars appealing to the Christmas charity of the larger cities of Canada, the decree of the Postoffice Department against the use of any such special stamps came as a hard and sudden blow to the National Sanitarium Association. The European countries in the postal union prohibit the use of the stamps, and have announced that letters coming from Canada bearing these will be returned. Wherefore, Hon. Mr. Pelletier decided that Canada would have to get in line.

W. A. Charlton pleaded the cause of the Sanitar[illegible] in the House yesterd[illegible]peal is made at Christmas time for funds to fight tuberculosis. Last year $16,000 was collected through the sale of stamps, and this year there was expectancy of $20,000. Mr. Charlton therefore asked whether the stamps in question might be placed on the back of the envelope, as is done by contributors to the American Red Cross Association.

The Postmaster-General explained how he had been compelled to order the discontinuance of the use of special stamps. Said he: "Anything appearing on the face of a letter which resembles in form or color a regular stamps interferes with the work of the postal officials. In Toronto and Montreal, in particular, these men are working under high pressure, and anything which makes their work more difficult is to be avoided.

Further, countries in the postal union would not transmit letters bearing stamps other than those regularly issued by the country of origin. Even if they bore both kinds of stamps, they would be returned from Great Britain and other countries.

Mr. Pelletier, however, realized the hardship that too great suddenness would entail upon the N. S. A. "We have come to the conclusion," he said, "if the executive of the hospital in question will have their stamps used for sealing purposes upon the back of the envelope, having the very excellent purpose in view, we will allow the use of those stamps for this year only. It must, however, be very clearly understood that next year their use will no longer be permitted."

WATER WORRY AT THE CAPITAL

Government Will be Asked to Take up the Matter.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—That because the city has not coped successfully with the water situation, the Borden Government is to be asked to take over and deal with the entire matter, is suggested by Lt.-Col. J. W. Woods, commandant of the Governor-General's Foot Guards.

McGILLICUDDY PASSES AWAY

Was a Widely Known Canadian Newspaperman.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Daniel McGillicuddy, a prominent Canadian newspaperman, died at his home, 727 Dovercourt road, last night after an illness extending over two and one-half years. He was in his 63rd year and for the past two years had lived in Toronto, coming here from Calgary, where he was publisher of The News-Telegram, giving it up on account of ill-health. He is survived by a widow, two sons and two daughters, all of Toronto.

Mr. McGillicuddy was born in Carlisle, England, and came to Canada when quite young, settling in Halifax, where his father was connected with the British garrison. When a boy he entered newspaper work. Many years ago he established The Goderich Signal and The Brussels Post, and later The Calgary News-Telegram. His first position was on The Guelph Mercury. When a young man he was connected with The Globe during the time the late George Brown was editor, and when The Telegram was established by John Ross Robertson, over thirty years ago, he was taken on the editorial staff. He was also a past president of the Canadian Press Association. He was a veteran of the Fenian raid, going to the front in 1866 with the first Toronto contingent.

When on the executive committee of the Canadian Wheelman's Association years ago he was one of the first to begin the good roads movement, and he organized Huron County for the old Liberal Government. He took an active interest in politics and had engaged in many campaigns in the east and west. Seven years ago he was editor of Hansard.

The funeral will take place to-morrow.

NEW ORGANIZATION IS LAUNCHED AT BERLIN

The First Ontario Town Planning Congress is Attended by Prominent Men of the Province and Legislation Will Be Sought for Greater Power to Improve Cities and Towns on Scientific Lines.

Berlin, Dec. 12.—Two hundred representatives were present at the inaugural meeting of the Ontario Town Planning Congress held here last night, and after the discussion which followed the address of C. H. Mitchell, C.E., Toronto, who gave a splendid address, the following resolution was unanimously passed: On motion of Ald. W. B. Burgoyne of St. Catharines, seconded by Reeve Jaffray of Galt:

"That in the opinion of this meeting of representatives of municipalities called by the citizens of Berlin to discuss town planning and civic improvements along comprehensive lines the time is opportune for the formation of a provincial organization and that an adequate legislation to that end be sought and that a provisional committee consisting of ten members be appointed at this meeting with power to add to their number."

The following gentlemen comprise the first provincial town planning committee: J. G. Jaffray, Galt, chairman; F. L. Riggs, Toronto, secretary-treasurer; D. B. Detweiler, H. G. Bowman, Mayor Schmalz (Berlin), W. B. Burgoyne (St. Catharines), J. B. O'Brien, K.C., (Toronto), H. F. Hutton (Welland), H. F. Holland (Sarnia), E. A. Waterous (Brantford), Dr. Hodgetts (Ottawa), Mayor Hornuth (Preston). This committee has power to add to their numbers.

C. H. Mitchell said it had become evident that the time for national and provincial effort and for concerted civic activity in each community had arrived. To provide for wide and continuous business thoroughfare, convenient grouping of public buildings, rapid transit, adequate street traffic circulation, parks and squares, parkways and boulevards, children's playgrounds and gardens, clean and attractive streets, pure water supply and efficient sewage disposal, prohibition of sign and noise nuisances, enforcement of laws for structural building and fire safety, and for tenement regulation and the encouragement of housing scheme. Civic effort could not in itself succeed sufficiently to meet the present-day conditions. Such effort must have encouragement from higher up and from the mutual assistance of sister towns and cities in educating the people and in impressing upon the provincial and Dominion authorities the great desirability of legislation designed to encourage, if not assist, various kinds of civic improvement.

"Street planning in the full sense," he said, "is the key of the whole subject, whether considered from the strictly practical or the artistic standpoint."

The grouping of public buildings in a convenient central location, which has been called the "civic centre" and which is an ideal to which many large cities are aspiring, is, after all, nothing much more than the old town square or market place of the early days.

"It would appear opportune for the municipalities to seek through their committee such legislation as would facilitate those civic improvements which may be desirable. This legislation might include:

"1. Provision for civic improvement commissions in the smaller cities.

"2. Provision applicable to cities smaller than already provided for in the Ontario Act, for the purchase by municipalities of lands [illegible] opening streets, not only sufficient for the streets themselves, but for an adequate margin on each side, which, after the opening has been completed, can be resold as lots, thus producing a revenue to help meet the most of the improvements.

"3. Provision for municipalities to secure streets wider than 66 feet in new sub-divisions, when necessary to conform to a town planning scheme.

"4. A practical method for any necessary widening of business streets already built up.

"5. An adequate control over new sub-divisions, so that the lay-out will conform to modern requirements, and so that misrepresentation cannot be practiced. The embodiment of such information as contours and elevations is to be recommended.

"6. Provisions for the control by the municipality through the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board of the lay-out and street planning features of sub-divisions outside the city limits for a stated distance."

LAURIER HINTS AT SECRETS YET TO BE REVEALED

Hon. Frank Cochrane Introduces the Highways Bill Killed by the Senate.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—In spite of studied courtesy on both sides, there was unmistakably a flash of fire as the swords of the Prime Minister and Sir Wilfrid Laurier crossed yesterday afternoon in anticipation of the naval debate which the latter will open today.

Sir Wilfrid called attention to a Canadian press cable from London which appeared in Tuesday's papers, declaring that Mr. Asquith had stated in the House of Commons "that certain arrangements of a general character had been agreed upon between the Admiralty and the Dominion Government with regard to the transfer of certain warships of the Royal Canadian navy after sufficient notice had been given to allow of their being replaced by placing in Canada of an order for some light cruisers."

The leader of the Opposition desired to know what this meant. Had there been an agreement between the British and Canadian Governments not disclosed to the Canadian Parliament?

Mr. Borden said that Mr. Asquith doubtless referred to what Mr. Borden himself had referred to in his speech last Thursday, namely, the likelihood of the Admiralty having oil tank vessels, auxiliary cruisers and small ships built in Canada.

This reply did not altogether satisfy Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He said that, upon reading over the speech of the Premier, he had found intimations of agreements of one kind or another. For example, the British Admiralty was to build certain ships in Canada and the Canadian Government was to pay the extra cost of such construction and Canadians were to officer the Canadian dreadnoughts. Was this an agreement, or did it relate to conversations Mr. Borden has had with some members of the Government or other officials in England?

The Prime Minister answered that he had made no statement in the House which was not justified by the facts. He was sure that whatever Mr. Asquith had said was precisely true, but he would not vouch for the accuracy of the cabled report.

Sir Wilfrid protested that his question had not been entirely answered. If there was any agreement between the British and Canadian Governments not heretofore disclosed it should be laid on the table of the House before the naval debate began.

Mr. Borden repeated his statement that he had spoken with authority on these subjects.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier rather excitedly protested that he was entitled to know if there was any written agreement, and what were its terms.

"The right hon. gentleman must accept my statement that I was authorised to make whatever statements I made to the House upon this subject," rejoined the Prime Minister, somewhat tartly, and Speaker Sproule abruptly brought the engagement to a close by calling the next item upon the order paper.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux, in moving for the papers in connection with the purchase by the Public Works Department of the Pont Briand wharf at Sorel, Richelieu county, declared that the purchase had been put through just before the recent bye-election. The former Government, he said, had been offered the property for $6,000, but had refused the offer. Now the country had paid $15,000 for it.

G. W. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.), in moving for the papers relating to the acquisition of lands for canal purposes at St. Peter's, N.S., said that part of the property required by the Department of Railways and Canals was owned by J. A. Gillies, the defeated Conservative candidate. The property purchased from Gillies amounted to 3.8 acres, and the price paid was $3,750, or $1,000 per acre.

But, declared Mr. Kyte, the whole property, consisting of 95 acres, of which the three acres was a part, had been purchased by Mr. Gillies for $1,000.

The papers in each case were moved for and more will be heard about them later on.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane introduced his bill "to encourage and assist the improvement of highways." This is a bill which was killed by the Senate at the last session. Replying to a question by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Cochrane intimated that the bill would go to the Senate in precisely the same terms as at the last session. "Some amendments," he said, "accepted by the Government while the bill was before the House last year, may be accepted this year."

Mr. Burnham (West Peterboro) introduced a bill to amend the Elections Act. At present candidates for Dominion Parliament must make a deposit of $200. Mr. Burnham's argument would require candidates for Parliament in each province to make only the deposit required by candidates of the Legislature. In Ontario, for example, no deposit was required from candidates for the local House, and, therefore, under his amendment, no deposit would be required by candidates for the Dominion House in that province.

Mr. Sinclair (Guysboro) spoke to a resolution calling for papers in the possession of the Government respecting the action of Canada and Great Britain in the matter of the discriminatory tolls established by the United States Government for the Panama Canal. Should not the Government retaliate against United States ships using Canadian canals?

The Prime Minister said that under the circumstances he could not discuss the matter at least until the reply of the U.S. Government to the note of Sir Edward Grey has been received.

SYNDICATE GETS CONTROL OF INTERNATIONAL BANK

Purchase of French Shareholders' Stock is Made—Pellatt at the Head.

Montreal, Dec. 12.—A syndicate headed by Sir Henry Pellatt of Toronto yesterday procured control of the International Bank through the purchase of the French shareholders' stock. The money was paid over yesterday through the Prudential Trust Co. Just what disposition Sir Henry will make of his purchase is uncertain, but it is known that he is friendly to Sir Rodolphe Forget and his associates.

When spoken to last night, Sir Rodolphe Forget confirmed the story that Sir Henry Pellatt had purchased control of the bank. "However, he is friendly to us," Sir Rodolprhe said, "and the probability is that the International Bank will go on as before, but without the Parisian shareholders or directors."

When asked if the negotiations with the Home Bank were off, Sir Rodolphe declared that they were. Mr. Charles Bernard, the lawyer who put the deal through, also confirmed the purchase. He intimated that there would be no change in the management or directorate of the bank.

The situation has been cleared up through the purchase of the French shares, and future negotiations will prove much easier.

Sir Henry Silent.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Sir Henry Pellatt last night said that he could not for the present make any statement on the matter.

"It was very nice of you to defend me, Jimmie—er—James."

Wellington almost dislocated several joints in rising quickly and whirling round at the cordiality of her tone. But his smile vanished at her last word. He protested, feebly: "James sounds so like a—a butler. Can't you call me Little Jimmie again?"

Mrs. Wellington smiled indulgently: "Well, since it's the last time. Good-bye, Little Jimmie." And she put out her hand. He seized it hungrily and clung to it: "Good-bye?—aren't you getting off at Reno?"

"Yes, but—"

"So am I—Lucretia."

"But we can't afford to be seen together."

Still holding her hand, he temporized: "We've got to stay married for six months at least—while we establish a residence. Couldn't we—er—couldn't we establish a residence—er—together?"

Mrs. Wellington's eyes grew a little sad, as she answered: "It would be too lonesome waiting for you to roll home."

Jimmie stared at her. He felt the regret in her voice and took strange courage from it. He hauled from his pocket his huge flask, and said quickly: "Well, if you're jealous of this, I'll promise to cork it up forever."

She shook her head skeptically: "You couldn't."

"Just to prove it," he said, "I'll chuck it out of the window." He flung up the sash and made ready to hurl his enemy into the flying landscape.

"Bravo!" cried Mrs. Wellington.

But even as his hand was about to let go, he tightened his clutch again, and pondered: "It seems a shame to waste it."

"I thought so," said Mrs. Jimmie, drooping perceptibly. Her husband began to feel that, after all, she cared what became of him.

"I'll tell you," he said, "I'll give it to old Doc Temple. He takes his straight."

"Fine!"

He turned towards the seat where the clergyman and his wife were sitting, oblivious of the drama of reconciliation playing so close at hand. Little Jimmie paused, caressed the flask, and kissed it. "Good-bye, old playmate!" Then, tossing his head with bravado, he reached out and touched the clergyman's shoulder. Dr. Temple turned and rose with a questioning look. Wellington put the flask in his hand and chuckled: "Merry Christmas!"

"But, my good man—" the preacher objected, finding in his hand a donation about as welcome and as wieldy as a strange baby. Wellington winked: "It may come in handy for—your patients."

And now, struck with a sudden idea, Mrs. Wellington spoke: "Oh, Mrs. Temple."

"Yes, my dear," said the little old lady, rising. Mrs. Wellington placed in her hand a small portfolio and laughed: "Happy New Year!"

Mrs. Temple stared at her gift and gasped: "Great heavens! Your cigars!"

"They'll be such a consolation," Mrs. Wellington explained, "while the doctor is out with his patients."

Dr. Temple and Mrs. Temple looked at each other in dismay, then at the flask and the cigars, then at the Wellingtons, then they stammered: "Thank you so much," and sank back.

Wellington stared at his wife: "Lucretia, are you sincere?"

"Jimmie, I promise you I'll never smoke another cigar."

"My love!" he cried, and seized her hand. "You know I always said you were a queen among women, Lucretia."

She beamed back at him: "And you always were the prince of good fellows, Jimmie." Then she almost blushed as she murmured, almost shyly: "May I pour your coffee for you again this morning?"

"For life," he whispered, and they moved up the aisle, arm in arm, bumping from seat to seat and not knowing it.

When Mrs. Whitcomb, seated in the dining-car, saw Mrs. Little Jimmie pour Mr. Little Jimmie's coffee, she choked on hers. She vowed that she would not permit those odious Wellingtons to make fools of her and her Sammy. She resolved to telegraph Sammy that she had changed her mind about divorcing him, and order him to take the first train west and meet her half-way on her journey home.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

A Duel for a Bracelet.

All this while Marjorie and Mallory had sat watching, as kingfishers shadow a pool, the door wherethrough the girl with the bracelet must pass on her way to breakfast.

"She's taking forever with her toilet," sniffed Marjorie. "Probably trying to make a special impression on you."

"She's wasting her time," said Mallory. "But what if she brings her mother along? No, I guess her mother is too fat to get there and back."

"If her mother comes," Marjorie decided, "I'll hold her while you take the bracelet away from the—the—from that creature. Quick, here she comes now! Be brave!"

Mallory wore an aspect of arrant cowardice: "Er—ah—I—I—"

"You just grab her!" Marjorie explained. Then they relapsed into attitudes of impatient attention. Kathleen floated in and, seeing Mallory, she greeted him with radiant warmth: "Good morning!" and then, catching sight of Marjorie, gave her a "Good morning!" coated with ice. She flounced past and Mallory sat inert, till Marjorie gave him a ferocious pinch, whereupon he leaped to his feet:

"Oh, Miss—er—Miss Kathleen." Kathleen whirled round with a most hospitable smile. "May I have a word with you?"

"Of course you can, you dear boy." Marjorie winced at this and writhed at what followed: "Shan't we take breakfast together?"

Mallory stuttered: "I—I—no, thank you—I've had breakfast."

Kathleen froze up again as she snapped: "With that—train-acquaintance, I suppose."

"Oh, no," Mallory amended, "I mean I haven't had breakfast."

But Kathleen scowled with a jealousy of her own: "You seem to be getting along famously for mere train-acquaintances."

"Oh, that's all we are, and hardly that," Mallory hastened to say with too much truth. "Sit down here a moment, won't you?"

"No, no, I haven't time," she said, and sat down. "Mamma will be waiting for me. You haven't been in to see her yet?"

"No. You see—"

"She cried all night."

"For me?"

"No, for papa. He's such a good traveler—and he had such a good start. She really kept the whole car awake."

"Too bad," Mallory condoled, perfunctorily, then with sudden eagerness, and a trial at indifference: "I see you have that bracelet still."

"Of course, you dear fellow. I wouldn't be parted from it for worlds."

Marjorie gnashed her teeth, but Kathleen could not hear that. She gushed on: "And now we have met again! It looks like Fate, doesn't it?"

"It certainly does," Mallory assented, bitterly; then again, with zest: "Let me see that old bracelet, will you?"

He tried to lay hold of it, but Kathleen giggled coyly: "It's just an excuse to hold my hand." She swung her arm over the back of the seat coquettishly, and Marjorie made a desperate lunge at it, but missed, since Kathleen, finding that Mallory did not pursue the fugitive hand, brought it back at once and yielded it up:

"There—be careful, someone might look."

Mallory took her by the wrist in a gingerly manner, and said, "So that's the bracelet? Take it off, won't you?"

"Never!—it's wished on," Kathleen protested, sentimentally. "Don't you remember that evening in the moonlight?"

Mallory caught Marjorie's accusing eye and lost his head. He made a ferocious effort to snatch the bracelet off. When this onset failed, he had recourse to entreaty: "Just slip it off." Kathleen shook her head tantalizingly. Mallory urged more strenuously: "Please let me see it."

Kathleen shook her head with sophistication: "You'd never give it back. You'd pass it along to that—train-acquaintance."

"How can you think such a thing?" Mallory demurred, and once more made his appeal: "Please, please, slip it off."

Locating Othello.

A masterpiece of censorship was once performed by the Turkish censor, Nischan Effendi, on the occasion of the production of Shakespeare's "Othello" at Constantinople. He "collected" the drama so thoroughly as to leave hardly a trace of the original. Among other words the [illegible] "Cyprus," giving ingenious reasons for this correction. "Cyprus," he said, "is a Turkish island; it would be politically unwise to send Othello to Cyprus, because the territorial integrity of Turkey is guaranteed by treaties. Why not put, instead of Cyprus, some Greek island, such as Corfu?" And thus it came to pass that, from respect to the treaty of Paris, Othello had to go to Corfu!

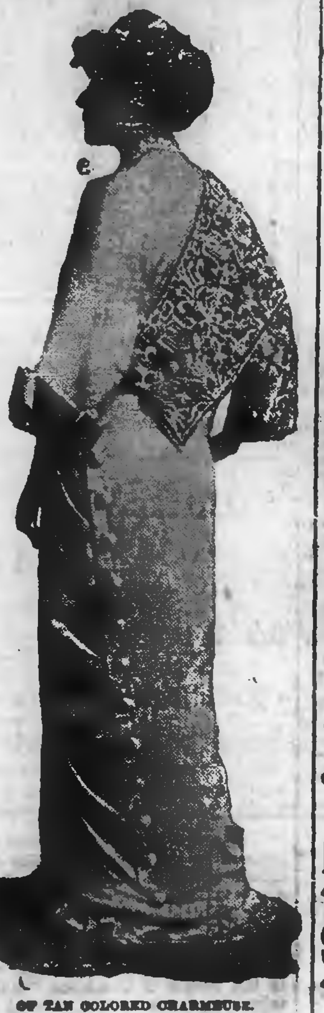
EVENING COATS.

One Sided Wraps Are Exquisitely Graceful.



OF TAN COLORED CHARMEUSE.

The designers of evening wraps are in their element this season. Never were materials better suited to their purposes. Never were they more free to follow their own whims in matters of line and color and detail. And one must admit that the designers have taken advantage of their opportunities.

For instance, the one sided wrap seen in the picture is a lovely and unusual model of tan charmeuse. The wide lace collar instead of crossing the shoulders is flung over one shoulder only, the opposite shoulder having a kimono cut that gives graceful clinging lines at that side.

The wrap is novel not only in the arrangement of the macrame lace collar and sleeve beneath it, but in the drapery of the skirt, which is drawn smoothly into a fitting panel at the back. The sleeves are loose and baggy.

Japanese Wife's First Duty to Cook.

When it is desired to find something "uncommon in things not uncommon," one has to stretch his imagination a bit. The following shows some trace of this stretching of the imagination.

There is an old saying in Japan which explains the place and duty of Japanese wives rather sarcastically, but truly, "A wife is a cook without pay." Be she the wife of a nobleman or the wife of a laborer, a Japanese woman cannot be a good [illegible] unless she is a good cook, or at le[illegible] good supervisor of the kitchen.

Probably there is no woman in the world who uses her ability to cook to better advantage than the Japanese wife, who manages to keep her control over the family merely by her art of cooking.

The only place where she has an absolute power is in the kitchen. Outside of it the word of her husband always is law. But in Japan the trouble of eating food prepared by young brides is unknown, and there is no complaint about the dishes not being like those mother used to cook. The early training of girls in cooking enables them to cook good and wholesome food. Through the stomach of her husband a Japanese wife obtains a power over him, and outside of this means there are no ways of controlling her husband. When a Japanese woman marries she throws away the customs and peculiarities of her parents' home and conforms herself to those of her husband's and his family.

According to the Japanese idea, wives should be first of all kind, tender, loving, obedient, faithful and should perform the household duties. And whenever a wife tries to overrule her husband or run the house according to her own idea and against that of her husband, it is very likely that she will be divorced.

An Interesting Letter

Zam-Buk has proved a great comfort to me, as it is now something like two months since it cured my little girl of eczema from which she suffered for a year.

THIS is but a fragment of a very interesting letter received by the Zam-Buk Co. from Mrs. E. Cossett, of Joggin Bridge, Digby Co., N.S. The letter continues:

"When the sores first broke out I called in a doctor; but his treatment did no good. I tried salves and lotions and washes of all kinds, but the sores still spread. The disease finally became so bad that the child's face and shoulder were completely covered with sores. Imagine the pain the poor child (not a year old) had to suffer!

"One day a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk. I did not have much faith at that time that Zam-Buk would be able to work a cure, but as there could be no harm in trying it, I obtained a supply. At that time the disease had defied all remedies I had tried for over a year. By the time I had tried one box of Zam-Buk there was a marked improvement. I continued the Zam-Buk treatment and day by day the sores showed signs of improvement, until the eczema was confined to the child's shoulder, one sore on which had been particularly deep. By degrees this, also, was healed, and finally Zam-Buk banished every trace of the disease.

"I have waited several months before mentioning this case to you, in order to see if there was any return of the eczema. There has not been any return; the cure being permanent, and there is no scar or trace of the disease from which the child suffered so long. You may publish this information if you wish, so that every mother may know the value of Zam-Buk."

"LO," THE POOR INDIAN, IS BY NO MEANS DYING OUT

AS A MATTER OF FACT INDIAN IS HOLDING HIS OWN.

The Noble Redman, Who Once Owned Canada, Now Numbers 104,956 Souls and the Eskimo 4,600—Ontario Has the Most Aborigines Within Its Borders—Education Works Wonders.

Our native population—the descendants of the ancient lords of forest and stream—is divided into two classes or races, one of which is well known, but the other is seldom thought of as forming part of the population of the Dominion. These two races of aborigines are the Indians and the Eskimos. If asked to give an estimate of this native population, and to name the province in which the largest number of aborigines is to be found, it is not likely that one person in ten could give anything like correct answers. The Indians are often thought of as members of a dying race, fast passing away to the land beyond the setting sun; and as for the Eskimos, they are usually associated with the Arctic lands where the King's writ does not run and the officers of the Department of the Interior and Indian Affairs are never heard of.

Both conceptions are wrong. So far as numbers are concerned, the Indians are holding their own fairly well, numbering according to the report of the Department of Indian Affairs recently issued, 104,956, while of Eskimos there are 4,600 within the limits of Canada—a total native population of 109,556. There are seven thousand more Indians in Canada than there are white people in all Prince Edward Island, while the Eskimos are equal in number to one half the population of Soulanges county. This total native population is equal to the number of all the people living in the counties of Beauharnois, Chateauguay, Huntingdon, Napierville, Laprairie, St. Johns, Iberville and Missisquois, and one township in Brome. In every territorial division of Canada there is an Indian population, and, strange as it may seem, it is not one of the new western provinces but the old Province of Ontario that contains the largest red population. Ontario has 26,393 Indians; British Columbia, 24,781; Quebec, 12,817; Manitoba, 10,373; Saskatchewan, 9,545; Alberta, 8,113; the Territories, 5,262; the Yukon, 3,500; Nova Scotia, 1,969; New Brunswick, 1,903; and Prince Edward Island, 300.

The report of the Department consists largely of the reports of the agents having direct charge of the various tribes and bands which here and there are scattered over the whole Dominion. These agents' reports repeat the old stories told over and over again, but there is this varying note running through them—improvement in industrial and moral conditions noticeable on many reserves, particularly on several in the West, where the redmen are turning to the soil as a source of livelihood, and in British Columbia, where whole bands are engaged in regular industrial pursuits, and are rising steadily in civilization. One of these agency reports is so glowing that it cannot be passed by without a few brief gleamings. It is the report from the agency that includes the Queen Charlotte Islands off the coast of British Columbia. The Indians on this island reserve are known as the Haida nation. In one part of his report the agent writes:

"When we read of 'The Passing of a Race,' and consider the inroads, war and disease made on this once powerful nation, it may astonish the writer of history to know that the Haidas are increasing in numbers, and are becoming more and more civilized. It should be a further cause of wonder, if generally understood, that they have the largest number of good houses, cattle, boats, stores, public buildings and the best streets of any settlements on the islands. Their two large towns are not to be compared with the tumbledown shacks commonly found in Indian villages. Two-story frame dwellings are common, and it is the ambition of heads of families to construct houses in accordance with plans and specifications of the latest design. As boat builders, their handiwork must be seen to be appreciated. To-day at Naden harbor every able-bodied man of the band is at work building a cannery, residences and a wharf, for a fishing company and all are giving satisfaction.

"In the churches they have orchestras and choirs, and lay readers. The Skidegate brass band carried off the prize at the annual competition in Prince Rupert. They engaged the best teachers available, and are preparing to contest at the next competition. During the summer months they engage in fishing, and at cannery work, and are considered the best of employee by the cannery companies. During the winter months they are at their homes, the children at the schools, and the men and women improving their houses and building.

"At the present writing one band and the largest has a pay-roll of over $5,000 per month, and, when the fishing season begins, will be able to make large sums for the fish they will turn over to the canneries. In the early summer they go to the fishing grounds, where the large spring salmon run, and will receive from 80 cents to one dollar for each fish, catching from ten to fifteen each day—for nearly two months. The women, meanwhile, are working in the cannery, receiving on an average, two dollars each day. They then take up the fishing for the smaller salmon, and continue until September of each year."

Last year our Indian population had 61,612 acres under cultivation—an increase of 3,062 acres over the returns for the preceding year. This land yielded 1,517,000 bushels of grain and roots, and 122,000 tons of hay, the whole having a value of $1,484,346. The other sources of the income of our Indians were: Beef, $255,109; wages, $1,616,049; fishing, $623,972; hunting and trapping, $804,517; various industries, $748,473.

Duke Advocates Good Art.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—After arguing that the exhibition of pictures at the Montreal Art Gallery would wean people away from the meretricious class of painting which too often masquerades as art, the Duke of Connaught Monday night opened the new building in the presence of a large crowd. The duke was accompanied by the duchess and the princess.

"In a country like Canada," said H.R.H., "where nearly every one works hard, there is a tendency to forget the value and pleasure of beautiful surroundings, and exhibitions such as this will help to stimulate the sense of what is beautiful, and to remind people that much may be done, and at little expense, to make their cities and their homes pleasing to the eye without abating an atom of practical utility."

Believe U. S. Will Arbitrate.

London, Dec. 11.—Yesterday afternoon's newspapers all refer to the Panama Canal question.

The Westminster Gazette, supporting the Liberal Government, decline to believe the prophecy cabled from New York, that if arbitration should be asked for the United States would refuse it. It continues: "We cannot conceive a difficulty more nicely suitable to arbitration by The Hague Tribunal."

No Report This Year.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—The Mines Department announces that an expected report on electric smelting, with particular reference to Canada, will not be issued for the reason that Ernest A. Sjostedt, formerly metallurgist of the Lake Superior Corporation, who was sent to Norway and Sweden to investigate the subject, went down with the Titanic while returning from [illegible]

Write Ideas For Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure,

CHURCHILL SPEAKS

Some of the German commentators on the Borden policy of giving the British navy three powerful Dreadnoughts have condescended to regard the acceptance of the offer as another break by "perfidious Albion." They quote Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, as saying that Britain would not increase her building standard above a 16 to 10 level, and now they accuse him of knowing, at the time he made that statement, that Canada would come forward with three more battleships. They ask whether Britain intends to equalize matters by reducing her own building program by three ships, thus keeping the rate of warship building on the level prescribed early in the year.

If Canada's contribution makes makes Britain more "perfidious" then the Motherland must be content with such a stain on her character. Mr. Churchill speaking in the House of Commons on Monday, said that "The aid given by Canada should be in addition to the existing British program, and any steps Canada might take should directly strengthen the naval forces of the Empire and the margin available for its security." This, of course, was an assurance to be expected. Canada wants to increase the naval defences of the Empire, not only for the greater security of the Motherland and the British connections, but of herself. By strengthening the British navy, Canada also protects herself quite directly. Winston Churchill is not playing the partizan game, but is rapidly strengthening himself as the young Liberal Imperialist of the Asquith Cabinet. The Lloyd Georgian program is being somewhat eclipsed, at east for the present. Conservative England has made many great strides under Lloyd George's Socialistic ideas, but it has turned more strongly than ever to the idea of Imperialism, and it would not be at all surprising if the Canadian gift to Britain should set such a sweep of Imperial feeling going in Britain that the Unionists and colonial preference would be upheld at the next elections.

MR. ROWELL'S INVITATION

Mr. Rowell is to be seen in yet another guise. He has now come forward with an offer to assist Sir James Whitney, Hon. Mr. Foy, Mr. Hanna, or Mr. Beck, in fighting for the local option cause in any of the constituencies where there is a campaign. This, of course, might mean Peterborough as well as any of the others. There is no reason to doubt that Mr. Rowell is quite sincere in his desire to have local option carried wherever there is a contest. Sir James Whitney has frequently declared himself no friend of the anti-local option forces, and his other Ministers are with him. The Ontario Government believes that local option or prohibition in a locality is worthless unless backed by strong public opinion. That strong public opinion will not be in evidence in a mere majority in favor of a by-law. If 51 per cent of the electors declare themselves in favor of local option, and a by-law were put into effect, it would require a switch of only 2 per cent to restore the liquor traffic at the next election. So the safeguard of three-fifths vote is enforced. The temperance people recognise the advantage of this when they once have won a municipality.

To ask responsible Ministers of the Crown to get out on the hustings in such a matter is child's play, or clownish. Mr. Rowell must feel quite weak himself if he desires to have official assistance. Where is his boasted strength as an Abolish-the-bar advocate? Why should he deny his valuable services to the cause of temperance and local option waiting on the Ontario Ministers? The Government is responsible for the liquor laws. It is trying to enforce them. It is doing its duty in the premises so far as its wisdom permits. Would Mr. Rowell have Ministers of the Crown actually step into such contentious matters not on broad political grounds, but as interfering in the conduct of a community's affairs? The proposal is naive, at least.

MR. WALSH'S DICTUM

Mr. J. C. Walsh, formerly editor of the Montreal Herald, has published a pamphlet on the question "Are there Limits to Canadian Self-Government?" Mr. Walsh says there seems to be a distinct organization in Canada working on Family Compact lines. He says that there is a school in Britain, and it has supporters in Canada, which holds that military and naval service ought to be superior to and outside of local authority. It ought to be run from Aldershot or Downing street.

Mr. Walsh as a man of affairs is entitled to his opinion, but surely this is going to an extreme. Why does he not name more directly some of those in Canada of whom suspicions are held? What are the facts that have created the impression that the tendency exists? It would be rather hard for Mr. Walsh to substantiate his statements, we think. As a matter of fact, the whole tendency in Canada has been away from the apron-strings idea, and Canada now is jealous of any invasion of her autonomy or authority. In fact, in giving the three Dreadnoughts to Britain, and thus precipitating herself directly into the "vortex of European militarism" Canada has stipulated that she shall have a Cabinet Minister in London with a seat at the Imperial Defence Council. Canada is the first of the over-seas Dominions to have a representative at the Imperial Council Board with a say in the questions of Imperial policy. If Canada pays part of the expense of defending the Empire, she is entitled to some say as to the issues of war or peace. Thus we have not only protected our autonomy, but have taken an aggressive step in pushing forward as an Imperial partner, with a say as affairs outside of Canada's immediate interest. To say say that anyone in Canada seeks to place Canadian national services or Canadian local authority in the maw of anyone outside is foolish. Mr. Walsh might think the problem over for a while, and if he is still of the same mind, come back with details that carry some weight.

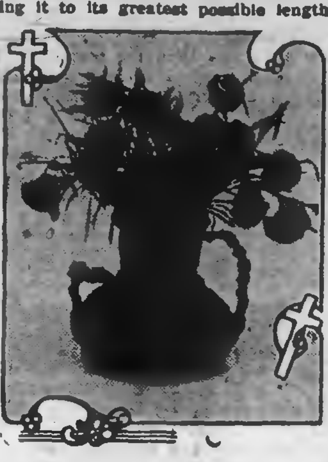
Daily Christmas Hint

Crape Paper Gifts Are Popular This Year

Crape paper rope work has proved to be a most popular and fascinating feature of paper art, and many girls are making some of their Christmas gifts from this rope material. The following instructions may guide the uninitiated in this work: For one-half inch rope cut a roll of crape paper through the center. Fasten one end to the drawer or tie it to some object, then walk away with the other end, stretching it to its greatest possible length.



VASE OF CRAPE PAPER.

Form a loop in the end of the crape and insert a pencil. Grasp the pencil at the lower edge with the right hand and, steadying the strip of paper with the left hand, twist the pencil from you with a wrist motion until the crape is tight and firm. Now fasten the end to something so it will not on twist. Twist a second strand in the same way and then attach both ends in the same way at the same point. Twist the two strands together by turning the pencil in the opposite direction, toward the left.

To fashion the very good looking vase illustrated all one has to do is to wrap the pasteboard foundation with the paper rope.

It's a mighty small world to the man who is always talking about himself.

NEW COOKING DEVICES

In connection with gas cookery there is a new invention in aluminium. This is a casserole that sets on top of any size stove and in which may be roasted a fair sized piece of meat as satisfactorily as in the oven of the gas range or a pot roast or stew of any kind may be cooked. This casserole is more serviceable than the regulation oven, as it fits over one jet and thus leaves the other jets at the command of the cook in preparing the meal.

For the laundress, amateur and professional, there is a variety of flatirons. One that is especially recommended for the woman who wants to do a little pressing in her own room costs a few cents more than half a dollar and fits over an ordinary gas jet. Irons for general work are, of course, much heavier and costlier and are equipped with tubing of suitable length.

DEMOSTHENES LODGE No. 37

Knights of Pythias Instituted at Havelock

A new lodge was born in the village of Havelock last night when Demosthenes Lodge, No. 37, was instituted by Grand Lodge Officers of the Knights of Pythias.

Grand Chancellor Rumple, a large manufacturer, of Berlin, Ont.; Mr. Wilson, editor of the Pythian Review and connected with Toronto Saturday Night, and Grand Knight of Record and Seals Alex Coulter, of Toronto, assisted by Chancellor Commander Wm. Tremaine, and officers and the degree team of Marathon Lodge, No. 89, of Peterborough took part in the ceremony.

Thirty members of the local K. of P. were present at the installation of the new lodge, which is expected to prove a great credit to Pythianism in Canada inasmuch as the charter members are leading business men of Havelock.

The ceremony was conducted in the Oddfellows Hall and was followed by a delightful banquet.

The members of Demosthenes Lodge were delighted with the secret work of the three ranks.

Some of the leading members of the new Lodge are,—Dr. Kindred, Dr. Holdcroft, Dr. Thompson, Messrs. Andrews, R. Anderson, Kitchen and Primrose.

TWO CENT STAMP ON ALL LETTERS FOR DELIVERY ON RURAL ROUTES

All letters to be delivered over rural mail routes, must bear a two cent stamp. It has been found necessary to hold letters at the Post Office, as a one cent stamp has been used. In these cases the person to whom the letter is addressed is notified, that the deficit must be made up before delivery. Some comply but others do not act and the letters are sent on to the dead letter office.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS

The announcement from Ottawa that Christmas stamps must not be used, may be interpreted as meaning that the stamps must not be placed on the face of the envelope. With the stamps on the face, confusion is caused. In some cases, the Post Office stamp is not used.

The Chrsitmas stamps, should, if used, be placed on the back of the letter or parcel.

A FORTUNATE HAPPENING

Home and Inmates were indangered From Fire

What might have resulted in a serious fire was discovered shortly after midnight last night at the residence of Mr. W. C. Austin, 548 Weller St. In some unknown manner a blaze commenced in a small shed just in the rear of the house, amongst a pile of kindling wood. All the occupants of the house were in bed and the conflagration was was first detected by Mr. W. H. Cunningham, of Weller St., who was proceeding home, and who awakened the inmates of the house. Pails of water were used to subdue the outbreak, but a somewhat strenuous struggle took place before it was extinguished.

THE LETTER FROM THE INSPECTOR

Written to Mr. Langford Regarding Changes to be Made

The letter which so incensed Mr. William Langford, 692 Water street, written by Sanitary Inspector Spence and which precipitated a little scene at the Board of Health meeting Tuesday, was worded thus:

Dear Sir,—There will be nothing gained by letting the work on the closets on your property on Stewart street stand over until the spring.

I must ask you to at once get the pits cleaned out and filled in with clean earth and ashes, and sound boxes substituted, otherwise legal proceedings will be taken.

Previous to this letter Inspector Spence had notified Mr. Langford of the leakages in the roofs of the houses, in addition to the unsanitary condition of the houses. The reply was to the effect that he (Mr. Langford) might repair them in the spring.

Sanitary Inspector Spence is only required to serve the official printed notification of the Board of Health, which he did in the case in question. The second letter which was written was sent at the suggestion of Medical Health Officer McPherson and was written more out of courtesy to save Mr. Langford from being served with a legal notice and to give opportunity to prevent such steps being necessarily taken.

Churchill Catechized.

London, Dec. 12.—Winston Churchill, in the British Commons yesterday, confessed that Vice-Admiral Sir Francis C. Bridgeman, whose retirement from the position of First Sea Lord and the succession of Prince Louis of Battenberg was announced on Dec. 6, was called upon by Mr. Churchill himself to resign. Mr. Churchill also admitted that he gave ill-health as an explanation of Vice-Admiral Bridgeman's withdrawal without having authority to do so.

Snores and the Man.

"My grandfather snored, my father snored, my mother snored, and I have always snored. Edward never snores. He is no son of mine." These few lines in the will of Edward Arthur Bentinck Monckton, Baron Hetherington, have thrown a huge estate into the probate court of England and question the legitimacy of the succeeding heir. The late baron's nephew claims succession to the estates under the will and will also lay claim to the peerage. The man who for years has been accepted as the lawful son of the old lord has entered a caveat, alleging that the will is prima facie proof of his father's insanity. The case is attracting national interest.

Water Color Bills.

A ten-dollar counterfeit Bank of Toronto note, which experts say must have taken a month to make, reached the headquarters of that concern recently.

It is by a new process. Water-colors and brush and pen were used in its production, according to the bank's experts, who say its discrepancies only showed up to any extent under a magnifying glass. The note is a brand new one.

A banker, who described the work of the counterfeiter as "remarkable," said four other banks besides the Bank of Toronto had their issues of five and tens imitated only recently. Because water-colors were used in each instance, the bankers are convinced that a clever gang of counterfeiters are at work somewhere not far from Toronto.

The man who does this work must be an expert in water-colors and drawing, said an expert speaking of the samples of his work turned out in the form of counterfeit bank notes.

Origin of "Fire Water."

When the Hudson Bay Trading Co. began its trading among the Indians it was found that by selling the Indians liquor they could more easily be induced to trade their peltries.

The first whisky or intoxicant of inferior quality was distilled in England and brought to Canada in large barrels, but in transporting it overland it was found more convenient to divide it into small kegs.

The traders soon became aware of the fact that by diluting the whisky with water more furs could be obtained. This was practiced for some time, but the Indians learned that good whisky poured on a fire would cause it to flame up, whereas had the whisky been diluted the fire would be quenched. It was by this simple experiment that the term "fire water" became a common word among Indians.

Good News For St. John.

The citizens of St. John have learned, declares a press sheet sent out from New Brunswick's capital, that a sugar refinery to cost over a million dollars will be erected in that city; that tenders for the erection of a bridge connecting East and West St. John at a cost of over $300,000, will close on December 2nd; and that there is a practical certainty of the establishment at East St. John of great steel works and a shipbuilding plant.

The sugar refinery is to be completed by the 1st of June, 1915. It will have a capacity of at least 2,000 barrels per day, and employ over 400 men. Its erection is expected to result in the cultivation of the sugar beet on a large scale in New Brunswick.

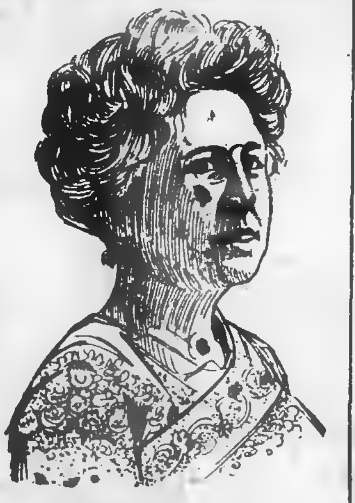
REFORMER IS HONORED

MRS. ELIZABETH G. WAYCOTT IS HEAD OF QUEBEC W.C.T.U.

Widely Known and Active Women's Worker Has Had a Busy Career In Behalf of Temperance Reform, Juvenile Courts and Many Other Philanthropies and Advanced Movements For Women.

Mrs. Elizabeth Griswold Waycott, of Montreal, has been elected vice-president of the Quebec Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. Waycott, although a young woman, has been for some time a most active worker in a variety of worthy causes. Since she made Montreal her home she has become interested in the civic and national affairs of Canada and is one of the most prominent workers in women's organizations in this country.

Mrs. Waycott is a past president of the Montreal Women's Club; vice-president and organizer of the Children's Aid Society; a member of the Playground Association; was for many years a member of the executive of the National Council of Women; is past president of the Brehmer Rest, a convalescent home in the Laurentian mountains and at present is president of the Girls' Cottage Industrial School, the first Protestant school for delinquent girls in the Province of Quebec. For four years she edited a temperance paper and was convener of the juvenile court committee that secured the passage through Parliament of the juvenile court bill, which gave the province the power to establish courts for minors.



MRS. ELIZABETH G. WAYCOTT.

Mrs. Waycott has worked for temperance reform continuously for ten years and has occupied offices in both the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union as well as the National Union. Her platform work has usually been on temperance reform and better laws for child welfare. She has aided in having the anti-cocaine law strengthened; in the passing of the medical school inspection law and in having the law enforced to exclude girls from selling newspapers on the streets and boys under ten years of age.

She has also done much to elevate the character of the moving picture shows in Montreal and is at present advocating the moving picture as an educational adjunct to the school. She also advocates the use of churches for legitimate recreation.

Mrs. Waycott is an advocate of woman's suffrage and feels very strongly that the vote would be a powerful weapon in the hands of women who are working to secure legislation which would help cure so many evils and clear the way for a social reconstruction and reform.

A Wider Union?

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Greater in proportion than the organic union of the Presbyterians and Methodists, and Congregationalists, is the initiation here this week of a movement for the unification of all the Protestant churches in Canada. It is embodied in the work officially placed before the Presbyterian committee on church union, now in session here.

Waited For Naval Plans.

The uncertainty of the Canadian naval policy did much to curtail the activity of the naval service department in the last fiscal year, according to the annual report, just published. No special effort to obtain recruits has been made, and, all told, they number 349. Of this number, 111 recruits and 38 others deserted. Many of them came from inland points, disliked sea life and quit.

The appropriation in the year was $3,000,000, and the expenditure $2,233,456. Considerable incidental work was done on dockyards, but this, too, was curtailed because of uncertainty as to the naval policy.

A REMARKABLE VOLUME.

Remarkable History of England Published In Quebec In 1909.

Godfrey Langlois, M.P.P., who has been fighting for a long time for better common schools in Quebec, has found a real gem in the shape of an English history authorized by the Quebec council of public instruction in 1909, a special edition for Canada having been published by J. E. Mercier of Levis. On page 272 of this book the following is to be found:

"The English possessions in North America, are called New Britain, and are divided into Labrador, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick on the northeast, Canada in the centre, New Wales to the west of Hudson Bay, New Caledonia to the west of the great lakes, while the shores of New Caledonia are called New Cornwall or New Hanover.

"Labrador is very cold, inhabited by Esquimaux; Nova Scotia is almost an island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, its capital being Halifax, doing a large trade in furs. Canada to the north of the United States is divided into two parts, upper and lower Canada. York and Kingston are the chief cities of Upper Canada, while Quebec, the capital of the whole of Canada, is the place where the governor resides. New Wales and New Caledonia are little known and chiefly noted for their fur trade."

Mr. Langlois says that people will suppose that Abbe Drioux history of England is an edition sixty years old, but nothing of the kind. It is sold in this country and special edition for Canada was printed by J. E. Mercier & Co., Levis, authorized by the council of public instruction on the 12th May, 1909, a report being made to the Legislature during the session of 1910.

Le Pays calls upon the superintendent of education to explain why such stupid errors are allowed.

MISCHIEF E. IS AGAIN GIVEN PRIZE AT STOCK SHOW

Sensation Occurs at Guelph Winter Fair When Prince o Wales' Award is Fought Over Again Because of Irregularity—Horsemen Pass Resolution Regarding Inspection of Stallions

Guelph, Dec. 12.—A real sensation was sprung at the winter fair yesterday when the grand championship Prince of Wales award, which was announced yesterday, was contested by John Lowe, Elora, on the ground that the judges, or at least one of the judges, was influenced in his decision by personal motives. The grand championship was awarded on Tuesday by the judges, Robert Miller, James Smith and R. J. Mackie, to "Mischief E. III.," a shorthorn, two year old heifer, bred and exhibited by W. R. Elliott & Sons, Guelph, but before the judging took place Mr. Miller bought the heifer himself. When Mr. Lowe heard the particulars of the sale he immediately protested against the award and the directors consented to have the prize re-awarded.

Porf. Day of the O. A. C. took Mr. Miller's place on the board of judges and the second judging was arranged to take place in the afternoon. News of Lowe's protest soon spread among the cattle men, and when the two rival cattle were led into the ring the excitement was intnese. For a long time the judges said nothing. Prof. Day seemed to be the arbiter and the eyes of all the spectators rested upon him. Would he sustain Mr. Miller's decision or would he turn him down were the questions all were asking.

Elliott's confidence was justified. "Mischief E." was again proclaimed to be the better animal and, Mr. Lowe seemed satisfied. After Prof. Day had convinced him to his own thinking, Lowe stretched out his hand to Elliott and they shook. "I didn't really object to the decision," said Lowe, "and I didn't object to being licked; but I objected to the way it was done."

"If Canada can spend $35,000,000 on battleships, surely she can afford to spend $5,000,000 for agricultural education."

This striking remark was made by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, at the luncheon of the dairy cattle exhibitors yesterday. Present at the luncheon were the following: Hon. James Duff, Hon. W. H. Hearst, J. P. Downey, ex-M.P.P., Lt.-Col. A. H. Macdonald, K.C., J. Lockie Wilson, President McNeil, H. C. Schofield, M.P.P., Robt. Miller of Stouffville, John Bright, live stock commissioner; J. M. Gardhouse, Weston; Nelson Monteith, ex-M.P.P., and Lt.-Col. R. McEwen.

The Guelph civic authorities were expecting an announcement at the luncheon yesterday from Hon. James S. Duff regarding a grant for new buildings for the winter fair, but none came. The Minister of Agriculture was very careful in his remarks and didn't pledge himself. Hon. Duncan Marshall almost hinted that if Guelph wished to keep the winter fair she should give it more support. The City of Edmonton, he said, had spent $575,000 on buildings for its fair.

A lively meeting of horsemen was held yesterday morning, the subject of discussion being "Stallion Enrolment in Ontario."

The following resolution was passed by the horsemen almost unanimously: "We are of the opinion that it would be in the interest of horse-breeders to have compulsory inspection and also to have the different classes graded one, two and three, and the grading printed on the route bill of each horse."

SENIOR PLAYERS WANTED AT RINK TO-MORROW NIGHT

All seniors hockey players are asked to attend an important meeting to be held in the rink to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock. Manager Craig asks the Juniors to meet at the Y.A.S. gym the same evening at eight o'clock.

The hockey players did a 'Tom Longboat" on Water street last night. The boys are apparently modestly inclined as they balked on the proposed run on George street.

With 'Bud McLean, Heffernan, Meeking, Brown, Adams and Birrell the Toronto Rowing Club have a classy bunch of forwards and will make the other teams hustle for O. H. A honors.

Lindsay still has hopes that the intermediate team propostion will materialize.

The Printers may enter a team in the Mercantile Hockey League.

A Suffragette Leader.

Mr. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Pankhurst's former ally in the suffragette campaign, is an amiable man who has enjoyed a distinguished career. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge, and his 'Varsity career was a series of honors gained. After leaving Cambridge he toured round the world, and on his return home lived for a couple of years at the Mansfield House University Settlement in Canning Town. He was selected as Liberal Unionist candidate for North Lambeth, but retired owing to his opposition to the South African war. Then came an adventure in journalism as the result of securing a controlling interest in The Echo. He edited this London evening paper for three years, but the venture was not a financial success. He received an offer for the sale of the paper, but as he did not approve of the policy to be adopted he closed down and paid the creditors out of his own pocket. Mr. Lawrence is a barrister, but does not practice, and of late years his time and money have been devoted to the cause of women's suffrage.

Stingless Bees.

A variety of bees that can be safely handled, their stings being harmless, is claimed by an English apiarist. They are offspring of a Cyprian drone and an Italian queen, and are very active, one hive having produced 200 pounds of honey this year.

The Newest Hose.

New ideas in hosiery and in shoes are constantly appearing in London. Despite the protests of medical men stockings are still cobwebby. The latest idea appears to be the netted silken hosiery, which, when drawn on the foot, have the appearance of a fish scale. To throw the mesh into high relief, an understocking of very fine silk is worn—white if the upper hose be black, black if the net fish scale be in white.

SHOULD STUDY LONDON.

Canadian City Fathers Ape U. S. Too Much.

A timely lesson in civics and incidentally in Imperialism is contained in a letter written by Captain Midford, the celebrated engineer, to the Solons of Toronto, through The Toronto Evening Telegram. While the particular problems pertain to that city the suggestions are general in their application.

"It is to be admitted," writes Captain Midford, "that in London resides the Mother of Parliaments. It is equally true that here resides the Mother of Municipalities, and that there is no school on earth superior to her in the art of municipal government, nor is any municipality anywhere as up-to-date as London in solving municipal problems.

"The truth and proof of this is in evidence on every hand. Indeed, if our municipal authorities could have a six months' visit to the London County Council they would, or could, observe in that time more than is to be learned from all other municipalities elsewhere combined, and the habit well nigh chronic in our City Hall of sending for foreigner architects to design an abattoir or an Old Folks' Home would be unnecessary, and the slight put upon our local architects would be avoided. The humiliation of sending a commissioner and civic employe from beneath our flag is to be vigorously resented. An equally erroneous step was taken when filtration was decided upon. London is further ahead on this subject than any city in Europe.

"The U. S. lags far behind, while our filtration plant on our Island was conceived in a foreign port and born in blunders. It is forty years behind the best practice in London, and costs five times the cost per million gallon for equal quality of product as does any plant designed by London engineers experienced in this class of construction.

"Transportation evolution in London has advanced beyond that of any city on earth. A casual observer can see that tubes are a dying institution. Even the tram is doomed because of the flexibility of the motor bus system. In London miles of trolley poles are to-day placarded soliciting citizens to patronize the trams. Unless one's office and home are located near tube stations, the motor bus is generally preferred to the tube.

"Instead of adding to the expense of 'metering the water,' an efficient corps prevents leaks, and their success is the principal factor in producing London's low per capita water rate. The London Council would never consider the folly of spending three-quarters of a million for meters for each 400,000 inhabitants.

"It is now evident to the careful citizen that the time when civic authorities can err with impunity is past. 'Slippery Dick' methods deceive no longer. None but weak men may now be used to pull the chestnuts out of the fire, nor can any business association safely with picture and lantern slides convince conservative men or swerve their voting judgment."

A small boy doesn't find it very amusing to do the things his parents are willing to let him do.

A New York society woman has sent out invitations to a cat betrothal party for her two high pedigree animals on December 16th.

A touch of gold brocade in a mole colored costume gives the whole a wonderful distinction.

This is an excellent time for women of economical turn of mind to buy clothes, for in December one has the advantage of knowing what to avoid and of getting reduced prices.

TO SAVE THE CANADIAN FORESTS

PROF. C. A. ZAVITZ WILL PRESERVE ONTARIO'S TREES.

Widely Known Agriculturalist and Forester Has Had an Active Career In Canadian Rural Affairs and His Regime Will be of Enormous Benefit to the Resources of the Province —Editor of Agricultural Review.

The appointmen of Prof. C.A. Zavitz of O. A. C., Guelph, to the position of provincial forestry commissioner, which has just been made public by Hon. W. H. Hearst, is an indication that the Whitney Government is about to inaugurate an active policy with regard to the forests of Ontario. Prof. Zavitz will advise the Department with regard to all matters of cutting and no lumbering operations in future will be allowed without his recommendation. He will also see to the proper destruction and disposal of all debris and slash from lumbering operations and will deal with reforestation and conservation of forests on a general scale. He has had already considerable experience in reclaiming waste lands in Norfolk and other counties by reforestation and will extend this scheme of reclaiming waste land by planting trees adapted to the locality.

PROF. ZAVITZ.

Prof. Zavitz was born at Coldstream, Ont., in 1863 and was educated at Strathroy Collegiate Institute and is a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College and Toronto University. He has taken post-graduate courses at various summer schools of agriculture in the United States. He was assistant director of experiments at the Ontario Agricultural College until 1886 and since 1893 he has been director and has also been co-operative director of agricultural experiments for the province since the same year. He is secretary of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union and editor of the Ontario Agricultural Review.

He is vice-president of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and vice-president of the Ontario Entomological Society and is one of the best-known speakers at farmers' institutes throughout the province, as well as one of the leading writers and authorities in this country on forestry and entomology, as well as being one of the most successful Canadian agricultural experimenters. He has greatly increased the output of different farm products as a result of his successful work.

To Honor Great Explorer.

All the world, it is expected, will join with Great Britain in celebrating the 100th anniversary of the birth of David Livingstone, the famous Scotch explorer and missionary, which falls on March 19. The London Missionary Society, in whose service Livingstone first went to Africa, is making the arrangements for an international commemoration of his centenary, the principal events of which will be two great gatherings in London. Besides this the society will endeavor to raise $50,000 to found a Livingstone memorial station, while the directors of Charing Cross Hospital, where Livingstone studied medicine, already have started a fund which will be utilised in building a new wing to the hospital as a memorial to the man whom Stanley found in the heart of darkest Africa.

THE NEW DRY DOCK.

Canada's Giant Structure Second Biggest In the World.

The giant floating dock, Duke of Connaught, was formally christened and opened the other day in Montreal by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, the Governor-General of Canada, and now the great structure, the second largest in the world, is safely installed in its new home. And incidentally Canada possesses a piece of machinery which will be of immense value to her shipping industry.

This enormous structure was built at Barrow-in-Furness, Eng., for the Canadian Government by Messrs. Vickers, Limited, and was successfully towed across the Atlantic recently for the progress and protection of Canadian trade and will be located at Montreal near Maisoneuve, where a basin has been prepared for it in a sheltered place. Some 30 acres near by has been set apart for a ship-building plant capable of launching three ocean ships simultaneously so that the potential importance of the ceremony as far as the ocean-carrying trade of Canada is concerned is very great.

By the installation of this dock and this ship-building plant at Montreal, the great national port, one of the greatest reproaches to the country and the St. Lawrence carrying trade has been removed, and the leading port of the Dominion will be properly equipped with a competent modern outfit for the repair and examination of ocean-going vessels and the building of others.

The crying need for such a dock and ship plant on the St. Lawrence has been painfully demonstrated many times recently and within the last few weeks by the going on the rocks of the Canadian Northern liner on the Isle of Orleans. The installation of this dock at the metropolis will be a big impetus to the shipping industry on the St. Lawrence and it is hoped that before many years a large number of Canadian vessels built in Canada will be carrying our merchant flag around the world instead of as at present having to depend on vessels constructed in foreign shipyards.

The dock, Duke of Connaught, is a magnificent specimen and a credit to the world-renowned firm that built the great steel monster. It is a perfectly massive piece of marine engineering and stood the strain of its very stormy passage across the Atlantic splendidly.

It was towed to Montreal from Barrow-in-Furness by two Dutch tugs which are said to be the most powerful of their kind in the world and the only ones that the underwriters would accept for the perilous task during the equinoctial gales.

Captain Jan Vershoor with his two little tugs and crew of fourteen Dutch sailors took 64 days for the journey with their cumbrous charge of mighty steel and in the terrific storms they encountered the hawsers on several occasions parted from the dock and left the great leviathian at the mercy of the elements for some hours. These brave Dutchmen were daunted by no dangers and stood to their task and in spite of all difficulties finally landed safely their charge in the port of Montreal.

The dock is of the largest type yet built and there is only one other of equal size in the world. It can accommodate the largest ocean vessels that float or several smaller vessels at one time.

Bottle Scarred.

The western papers are retailing with considerable glee a story of the Duke of Connaught's visit to the Pacific Coast. It comes second in popularity to that of the city father who wore robes of state and a gold chain to greet His Royal Highness. The duke reviewed a number of veterans at Kamloops. They were old men, and the Governor-General was doing his best to be particularly agreeable.

He singled out one old man who was more bottle scarred than battle scarred, and asked him several questions.

"You have served?" inquired His Royal Highness.

"Yes," replied the veteran rather ashamed.

"Where did you last serve?" was the next question.

"Right here in Kamloops, said the man in desperation.

Those in the ranks who knew his reputation could scarcely keep their mirth down to a smile over his very natural mistake.—Toronto Saturday Night.

The Name of Smith.

A plain sounding name is sometimes a valuable asset. At least this was the experience of Lord Strathcona when he was standing for Parliament in Canada.

At that time his name was plain Donald Smith, and one of his opponents sought to weaken his chances by demanding "Who is Smith? What is Smith? Why is Smith" One of the candidate's supporters demolished this opponent by replying: "Always pin your faith to a Smith wherever you find him. There are no frills on a Smith. If you want boldness and pluck vote for Captain John Smith; if you want a master of logic vote for Adam Smith; if you want ability and patriotism vote for Donald Smith." The electors regarded this as sound advice and plumped for Donald Smith.

Japanese Enlist Indians.

That many Indians of British Columbia have a definite understanding with the Japanese and have been enrolled by them is the surprising statement of an Indian missionary who for 30 years has lived with the natives of the northern part of the province.

The Indians have been told that they are the same lineage as the Japs and regard them as brothers. They have no hesitation in saying to the missionary or justice of the peace, when rebuked: "Wait until our brethren, the Japs, come. They will fix you."

Nearly every shiftless man has a horseshoe nailed over his door—that is, if he has a door.

FRITZI SCHEFF IN "THE LOVE WAGER."

When Fritzi Scheff, the undisputed queen of light opera, under the direction of Jos. M. Gaites, in a new light opera, "The Love Wager," will appear at the Grand next Tuesday, Dec. 17, Miss Scheff has has a vehicle said to be the best of her entire career. Miss Scheff's new opera is adapted from the Hungarian comedy, 'Seven Sisters.' The book is by Edith Ellis, with lyrics by Cary Duncan, and music by Chas. J. Hambitzer, whom Miss Scheff proudly states is her own protege. This is his first opera, and Miss Scheff was the means of bringing him to Mr. Gaites, who promptly engaged him to write the music for "The Love Wager." Miss Scheff is admirably supported by a strong singing and acting company, which includes George Anderson, Hazel Cox, Harry Stone, Florence Martin, Inez Bauer, Cecil Renard and a large chorus.

ESCAPED BOTH FIRE AND WATER

Indians Had to Jump From Their Launch.

Sarnia, Dec. 12.—William Lacroix and four redskins, who live on the Walpole Island Reserve, had a narrow escape from both fire and water when the former's launch took fire in the St. Clair River, near Walpole Island, and ignited a forty gallon tank of gasoline, which immediately exploded. The boat was headed for the shore, but the flames spread so fast that the men had to jump into the river. All reached the shore in safety.

His Excessive Modesty.

The story goes that one of the first cases accepted by Mahlon K. Cowan, the well-known Ontario counsel, when he started his career as a young lawyer in Windsor was a breach of promise case in which a fair daughter of Essex County claimed the moderate sum of $2,000 as balm for her wounded affections. So ably did Mr. Cowan present her woes that the sympathetic jurymen awarded the plaintiff not only the full amount of damages asked, but $500 more. This of course gave the defendant a valid reason for appeal. The case was brought to Osgoode Hall, and Mr. Cowan appeared to argue his client's side of the action. After counsel for both parties had been heard, the senior judge, knowing that it was Mr. Cowan's first appearance before the august tribunal of appeal, took occasion to compliment the young lawyer on his able effort, and then half-jokingly asked:

"How do you account, Mr. Cowan, for the jury's generosity in awarding your client more than the damages you claimed?"

"Your lordship," answered Mr. Cowan, "that is easily answered. I am an Essex boy, born and raised on the farm. The jurymen were nearly all farmers who have known me from my youth upward, and they were all aware that my chief failing was an excessive modesty which alone prevented me from asking all that I was entitled to."

Deficient Vocabulary.

Here is a tale of the difficulty of translators as told in "The West Sussex Gazette." Someone who was at work on a Christian hymnal for the Zulus was unable to proceed with the line, "Lord dismiss us with Thy blessing," because the language has no equivalent either for "dismiss" or "blessing." The nearest he could get was "Lord, kick us out softly."

SIR WILFRID WOULD GIVE MONEY AND HAVE NAVY TOO

Liberal Chief Divulges His Party's Policy by Moving That the Laurier Navy be Kept up and Enlarged to Consist of a Fleet Unit on Each Seaboard --- Strong For Auotnomy of the Dominion.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered his policy on the naval question in the House yesterday afternoon. He agrees with the Government that thirty-five million dollars shall be put at the disposal of the Government at once for the purpose of strengthening the naval forces of the Empire. He does not favor presenting Britain with three dreadnoughts, to be a part of the royal navy stationed in the North Sea, but proposes in lieu thereof that Canada shall spend this $35,000,000 upon two fleet units (embracing one dreadnought each), one to be stationed on the Atlantic coast and the other on the Pacific coast, and these are to be manned, officered, equipped and maintained by Canada.

Sir Wilfrid declares that no emergency exists. "If there is an emergency," he says, "if England is in danger, do not send $36,000,000, but twice, thrice and four times that amount."

Mr. Borden is all contribution and Sir Wilfrid is all policy. Mr. Borden should have launched his contribution a year ago. Perhaps Sir Wilfrid should have acted out more of his policy of to-day when in office, but, as politicians they have been timid, too much afraid of the Nationalist spectre in Quebec and which to-day seems to be only a spook made by the boys.

Hon. J. D. Hazen received a great ovation when he rose to reply to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He dealt effectively with the Premier's claim that under his policy there would now be ten war vessels upon the stocks of Montreal. He pointed out that the present emergency contribution had nothing to do with Canada's permanent policy, and would have been made even if the Laurier navy had been continued by the present Government.

Borden Moves Adoption.

When the House opened the Prime Minister moved that the report of the committee of the whole House recommending the adoption of the resolution, declaring it to be expedient to appropriate $35,000,000 for the construction of three capital battleships under the direction of the governor-in-council, be placed at the disposal of His Majesty for defence of the Empire, be adopted.

Mr. Borden, speaking to his motion, read the correspondence between himself and Mr. Churchill, respecting the construction in Canada by the British Admiralty, of destroyers, oil tank vessels, and auxiliary cruisers.

When Mr. Borden took his seat Sir Wilfrid Laurier arose amid loud applause from his followers, which continued for some time. "In rising," he said, "to present the views of His Majesty's loyal Opposition, I should say to the House that there came to me last summer as well as to the Prime Minister, representations from many eminent men, asking that the question of Imperial defence be kept out of contentious politics. I am heartily in accord with this proposition, and I hope I may say, without offence, that if this question has been dragged into party politics, the blame must rest upon the Conservative party."

Made No Party Fight.

He then traced the history of the naval question in this country, beginning with the resolution introduced in the House of Commons, by Hon. George E. Foster, upon which was finally founded the resolution of March 29, 1909. The Liberal Government, he said, had offered no factious opposition to Mr. Foster's resolution, but had suggested an amendment made necessary by changed conditions in Europe. They had then accepted an amendment proposed to this amendment, by Mr. Borden, and the voice of the Canadian people as interpreted by the unanimous vote of Parliament had been in favor of a Canadian navy.

Hardly was the ink dry upon this resolution, he continued, but it was assailed by one wing of the Conservative party, which said no aid to Britain would be effected except by a cash contribution, and by another wing, which declared against a cash contribution and the Canadian navy alike. The present policy of the Government, he declared to be a cross between Tory jingoism and Nationalism.

The people of this country had awaited with impatience and apprehension the message which would be delivered to them from the British Government, by the present Canadian Prime Minister. They had been told by people here that England was on her knees begging help from Canada. "But," said Sir Wilfrid, amid tremendous cheers. "England never bends the knee! She is never a beggar, and never a suppliant."

No Emergency.

The memorandum from the British Admiralty, he said, contained nothing new, it revealed nothing not known to this Parliament in March, 1909.

It disclosed not, that England was in danger, but that, owing to the increased armament among the nations of the world, she had for strategic reasons, concentrated her naval forces in the home waters by withdrawing many vessels which heretofore patrolled the shores of Canada and other dominions of the King throughout the world.

"Very well," said Sir Wilfrid, "what is the duty of the overseas dominions? The duty is, when a vessel is recalled to the home waters, to replace that vessel with one of their own, equipped, manned and maintained at their own expense."

"If the young nations of the Empire take hold of the equipment and manning of ships to look after the distant seas, concentration can easily take place in the waters of Europe, and the British Admiralty knows what zones she has to defend. This is the Australian policy, this would be the Canadian policy, this ought to be the Canadian policy. (Renewed cheers.)

"I insist once more upon what is stated in the memorandum. There is no emergency. There is no immediate danger, there is no prospective danger —no, I will not use that expression—I will not say if Britain were in danger—but simply if Britain were on trial, with one or two or more of the great powers of Europe, my Rt. Honorable friend (Mr. Borden) must come down and ask, not $35,000,000, but twice, three times, four times $35,000,000! (Cheers.) We would put at the disposal of England all the resources of Canada; there would not be a single dissenting voice! (Renewed cheers.)

Nothing New In Situation.

"But this is not the condition with which we have to deal to-day. The condition that we have to deal with to-day is simply what I described a moment ago. This is not new. The memorandum which my Rt. Hon friend submitted the other day disclosed nothing which we did not know before. Every word that is there we knew, every figure we knew I may say more; every word, every figure in that memorandum we discussed four years ago. We discussed it in the month of March, 1909, and then we came to the conclusion, the unanimous conclusion, that the best method of helping England, of discharging our duties, was not by contribution, but by the creation of a Canadian navy."

"What is this contribution that we have to-day before us, and upon which we are asked to vote?" he asked. "It is big in money, it is big in figures. Is it as big otherwise as it ought to be? I ask every hon. member of this House, I ask every hon. gentleman sitting there. You give Britain two or three dreadnoughts to be paid for by Canada, but to be equipped, manned and maintained by Britain. Oh, did I say manned by Britain? I must qualify that statement. In justice to my Rt. Hon. friend I must qualify that statement, because he told us that he had secured from the Imperial authorities the privilege of having Canadian officers serve on those ships.

Hiring Fighters.

"Oh, ye Tory jingoes! Is that the amount of the sacrifice you are prepared to make? You are ready to furnish admirals, rear-admirals, commodores, captains, officers of all grades, plumes, feathers and gold lace, but you leave it to England—to old England — to supply the bone and sinew on board those ships! You say that these ships shall bear Canadian names. That will be the only thing Canadian about them. You hire somebody to do your work. In other words, you are ready to do anything except the fighting. Is that, sir, the true policy, the Canadian policy?"

"Mr. Speaker, it is not money that Britain wants at this moment. Britain never was wealthier than she is at the present time; her coffers are overflowing. What she wants are the hearts, the brains and the brawn of her subjects all over the world. It has been stated, I hope it will prove true, that this generous contribution of $35,000,000 to the Imperial treasury will create a deep impression in Europe amongst the great powers. I hope it is true, but would not the impression be much greater yet if, instead of this money contribution, the nations of Europe were to see the young daughters of the Empire, the young nations scattered over the whole Empire, building fleets of their own, to use the language of the resolution of 1909. "In co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy along the lines suggested by the Admiralty at the last Imperial Conference, and in full sympathy with the view that the naval supremacy of Britain is essential to the security of commerce, the safety of the Empire and the peace of the world." Would not that create a greater impression?

Sir Wilfrid, after quoting from former speeches of Premier Borden and Hon. George E. Foster, in Opposition to the plan of a cash contribution, made an eloquent plea for vessels paid for by Canada. If possible built in Canada, maintained by Canada, with Canadians on board to fight for the Empire.

Policy Settles Nothing.

"I have now to urge upon my hon. friend that the present policy which he proposes, settles nothing. The problem that you have to deal with must be a permanent one for to-day, to-morrow and every day as long as the armaments grow in Europe, and the duty which you owe to yourselves, to Canada and to the Empire is the enactment of a permanent policy. As regards the creation of a Canadian navy, you have apparently decided against that. In respect to contribution, does anyone imagine that you will have only one contribution? They must be recurring and again recurring, and, in the words of my friend from North Toronto, they leave no trace behind them. As I understand from the speech of my hon. friend, he does not want to have a permanent policy on this subject, because, as he says, 'before we have a permanent policy we must have a voice in all questions of peace or war.'"

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

"Shall we have or not have a voice in all questions affecting peace and war? That is a very large proposition, and I would not at the present time pronounce finally upon it, but there are certain objections that present themselves at once to my mind."

Sir Wilfrid then referred to the detail and secrecy of the Foreign Secretary's work and continued:

WOULD SERVE PARTY RATHER THAN THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Says Hon. J. D. Hazen of Sir Wilfrid, and the Liberal Naval Policy.

Hon G. P. Graham Gives His Reasons for Opposing Borden Proposals.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—Messrs. Hazen, Graham and Pelletier continued the naval debate until late last night. Hon. Mr. Hazen was enthusiastically received and had an advantage over the Liberal leader in that he had accurate knowledge of the needs of the British Admiralty.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Naval Affairs, regretted that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had made an apologetic speech, seeking rather to serve the Liberal party than the British Empire. Mr. Hazen pointed out that the Prime Minister faithfully carried out his ante-election pledges. He had been the epitome of sincerity and consistency. This last remark drew forth Conservative applause and a counter demonstration from the Opposition benches.

Mr. Hazen then proceeded to quote Commander Roper and Admiral Kingsmill, with a view to showing inefficiency in the way in which the Laurier Government had proceeded to carry out its program for a Canadian navy.

Mr. Hazen then went on to declare that it would be impossible for Canada to build dreadnoughts for many years to come, and reminded the House of the difficulty experienced in manning the present ships.

As to the question of the representation of Canada in Imperial councils he declared in a general way that British statesmen were making progress in realizing the necessity for this, and that the solution would be worked in connection with the evolution of a permanent policy. "And when it is worked out," he added "we will be prepared to go to the country."

Continuing, Mr. Hazen dwelt on the international naval situation, dealing specifically with what the German state of affairs in relation to the extension of that country's naval operations. He stated that in 1920 the German navy would be as strong as the British navy is at present. In the case of a great aggressive war in the North Sea he declared that a victory over Germany would still leave Germany as the greatest power in Europe, but a German victory would open the way to the invasion of Britain.

Hon. George P. Graham made a slashing speech, which aroused his fellow-Liberals to great enthusiasm He took Mr. Hazen to task for saying that he would not man our ships. Had Canadians lost their manhood? Were the descendants of Englishmen, Scotsmen or the men of Tipperary and Ulster afraid to fight? Were we to say to the Mother Country, "We love the old flag enough to spend a little money, but we will not shed a drop of blood."

He took the Minister of Marine to task for saying the British navy might be destroyed. There was no danger of that and had not been for half a century.

"Britons," declared Mr. Graham, amid considerable enthusiasm, "are not afraid to fight upon land or sea. Are Canadians less courageous? Let us say to England that Canada has the ships and the money, too. Let us not say in effect we have the money and we can build the ships, but we have no men in Canada who are willing to fight. Let us give the Empire not only money and ships but our men and if need be our lives."

He closed his speech by listing the reasons why he opposed the contribution plan and supported the Laurier policy, as follows:

"I am opposed to this resolution on many grounds, including the following:

"(1) It constitutes us a nation of substituters, willing to allow others to take our places in the firing line in the defence of the Empire.

"(2) It ignores the true test of devotion, the sacrifice of ourselves, if necessary, as well as our money, in the defence of the common cause.

"(3) It reverses the policy of the past seventy years, and it is a retrograde step in the constitutional relations existing between the Motherland and Canada.

"(4) At the best it is but an expedient, humiliating to both the Empire and Canada, and makes no provision for a policy of permanent benefit to both.

"(5) It is in no wise a solution of the problem of naval defence, but merely a temporary makeshift without lasting results to the Motherland or the Dominion of Canada."

Postmaster-General Pelletier said Mr. Graham was crying that we must not only spend money but also shed our blood, and also that the Mother Country did not want money or ships but men.

"I am in a better position," he said, "to know what the Mother Country wants than are gentlemen opposite. The Government knows what the British Government desires, and I say to you that we are doing the very thing just now which most pleases the Mother Country."

WOMAN IS MURDERED IN COLD BLOODED MANNER

Stranger Was Seen Near the Home By Fourteen Year Old Son.

Suspect Arrested at Dundalk Says he Was Never in Flesherton.

Canadian Press Despatch

Flesherton, Dec. 13— Nothing has developed to-day in the Love murder case. An autopsy was held starting some time this afternoon. The statements of Love, his son, and the neighbors have been repeated in great detail, but no new light is thrown on the crime.

Flesherton, Dec. 13, (Later)— The suspect arrested at Dundalk has not yet been brought here. At Dundalk, he gives the name of McManus, and says he comes from Collingwood but was never in Flesherton.

Flesherton, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Hanna Lucille Love of Ceylon was murdered deliberately and in cold blood on Tuesday morning.

The instrument of death was a revolver and not a blunt instrument as at first stated, is the theory of Constable Malcolm McDonald and Bailiff John Wright, who are at work on the case. While the autopsy alone will determine whether it was a bullet which ended Mrs. Love's life, a casual examination of the remains found in a pool of blood in the cellar of her home at an early hour yesterday morning, after she had been missing since Tuesday morning, would seem to indicate that it was. A careful search has been made for a bullet, but so far without success. An axe like that used by ship builders, but with a short handle, has been found which might have caused wounds like those appearing on the body.

The last person known to have seen Mrs. Love is her fourteen-year-old son, who left home for high school a little late on Tuesday morning. He reports having seen a stranger in a striped suit with a dark overcoat about a quarter of a mile away from the Love home, and going towards it.

So far as official information is obtainable, there are no new developments in the case, but the officers have learned that Mrs. A. Corrigan of Ceylon called at the Love home at 10 o'clock on the morning of the tragedy, and that she noticed the tracks of a man in the new snow going in through the large gateway leading up to the side door of the residence. She did not notice any tracks going out, and she knocked on the door and got no answer. She tried the knob and it appeared to be locked, so she went away.

Instead of only one bullet being used, the officers believe there were two. One, which was not entirely effective, was fired when the body fell in the cellar under the main part of the house, and the other after the body had been dragged through the narrow passage in the wall into a trench in the part of the cellar not completely excavated. The latter bullet, if bullet it was, is believed to have severed the jugular vein, and the large pool of blood in which the body was lying would seem to bear out the theory that the death wound, from whatever cause, was inflicted after the body was placed where it was discovered.

Mrs. Love was subject to fainting fits, and Henry Love, the husband, told the officers that when he first missed her, he was afraid that she had been wandering around outside and had an attack. As it was snowing heavily, he feared she had been covered with snow, and consequently searched the entire yard carefully. Not finding her, he thought she had gone to visit some friends in the country, and he retired on Tuesday night, with the intention of driving to the country in the morning. This intention he carried out.

NOT WHAT IS WANTED

The Laurier Naval Scheme Would be Waste of Money.

London, Dec. 13.—Two opinions on the Laurier amendment to the Borden naval policy have appeared and differ radically in their view.

The Daily News says the plan for establishing a Canadian fleet unit on each of her ocean coasts, built, maintained and so far as possible manned by Canada, and ready to go to the aid of Great Britain in emergency, does give the Dominion what Mr. Borden's scheme does not, a maritime force of its own. It also avoids the grave objection to which Borden's proposal is certainly exposed, that it weakens if it does not wholly destroy the remaining control of the House of Commons of our foreign policy.

Serious in itself, such a fundamental change becomes more serious still, when carried out, not as result of Parliamentary deliberation, but secret Admiralty transactions.

Another leader declares: The squadrons such as he suggests would be blown out of the water by a homogeneous modern squadron. Economically and strategically there is no advantage in them. It would be far better for Canada to save her money and do nothing at all. At present Canada offer at a critical hour a help most prized by the British Admiralty, a contribution best calculated, according to expert opinion, to add to that security of the Empire on which the security of Canada depends. In return, the Dominions get a voice in the control of defence policy. That is a wise beginning. When Canada has grown richer and more powerful, statesmanship can found a full Canadian navy, acting as part of the Imperial fleet, under control of an Imperial council.

CONSPIRED TO GET WARWICK'S MONEY

Canadian Press Despatch

Moose Jaw, Sask., Dec. 13 — Pretty Mrs. Ralph Warwick, who came from Newcastle, England, and is scarcely out of her teens, told a story at the Coroner's inquest last night of how she and Stanley Price conspired to cause the death of her husband who was beaten to death on his homestead, near Iverman, on November eighteenth

She said that she fell in love with Price, and went to live with him as his housekeeper and mistress six months ago.

She was urged by Price and finally consented to entrap Warwick into a marriage and then get him to make over or will to her everything he possessed.

After two months, Warwick asked her to marry him and she lived with him till he was murdered, at the same time maintaining her relations with Price.

APARTMENTS DESTROYED

Policemen Rescued Women Who Were Trapped in Buildings.

Canadian Press Despatch

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 13—The large residence building in the business heart of the north side, known as the Library Apartments were destroyed in a spectacular fire this morning, and two hundred inmates were driven out into the cold. A dozen people were injured, including several firemen who were caught by a falling wall. Fourteen women who were trapped in a rear apartment, were rescued by policemen and taken down down the ladders.

TEACHERS WILL BE ENTERTAINED

A somewhat unique and interesting social time will be held in St. Paul's Presbyterian school room tonight when the class of Chinese who attend St. Paul's, will entertain their teachers and a few invited friends. There are about fourteen Chinamen who are engaged in a study of the Bible under guidance of teachers. Refreshments will be served and a pleasant and profitable evening may be expected. Some of the class can scarcely speak a word of English, while others are fairly proficient. A couple of weeks ago the teachers entertained the Chinamen and the affair to-night is expected to cement the interest between teachers and pupils. The Chinese all use New Testaments, one page being in English and the opposite in Chinese.

Here was an [illegible] that Kathleen could [illegible] of you. [illegible] and [illegible] the bracelet down [illegible] when a [illegible]: "When you [illegible] you can have this."

She pushed the circlet back, and Mallory's [illegible] sank [illegible]. He grew frantic at being [illegible] frustrated in his [illegible]. He [illegible] Kathleen's arm [illegible], while his [illegible] pleaded, his [illegible]: "Please—please let [illegible] take it—for the [illegible]—you know."

Kathleen [illegible] the determination in his fierce eyes, and she [illegible] furiously: "[illegible], Richard—Chauncey!—er—Billy! I'm [illegible]! Let go or I'll [illegible]!"

She [illegible] and, [illegible] her arm from his [illegible], confronted him with bewildered [illegible]. Mallory [illegible] toward Marjorie a look of surrender and [illegible]. Marjorie laid her hand on her [illegible] and in [illegible] suggested that Mallory should throttle Kathleen, as he had promised.

But Mallory was incapable of further violence; and when Kathleen, with all her coquetry, bent down and murmured: "You are a very naughty boy, but come to breakfast and we'll talk it over," he was so addled that he answered: "Thanks, but I never eat breakfast."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Down Brakes!

Just as Kathleen flung her head in baffled vexation and Mallory started to slink back to Marjorie, with another [illegible], there came an abrupt shock as if that gigantic child to whom [illegible] trains are toys, had reached down and laid violent hold on the [illegible] in full career.

Its [illegible] became suddenly [illegible] shivers [illegible]:

"We're [illegible]"

He was sent [illegible] down the aisle like a [illegible] hurled through the car. He brought up with a sickening slam across the [illegible] into which Marjorie had been [illegible] back with a breathtaking slam. And then Kathleen came flying backwards and landed in a heap on both of them.

Several of the other passengers were [illegible] from breakfast and they were shot and scattered all over the car as if a great chain of human beads had burst.

Women screamed, men yelled, and then while they were still struggling against the seats and one another, the train came to a halt.

"Thank God, we stopped in time!" Mallory gasped, as he tried to disengage himself and Marjorie from Kathleen.

The passengers began to regain their courage with their equilibrium. Little Jimmie Wellington had flown the whole length of the car, clinging to his wife as if she were Francesca da Rimini, and he Paolo, flitting through Inferno. The flight ended at the stateroom door with such a thump that Mrs. Fosdick was sure a detective had come for her at last, and with a battering ram.

But when Jimmie got back breath enough to talk, he remembered the train-stopping excitement of the day before and called out:

"Has Mrs. Mallory lost that pup again?"

Everybody laughed uproariously at this. People will laugh at anything or nothing when they have been frightened almost to death and suddenly relieved of anxiety.

Everybody was cracking a joke at Marjorie's expense. Everybody bore a good-natured grudge against her for being such a [illegible]. The car was ringing with hilarity, when the porter came [illegible] in and [illegible] at the door, with eyes all white, hands waving [illegible], and [illegible] like flannel, in a vain effort to speak.

The passengers stopped laughing at Marjorie, to laugh at the porter. Ashton sang out:

"What's the matter with you, porter? Are you trying to crow?"

Everybody roared at this, till the porter finally managed to articulate:

"T-t-t-train rob-rob-robbers!"

Silence shut down as if the whole crowd had been smitten with paralysis. From somewhere outside and ahead came a [illegible] popping as of firecrackers. Everybody thought, "Revolvers!" The reports were mingled with barbaric yells that turned the marrow in every bone to snow.

These regions are full of historic terror. All along the Nevada route the conductor, the brakemen and old travelers had pointed out scene after scene where the Indians had slaked the thirst of the arid land with white man's blood. Ashton, who had traveled this way many times, had made himself fascinatingly horrifying the evening before and ruined several breakfasts that morning in the dining-car, by regaling the passengers with stories of pioneer ordeals, men and women massacred in burning wagons, or dragged away to fiendish cruelty and obscene torture, staked out supine on burning wastes with eyelids cut off, bound down within reach of rattlesnakes, subjected to every misery that human deviltry could devise.

Ashton had brought his fellow passengers to a state of ecstatic excitability, and, like many a recounter of burglar stories at night, had tuned his own nerves to high tension.

The violent stopping of the train, the heart-shaking yells and shots outside, found the passengers already apt to respond without delay to the appeals of fright. After the first hush of dread, came the reaction to panic.

Each passenger showed his own panic in his own way. Ashton whirled round and round, like a horse with the blind staggers, then bolted down the aisle, knocking aside men and women. He climbed on a seat, pulled down an upper berth, and, scrambling into it, tried to shut it on himself.

Mrs. Whitcomb was so frightened that she assailed Ashton with fury and seizing his feet, dragged him back into the aisle, and beat him with her fists, commanding that he protect her and save her for Sammy's sake.

Mrs. Fosdick, rushing out of her stateroom and not finding her lustrous-eyed husband, laid hold of Jimmie Wellington and ordered him to go to the rescue of her spouse. Mrs. Wellington tore her hands loose, crying: "Let him go, madam. He has a wife of his own to defend."

Jimmie was trying to pour out dying messages, and only sputtering, forgetting that he had put his watch in his mouth to hide it, though its chain was still attached to his waistcoat.

Anne Gattle, who had read much about Chinese atrocities to missionaries, gave herself up to death, yet rejoiced greatly that she had provided a timely man to lean on and should not have to enter Paradise a spinster, providing she could manage to convert Ira in the next few seconds, before it was everlastingly too late. She was begging her first heathen to join her in a gospel hymn. But Ira was roaring curses like a pirate captain in a hurricane, and swearing that the villains should not rob him of his bride.

Mrs. Temple wrung her twitching hands and tried to drag her husband to his knees, crying:

DETECTIVE CLUES

Some Headdresses That Have Hanged Murderers.

The man who murdered Inspector Walls at Eastbourne recently left behind him a fawn-colored Trilby hat. Stamped on the leather inside it was the word "Kelvington," while a piece of paper stuck inside the hat was [illegible] "No. 56. H.062 8/6." Two letters which resemble "K" written backwards and a "P" were also on the paper.

Slight as such a clue is, the probability is that whoever fired the fatal shots will be brought to justice through it.

In the Black Museum at Scotland Yard is a black felt wideawake hat which brought its owner to the gallows for the murder of a policeman named Cole.

This case was almost an exact parallel of the Eastbourne tragedy. Constable Cole, on the night of Dec. 1, 1882, while on duty in Ashwin Street, Dalston, saw a man named Orrock in the act of clambering over the low wall in front of a Baptist chapel that faced the street.

He demanded the man to give an account of himself, and endeavored to arrest him. In the struggle which followed the miscreant drew a revolver and shot the policeman dead.

One of the clues the murderer left behind when he fled was the black wideawake hat. When Orrock was captured it proved to be one of the greatest clues against him, for it fitted him perfectly.

The first railway carriage murderer, Franz Muller, was captured by means of the hat he left behind. Muller robbed and murdered a bank cashier named Briggs, afterwards throwing his victim on the line close to Victoria Park, where he was found.

Underneath one of the seats of the carriage in which the murder was committed was found a soft felt hat. This hat did not fit the victim's head, and it was the only one found. It was pretty certain that it was the murderer's, but the question arose "What had become of Mr. Brigg's hat?"

It was soon discovered that the hat found in the carriage had been bought at a hatter's in Marylebone. Within a short time a cabman came forward, identified the hat, and swore he had bought it for a man named Muller.

Muller was arrested on landing at New York, where he had fled on the Victoria, a sailing vessel. At the time of his capture he was actually wearing Mr. Brigg's hat, cut down and slightly altered.

Being hatless got a man named [illegible] fifteen years' penal servitude. He was seen one morning in [illegible] to be running down the York Road, near King's Cross. Now a man running in London is nothing out of the way, but a refined-featured, well-dressed man running with no hat on is somewhat unusual.

A constable stopped him and insisted upon taking him back whence he came. A short way back the shrieks of a woman led the policeman to the office of a dealer in diamonds. The dealer had been stunned by a life-preserver and $10,000 worth of jewels stolen. The criminal, Toussaint, hearing a step on the stairs, had fled. He forgot his hat, and this [illegible] secured him a well-deserved punishment.

"Hats," said Inspector Williamson, one-time chief of Scotland Yard, "are [illegible] easy to lose. Criminals seem to forget that. If they did not, and only knew how handy a hat is in the hands of a detective officer, they might think it worth while to tie their hats [illegible]."

Good Form

To the Visitor.

Here is a collection of "don'ts" which ought to be remembered and obeyed by those who are guests for the popular week end or a longer stay. Many girls wonder why they are not invited so constantly as other friends. They spend their time in wondering at Mary's good luck when in reality it is Mary's tact and consideration that have won her the admiration—and the invitation.

If you are a visitor there are certain points that should be printed in capitals under your "don't" department.

Don't ever make the mistake of usurping family privileges. For instance, don't give orders to the servants in the house and refrain from doing anything that will disrupt the scheme of the home in which you are visiting.

It is the duty of a visitor to be ready for everything. If breakfast is served at 8—and it is your place to find out the time for meals—you should not be late. Nothing is more provoking to a hostess than to wait for a delinquent guest and to sit down before a cold meal. "Punctuality is the politeness of kings" and the hallmark of a lady and gentleman. Don't fail in punctuality just because you cannot trace your family tree to William the Conqueror.

Don't be an undecided, spineless creature with no mind of your own. If you are asked if you wish white meat or dark meat, make a decision. This is only good form. If your hostess asks whether you prefer to go out to the theater or have a few guests at the house, don't be inexcusably irritating by saying: "I don't care in the least. Whatever you say is perfectly agreeable." Give your entertainer the privilege of doing the best for you.

The desirable guest, however, exercises tact in her decision. The duties of a hostess are often fatiguing, especially if she must manage household affairs in conjunction with entertainment. No guest should overtax the physical strength of her hostess, nor should there be a disregard of the expenses entailed. Consider the purse of one who is not burdened with this world's goods.

Do not expect to be entertained all day. Let your hostess have a few hours to herself. This can be arranged if you have letters to write or if you take a few walks alone.

Don't leave your room in disorder, and above all don't make your visit a big burden to the worker in the house, whether mistress or servant. If the former, you should offer to help in the little tasks about the home, and undoubtedly you should care for your own room. If there is a maid, you should hang up all clothing and care for your room so as to be no cause for a "notice" given to the head of the house on account of "too much company."

Don't monopolize the best chair, the best place in the room, just because you are politely offered them by your host.

Act naturally, and don't forget that there are other beings in this world with their rights.

And when you arrive home don't forget to send a little note of thanks to your entertainers.

Smart French Suit.

Velours de laine is one of the newest and smartest of materials this winter, and the cut shows a particularly attractive suit carried out in this new French fabric in black and white stripes. The skirt is slightly draped, and the coat has a high necked fastening—a rolled back collar of white faced with white cloth that is very becoming and new. The buttons are big ball shaped affairs of bone in a creamy tint.

HOW BUSY MONARCHS READ THEIR DAILY PAPERS

Abdul Hamid Made Court Officers Memorize the Important Items, While Queen Victoria Had The Times Read to Her—King Edward Had His News "Boiled Down"—King George Does Own Reading.

The popular idea that kings live their lives apart and know little or nothing about what is going on in the outside and workaday world may have had some foundation in fact in the old days. Speaking generally, it has absolutely none now. Even the late Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid, who was generally considered to be steeped in the exclusiveness of the East and wrapped up in himself, and his own personal [illegible], took good care to be informed of what was going on, not only in his kingdom but outside it. His chief source of information, apart from his spies and the diplomatic representatives of Turkey in the various European capitals, was derived from French newspapers. These were delivered regularly at the royal palace, and it was the duty of two officials to read them through and commit anything which they considered of interest to the [illegible] memory. Admitted to the royal presence they were called upon to recite what they had learnt, and if the Sultan had doubts upon any point they were called upon to [illegible], and woe betide them if [illegible] not immediately forthcoming and [illegible] their [illegible].

Queen Victoria had The Times read to her, and articles dealing with personal matters were carefully cut out and pasted in volumes bound in royal blue. There are scores of these in the library at Windsor, and they have proved of the greatest use to biographers.

King Edward was not fond of reading, but the latest foreign telegrams were always placed before him, and extracts from important speeches delivered in the House of Parliament were cut out and pasted on sheets of paper for his perusal. As is well known, the late King took a keen interest in sport, and he was always kept supplied with the latest information on that topic. Special articles in the foreign magazines and reviews were "boiled down" and conveyed to him, generally at dinner. This was the great occasion when the day's doings were reviewed.

King George is a firm believer in doing things himself, and he personally reads the leading newspapers. His Majesty's private secretary saves a certain amount of time and trouble, however, by marking articles and items of news of special interest. The King often jots down notes while he is reading. Some of these notes take the shape of queries asking for further information on some particular subject, and it is the duty of the private secretary to see that this is supplied. His Majesty has a remarkably keen memory, and is therefore able to converse on a very wide range of subjects.

In this respect he resembles the Kaiser, who is a very "hungry" reader, and is able to absorb a vast quantity of information in a very short time. He reads the papers quickly, and is specially interested in technical and engineering papers and in journals dealing with shipbuilding, gunnery, and other warlike matters. He has also a sense of humor, and always glances at the leading comic papers. Should any subject appeal particularly to him, he has reports thereon summoned to the palace, and over cigars and beer he fires off his questions and expects to receive the fullest information. The annual cruise which he takes on the Imperial yacht is the great occasion for these cross-examinations. A distinguished company of naval, military, scientific and business men accompanies him, and if any details he is in search of cannot be supplied no time is lost in telegraphing to some one who is in a position to give them.

The Emperor of Austria very rarely reads himself. He is read to. The aged monarch still takes the keenest possible interest in the political movements in his country; he also likes to keep abreast of the times in military subjects. Literature and the art do not, however, appeal to him.

The Czar has a paper of his own, specially printed each morning. It is the most exclusive paper in the world, for only two copies are supplied, one for the Czar, the other for his private secretary. It is a two-page sheet containing a digest of the news of the world compressed into tabloid form. Needless to say, everything calculated to disturb His Majesty's peace of mind is carefully omitted.

The King of Spain has a great admiration for everything English, and English papers and magazines figure on his study table. His Majesty is more a worker than a reader, however, and it is the Queen who supplies him with much of his information. Details concerning his own kingdom are supplied by his secretaries and an official who holds the post of Court Newsman and is supposed to be up in all the social gossip of the hour. The King takes much interest in motoring, flying, shooting, and other sports. He also follows the trend of masculine fashions in London, and is kept advised as to the latest styles. This information is sent by a firm of tailors in London, from whom the King gets the bulk of his clothes.

The late Emperor of Japan was exceedingly well informed, and [illegible] [illegible] the bulk of the information [illegible] derived from English [illegible] and [illegible]. As the Emperor could not read English with facility, the articles had to be translated. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. The present Emperor, on the other hand, [illegible] a man of the world, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] political matters.

A TALENTED WOMAN.

Late Dr. Alice McGillivray Gave Her Life to the Unfortunate.

By the recent death of Dr. Alice McGillivray, Hamilton has lost a remarkable and highly-educated woman, than whom for extensive and varied scientific knowledge this country has had no superior and few equals. Deceased had been ailing for some time but bore up patiently and was automobiling at the time her disease developed suddenly an acute stage and she died in a few hours after being removed from her car.

From the early age of seven to her death at 51, Dr. McGillivray was a continuous and ardent student and an omnivorous leader in the broad field of science. As a scholar and student she was a brilliant success.

Born at St. George, where she attended school at the age of seven, she at once took her place at the head of her class, where she was never replaced until she left for the High School. After passing through the High School with the same success, she left for the Normal School at Ottawa, where she achieved equal distinction. Then for a time she gave all her energy and ability to the cause of the higher education of women in Canada, and her own brilliant writing and speaking produced the most convincing arguments that in brain power women were the equal of men.

Queen's University was the first to throw open its doors to women on equal footing with men, and Alice McGillivray, Elizabeth Smith and Elizabeth Beaty at once entered. The male students treated it as a joke at first, but when the results of the first examinations were published, and when it was learned that all three of the lady students were well to the top, and Alice McGillivray at the top of all with 100 per cent. marks, all she could possibly take, there was weeping wailing and gnashing of teeth among the male students. The medicos declared that lady students must be put out of the college, or they would all leave and go to a Toronto college. The feeling became so desperate, that through sympathy for the women attending the medical college, money was at once subscribed, and the Women's Medical College affiliated with Queen's University, was endowed for five years, in the belief that at the end of that time it would be self-supporting.

Examination still continued the same for men and women in the university, and Alice McGillivray still continued this habit, which was so objectionable to the male students of coming out first in every examination.

Her ambition was not confined to the medical classes alone, for she completed in the arts classes at the same time, and carried off the gold medalist in arts as well as in medicine.

She was at once appointed professor of practical anatomy in the Women's College, which position she held for one year, and was then appointed vice dean and professor of diseases of women and children. This position she held for four years. She then went to Chicago for a time and, returning to Canada, started the practice of her profession, where she remained until the time of her death.

For the last fifteen years of her life she was very retiring, shunning society and publicity and giving all her time to practice, study and quiet charitable work. She was a friend of the poor and the wronged and though she had a comparatively large income from her practice, she personally gave the most of it to unfortunate and poor girls and women.

It was said by Rev. Dr. Smith at her funeral service "Were every one to whom she did some loving act of kindness, to bring a blossom to her grave, she would sleep to-night beneath a wilderness of flowers."

Genius and Insanity.

Dr. Daniel Phelan, surgeon of Kingston Penitentiary who is regarded as an expert on mental diseases, has issued a 38-page treatise entitled "Genius and Insanity."

Some of his conclusions will be found startling to the lay reader, at least.

"One character of genius noted almost invariably, is a sudden drifting away from the ordinary paths followed by the majority of men," says Dr. Phelan.

"It is said that more people of great genius exhibit manifestations of insanity than do persons of ordinary mental faculties. This is due to the fact that genius is the expression of a highly sensitive nervous system, and is therefore more liable to diseased conditions of all kinds.

"No man directly inherits true genius any more than the divine gift of prophecy; on the other hand, talent may be marked in successive generations."

Build better roads than the Romans

CANADA is alive to the vital importance of good roads. Every land-owner knows that they contain the secret of greater prosperity; that they mean more farms, more profitable crops and more valuable land. Every merchant knows that they alone can swell his trade and his profits by giving him more customers and making it easier for those customers to get to his store.

But just what do we mean by "good roads?"

People in Louisiana are glad to get a strip of sand across their marshes — and they call it a "good" road;

People in Arkansas ride horseback through their barren hills—and they call their winding, rocky paths "good roads;"

But people in prosperous, fertile Canada do not have to be content with such make-shifts.

They are going about the work of providing proper highways as they have gone about everything else—carefully, systematically, intelligently.

Their definition of a good road is the "best" road—and that definition means a

Concrete road

A BROAD statement? Yes — but it is supported by incontrovertable facts; by the experience of more than twenty years and by the most exhaustive tests and investigation. It is admitted to be the fact by the foremost road authorities on the continent. It is guiding the road-building policy of great commonwealths.

The Romans—history's greatest road-builders—used a crude form of natural concrete to build the highways that have given service for two thousand years.

Until this present century, no later nation was able to equal the Romans as road-builders.

Now, we can build better roads than the Romans, for less money than our fathers paid for roads that would not last for half the lifetime of those who built them.

MODERN concrete, made with cement produced by modern scientific methods, is more enduring in every cubic yard than the best the Romans ever made. Modern road-making machines enable a dozen men to lay more—and better—road in a day than a hundred Roman slaves could put down in a week. In a few years these modern concrete roads will have paid for themselves — and will still be there, practically as good as new, to pay their builders and succeeding generations, annual profits.

Concrete has been proven to be the best material for any sort of highway. It has carried the heavy, congested traffic in the heart of great cities; it is cheap enough to be within reach of the smallest town; it can be laid by the ordinary road-gang of the most isolated farming district.

The materials are close at hand, the work provides employment for home labor; practically all the money spent for concrete roads remains at home.

YOU owe it to yourself—as a merchant, a professional man, or a farmer—and to your community—as a citizen—to use your influence on behalf of this modern "best road." We have made it easy for you to do so by collecting all the information necessary to thoroughly post you on the subject—and putting it into convenient form.

This information will be sent to you, without cost or obligation, upon request. Simply ask for "Good Roads Literature."

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Every man or woman living in Peterborough has some stake in the prosperity of the city. When trade is prosperous with the Peterborough merchants, that prosperity is circulated in all the business channels of the city, and permeate every fibre of activity. The man in the factory feels the stimulus as well as the man in the shop. To spend money at home rather than out of town makes for a bigger, better, busier and brighter Peterborough.

The Christmas shopping season is now in full swing. As the Peterborough Ad Club so aptly showed in the article it had prepared on buying Christmas goods at home, in the stores in a few blocks of George street, are to be found goods aggregating in value $2,500,000. The range of Christmas present stocks is complete. And it has often been established that the prices asked in the small city are not higher as a rule than they are in the great centres. On occasion prices in these large places may be cut below cost to attract trade, but what is lost on one article is [illegible] made up on another. It has also been noticed that when there is a public rush to shop, such as occurs at Christmas, prices in the large centres are often boosted, because the crowds are so large as to ensure that the goods will be taken no matter whether the prices are higher than usual or not. Not a few Peterborough people have found this out, in trying to buy goods out of town.

So it is a valuable thing to yourself personally, and to the city at large, to buy early, and buy at home. As to how often you buy, that is a different matter, and one upon which no advice can properly be given. The Peterborough merchant has prepared for the Christmas trade. Are you helping him get it?

THE PANAMA QUESTION

The note to the United States by the British Government certainly leaves Uncle Sam in a very precarious foothold of justification for his action in the Panama canal toll matter. In fact, it looks as if the United States must either back down or be subjected to the condemnation of the world as a breaker of a solemn treaty. Public men of the United States as Elihu Root, the leading newspapers and others have been unsparing in their attacks upon Congress, for passing a bill discriminating in favor of United States coastwise traffic, and on President Taft for defending the bill and not vetoing it. Canada has a very large interest in this bill and the strong presentation upon the subject by the British Minister of Foreign Affairs is undoubtedly due to a desire to give Canadian protests the fullest weight.

The bill discriminating in favor of United States coastwise traffic in the matter of tolls having been passed by Congress and signed by the President, there are only three courses open. Either the United States must insist upon carrying through the gross violation of all honor, or Congress must repeal the obnoxious provisions, or it can abide by the decision of an arbitration court. President Taft wanted to insert into the bill an amendment giving any foreign subject the right to bring an action into the United States Supreme Court, to test the validity of the law, thus obtaining a domestic interpretation rather than one by an international tribunal. But this is not satisfactory. The Hague tribunal is the one before which such a question ought to go. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty says most plainly, without any equivocation, that the canal shall be open and free to the ships of all nations upon terms of perfect equality. How the United States can construe this to allow exemption of tolls to United States vessels is beyond those who know the meaning of English words. But now that he is about to go out of office, President Taft may have the courage to vindicate himself by recommending to the Senate that the matter be referred to the Hague tribunal. If he does not, Taft will be known as the President of the "judicial mind" who had a wishbone where his backbone should have been, and a squint in the eye that entirely disabled him from seeing things quite plain to common people, thus bringing his "judicial mind" down to a fairly low level. But Taft was playing politics as he played politics with Canadian reciprocity. He has made a mess out of both questons.

WHEN SHALL WAR CEASE

The past twelve months have seen considerable activity in war. The Turkish-Italian fight in Tripoli, followed by the Balkan trouble, has kept the military gun manufacturers, the makers of ammunition, well rushed with business. One of the results of this expansion in warlike activity is indicated in the fiscal report of the Krupp concern at Essen, Germany. The surplus for the year is $12,500,000, and after the payment of $1,250,000 for taxes, $1,100,000 in workmen's insurance, and $1,750,000 for welfare among the Krupp employes, there is a net surplus of $8,000,000. A twelve per cent. dividend was declared, five per cent. added to the reserve fund and $500,000 to the pension fund.

When will the creation of armaments cease? When will the Krupps, the Maxims, the Armstrongs, and the other makers of material for war be compelled to make something of real utility for peaceful mankind? If we have got out of the savage state when man existed by his prowess in fighting other men, cannot the nations get out of the state of warring with each other, killing and maiming their soldiers—for what? We do not agree with the political economists who hold that all expenditure on war material is a waste to the human race. The manufacture of war material transfers from the pockets of the public large sums of money into the pockets of a part of the public. The money, or the wealth that changes hands, is not buried at the bottom of the sea, as a rule. It is unproductive expenditure, but to run away with the idea that all the money spent on armament is wasted to the public is about on a par with the idea that all the agricultural products of a country add that much to the annual production of wealth. But there is no gainsaying that very few of the nations are willing to admit that theirs is an aggressively militarist policy. Germany's war preparations are to ensure her national safety, to uphold the national position in the world for the sake of trade advantages. Britain goes on building and maintaining a big navy, at a cost of $150,000,000 a year, because it is an essential of national existence. Canada now contributes to the British naval strength, not because it wants to get into the "vortex of European militarism," but to strengthen the defences of the Empire against these other 'non-aggressive' nations, and so protect her own safety. Where nations are involved, in a fight for trade, it will indeed be hard to have any other final court of appeal than that of force. Might would be right in private life were it not for the intervention of a power, stronger than either of the combatants. But as nations are the units of power in the world, there is nothing stronger to control them. They are the arbiters of their own fate, and upon their own military strength depends their safety from other nations. If the nations would have a general arbitration treaty, the only way that could be enforced, to preserve the peace of the world, would be for them to constitute such an international policing force as would overwhelm any single nation or combination of nations. Thus we would have a peace-preserving power, and again by the doctrine of force.

The prospect of perpetual peace rolls nearer with the lapse of time. The first essential is the creation of an enlightened public opinion against war. When the various peoples assert themselves, as wishing peaceful settlements of all difficulties, three-fourths of the battle will have been waged. But there are yet autocrats and oligarchs in the world whose word is law, and upon whose warlike disposition depends the fate of millions of subjects. Before we can have any general peace agreement, there must be an awakening of these slumbering peoples to a full sense of their democracy. The serfdom of centuries must be stripped from them. They must be born anew as a nation. When will that time come? A more potent influence in preventing war is the power of the financial world. Upon finances the secret of the situatuion rests, yet even here when nations offer tempting terms for war money, they have little trouble in getting it. The Balkan allies had no trouble raising funds. Italy had no trouble financing the Tripolian war. But the really encouraging thing about the whole situation is that there is a most general desire that the burden of armaments shall stop, that the money now spent uselessly in maintaining huge war machines on land and sea shall be spent in bettering the conditions of the working classes. There is not any question as to how popular feeling is heading. But the question is. How can they control the aggressiveness of other nations which prompts a spirit of reprisal, and thus immediately endangers peace. Nations as well as individuals have self-interest that may at any time make it impossible to accept the results of peaceful negotiation.

POSTAL SERVICE AND NEWSPAPERS

A matter of large interest to the newspapers of the Dominion is the action proposed to be undertaken by the Post Office Department in regard to the use of mails for the carrying and delivery of newspapers. The railways claim that they are performing this service for the department at a loss. On the other hand the newspapers differ from this contention, and a joint investigation is being made by the Department and the Canadian Press Association to ascertain the real state of affairs. It will be some time before the report from the experts who are engaged on the work will have their report ready and on which ultimate action will be based.

The Canadian Courier discusses the question, and says—

"There is no doubt that there are anomalies in the relations between the newspapers and the post-office. Speaking generally it must be admitted that a number of Canadian publishers have become merchandisers of white paper rather than publishers of news. Canadian dailies are entirely too large and too bulky. The Saturday issues are extravagant in size. The chief offenders are the daily papers of Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Victoria. In these cities the publishers seem to vie with each other as to who can give away the most white paper. Their advertising rates are so low that their chief advertisers use large spaces, with the result that every issue carries many pages of advertising. Their Saturday issues run anywhere from forty to sixty pages.

"It is difficult to see just how the P. G. M. can remedy these abuses without punishing the innocent as well as the guilty. If he increases the rate from one-quarter to one-half cent a pound on all newspapers going through the mail the smaller publishers throughout the country would be hit harder comparatively than the city publishers who have been the cause of the present difficulties. It might be possible to divide the edition into two parts, and charge a special rate for the news section and a higher rate for the advertising section. For example if a paper consists of forty per cent. reading matter and sixty per cent. advertising it would pay a higher rate on the sixty per cent. On the other hand where a paper is sixty per cent. reading matter, it would pay the higher rate on only forty per cent of its total weight. Some publishers favour this method, but it would be a rather difficult one to administer.

"There is another anomaly for which the newspapers are responsible. There are papers in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, which charge from three to four dollars for city circulation, while they sell their paper at a dollar a year to subscribers living outside the city of publication. For example, it is possible to buy the Montreal Star in Ontario and the Maritime Provinces for a dollar a year, and in some places even less. This gives the Montreal Star, and such other papers as follow this practice, an abnormal circulation, and puts upon the post office a burden which is manifestly unfair. This anomaly can be remedied only by co-operation between the Press Association and the postal authorities."

STUDENTS MAKE USE OF LIBRARY

They are Enabled to Secure Valuable Information

The Peterborough Public Library has proven to be a big boon to the student body of the city. When one notices the large number of students who flock to the institution immediately after school, he is naturally impressed. The librarian has matters so arranged that a student desiring to obtain information for debates, essays, etc., can readily find what he wants. In conversation with several of the students it was freely admitted that they secure much valuable assistance from the library shelves and form the classified references thereon. The scrap book department is one that receives the biggest portion of the patronage.

INQUIRY INTO THE OLD AGE PENSION SYSTEM

Ottawa, Dec. 13—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., West Peterborough, brought up the question of an old age pension system for Canada in the House of Commons and had the committee of last year re-appointed for this session to make further inquiries. Mr. Burnham in bringing the matter before the House, gave a resume of the immense amount of work done by the committee last year and during the recess. He said,

"With reference to the resolution now proposed you will remember that last year's committee on old age pensions submitted to this House a progress report, also evidence which the committee had then taken.

"The report also contained a recommendation to the effect that further information was desired before the committee could finally report on a pension system for Canada, and in obedience to the report of the committee which the House adopted, some 200 communications were received during the recess of parlaiment, also provincial reports from the local governments of Canada, and foreign papers relating to pension systems elsewhere.

"These have been systematically arranged for the convenience of members in a preliminary report or synopsis which is almost completed, and is being printed at this moment.

"This report will show—(1) Expressions of opinion by the clergy and Salvation Army, municipal councils, labor organizations, charitable institutions and private individuals regarding the desirability of a pension system for Canada.

2 Our present systems of organized aid for the deserving aged poor throughout the several provinces of Canada; and

3. The various pension, superannuation and annuity systems that are in operation both under provincial and Federal statutes in Canada.

"In addition government papers have also been received concerning the operation of pension systems in other British dominions and the United Kingdom. Short summaries of systems of other countries have also being prepared, all of which will be ready and printed in the course of a week or ten days, when the members of this House as well as the committee now move for will be supplied with the information which your committee of last session had been unable to gather hitherto owing to prorogation."

MADE BIG HIT AT LAKEFIELD

Ladies' Aid Repeated Program Before Large Audience

The Ladies' Aid of Charlotte St. Methodist Church put on their Olde Tyme Meetynge at Mohawk Crossroads in the village of Lakefield last night and packed the village hall of that place to the doors. The total receipts were $50 of which $20 goes to the funds of the society.

Two 'bus loads of the company drove and the remainder went by train. The performance took well and kept the audience convulsed all the time.

Mrs. G. Bruce Hughes took the solos in the absence of Mr. D. Fleming and Miss Ida Sanderson. Two of the members of the company, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Minorgan, were unable to be present.

The ladies were splendidly entertained during their stay and after the concert were given a banquet when fowl formed the chief portion of the bill of fare.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church.

MORE LOVELY WOMEN WANTED

Does Canada need more women asks the Hamilton Times. Great Britain has a surplus of over a million, and it is proposed to ship that million over here. Do we want them? Of course, we know that there is always a dearth of domestic servants, and those factories who chiefly employ women and girls are often short-handed, and we also know that out on the prairies women are very scarce, and bachelors are leading lonely lives in consequence. But there are districts in Canada, especially in the large cities where women are not regarded as scarce, and it is just possible that if the supply was properly distributed, there would not be such a scarcity of females in Canada as there seems to be. Commissioner Lamb, of the Salvation Army however, appears to think that it is a religious duty incumbent upon the Army to bring these people here. He says—

"It is an Imperial, a moral and a business question. In the British Isles there are $1,350,000 women of adult age in excess of the male population. In the colonies we have the reverse of this situation, for between Canada and the other British possessions there is an immense excess of male population over female. Now, if the destiny of woman is maternity, these women are undoubtedly being denied the fulfilment—at least the legitimate fulfilment—of their destiny. We feel that we are doing an Imperial work in helping them to settle in Canada; that the moral effect of such a movement will be good is obvious while from the point of view of business the effect will also be advantageous."

Evidently the Commissioner intends to make this influx of women a matrimonial venture. At home these women, he says, are denied the legitimate fulfilment of their destiny—marriage and maternity. But there are thousands of Canadian women in the same predicament; and the throwing of a million, or a half a million of females into Canada would be apt to reduce their matrimonial chances. When Canadian girls find such a scarcity of marrigeable young men when single blessedness stares them in the face—why deluge the market with more women, and thus make the competition for husbands, already keen more intense. To be sure if Commissioner Lamb intends to transplant his surplus British females to the Northwest and offer them as wives to the farmers there objection might not be so strong to their immigration. Still we imagine that the Canadian girls should have the first chance, even on the prairies.

INDIAN BOY WAS KILLED

Rifle was Discharged in Scuffle Between Two Lads

Hastings, Dec. 13.—As a result of a scuffle over a loaded rifle, between two youngsters at the Alnwick Indian Mission church sheds, John Henry Smoke, 7 years old, son of Mr John Smoke, was killed instantly by the accidental discharge of the rifle.

A boy named Fleming had been out with his rifle during the afternoon, and in passing the shed where the children were playing after school, stopped to play with them standing his rifle in a corner.

One of the youngsters soon picked the gun up, and Hartley Smoke elder brother of the boy who was killed, tried to get the rifle away, and in the scuffle which ensued the hammer was pulled back by Smoke's clothing, discharging the piece at his brother, John Henry, hitting him in the head and killing him instantly.

The Struggles of a Sculptor.

Auguste Rodin, the French sculptor, had a great struggle with poverty and adverse criticism in his youth. Of an eposide of this early period a writer says: "With that inflexible will and singleness of purpose that never failed him throughout his career the young sculptor set himself to express in clay, marble or bronze his conception of life and art. He used his leisure in working at nighttime in a deserted stable he had transformed into a studio at his wonderful mask of 'The Man With the Broken Nose.' After eighteen months of hard and patient labor he finished this mask and sent it to the salon. It took the hanging committee fourteen years to discover any merit in the work, for it was rejected in 1864 and finally accepted only in 1878."

Literary Coincidence.

Resemblance does not always mean plagiarism. There was no plagiarism certainly in Newman's line, "The night is dark, and I am far from home," though it has been pointed out that it almost exactly reproduces a line in a play printed in 1599. This play is "Two Angry Women of Abington," by Henry Porter, and the original line runs, "'Tis late and dark, and I am far from home."

BUSINESS DIPLOMACY.

What "Sorry, but That is the Rule," Cost One Bank.

"The making of rules for the carrying on of business is a good proposition, but ironclad rules sometimes injure as much as they help," a New York banker declared recently. "Here is an illustration:

"One of the depositors in my concern had saved many years. His bank book, tattered and yellow, was full to the last lines with entries that extended practically since his wedding day. And when the time came that he must take out a new book he asked to save the old one.

"'Sorry,' the teller said, 'but it's a rule of the company that when a new book is issued we must take up the old one.'

"'But you don't understand,' the depositor argued. 'That old book is nothing to you. It is worth a whole lot to me. Many's the night my wife and I have sat up with that, looking over the entries, planning for the future when all the additions we had planned would be made in it. We've seen our little account grow from $10 to $100, from $100 to $1,000.' His voice grew a bit husky. 'Why, that little book has been a sort of Bible to us. It has represented our every hope in life. We have planned by it, dreamed by it. May I not keep it?'

"The clerk smiled sympathetically, but shook his head.

"'I cannot violate one of the ironclad rules of the establishment,' he answered, and the man turned away.

"A month went by, and then one day a check for the man's entire balance came into the bank. He had transferred his account to another institution. The matter came to my attention some way, and I heard the story of the torn and tattered bank book. That night, in the little bulletin which we send around our place, was a notice that was written by me:

"'Hereafter there shall not be an ironclad rule in this bank that is too strong or too heavy to resist breakage. Kindly consult the cashier on matters of diplomacy in the future.'"—New York World.

New York's First Sidewalk.

The first sidewalk in New York was laid by a woman, Mrs. Samuel Provoost, about 1716. She was an importer and merchant and laid the sidewalk for the convenience of her customers. She had importuned the authorities to do it, but they refused, saying it was impossible. After her object lesson paving and curbing gradually came in, but for some time her sidewalk was so famous that people journeyed even from Philadelphia to see it.

AROUND THE WORLD TRIP

The Canadian Pacific Railway has decided upon a new departure in connection with the first sailings of the two new "Empresses," which are now almost completed, and will be ready for service early next summer. The C.P.R. will divert from the ordinary course of sending the vessels round Cape Horn to make a start in the Pacific service from Vancouver, and instead have arranged attractive Around the World trips for their first voyage. A start will be made from Southampton, England, and the Empress of Russia will be the first vessel to sail on April 1, while the Empress of Asia, which was launched at Govan recently, will leave the English port on May 27. Both steamships will call at Gibraltar, Monte Carlo or Villefranche, Port Said, Suez, Colombo, Penang, Singapore, Kong, Shanghai, Nagasaki, Kobe, Yokohama, and arrive in Vancouver about two months later. Arrangements have been made for Canadian passengers to leave from Canadian and American ports in time to catch the "Empresses," and the fare for the round trip, exclusive of the cost of hotel expenses in England and sleeping berths and meals on the Canadian railway, will be $630.10. An arrangement has been made for the inclusion of meals and sleeping berths across the Canadian continent on payment of an extra $29.20. These two vessels are sister ships and 590 feet long, 68 feet beam, with gross tonnage of 16,850, and a speed of 20 knots, and are the first merchant vessels with cruiser sterns, a feature which is specially adapted for speed, and increases the stability, besides securing more room on the various decks. When ocean liners were built so that they could float with two of their compartments filled with water it was considered a great thing, but the new "Empresses" can have on four compartments filled with water and still float. These vessels constitute the very latest improvements in ocean liners, and the initial trips of the "Empresses" offer a unique opportunity to take an Around the World tour, covering the whole distance under the Canadian Pacific flag. Various side trips will be arranged for from the ports of call between Southampton and Hong Kong.

WINTER TOURIST TRIPS

Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern, luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With one change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast, where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m., January 6th, via Detroit, for Palm Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

FACTS FROM FRANCE

France has 9,475,786 houses and 137,676 workshops and factories.

Of the total revenue of France over 70 per cent is derived from indirect taxes.

The records show that 323 valuable pictures have been purloined from the Louvre.

The French army needs 70,000 horses, and the shortage in the country is estimated at over 200,000. The cause of it is attributed to the fact that rapid multiplication of motorcars led to the neglect of horse breeding.

Air Line For Mail.

According to recent reports, mail between Port Huron, Mich., and Sarnia, Ont., will in the near future be transported by aeroplane. A school of aviation, backed by several well-known capitalists, will be established next month, and Lieut. Ruel, an experienced airman, will be the instructor. The flight will be made over the St. Clair River and Lake Huron, the machines being equipped as hydroplanes. The new school expects to [illegible] mail, and the citizens of both towns expect to get letters via the very latest twentieth century improvement, the air line. The proposition will be a paying one in the winter, when the river is blocked with ice, and it is impossible for the ferry boats to cross.

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA

On Monday, January 6, the Grand Trunk Railway will run a special train consisting of day coaches and Pullman sleepers, leaving Toronto 1 p.m., and run through to Palm Beach, Florida via Detroit, Cincinnatti and Jacksonville. Without change of cars. Exceptionally low one way fares, also Winter Tourist Return fares in effect. Consult nearest Grand Trunk agent for full particulars. B. A. FOX BREEDERS.

Wyoming, Ont., Is Home of Canada's Second Oldest Farm.

Widespread interest has been taken in the black-fox farming industry of Prince Edward Island and as a result that interesting venture has come to be identified almost solely with the island province. It is forgotten that Ontario possesses what is with one exception the oldest farm of the sort in America, and has for some years been an active centre of the business.

Of these the most extensive is that conducted at Wyoming, Ont., by T. L. Bowerman. He is the man who cleared $10,000 in the past season on foxes alone. He does not raise the ordinary red fox, whose fur is as yet in this part of the world comparatively plentiful. Only the "silver grays," whose fur is so expensive that only the very wealthy can afford it, are to be found on this Wyoming farm. The story of his success is best told by Mr. Bowerman himself, and contains, in general, the experiences of the other pioneers in this new enterprise.

"Twelve years ago," he states, "while in business as a fur dealer, I saw the possibilities of profit in raising fur-bearing animals. At great expense I secured a pair of silver gray foxes which had been dug out of their den when only puppies. I spent thousands of dollars before I achieved results and in these years I had to withstand the jeers of my farm neighbors who regarded the scheme as nothing less than made. For I must confess that at that time the enterprise did look a failure. But I found that my trouble had been in putting too many foxes together. I used to put two pairs in the same pen, until I discovered that the females are very jealous of each other and if placed together will destroy their young. For, in order to conceal the puppies, the mother fox will bury them in the ground. This, of course, is done with the best of intentions, but always results in suffocation.

The change in method brought results remarkably soon. During the first year I tried putting each pair by themselves. I secured nine puppies, and since then I have found little difficulty but much experience in raising them. I keep the foxes in pens about 60 feet long and 20 feet wide, which are fenced off with poultry netting and this extends four feet under ground to prevent them escaping by burrowing. The "houses" are built of concrete and designed to resemble as much as possible the natural burrows.

In the fall the foxes mate and in 52 days each female will give birth to from four to nine puppies about as large as kittens. And an important factor from a commercial point of view is that in one year these puppies are mature. At the beginning of the winter I buy an old horse, the flesh of which furnishes food for the stock through the whole winter. I have increased the size of my pens from half an acre to five acres."

The pelts are marketed in London, Eng. For a single fox Mr. Bowerman sometimes secures as much as $2,000 and for a pair to be used for breeding purposes he is paid from $4,000 to $5,000. For the past few years most of the foxes of the farm have not been killed for their fur, for, now that the business has been proven a success, many others are anxious to start farms and he finds a ready market for breeding pairs. The animals are killed by chloroform in order that the skins may not be injured.

The remarkable value of a silver fox fur lies in the fact that it cannot be imitated. The color is black, save at the tip of the tail, while around the hips is found the silver-gray band which gives the fur its value. At the root and tip the hairs are black but gray through the middle. Thus is produced a beautiful sheen which even experts are unable to imitate.

The half dozen or so other fox farms in Canada are conducted practically on the same principles as that of Mr. Bowerman. Having for the most part however, been started later than the Wyoming establishment, they have not as yet had time to achieve such results or become as well known. An exception, however, is the farm conducted by Michael Dalton on Prince Edward Island. This was started about twenty years ago and is now proving an unqualified success. In 1910 he made $42,000 from his fur harvest. As in the case of Mr. Bowerman, many of Mr. Dalton's neighbors have entered the business. Another farm of note is that of Samuel Lucas, also situated at Wyoming. In addition, a number of farmers in the Canadian west are experimenting and as other fur-bearing animals may be raised on the same farm as foxes the comparatively new enterprise looks to have a future of great promise. The depletion of the wild fur supply may yet prove a boon to many.

To Fight White Plague.

Three million of the one-cent Christmas stamps issued by the National Sanitarium Association are ready to be placed on sale throughout Ontario. These attractive little stamps serve a triple purpose in that they express the spirit of the holiday season, create an interest in the work done for the cure and prevention of tuberculosis throughout Ontario, and help to swell the funds available for the fight against the white plague. Among the bodies which take an active part in the distribution of the stamps are the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Board of Trade, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Boy Scouts, the School Cadets, the military organizations, the banks, the legal profession, the insurance offices, the fraternal societies, and the Roman Catholic and Hebrew societies.

Hopes to Cure Cancer.

Dr. J. E. Hett, a Berlin, Ont., medical practitioner, noted for his research, has great hope for the triumph of a new treatment for cancer. While in Paris recently, he investigated treatment by Dr. De Keating Hart, and saw many cures which were cured by the application of special electrical sparks immediately after a surgical removal of the growth.

SIR WILFRID WOULD GIVE

"If this is done for Canada it must be done for Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Newfoundland, and I doubt very much if the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will receive much assistance from such a multitude of advisers. Supposing they do not agree or supposing they do agree, how can we pretend to dictate in these matters or take a part?

Must Take Action.

"I do not wish now to condemn the view taken by the Rt. Hon. gentleman. I do not approve it or condemn it now, the subject is too new. But the point upon which I appeal to him and to which I ask the attention of the House is this, that we cannot postpone our preparations for defence until this question is settled. It may take a long time to settle it. Therefore, let it be settled by itself, but in the meantime let our preparations go on."

In a concluding plea for autonomy in the various members of the Empire as the surest means of uniting the British people, Sir Wilfrid said:

"The crown is the great bond, it is the cement which binds together the scattered continents over the whole world. The crown is a purely sentimental bond, but that bond, though purely sentimental, has proven itself stronger than armies and navies, and has shown itself to be equal to all occasions. I do not believe the Empire is in danger; I do not believe it can be cemented by the means suggested by my Rt. Hon. friend, I believe the relations of the different parts of the Empire to the Mother Country are not perfect, or that essentially they are perfectible. You can discuss problems of improvement; there is no reason to discuss problems of existence.

"It is with these views that we approach this subject. And I repeat now in conclusion what I said at the beginning, that I have endeavored to approach this subject on the some plane as my Rt. Hon. friend. I do not question his motives when he says that what he has in mind is the grandeur of our common Empire. I hope he will not discuss my motive when I say that I approach the question in the same spirit. If we differ with him it is because we believe that under existing circumstances our policy is more conducive to what he has in mind than is the policy which he has announced."

The Amendment.

Sir Wilfrid concluded by moving the following amendment:

"That all the words after 'that' be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

"This House declines to concur in the said resolution and orders that the same be referred back to the committee, with instructions to amend it in the following particulars:

"Viz. to strike out all the words after clause 'A' and substitute therefor the following: 'The memorandum prepared by the Board of Admiralty on the general navy situation of the Empire, and communicated to this House by the Hon. the Prime Minister on Dec. 5, shows that several of the most important of the foreign powers have adopted a definite policy of rapidly increasing their naval strength.

"'That this condition has compelled the United Kingdom to concentrate its naval forces in home waters, involving the withdrawal of ships from the outlying portions of the Empire.

"'That such withdrawal renders it necessary that Canada, without further delay, should enter actively upon a permanent policy of naval defence.

"'That any measure of Canadian aid to Imperial naval defence which does not embody a permanent policy of participation in ships owned, manned, and maintained by Canada, and contemplating construction as soon as possible in Canada, is not an adequate or satisfactory expression of the aspirations of the Canadian people in regard to naval defence, and is not an assumption by Canada of her fair share in the maintenance of the naval strength of the Empire.

Regrets Postponement.

"'This House regrets to learn the intention of the Government to indefinitely postpone the carrying out by Canada of a permanent naval policy.

"'It is the opinion of this House that measures should be taken at the present session to give effect, actively and speedily, to the permanent naval policy embodied in the Naval Service Act of 1910, passed pursuant to the resolution unanimously approved by this House in March, 1909.

"'This House is further of the opinion that to increase the powers and mobility of the Imperial navy by the addition by Canada under the above act of two fleet units to be stationed upon the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Canada, respectively,' than by a contribution of money or ships, is the policy best calculated to afford relief to the United Kingdom in respect of the burden of Imperial naval defence, and, in the words of the Admiralty memorandum, 'to restore greater freedom to the movements of the British squadrons in every sea and directly promote the security of the Dominions,' and that the Government of Canada should take such steps as shall lead to the accomplishment of this purpose as speedily as possible.'"

Clause "A" in Premier Borden's resolution referred to above reads as follows: "That from and out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada there may be paid and applied a sum not exceeding $35,000,000 for the purpose of immediately increasing the effective naval forces of the Empire."

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt is having a magnificent green house built in which will be grown nothing but gardenias.

MARQUARD WANTS MERE $10,000

St. Louis, Dec. 13— "New York will pay me $10,000 to pitch ball next season or I will stick to vaudeville," said Rube Marquard yesterday.

"McGraw laughed when I asked for this and offered me a much smaller sum, and inquired what I had done to justify the raise in salary. Can you beat that? It gave me a case of nerves and I told McGraw a few things.

"Gee, but you certainly hate yourself," replied McGraw.

"That remark got my goat and I boosted the ante," continued Marquard.

"I didn't intend to ask for $10,000 until McGraw tried his ardome humor on me. Now he'll come across."

CURLERS WANTED TO HEAR THE SCHEDULE COMMITTEE'S REPORT

As announced yesterday, a meeting of members of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held in the rink Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock, when a large attendance is expected.

The report of the Schedule Committee will be given and general business brought up and discussed. Angus McIntosh is on the job again and with the spell of cold weather continuing, the curlers may expect good ice in the near future.

It is most important that all members attend the meeting Monday night.

The curling season opens on New Year's Day.

SPORTING NEWS

Christy Matthewson is some checker player. Recently he won 13 out of 17 games played.

The Jersey City franchise in the International League may be shifted to Syracuse.

Charlie Liffiton, the old Wanderer player, is going to try for a place on Bruce Ridpath's team, as is also Herbie Birmingham, who was with the old Marlborough Club.

The ladies of Lindsay have organized their curling club for the season; likewise the Orillia ladies.

George Van Horne is going to get out with Kingston Frontenacs again. Reid, Nicholson, Crawford, Williams, a Peterborough boy, and other good material makes Jim Sutherland's heart light.

Marty O'Toole, the $22,500 beauty of the Pittsburg Pirates, is to be married on December 30 to Miss Rose Katherine Heffernan, of Saxenville, Mass.

The league averages have been compiled and will be issued at the Canadian League meeting to-day. Some interesting points are brought out by the season's records, chief of which is the showing made by the various pitchers. McManus and Renfer of Ottawa, and Lynes, of London, are the real leaders, while Billy Rose was Hamilton's best performer, the first ten being Collins, McManus, Renfer, Applegate, Hynes, Donovan, Newashe, Bramble, Tracey and Rose. The work of Bramble and Tracey, both with tail-end clubs, was most remarkable.

Baseball, they say is a business proposition. The fight game, then, must be high finance. A ball player trains six weeks without pay and then travels the 154-game trail from April to October, where only the stars average $5,000 or more. Gibbons and McGoorty split $10,000 by stalling for thirty minutes with less work than a slabman uses in three innings or a third baseman puts over in one game from the schedule. If ball players are supposed to be overpaid, kindly cable in your verdict anent the fighting game.

President McCaffery and Manager Kelly announce that all of the men belonging to the Toronto club will be taken to the Georgia training camp in the spring. Arrangements have been made to place the youngsters for next season. It is more than probable that Infielder Isaacs will be found at Syracuse. He was formerly with the Guelph Canadian leaguers. Pitcher Kubat, drafted from Ottawa, will be turned over to the Elmira club of the same league, while Catcher Brieger, drafted from Wilkesbarre, will also be placed. It is probable that Catcher Frout, of Peterborough, will be carried throughout the season.

Len Dobson represented the Peterborough Club when the Intermediate and Junior O. H. A. schedules were drawn up at Port Hope yesterday.

The Juniors go to Whitby on January 3rd, and Trenton Intermediates play here on the same date.

The schedule for the Senior, Intermediate and Junior series will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Senior players are reminded of the meeting to-night at the rink. The Juniors are asked to meet at the Lyceum.

BARBERS WANT TO PLAY HOCKEY

Have Decided on Some Strict Training Rules

The barbers intend to go out after hockey honors this winter. They have not organized yet, but propose to take a course of physical training. They have already outlined very strict rules, the violation of any one of which will be sufficient to make the offender disgraced and friendless.

Diet is to consist of two oranges for breakfast, a heavy dinner and no supper. To get their wind in order, they will be required to run to and from work every day. Smoking, drinking and swearing are strictly tabooed, and they must hit the feathers regularly at ten o'clock every night. Before going on the ice every player will be searched to see that no razors, scissors, or other deadly weapons are concealed. Whiskey will be the only liniment allowed and on the ice may be applied either externally or otherwise.

Even if these rules cannot be enforced, the local barbers intend to have a team this winter. A meeting will be called soon to organize.

HISTORIC SALONICA.

Turkish City Was the Home of the Young Turk Movement.

Salonica, now figuring prominently in the Balkan war, is the greatest seaport of western Turkey and the point through which the trade of Macedonia passes. Since the Young Turks came into power this Macedonian city has been called the second capital of Turkey. It was the mother and the nurse of the revolution and became the seat of an autocracy that controlled Constantinople itself, and through its agents, every vilayet in the empire.

While the capture of the town by the Balkan allies would be a victory second in importance only to that of the occupation of Constantinople itself yet there is little likelihood that they will be able effectively to use its possession to enforce their demands in the negotiations for peace. Salonica is so wound up with diplomatic intrigue, and so inextricably a part of the fabric of Germanic ambitions that its fate will be the greatest consideration in all Austrian demands.

Ever since the division of the tottering Turkish empire in Europe has been discussed as a possibility, Austria has had her eye on this Aegean seaport, and has directed toward its possession an unwavering course of diplomacy. It has always been recognized that her demands for the right to build a railroad through Novi Bazar, and her annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1908 were but steps to this end. In all of these moves and aims Germany has been in sympathy, since Salonica, at the head of the gulf of the same name, is the nearest and best European point of access to the ports that she is establishing on the coast of Asia Minor, in connection with her Bagdad railroad enterprises.

Salonica is one of the oldest cities of Turkey, and has a long history of conquest and reconquest. It was held by ancient Greece and Rome, and fought over by Byzantines, Turks and Slavs for many centuries. Its various conquerors have left their impress not only in wonderful archaeological remains, but also in the variety of names by which the city is known. There are six of these, and the variety of pronunciation by the different people who trade at the port brings the number up to 22.

It has a population estimated at about 150,000. Of every ten of its people six are Jews. The Greeks come next in number and then the Turks.

The city is divided by one great street, the Rue Vardar (the Via Egnatia of the Romans), which runs parallel with the sea. On one side, ascending the hill to the ancient walls on the north, is the Turkish quarter where the Turks try to live the life of the ancient Turkish regime, untouched by the modernity that presses close around them. This quarter is a haphazard labyrinth of narrow alleys, sombre and dark, with closed doors and latticed windows, with gardens and high walls overshadowed by trees through which shine the white minarets of small mosques. Its stillness is scarcely broken except by the summons to the faithful at the hour of prayer.

From this Turkish quarter, which seems stranded on the hillside, the modern Europeanized quarter of hotels, shops, warehouses, banks and consular offices, turbulent and noisy, descends gently downward to the white quays on the harbor. Greek seamen from the Isles, and Moslem boatmen, in baggy breeches and white turbans, mingle with sailors from all the parts of the world in the loading and unloading of the boats that crowd into the bay. Greeks, Bulgars, Turks, Syrians, Jews, Armenians, Germans and Austrians throng the bazaars that are laden with all the wares of the east.

Down by the sea, where the city meets the country, stands a great, grim circular fortress-like building, a reminder of old Turkey. It is the "White Tower of Salonica," in the dungeons of which thousands of people in the past have been tortured to death. Its history has given the themes for epics that have been sung and recited from the Aegean Sea to the Danube.

Truly Considerate.

A considerate patient had an artery opened by mistake for a vein by a French surgeon in the operation of bloodletting. The woman succumbed not long after to the effects of the blunder, but in her will left the surgeon a small yearly pension, "only to comfort him, but that he should give the rest of his life without doing vivisection any more." A similar historic occurrence is related in the Medical Times of a Polish princess who had had the same experience. She added a clause to her will expressing her forgiveness and leaving the surgeon a small pension to indemnify him for the "loss of reputation that may follow my sad catastrophe."

Remembering the Absent.

"I guess I'm getting into this social game all right," said Mr. Cumrox. "Be polite and courteous, yet formal. That's the idea."

"What have you been doing?" inquired his wife sharply.

"You know them people who sent regrets because they couldn't come to our party?"

"Yes."

"Well, after I saw the party I sat down and sent 'em congratulations."

WOMEN OF FRANCE.

They Are the Bosses Even Though the Men Won't Admit It.

The women of France have been described as the backbone of the French nation. The remark applies more to the middle class than to the aristocracy. The bourgeoise, truly a helpmeet to her husband, is in fact more often a manager and as a rule efficient in that capacity. It is she who carries on the little shop, while her husband, perhaps nominally the head, runs errands at her bidding. Not that the Frenchman would admit that; nevertheless it is the truth. It may be, too, that he has business interests elsewhere as well. Thus he may work for the railway or for some other enterprise.

In Paris one enters an attractive little picture or jewelry shop on the Rue de Rivoli. A smiling Frenchwoman comes forward to cajole the tourist into buying all sorts of fascinating things he really does not want. It is the same at the shops where are sold kodak supplies and postcards—not a man to be seen except as a purchaser.

If one ferrets out a little hardware store and goes in to buy rope or nails or anything of that sort, there may be a man, the proprietor probably, to hunt for just what is desired, but even then his wife sits at the desk, guarding the money drawer and keeping a close watch over all that is happening.

Likewise at the butcher's madame sits in state at the receipt of cash. The case is the same at the grocer's, where she gives out change and keeps the accounts. No mere hireling is to be trusted with such weighty matters.

All customers should stop to greet the mistress of the shop as they enter and must on no account forget their "Bon jour, madame!" on departing. These little courtesies are among the essentials with the French, and if the foreigner forgets or neglects them he frequently fares badly.—London Spectator.

The Human Voice.

One's surprise at the fact that no two persons' voices are perfectly alike ceases when one is informed by an authority on the subject that, though there are only nine perfect tones in the human voice, there is the astounding number of 17,592,186,044,415 different sounds. Of these fourteen direct muscles produce 16,383, and thirty indirect muscles produce 173,741,823, while all in co-operation produce the total given above.

Unconscious Sarcasm.

A Scotch visitor to the Carlyles, in Cheyne row, was much struck with the soundproof room which the sage had contrived for himself in the attic, lighted from the top, and where no sight or sound from outside could penetrate. "My certes, this is fine!" cried the old friend, with unconscious sarcasm. "Here ye may write and study all the rest of your life and no human being be one bit the wiser."

Not to Be Bitten.

Andrew Cherry, the actor, once received an offer of an engagement from a theatrical manager who had not previously treated him very well. "I have been bitten by you once," he wrote, "and am resolved that you shall not make two bites of A. Cherry."—London Telegraph.

Lacked Capacity.

Little Willis, a cherub of seven or eight years, returned home glumly one evening from a party.

"Well, did you have a good time?" his uncle asked.

"No," Willis snarled.

"No? Why not?" said the uncle.

"Because," grumbled Willis, "mother told me to eat as much as I wanted—and—and I couldn't."

29th ANNUAL S.O.E. BANQUET

Members of the Lansdowne Lodge Enjoyed the Anniversary

The 29th annual banquet of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, was held in the hall last evening. Counter attractions and stormy weather brought the attendance lower than former years although there was a good-sized crowd and everybody thoroughly enjoyed themselves. After a hearty supper a flashlight was taken and the entertainment commenced.

Mr. Will Spencer was the special entertainer of the evening and he amused everybody. He gave almost the entire program and was fully capable of doing so. All his numbers were of a comic character, including songs and a few monologues. Turner's Orchestra enlivened the evening with popular airs and was repeatedly encored.

Supreme Vice President Randall, of Toronto, during the course of the evening was called upon for a speech. Mr. Randall regretted the unavoidable absence of several officers of Toronto who had intended to be there. In a brief manner he outlined the course of the S. O. E. from it's formation to the present time, and it's necessity to all Englishmen in Canada. He closed with a few statistics outlining the wonderful progress made.

The remains of the banquet were sold by auction as being the best way to get rid of the edibles left over. The proceeds amounted to $4.67, Bro. C. F. Kitney acted as auctioneer.

HUSBAND CHARGED WITH THE MURDER

Inspector Reburn Places Ceylon Village Man Under Arrest After Long Talk With Young Son---Lad Says His Father Got Angry When Asked Where Mother Was Only Motive Suggested is that Murder was Committed in Fit of Anger.

Flesherton, Dec. 15—A sensation was created in the Ceylon village murder case yesterday when Henry Love, husband of the dead woman, was arrested charged with the crime.

Love made no demonstration when arrested. He was immediately arraigned before Magistrate McGill on a charge of murder and remanded until Monday at one o'clock, when he will appear at the inquest.

The autopsy adjourned yesterday afternoon and will be resumed at one o'clock to-day. The funeral, first set for to-day, will probably be held tomorrow.

Love was granted permission to attend the funeral of Mrs. Love on Sunday and spent last night at his home under police guard.

The arrest was made by Provincial Inspector Reburn after a long interview with Arnold Love, the fourteen-year-old son.

The story of the crime outlined by the boy, is that Mrs. Love was killed some time Monday night, the instrument, it is believed, being the shipbuilders' axe found on the porch of the Love home.

According to Inspector Reburn, Arnold Love says his mother did not appear at the breakfast table on Tuesday morning, and when he asked his father where she was, the father replied that she had gone over to the home of Rev. Mr. McLaren, the Baptist minister, to help Mrs. McLaren. When Tuesday night arrived and she had not come home, the son again made enquiries, and the father suggested that as it was stormy she would probably remain away for the night.

When the son made enquiries again on Wednesday night the father lost his temper. The father and mother used to have little spats occasionally and the father was quite short-tempered at times.

Gibson Collinson, who had visited the home on Wednesday night, remarked on leaving that they would come and make a thorough search of the house on Thursday. It was shortly after this that Love took the lamp and went down the cellar steps. He set the lamp on the second of four steps leading down and peered through the steps into the back part of the cellar, exclaiming "My God, there she is!" and rushed upstairs and over to Collinson's.

It was after the visit to Collinson's and before the two Collinson, Kennedy and Hemphill, came that the boy declares he received his instructions from the father and arranged the story about the strange man.

The only motive that can be suggested for the crime is that it was committed in a fit of anger.

TO FORCE AN ELECTION

Liberal Organ Urges Laurier to Resort to Obstruction.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—The Ottawa Free Press (Liberal) came out last night with a big editorial advising the Opposition in Parliament to force an appeal to the country on the naval question.

The Free Press says: "The representatives of the Liberal party in the House of Commons should regard as their duty to force the Borden Government to the country on its naval policy of direct cash contribution in contrast to the proposed extension of the Laurier naval act so eloquently outlined by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. George P. Graham.

"If ever there were a time when the people of Canada should be consulted, if ever there were a time when they should be allowed to make a pronouncement, it is now, when the deliberate attempt is being made to reverse the principles of responsible government and autonomy which have been built up step by step in the last seventy years.

"Premier Borden in his speech made it abundantly clear that he is opposed to the "hazardous and costly experiment of building up a naval organization in Canada." His permanent policy must, therefore, be one of continued direct contribution. Liberals can safely leave it to the people to decide between that policy and the Laurier project of a Canadian navy, built, manned, maintained and paid for by Canadians in close co-operation with the Admiralty and ever at the call of the Motherland.

"Through Hon. Mr. Graham the Government has been given a fair opportunity of testing public opinion on the two schemes.

"If the Government will bring in a redistribution bill giving that representation to the newer parts of Canada to which they are entitled by reason of their rapid increase in population, the Liberal Opposition are willing to facilitate its passage at once and then go to the people. Such a course, if decided upon immediately, would cause less delay in the carrying out of either one or the other of the proposals than will most certainly occur if the Government persists in an endeavor to force its measure through Parliament."

PRESBYTERIANS IN FAVOR OF GOING AHEAD FOR UNION

General Assembly's Committee Divides Thirty-Eight to Six on the Question of Organic Church Union—Minority Favor Federation.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—After three day consideration of the question of church union the Presbyterian General Assembly's special committee adopted a majority and minority report at St. James' Square Church last night.

Forty-four members were present when the vote was taken, and only six voted for the minority report.

The majority report was moved by Dr. Herridge, seconded by Principal Mackay: "That in view of the large majority in our church voting in favor of organic union and the practically unanimous favorable vote in the other negotiating churches, and in view of the intense desire of all sections of our church that the spirit of Christian unity which obtains between the churches may be continued and deepened, this committee feels that negotiations should be continued, and in view of the strength of the minority in our church which has not approved of organic union as the best method of expressing the unity of spirit which is rapidly growing throughout the church of Christ, and in view of the desirability of the utmost unanimity of action within our church, this committee proceed to consider the suggestions and alternatives remitted to it, and recommend the general assembly as follows:

That the assembly assure the other negotiating churches that the Presbyterian Church fully realises its share of responsibility in the present movement and earnestly desires that the spirit of Christian unity which has given rise to it may be conserved and deepened, and ask the other churches to continue the negotiations because it feels the desirability of the practically unanimous action of all its own members in order that the result of any union entered into may be most happy and far-reaching.

That the union committee be continued and that for the full and fairest consideration of every aspect of the question, proposals be invited from presbyteries from sessions, congregations, and individuals through presbyteries and referred to this committee in order that it may after considering them again enter into conference with the committees of the other negotiating churches with the view of setting before our people a final presentation of the question for their judgment.

That congregations in order to secure the judgment of the church, the findings of the joint committee of the negotiating churches on all such proposals be sent down to presbyteries, session and congregations with the details of the vote already taken and all other relevant information.

The minority report was presented by Rev. Thomas Sedgewick, Rev. R. G. McBeth, Rev. W. G. Brown, Rev. A. T. Love, Rev. Ephraim Scott and Mr. Walter Paul.

It objected to organic union on the ground that it would mean friction and that the recent ballot showed one-third against it and recommended that information be secured regarding the success of federation elsewhere.

HANGING WAS WITNESSED BY MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Prices Ranging From $2 to $5 Were Paid to See Italian Executed.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—Protesting his innocence to the last, and with a smile on his face, Antonio Farduto went to the gallows yesterday morning. Five minutes after Hangman Arthur Ellis had drawn the bolt, he was pronounced dead.

Notwithstanding the appeal of the sheriff that people refrain from selling vantage points in the houses that overlook the jail, fully five hundred men, women and children, witnessed the execution, from $2 to $10 being charged for the gruesome privilege.

Farduto spent Thursday night with his father confessor reciting prayers. He was a mere youth, not having turned his twenty-first year yet. He was convicted of the murder of Louis Hotte, a stonecutter, from St. Laurent, whose body was found in a lane with his throat cut.

GOVERNMENT CHANGES PLANS IN DEBATE ON NAVY BILL

Comment is Rife at Ottawa Regarding Mysterious Marking Time in Debate and a Coup is Looked For - - Hon. Mr. Pelletier and David Lafortune Are Only Speakers.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—Yesterday so far as naval debate was concerned, was apparently wasted. The galleries of the House were crowded again by spectators who, if they anticipated a historic debate, were, in the language of the street, badly stung. The talk was that Postmaster-General Pelletier was to be followed by Dr. Clark of Red Deer and that Hon. George E. Foster would speak.

Mr. Pelletier shortly after three o'clock resumed the debate, and for a little while gave Sir Wilfrid and his followers the traditional "bad half hour."

Then a change came over the House. Mr. Pelletier, usually keen and epigrammatic, began to mark time. He read lengthy extracts from books and papers, many of them dating back to 1775, and his speech went on until nearly time for the recess for dinner at 6 o'clock. There was some merriment when the Opposition put up Mr. Lafortune to reply to the Minister.

The reason for the change in tactics is a mystery, but a Government coup is probably in prospect.

Mr. Pelletier went on to point out how impossible it would be to man war vessels with Canadians. "Just now," he observed, "longshoremen in Montreal are getting $40 to $42 per week. Let me ask my right hon. friend the leader of the Opposition, does he favor conscription of sailors? His policy means conscription.

Mr. Pelletier then produced a bill which had been prepared by the late Hon. R. Prefontaine when Minister of Marine and Fisheries. This bill had been printed at the printing bureau in 1904 for presentation to Parliament, but had never been introduced. The bill provides for the creation of a Canadian naval militia, and according to Mr. Pelletier, provided for conscription. He asked the Opposition how they could face the electors of Quebec with their present program. Their program developed the germ in the Prefontaine bill, the germ of conscription.

Mr. Pelletier then went on to say that the proposals of the Government did not constitute a policy. A policy should not be put into effect without a mandate from the people. But if you choose to call the Government program the Borden policy, was it not cheaper than the Laurier policy? It was cheaper to buy ships than it was to equip, man and maintain them. At any rate we could not man our ships in Canada without enormously increasing our rate of pay, unless we resorted to conscription.

Now, he continued, the English flag and the French flag were entwined in alliance so that helping England would make an Anglo German war impossible and German-Canadians should therefore welcome the Borden plan of a big cash contribution.

David A. Lafortune followed Hon. Mr. Pelletier.

The Government, he stated, had, to use an English term, "funked" the issue. It was natural that they should select one of their number who was notorious for pretence to talk them out of the position in which they found themselves as a result of trying to play politics with a great national and Imperial issue. The Government had realized when Sir Wilfrid spoke Thursday that the Liberal leader sounded the true note and that true Canadians of all [illegible] would respond to that note. Accordingly, they were placed in the humiliating position of having to obstruct their own proposals and keep the Liberals from proceeding with the debate, which they had been eager to do.

Dealing with the naval question Mr. Lafortune said that Quebec was lined up behind Laurier and the Laurier proposals. Quebec was loyal, and had faith and trust in the proposals of Sir Wilfrid. It knew they were sincere, but it had no faith in representations by Mr. Pelletier and men with whom he was associated.

The Laurier policy was the true and manly policy. It was the policy that had made people strong and self-respecting. All the powers, great and little, who had accomplished anything began at home. It was good philosophy as well as good Imperialism. When Canada could span a continent with great railways and build the greatest canal system in the world she could safely tackle the work of organizing a naval fleet.

BRITISH PRESS SAYS BORDEN POLICY MUST COME FIRST

REV. BEVERLEY KETCHEN.

To preach at Knox Church on Sunday when the second anniversary will be observed.

Is the Most Practical and Business-Like Method of the Two.

London, Dec. 14.—"It is not for us to weigh the the different views of Mr. Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, nor is the question an [illegible]," says The London Times this morning.

"The three [illegible] proposed by Mr. Borden cannot be built [illegible] so that the permanent policy [illegible] time to mature, and meanwhile [illegible] arrangements with the Admiralty will secure an immediate development of constructional facilities in Canada such as the Opposition amendment desires. We attach the greatest importance to this point. We believe Mr. Borden has hit upon the most practical and businesslike method of dealing with it. It is of real Imperial moment that the capacity for naval construction should be distributed in many British centres rather than concentrated here, but no Dominion can build dreadnoughts in a day. The natural course is to begin, as Mr. Borden suggested, with smaller craft and work gradually up the scale. That is the Australian policy, and it probably is also what Sir Wilfrid Laurier would recommend. We shall be glad to see an Admiralty order placed in a Canadian yard with the shortest possible delay."

The London Standard (Conservative), noting with especial gratification that Laurier and Borden are as one as to the obligation of Canada towards Imperial naval defence, says: "If it were a question of an ideal policy the future better plan would undoubtedly be that each of the oversea States should police its own waters, the Mother Country securing safety at the heart of the Empire, but Mr. Borden is anxious to meet the requirements of the day, and as a result of his recent conferences with the home authorities he knows better than Sir Wilfrid Laurier can know exactly what they are.

"But," it adds, "even where the opposed parties are inclined to take contrary views as to the most advantageous manner of meeting the obligation which in principle is accepted by both sides, the more thoroughly the points are thrashed out the better it will be for all the parties concerned."

She pushed a diamond locket containing a small portrait of Sammy into her back hair, leaving part of the chain dangling. Then she tried to stuff a large handbag into her stocking.

Mrs. Fosdick found her husband at last, for he made a wild dash to her side, embraced her, called her his wife and defied all the powers of Nevada to tear them apart. He had a brilliant idea. In order to save his fat wallet from capture, he tossed it through an open window. It fell at the feet of one of the robbers as he ran along the side of the car, shooting at such heads as were put out of windows. He picked it up and dropped it into the feed-bag he had swung at his side. Then running on, he clambered over the brass rail of the observation platform and entered the rear of the train, as his confederate, driving the conductor ahead of him, forged his way aft from the front, while a third masquerader aligned the engineer, the fireman, the brakeman and the baggagemen.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Hands Up!

All this time Lieutenant Mallory had been thinking as hard as an officer in an ambuscade. His harrowing experiences and incessant defeats of the past days had unnerved him and shattered his self-confidence. He was not afraid, but intensely disgusted. He sat absent-mindedly patting Marjorie on the back and repeating:

"Don't worry, honey; they're not going to hurt anybody. They don't want anything but our money. Don't worry, I won't let 'em hurt you."

But he could not shake off a sense of nausea. He felt himself a representative of the military prowess of the country, and here he was as helpless as a man on parole.

The fact that Mallory was a soldier occurred to a number of the passengers simultaneously. They had been trained by early studies in those beautiful works of fiction, the school histories of the United States, and by many Fourths of July, to believe that the American soldier is an invincible being, who has never been defeated and never known fear.

They surged up to Mallory in a wave of hope. Dr. Temple, being nearest, spoke first. Having learned by experience that his own prayers were not always answered as he wished, had an impulse to try some weapon he had never used.

"Young man," he pleaded across the back of a seat, "will you kindly lend me a gun?"

Mallory answered sullenly. "Mine is in my trunk on the train ahead, damn it. If I had it I'd have a lot of fun."

Mrs. Whitcomb had an inspiration. She ran to her berth, and came back with a tiny silver-plated revolver.

"I'll lend you this. Sammy gave it to me to protect myself in Nevada!"

Mallory smiled at the .22-caliber toy, broke it open, and displayed an empty cylinder.

"Where are the pills that go with it?" he said.

"Oh, Sammy wouldn't let me have any bullets. He was afraid I'd hurt myself."

Mallory returned it, with a bow. "It would make an excellent nut-cracker."

"Aren't you going to use it?" Mrs. Whitcomb gasped.

"It's empty," Mallory explained.

"But the robbers don't know that! Couldn't you just overawe them with it?"

"Not with that," said Mallory, "unless they died laughing."

Mrs. Wellington pushed forward: "Then what the devil are you going to do when they come?"

Mallory answered meekly: "If they request it, I shall hold up my hands."

"And you won't resist?" Kathleen gasped.

"Not a resist."

"And he calls himself a soldier!" she sneered.

Mallory writhed, but all he said was: "A soldier doesn't have to be a jackass. I know just enough about guns not to monkey with the wrong end of 'em."

"Coward!" she flung at him. He turned white, but Marjorie red, and made a leap at her, crying: "He's the bravest man in the world. You say a word, and I'll scratch your eyes out."

This reheartened Mallory a little, and he laughed nervously, as he restrained her. Kathleen retreated out of danger, with a parting shot: "Our engagement is off."

"Thanks," Mallory said, and put out his hand: "Will you return the bracelet?"

"I never return such things," said Kathleen.

The scene was so painful and such an anachronism that Dr. Temple tried to renew a more pressing subject:

"It's your opinion then that we'd best surrender?"

"Of course—since we can't run."

Wedgewood broke in impatiently: "Well, I consider it a dastardly outrage. I'll not submit to it. I'm a subject of His Majesty the—"

"You're a subject of His Majesty the Man Behind the Gun," said Mallory.

"I shall protest, none the less," Wedgewood insisted.

Mallory grinned a little. "Have you any last message to send home to your mother?"

Wedgewood was a trifle chilled at this. "D-don't talk of such things," he said.

And by this time the train-robbers had hastily worked their way through the other passengers, and reached the frantic inhabitants of the sleeper, "Snowdrop."

"Hands up! Higher!! Hands up!"

With a true sense of the dramatic, the robbers sent ahead of them the most hair-raising yells. They arrived simultaneously at each end of the aisle, and with a few short sharp commands, straightened the disorderly rabble into a beautiful line, with all palms aloft and all eyes wide and wild.

One robber drove ahead of him the conductor and the other drove in Mr. Manning, whom he had found trying to crawl between the shelves of the linen-closet.

The marauders were apparently cattlemen, from their general get-up. Their hats were pulled low, and just beneath their eyes they had drawn big black silk handkerchiefs, tied behind the ears and hanging to the breast.

Over their shoulders they had slung the feed bags of their horses, to serve as receptacles for their swag. Their shirts were chalky with alkali dust. Their legs were encased in heavy chaparejos, and they carried each a pair of well-used Colt's revolvers that looked as big as artillery.

When the passengers had shoved and jostled into line, one of the men jabbed the conductor in the back with the muzzle of his gun, and snarled: "Now speak your little piece, like I learned it to you."

The conductor, like an awkward schoolboy, grinned sheepishly, and spoke, his hands in the air the while:

"Ladies and gents, these here parties in the black tidies says they want everybody to hold his or her hands as high as possible till you git permission to lower 'em; they advise you not to resist, because they hate the sight of blood, but prefer it to argument."

The impatient robbers, themselves the prey of fearful anxieties, broke in, barking like a pair of coyotes in a jumble of commands: "Now, line up with your backs that way, and no back-talk. These guns shoot awful easy. And remember, as each party is finished with, they are to turn round and keep their hands up, on penalty of gittin' 'em shot off. Line up! Hands up! Give over there!"

Mrs. Jimmie Wellington took her time about moving into position, and her deliberation brought a howl of wrath from the robber: "Get into that line, you!"

Mrs. Wellington whirled on him: "How dare you, you brute!" And she turned up her nose at the gun.

The anxious conductor intervened: "Better obey, madame; he's an ugly lad."

"I don't [illegible] being robbed," said Mrs. Jimmie, "[illegible] I won't endure rudeness."

The robber took his need in despair, and he tried to wither her with sarcasm: "Pardong, mamselly, would you be so kind and condescendin' as to step into that there car before I blow your husband's gol-blame head off."

FORGIVE SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN.

—Dec. 15.—Matthew 18:15-35.—

"Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God, for Christ's sake, forgave you."—Eph. 4:32.

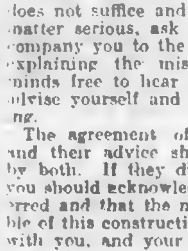
TO learn to-day's lesson well means a blessing for life to every true Christian. The lesson relates specially to the consecrated, the members of the Body of Christ, the Church, of which He is the Head, although application may be made by others with profit.

The Master's rule for His followers, If a brother injure you, go to him alone with the matter, striving to reach an understanding. The probability is that misunderstanding is all that there is of it. But if this does not suffice and you consider the matter serious, ask two others to accompany you to the offender, without explaining the mission—leave their minds free to hear the case and to advise yourself and the person injuring.

The agreement of these brethren and their advice should be followed by both. If they disagree with you, you should acknowledge that you have erred and that the matter is susceptible of this construction. If they agree with you, and your opponent refuses to heed their counsel and persists in doing you injury, and you still think it of sufficient importance to trouble the Church with the matter, you are then at liberty so to do. The Church's decision is to be final, binding upon both. The one refusing to hear the Church is to be treated as an outsider, not in the sense of doing him injury, but abstaining from appointing him to any position, or honor in the Church, until his course shall be changed. How simple the Divine direction; what a blessing would come from following it!

Forgive "Seventy Times Seven."

St. Peter put a hypothetical question, of how many times a brother might trespass and ask forgiveness and yet be forgiven — would seven times be the limit? The Master practically declared that there could be no limit, that any brother confessing his fault and asking forgiveness must be forgiven, if it should recur 490 times. Forgiveness is obligatory when asked for. We must not be afraid of following the Master's direction, assured that His wisdom has not misdirected us.



"The master had compassion on him."

Then our Lord gave a parable, to illustrate this matter, in respect to the Kingdom of Heaven class—the Church in the present embryotic condition. A certain king had a reckoning with his servants, and squared up all accounts. Amongst others, one owed him ten thousand talents. His master commanded him to be sold, and his wife and all that he had, until payment should be made. But the servant fell down at his master's feet and besought him to have compassion on him and he would pay the debt, and the master had compassion on him and discontinued any further prosecution.

The servant thus released went out and found a fellow-servant who owed an hundred pence. He took his fellow-servant by the throat, saying, "Pay me the hundred pence thou owest." His fellow-servant fell at his feet and besought for mercy, saying, "Have patience with me and I will pay thee all." But he would not delay, and cast him into prison till the debt should be paid. The matter reached the ears of the master, who called him and said, "Thou wicked servant! I released thee from the penalty of thy debt because thou didst entreat me; thou shouldst also have had mercy upon thy fellow servant, even as I had pity upon thee. And he was angry with him and delivered him to punishment till he should pay all that was due."

An Important Lesson Here.

What is the lesson? The lesson is well expressed in our text. We should be kind one to another, tender-hearted, as God in Christ forgave us—and continues to forgive our trespasses day by day. The trespasses of others against us are trifling indeed in comparison to our obligations to the Lord. We should therefore be very willing to forgive all who ask us—until seventy times seven. In thus exercising mercy we will be copying the Divine character. The influence upon our hearts and lives will be ennobling.

"Pay me the hundred pence thou owest."

As we remember and appreciate our own weaknesses and blemishes, it will make us sympathetic with the brethren and with all mankind. And mercy, generosity, sympathy, God delights in. Such as cultivate these graces of the Spirit will be pleasing in the Lord's sight, and they will thereby be fitted and prepared to have a share with Jesus in His Throne and glory, for that great Messianic Kingdom will be established for the very purpose of showing mercy unto all mankind who will return to Divine favor and blessing, under clearer knowledge and with the assistance that will then be afforded.

We are not to understand this parable to refer to Divine forgiveness of original sin. The sin of Adam is not forgiven except in the Divine way—through Jesus—through faith in His blood.

Very Conservative.

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Biny Brown, of Tenecape, N.S., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

The Smelt.

It is the opinion of the true gourmet that of all marine pan fish there is none to compare with the smelt (Osmerus mordax). This primary rank is its own by reason of its delicacy and delicious flavor, and when fried a light brown in very fine breadcrumbs and served with melted butter there is none that disputes its pre-eminence. Its delightful flavor, however, as well as its peculiar odor, is evanescent. Like the mackerel, it cannot be too fresh. It is from its odor that the smelt derives not only its familiar but Latin name—an odor so aggressive of sliced cucumbers that if its presence be manifested only to the sense of smell people are often deluded into such supposition. This odor is not marked except in the freshly caught fish and disappears in the cooking, giving place, however, to a fitting resurrection of the smelt to an olfactory sense still more savory and delightful.

Did You Ever Consider

How much your earning ability represents? What is your income? Is it $1,200, $3,000 or $5,000 per year? How much capital at 6 per cent. interest would it require in order to equal your present income? $50,000 at 6 per cent. interest equals $3,000 per year.

Your earning capacity is your family's capital. How long would it take to accumulate a sum which, at interest, would provide sufficient income, in the event of your death, to support your home and educate your children?

You, no doubt, believe that if you do not die you will be able to create an estate. Statistics show that the majority of people die leaving nothing. Are you positively sure that you will live to create this estate?

Life is uncertain—men apparently in the best of health die suddenly. In order to make provision in the event of your death the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will, by your depositing a comparatively small amount each year for a definite number of years, pay to your wife or child, or estate, immediately upon receipt of proofs of death, a certain amount of money. This offers you the means of creating an immediate estate in the event of your death.

The two illustrations herewith will show the benefits of a policy of Life Assurance as issued by this Company.

POLICY No. 263187
LIFE R. D. 20
Issued October 10th, 1911. Assured died June 26th, 1912. Annual Premium $113.00
Sum Assured - - - $5,000.00
Premium Paid - - - 113.00
Return over Cost $4,887.00
The Assured's Expectation was 36 years 9 months, but he lived only 8 months.
Consider the SMALL payment to the Company and the LARGE amount the Company paid to the Beneficiary

THE FOLLOWING IS AN ACTUAL RESULT of a matured policy on the life of a resident of Montreal
POLICY No. 31602
ENDOWMENT 20 R. D. 20
Issued 1891 Matured 1911. Age 25 Amount $2,500. Annual Premium $110.15
Cash received at the end of 20 years - - - $3,079.95
Total Payments to the Coy. 2,203.00
Return over Cost $876.95
Which means the return to the assured of every premium paid to the Company with over 3 per cent compound interest.

Easy to Get Rid of Dandruff and Stop Hair From Falling

Parisian Sage Hair Tonic Will Make Any Person's Hair Luxuriant and Fascinating.

LOOK OUT FOR IMITATIONS

Give Parisian Sage a chance to drive every particle of disgusting dandruff from your hair.

Give it a chance to soak into the hair roots and stop the hair from falling out.

You won't be sorry if you do—you'll be dandruff dirty all your life if you don't.

And when you get a bottle of Parisian Sage you are not throwing any money away, because it is guaranteed to eradicate dandruff; to stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It is not a dye and does not contain poisonous lead; if you think lead that colors the hair is safe to use ask your doctor or druggist.

Parisian Sage kills the dandruff germ because of its peculiar power to get to the roots of the hair, right where the germs thrive and multiply.

Besides killing the germs it supplies nourishment to the hair; stops it from falling out, and causes it to grow thick and luxuriant.

Parisian Sage is a most delightful hair dressing not sticky or greasy. A large bottle for only 50 cents at druggists department stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. W. Madill druggist, guarantees it.

DELICIOUS PIES.

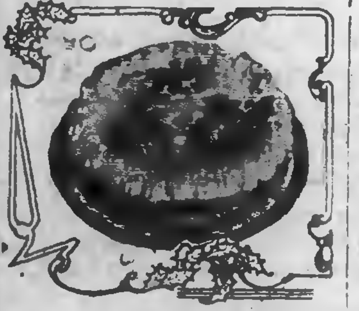
Creams and Custards Instead of Mince For the Christmas Spread.

The Christmas pie need not necessarily be a mince. Custards, particularly pumpkin custards, are nice, and they are less indigestible than those of mince.

Custard or cream pies may be attractively finished with meringue. On this a decoration may be applied through a pastry tube, the meringue being slightly colored for this purpose.

To make the crust take two tablespoonfuls butter, one and one-half tablespoonfuls sugar and the yolk of one egg, cream, butter and sugar. Beat the yolk well and add. Then add a small cupful of flour. Press into a pie pan with the back of a spoon and bake until a light brown.

Fill with the following cream: One pint of milk in a double boiler. Mix together three tablespoonfuls of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of flour. Add to the boiling milk and cook until thick. Then add the yolks of three eggs. Cook for awhile, then take from the fire and add one tablespoonful of vanilla. Cover with a meringue made of the well beaten whites of four eggs and a little sugar. Cover the pie with this and brown nicely in the oven.



FANCY MERINGUE PIE.

For those who find the ordinary mince pies indigestible this is a good substitute:

Take one cupful cooked raisins, one cupful apple sauce, one-half cupful of vinegar, one-half cupful of water, one-half cupful cracker crumbs, one cupful sugar, one-half cupful molasses, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and allspice. This makes filling enough for three pies.

Instead of using an egg in a pumpkin pie, use a heaping teaspoonful each of flour and cornmeal, and it will baffle an expert to detect the difference in taste or color.

Art Is Long Distance.

An American artist walked out of his house, closed the door with unusual care and descended the steps.

In his hand was a satchel containing his paints and brushes and a change of socks.

At the gate he met a bright eyed, ragged little boy carrying a basket filled with scarlet strawberries, purple dewberries, crimson radishes, pale young onions, verdant spinach and glistening lettuce from a huckster's wagon near.

"Vegetables?" the boy asked. "Berries?"

"No," replied the artist, brushing past. "I am on my way to sunny Italy to paint water color studies of picturesque peasant children."

And he ran for the boat.—Newark News.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—There continues to be a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat and the prices bid were unchanged to 1½d to 3d higher, but notwithstanding this fact the volume of business done was small. EIGHTEENTH CENTURY LIFE.

A Bath Was a Matter of Some Moment in Those Days.

These brief extracts from the letters of Elizabeth Montagu, the "queen of the bluestockings," throws a curious light on eighteenth century life in England. She was suffering from a swelled lip. Promptly the great Dr. Mead prescribed a blister to her back. She writes:

"I am better than I was; but, my mouth not being yet perfectly reduced, I have got a fresh blister upon my back. Well may it bend with such a weight of calamities. I have sent for my bathing cloathes and on Sunday night shall take a souze. I think it a pleasant remedy."

Apparently in 1741 a lady could not take a bath even on Sunday night and in the privacy of her chamber without her "bathing cloathes."

Mrs. Montagu writes again: "My lip is not entirely reduced, though I have been blistered twice, once blooded and have five times taken physic, have lived upon chicken and white meats and drunk nothing but water. I have suffered great disappointment about the warm bath which I am advised to try, for the bathing tubs are so out of order that we have not yet been able to make them hold water."—

An English social worker reports that one-third of the girls in the dressmaking and millinery trade in her country receive no pay at all. They are classed as apprentices, but they do a great part of the actual work.

To red-haired women and certain blondes, the browns so fashionable this winter are most becoming.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

THE IMPERIAL PROBLEM

The speech by Hon. J. D. Hazen following Sir Wilfrid Laurier's announcement on the naval matter contains two or three assertions of no little consequence. Mr. Hazen says that the $35,000,000 contribution for three Super-Dreadnoughts is not Canada's permanent policy. That policy will be a matter for careful consideration, not only with the Government of the British Isles, but possibly with the Governments of other Dominions as well. The question of permanent defence will be worked out on proper lines, and one element will be the question of the representation which Canada and the other overseas Dominions will have in naval affairs, and in the affairs of the British Empire as a whole. Canada will not have to borrow money for the three Dreadnoughts. The money will be obtained out of the revenue of Canada without adding a dollar to the national debt.

Thus several of the allegations made by enemies of the Borden contribution fall to the ground of their own weight. Canada will not borrow the money, it will not pay $1,250,000 annually as interest, as compared with the British cost of maintenance of $3,000,000. Canada will give the three Dreadnoughts as a voluntary contribution to strengthen the British navy, and having done her immediate duty to the Empire, will set about evolving a permanent policy that may involve the creation of a local navy as well as the construction of more warships for use by the Admiralty direct. The Borden Government may be relied on not to plunge Canada into as close a proximity to European militarism as Britain herself is, but the same time, Canada will do her duty to the Empire, and share her proper proportion of the burden of its defence. The next ten years are going to be fraught with the greatest importance to Canada and the Empire, in the fixing of the groundwork for the Imperial relations that must follow. Some of the Canadian Liberals already are at work protesting that an invasion of Canadian autonomy, of Canadian independence of action, is threatened. Nothing could be farther than the real facts. The problem of Imperial consolidation and an Imperial council that will give the Dominions a voice in the issue of war and peace is a hard nut to crack. For the reason that as soon as there is a centralized control of affairs, there is a lessening of local power, the exponents of autonomy and self-government are jealously watching for any infringement on the local side of the case. The London Daily News, the Liberal paper, says that the addition of a Canadian to the Imperial Defence Committee means that that body will have more power and weight that it has hitherto had. It will have to have more than a merely advisory capacity. That, then, infringes upon the right of the British House of Commons to control the affairs of the nation. Already there is so much cabinet control that the powers of the Commons will be further impaired. In the Dominions some autonomists profess to be afraid that the Imperial Defence Committee, containing representatives of the over-seas Dominions, will assume control over matters that must naturally be within the responsibility of the local parliaments. The Borden policy is certainly going to bring out what there is in the cupboard with reference to Imperial co-operation. It is a question with a sharp edge on both sides, and will have to be handled carefully.

RAILROAD VESSELS AND PANAMA

Mail and Empire.

The New York Tribune admits the strength of Sir Edward Grey's presentation of the British case against the Panama Canal toll discrimination as embodied in the new law exempting United States coastwise traffic from tolls. But it argues that if the rules and regulations of the canal are to apply equally to "all nations," including the United States, then if the United States decides to exclude its own railroad-owned vessels from the canal such exclusion must apply to the railroad-owned vessels of all other nations and therefore to Canada. It says "the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty certainly sanctions our doing it in the case of all other nations."

The point here involved is extremely important and far-reaching. If the doctrine that any domestic regulations the United States chooses to make respecting the use of the canal by its own vessels must apply in equal measure to all other nations be once admitted, then the United States would by its powers of domestic legislation be able to bar out any class, or type, or kind of foreign vessel. As it is admitted that no objection can be raised to the United States subsidizing its own mercantile marine, or any part of it, the United States would have no difficulty in striking a deadly blow at any particular class of foreign shipping using the canal merely by denying the use of it to the corresponding American vessels, and compensating the owners therefor.

It must be quite obvious that the "entire equality of all nations" contemplated by the framers of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty will not lend itself to any such principle. In the treaty the United States "adopts the following rules substantially embodied in the Suez Canal convention." No discrimination as to class of vessel or nationality has ever been recognized in Suez Canal administration. The very phrase "entire equality of all nations" certainly carries the implication that there shall be no discrimination of any kind, subject only to that which any nation may legitimately exert upon its own vessels through domestic action. Sir Edward Grey has reserved the right to make further protest against the barring of Canadian railroad-owned vessels if the need arises, and certainly no such pernicious sophistry as the Tribune's advances can or will be accepted by this country.

MUSIC FLOURISHES IN NOVA SCOTIA

Everything Has Favored Its Growth on the Seaboard

The story of the rise and development of the art of music in Nova Scotia would take us back to the earliest settlement of the province. The Acadians were a music-loving people; the first English settlers were a cultured race; the German element was richly endowed; there was music in their spirit and in their blood; the Loyalists were the cream of the American colonies, possessing in many cases more than ordinary refinement; while the Scottish and Irish settlers brought with them that Celtic characteristic, the love of the lyric muse.

Halifax was the first English musical centre of British America. When Cornwallis founded the town in 1749, there came with him a brilliant young Irish officer of dragoons, Richard Bulkeley, as his aide-de-camp, a gentleman of culture and refinement, and one who as King's Messenger had a large and varied experience. Bulkeley was the first choir leader and organist of St. Paul's Church... Richard Bulkeley may well be called the father of music in Nova Scotia. There was an organ in St. Paul's as early as 1769, which gave place later to a fine instrument, built in Spain for a South American convent, and brought to Halifax as a prize of war. This organ is still in the province, at North Sydney, and is in constant use.

The influence of the church in the promotion of musical culture is not always given a true place. There is nothing invidious in the statement, that St. Paul's Church, Halifax, has occupied a pre-eminent place in promoting the study of good music. As early as 1769, an Oratorio was performed in St. Paul's Church, to the great delight of the music-lovers of the day. The Philharmonic Society was composed of the leading citizens, augmented by officers of the army and navy. The society had the exclusive privilege of occupying the organ loft of St. Paul's in [illegible]. There are some interesting touches in the parish records. In 1770 the clerk was censured by the vestry for leaving his place in the three-decker pulpit, and going to the gallery to sing anthem. The organist was also blamed. the quaint, minute runs he "discovered a light mind in the tunes played called voluntaries, and he was ordered to play solemn tunes as voluntaries, and Psalm tunes in a familiar manner without unnecessary graces." This was evidently a live subject for a long time, for in 1799 it was resolved: 'That the anthems as now performed during divine service are perfectly consistent with the true spirit of devotion, and that the same be continued with the approbation of the commanding officer."

There is still preserved as a treasured heir-loom of St. Matthew's Church, the famous "Church Fiddle," which was used in the eighteenth century to lead the singing in the home of the Presbyterians and Congregationalists long known as St. Mather's Church.—Canadian Courier.

A BIG BANK VAULT

How Its Doors Were Opened by a Message From the Sea.

THE MAGIC OF AN AEROGRAM.

A Dilemma From Which a Great Financial Institution Extricated Itself in Double Quick Time by a Rapid Exchange of Wireless Dispatches.

To the ordinary layman, too busy or too indifferent to bother his head with scientific matters, wireless telegraphy is somewhat of a mystery. In a general way he knows that by it messages are flashed through the air over oceans and mountains, but he does not realize to what an extent and in what varied roles the aerial magic plays its parts in daily life. In "The Wireless Man" the author, Francis A. Collins, narrates an instance in which aerograms averted a possible financial mishap. He writes:

"A secret, even a very big one, may be intrusted to the wireless man and flung halfway across the Atlantic with complete safety. There was the case, for instance, of the president of a great New York bank who sailed for Europe without leaving the combination of the locks of the vaults. As a rule, the combination is a single word, and the secret is known only to two or three. In this case, by an oversight, there was no one left ashore who knew the key. The money and securities of the bank were very safely locked away, and hours of work would be required to force the locks of the safe deposit vaults.

"The bank president's steamer had sailed at 6 o'clock of a summer's morning to catch a favorable tide, and when the bank's officials tried to open the vaults at about 9 o'clock the steamer carrying the secret was upward of two hours at sea. A hasty examination showed that there was but one way to open the vaults, short of breaking into them, and that was by getting the code from the president, serenely unconscious of the troubles ashore. To delay opening the vaults would, of course, be a very serious matter. If the piles of money were not ready behind the barred windows promptly at 10, the fact would be known within a few minutes throughout the financial section. A serious run on a bank has been started for a less cause.

"In the old days, before the cable, the secret could not have been gained in less than two or three weeks at best, or until a message had reached the president by mail and returned across the Atlantic. The cable alone would have cut the delay in two by catching the traveler on his arrival on the other side. Meanwhile the bank officials, hastily summoned to a conference, had acted quickly. The wireless stations had been notified, and a message explaining the situation was flashed from the top of a high building in New York and from the Sea Gate and Nantucket stations. All this was the work of less than ten minutes.

"Now the combination word used to lock up these millions in gold, currency and securities is, of course, not a piece of information to be flashed broadcast along the Atlantic coast. It would be known to scores of people, even if the stations receiving guarded the secret with the utmost care. The officials therefore impressed upon the president the importance of sending his message in the private code used by the bank in its important cables. As the hour for opening the bank approached the officials waited with an impatience which may be imagined.

"The wireless message was handed to the bank president as he sat at breakfast well out to sea. It was now exactly 9:16. There was a sudden vacancy at that particular table. After one glance at the aerogram the president, realizing the situation to the last detail, rushed madly for his stateroom in search for his code book. A few moments later a dignified elderly gentleman rushed into the wireless booth, demanding at any cost that his message be given the right of way. He got it.

"An aerogram expressed in an unintelligible cipher was soon being flashed with the full power of the apparatus. The wireless stations along the coast had been ordered to expedite the message in every way and were waiting anxiously for it. It was read by two stations on the Long Island coast and repeated hurriedly to New York. A few minutes later the clerk at the telephone in the bank was carefully writing out the strange jumble of letters and translating them into intelligible English. The clock pointed to twenty minutes to 10, the bank's opening hour, when the great steel door swung noiselessly open on its hinges and the day was saved."

THE PATIENT, FRIENDLESS SPIDER

He's a Pretty Good Insect In Spite of His Looks and His Webs.

Aside from snakes, there is probably no living thing which can look to mankind for friendship with so little hope as the spider, yet when the spider is fairly brought to trial it is rather hard to prove anything against him except his appearance and a few cobwebs.

Apart from furnishing an example of industry and patience from which we might well profit, the spider feeds exclusively upon freshly killed insects, all of them being of the kind denounced by sanitary authorities, the housefly being its favorite quarry.

As the actual destruction of a few hundred houseflies means that several hundred thousand that would otherwise have spent gay lives in transmitting typhoid and other diseases will not come into existence and as almost any spider should be able to account for as many as 800 in the course of a summer, to say nothing of stray mosquitoes and black gnats, we surely owe him something more than a flap with a slipper when we happen to catch him out of his hole.

A spider can bite, of course, but he seldom does except in self defense, and even then the bite is not much worse than would have been received from any one of the several hundred mosquitoes he has probably dined upon or will, if let alone. In the light of present scientific knowledge the story of the spider and the fly that was invited into the pretty parlor does not cause such a surge of sympathy for the fly as it once did.—Harper's Weekly.

Good Immigrants Coming In.

The Ontario Government has been fortunate during the past year in its selection of immigrants for farm lands. Over 3,000 men from the old country were placed on farms in the province, and in the majority of cases they gave satisfaction.

About 90 per cent. of those who were assisted by the Government in paying their passage to Canada have paid back their debt. The Government made an appropriation of $10,000 for this purpose a year ago, all of which was used. The Department figured on a loss of 15 to 20 per cent. on account of failing to keep track on those who have borrowed money to pay transportation, but this year there was an exception.

GOVERNMENT BLUE BOOKS AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

At first thought nine persons out of ten will be apt to wonder in what manner Parliamentary Blue Books can be said to have any connection with library work, and it would be a very safe assertion to make that there are not twenty, probably not ten, persons in Peterborough, of the many hundreds who make use of the Library who are seized of the importance of the matter contained within the uninviting exteriors of these volumes. But these same books, lightly received and lightly laid aside in many and many a public offices in Canada contain the very essence of the affairs of this Dominion, for they embody the reports of all these departments that like so many well oiled cogs, help to run the complex machinery of our growing national economy.

Through the kindly offices of our late member, Mr. Stratton, and our present member, Mr. Burnham, the Peterborough Library is in possession of as complete a set of Government publications as can be obtained and that our past and present Provincial members have likewise obtained for us the right to receive all Ontario Legislative publications. Nobody need remain in ignorance therefore of any Federal or Provincial matter on which he desires enlightenment.

NORMAL SCHOOL STUDENTS ENTERTAINED BY FACULTY

The students of the Normal School were entertained last evening by the Faculty at a most successful "At Home."

The program consisted of three parts, the first of which was a number of readings and musical selections by the following: Miss Florence Scott, Miss Rochester, Miss K. Leary, Miss Steinhoff and Dr. Park. Miss Rannie was accompanist. After the program refreshments were served.

Later all repaired to the Library, where a Christmas tree stood, loaded with gifts. Each student received a gift of a more or less humorous character. The decorations were all representative of the Christmas idea,

Rev. Beverly Ketchen at Knox Church to-morrow

The Rev. Beverly Ketchen of Hamilton who preaches in Knox church to-morrow morning and evening is well known in this city. In his early ministry he was assistant to Dr. Torrance, and won for himself a large place in the hearts of the people. During his stay in Peterboro, Knox Church was a mission of St. Paul's, and he will find a most flourishing cause when he visits Knox Church tomorrow. The congregation will celebrate two years of active service in their new church, and by their generous gifts at both services they hope to make a substantial contribution towards the reduction of their mortgage. Rev. Mr. Ketchen is now pastor of one of the strongest congregations in Hamilton, to which charge he was called when leaving Peterboro. He is regarded as a forceful eloquent preacher and no doubt will be listened to by large congregations.

KILLED BY CAR

Toronto, Dec. 14.—While crossing King street, near Portland, behind a west bound car at a quarter to ten yesterday morning, Mrs. Bird, sixty years old, living at 2 Morrison avenue, was struck and instantly killed by an eastbound King car. Robbie Chamberlain, her six-year-old grandson, was running across ahead of her, and was struck by the same car and sustained a severe gash over the left eye.

The east bound car is said to have been traveling at a rather high rate of speed, and the rails were very slippery from a light snowfall, which might in some way account for the accident. The woman's body was dragged 100 feet by the car. For twenty minutes it lay on the roadside waiting for the police patrol.

The little boy was removed to the Western Hospital, where his condition is not considered serious.

BRYCE DID NOT INTERFERE

New York, Dec. 14.—Ambassador Bryce mentioning reciprocity at a dinner of the peace centenary committee here last night, said:

"With the matter, however, I had nothing whatever to do, except as a mere intermediary, I may say a letter-carrier, between the two Governments. The questions involved were entirely questions for the United States on one hand and for the Canadian Government on the other, in which my only duty was to transmit messages from the one Government to the other without attempting in any way to influence either."

A BOY'S CHRISTMAS LETTER

"Dear Mr. Santa Claus, I want
A warship painted white;
I want a cannon an' a sword,
All polished up so bright.
I want a lot of soldiers, too,
With horses, flags an' guns,
An' I would like a train of cars
That whistles when it runs.

'I want the biggest rockin' horse
That gallops all along;
An' I would like a tooter horn
That makes the loudest tone.
I want a drum that's very big,
Also a pair of skates;
An' I would like some butterscotch,
Some sweets and chocolates.

'I want an axe, a box of tools,
To build a house an' shed;
A kite, a motor-bicycle
A reindeer an' a sled.
I want a magic-lantern too
A houseboat painted red;
A jumpin' jack that goes hisself
[illegible] a piggie in his bed.

'I want a top, a bat an' ball,
An' way books full of fights;
An' I would like a Christmas-tree
All full of candle lights.
Oh dear! I want a lot of things,
But I'm too tired to write;
That's all that I can fink of now,
So, Santa Claus, good-night."

THE FESTIVAL OF THE HEART.

By the Lord Bishop of Ripon in The Quiver Magazine

Christmas Day is the festival of the the home. It behind all things there is the love of God. Then the love which banished pessimism from life [illegible] thoughts and give tenderness to [illegible]. The love which took our manhood into God has made all [illegible] dear with a sweet sense of sacred kinship. Christmas becomes the festival of the heart—the great human festival.

It is the festival of the heart. It is love coming to earth. The very season gives an emphasis to the thought.

The keen frost, the bitter wind that lashes the face and searches out the weakness of the clothing, the early darkness which sends its gloom along the streets and robs earth of her colors, make one think wistfully of the warm fireside, the friendly greeting, the loving thoughtfulness, the welcome of the home! Everything outside the house conspires to make us value all that is within the house; Nature turns a cold shoulder and a chilly eye upon us, and we remember that it is not in beauty of scene, or wealth of color or magnificence of foliage that life's best things are to be found; we begin to appreciate the kindness and constancy of heart that makes fair [illegible] sweet and that keeps a warm place [illegible] when all outside is dark and cold.

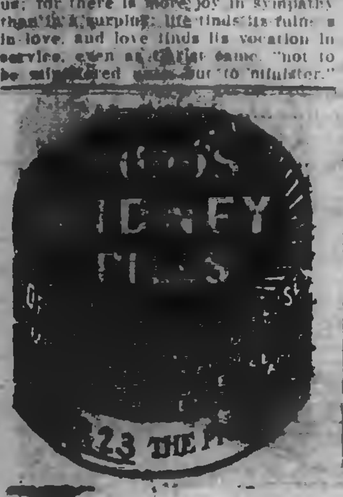
Spring brings the festival of hope when prophecies of beauty and fullness may be read in fields and hedgerows. Summer brings the feast of the eye when earth is arrayed in her richest apparel. Autumn brings us the feast of industry when fruit is gathered in honor of work. But with the dark days of winter comes the feast of the heart, when love grows warm and shines bright, when happiness meets us, not in springing flowers or heavy sheaves, not in outward gifts, but where love has hidden her, behind the home door which shuts out darkness and coldness, past unkindnesses and intrusive fear.

Christmas is the human festival; its very season compels us to realize that in the long run our greatest happiness is not found in material things—in fruits of the soil or riches that can be handled and counted, but in the affections of the soul, in kindness, self-forgetfulness, sympathy, and love.

In realizing this we are lifted far above the range of our ancestors' thoughts. Yet let us not forget how easily we may fall under the yoke of material things. Let Christmas preach against our follies and our prevalent [illegible] for in spite of preacher, poet and prophet, in spite of the sad and bitter experiences of life, we, obstinate and stupefied, toil for accumulations of money, large property, dazzling possessions, lordly titles [illegible].

But year by year Christmas preaches to us of the joy which came to the manger and the gladness which can [illegible] to the humblest home. A little thought might save us from great and prolonged sorrow. Look round the earth, and say whether of all created things man is not the greatest we know. Where, then, shall man, placed in the garden of the world, find his greatest joy? He may find joy in all things that bloom—in flower and fruit, in grass and tree, in river and sky; but keener than the joys which these can yield is the joy which comes from his own kind. The best can yield best joy to the best. Man can bring to man a gladness which no flower or fruit of earth can bring.

Not therefore in accumulated possessions, but in our fellow-men, will our truest joys be found. The old pictures which show us the mother bending over her babe, while the wise and rich are unfolding their treasures, preach to us the dear human gospel of Christmas Day. Our best joys can be found, not in riches, but in realizing our kinship with the men and women and children who are round about us; for there is more joy in sympathy than in a surplus: life finds its fulness in love, and love finds its vocation in service, even as Christ came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister."



MONEY SURPRISES

By Charlotte Brewster Jordan

It was Christmas morning, and the Boyd children were eagerly awaiting the breakfast bell.

"I believe I like Christmas breakfast best of all," exclaimed Bob, "for there we always find Grandpa Grey's money surprise! It just gets funnier and funnier every year! Oh, I wonder what it will be this year!"

"It can't be nicer than it was last year, when we found those cunning little walnut-shells tied with bright ribbons on the tiny Christmas-tree centrepiece," said Jean. "When I opened mine, and saw the shiny little gold piece lying on the soft blue cotton inside, I thought they were the very dearest nuts I'd ever cracked!"

"I liked the teeny red stockings best, with the twenty-five gold pennies inside," said chubby little Ted, who had not yet studied mental arithmetic. "It seemed lots more with all those shining moneys!"

"But they weren't so funny as some of the other things," said Bob, laughing. "I can just see grandpa now, fishing up dollar bills that Christmas out of that little tub, and grinding them through that toy wringer into our hands! We thought that the best kind of laundry work!"

"I thought those little pill-boxes were funnier yet," said Myra. "I have kept mine until now—but it is empty! Don't you remember, each one held twenty glistening nickels that just fitted in the little box? And on the lids, you know, grandpa had written:

"When sad or ill,
Just take a pill.
'Dr. Santa Claus.'"

"How about little 'Mary Christmas,' though?" piped up fat little sue. "She looked awful pretty, standing at each of our plates in her red crape-paper frock, with her little pointed kerchief made of a folded dollar bill. And when we took that off, you know, there we found she was a lovely stick of peppermint candy. Mary was a sweet child."

"Oh, I don't care much for such girly things!" said canny Kenneth. "I liked best those little toy trees stuck into red spools by our breakfast plates! Didn't we have to hunt, though, to find that money! I looked under my tree and on it, and broke into the little trinkets hanging on the tree, and just couldn't find it! I had about given it up because grandpa said it was such a hard-times year, when he came laughing along, pulled the little tree out of its spool base, and there was a greenback wrapped tight round the stem—just as slick as slick! He must go to an awful lot of trouble for us youngsters! Do you remember those bright-colored balls of twine he gave each of us years ago? When we commenced unwinding the string, every few feet out would pop a coin! We must have been a funny-looking crowd, hollering and bumping into each other as we were scampering round after our money! And how grandpa did laugh! He must have sat up half the night to wrap all those pieces in the balls. I wonder what he will spring on us this year?"

"He does go to a great deal of trouble to give his grandchildren some extra Christmas fun with his gifts," said mother, who had just come in, "but I think that he enjoys your enjoyment quite as much as you do. While I do not know just what he has in mind this year, I feel pretty sure that your grandfather will keep up with the times."

Just then the breakfast chimes sounded, and scampering down pell-mell, with Merry Christmases to grandpa, the excited children rushed to their places. There they found, standing like sentinels beside each plate, clothes-pin ladies dressed in greenback gowns of fashionable scantiness. Grinning little faces had been painted on their little round clothes-pin heads and their 'standing-room-only' gowns were joined by a lacing of cord, to which was attached this verse:

At this merry Christmas breakfast
I thought it might not hurt
To appear in all the glory
Of my new sheath skirt.

After the laughter had given place to the happy eating of breakfast, Jean went to grandpa's chair, and slipping her hand in his, whispered, "Mother said you'd keep up with the times, grandpa, and I just think this stylish little lady here is the best ever!"

Devilled Turkey Legs

Put 1 oz. of butter in a saucepan, and when melted add a tablespoonful of made mustard, a teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, and salt to taste. (Some people add a little curry powder or paste). Divide the legs at the joint, take off the skin, and make several incisions lengthways in the meat. Rub in the devilling mixture with the back of a teaspoon. Dust with cayenne, and squeeze lemon juice over. Place on a buttered gridiron and cook over a clear fire. Serve very hot with a piece of butter on each joint. The last pickings of the turkey and ham may be potted, and the bones of both provide excellent stock for soups.

One man is missing and eleven persons injured as a result of a fire yesterday which destroyed an apartment building in Pittsburg, causing a loss estimated at $200,000.

The American Hotel, at Niagara Falls, Ontario, was destoyed by fire. Loss $7,000. All the occupants escaped without injury, but several firemen were overcome by smoke.

An intoxicated man named Almas had a narrow escape from death under an auto in Hamilton last night, and had it not been for the powerful searchlights in front of an auto a fatality would have ensued.

Solving the Fuel Problem.

The patent Canadian householder is getting pretty well used—not to say resigned—to the possibility of frequent strikes at the mines sending the price of coal up to a new high figure.

Naturally the high price of fuel hits the poor hardest. They may not worry when a jump in the price of precious stones is announced, but they do some hard thinking when the dealers in black diamonds announce another increase in price.

Dr. E. Williams, chairman of the Board of Health, of London, Ont., has been thinking about poor people's fuel problem, and has evolved a scheme to help them. He suggests cutting down many of the trees in that city and giving them to the poor.

"London has twice too many trees," said Dr. Williams, in discussing his proposition. "We could easily dispense with half of them. In my opinion, light and air are much to be preferred to the shade. Walk down any of the streets, and you will see that we have too many trees. Coal is going to be expensive, and scarce. Why not cut down a large number of these useless trees, make them into firewood, and supply it to those who need it? I think that would relieve the situation greatly, and incidentally benefit the city as much."

RUBY GAY A WINNER

Highest Honor to be Won Awarded at Guelph

Guelph, Dec. 14—The grand championship, the highest honor it is possible to win by a horse-breeder in Canada, was yesterday awarded at the Provincial Winter Fair to John Boag & Son's "Ruby Gay," a handsome mare bred by John D. McMillan and imported from Scotland. It was a notable win. The judges were Messrs. Wm. McKirdy of Napinka, Manitoba, and George Charlton, of Duncrief, Ontario. Mr. McKirdy declared that he had only seen one better Clydesdale mare on the American continent, and that was "Harveston Baroness," which recently won the grand championship of the United States, having been brought from Scotland at a cost of $5,000.

"Macaroon," exhibited and owned by T. H. Hassard, Markham, is the grand champion stallion of Canada, winning the honor yesterday afternoon at Guelph. He won the championship of Scotland last year.

WALTER MILLER FOR MONTREAL

Local Boy Has Had to Turn Down Good Offers

Walter Miller, after a short visit with his parents, left for Montreal last night to join the Wanderers Club of the N. H. A.

Miller makes the eastern trip with plenty of confidence that he can deliver. He signed up for the Wanderers last September, at a high figure, and since then has had cause for regret as several other clubs asked for his signature at terms above those for which he signed.

BOY HAD MENINGITIS

Was Not Ill-Used by Stepmother as Alleged.

St. Catharines, Dec. 14.—At the inquest last night touching the death of the nine-year-old son of J. H. Reynolds, whose body was exhumed on Wednesday, evidence was given alleging that he had been beaten, chained up in the yard by his stepmother, and otherwise ill-treated, but the post-mortem report of Dr. MacMahon and Dr. Greenwood showed that the boy had suffered from spinal meningitis. He was almost four feet in height and weighed but 35 pounds.

Three neighbors testified to having been attracted to the boy by his appearance, taken him into the house and fed him. The boy was unquestionably hungry they declared.

The father stated in answer to the crown attorney, that the boy had been insured for $70. He had insured all his children.

The dead lad's stepmother was not present on account of illness. The inquest will be continued next Monday night.

MADE THE CLERKS WORK.

A Senator Wanted Information and Found a Way to Get It.

"Congress makes lots of unnecessary trouble for the government clerks,' said a veteran employee, "but the worst case I know of occurred some years ago. A certain senator asked the comptroller of the currency to tell him how much stock a certain man had in a national bank. He was informed that such information was regarded as confidential and could not be given out.

"'We'll see about that,' said the senator, who was plainly disappointed and displeased.

"Several days later he secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the secretary of the treasury to furnish the senate with the names and holdings of the stockholders in all the national banks in the country. He really wanted to know only the interest of one man in a bank, but he knew that he couldn't get a resolution of that kind through the senate, so he included the stockholders in all national banks.

"It took the entire force of the comptroller's office several weeks to prepare the information, and when it reached the senate nobody paid any attention to it except the author of the resolution, and he merely looked at the mass of papers only long enough to see about the man he was after and then tossed the papers aside. It was an immense lot of work for nothing."—Washington Star.

A Wonderful Toy.

Perhaps the most wonderful toy in the world is owned by a Russian prince, who lavished a fortune of $50,000 on a mechanical theater. The stage is fitted up with every accessory in the shape of scenery and machinery that modern skill has devised, and the actors are figures as large as life, all dressed as sumptuously and appropriately as their living prototypes. The prince's repertoire covers almost all the most popular operas, and it is only necessary to press a button to set the whole marvelous machinery in motion. The actors make their entry on the stage and play their varied parts with appropriate gesture, while a number of phonographs supply the vocal parts in the voices of the leading operatic singers.

THE LURE OF GOLD

Romance and Tragedy of the Old Bonanza Trail.

A ROAD TO WEALTH AND CRIME

It Led to the Richest Deposits of Gold, In a Relatively Small Territory, Ever Discovered—Days of Strenuous Life and Frenzied Lawlessness.

The Bonanza trail began at Fort Laramie, Wyo. It ran east of the Owl Creek mountains, west of the Big Horn mountains, in a northwest direction to Livingston and Bozeman, then forking to the present Helena and Virginia City. In war and Indian department annals it is known as the Bozeman trail. Immediately, however, it was given the more romantic name, and for the best of reasons. It led to what were the richest deposits of gold, in a relatively small territory, that the world had ever seen.

Out of Alder gulch and Last Chance gulch, within 200 miles of each other in Montana, was taken, in ten short years, considerably more than $500,000,000 in pure gold. It was anybody's fortune, and the wonderful luck of the California gold diggers a few years before roused men to brave every hardship for these prizes.

It did not matter at all that these gulches were 2,000 miles from the nearest railroad and that other gold fields were far easier to reach. Here was the great El Dorado, and without a qualm the gold seekers hurried into the unknown territory, defying Red Cloud and every other Indian, outlaw, renegade and holdup man.

How many lives were sacrificed along this trail to wealth will never be known. All that is certain is that there never was another chapter in the world's history like this. The long road into the mysterious country and the settlements of mining camps grew up almost in a single night. There were only five men in the little party when Bill Fairweather "washed" the first pan in Alder gulch and made a discovery even more wonderful than any in the palmy days of California or even in the later era of the Klondike.

Two years later Alder gulch, at one of the Bonanza trail's two ends, was among the most picturesque places in the country. The world was ransacked for men and women to give performances at the theaters, to offer free entertainment to the patrons of the various resorts. The gold hunters, gorged with prosperity, wanted amusements. Fine restaurants were opened and food brought in at great expense from beyond the seas. The smallest money was a twenty-five cent pinch of gold dust, taken from a pouch. It bought less than a copper cent does in any part of the United States today.

Meantime an unending stream of people poured into the new country. It is estimated by some that 90,000 in all took the trail at Fort Laramie.

The days of the trail were those of frenzied lawlessness, and many are the picturesque stories that have come down. Over the big road disputes about cards were of daily occurrence. The man who started an argument did so with the knowledge that it was his life or the other man's, for he was calling into question the "honor" of the "shark." Swindlers sold "mines," fought with their proposed victims and killed without compunction.

Armed robbers ran off stock, stole horses from one class of immigrants and sold them to another. As the horse was the sole means of transportation and valuable beyond human life, "hoss stealing" was set down by the "districts" as a crime punishable by death. There were few courts, and such as there were were miles from the trail. A jury would hence be at once impaneled among those present, the man tried and if found guilty hanged to a tree without ceremony.

Hotels flourished and were prosperous beyond imagining, for every one spent money, and there was much flaunting. In the higher grade establishments beverages were served in cut glass; champagne was common. Every resort was crowded with people. The newcomers frequented these places in quest of information, paid 25 cents for a glass of beer made from barley grown by the ex-Confederate soldiers at Bozeman and sold to the Virginia breweries for 8 cents a pound, and not enough could be received to supply the demand. Table board cost $7 a day for the very cheapest, and if one slept in a chair in the hotel lobby at night, when the rooms were all rented, he paid $1.50 for the privilege.

Gold was the only medium of exchange. A pinch of it, between the forefinger and the thumb, as has been said, counted 25 cents. There would be a tendency with some men to take just a little bit more. When that tendency was noticed in a man he was given hours to leave town—and it was seldom over two hours. The wise man did not stand on ceremony or protest—he "vamoosed," in camp vernacular.

The newspapers of the city sold for 25 cents a copy, red hot from the press, and full of news of lynchings, new diggings, "clean ups," "hold ups," "bad men" and gossip of a breezy character. Ham and eggs to order cost $2.50. Eggs were worth 50 cents apiece and an ordinary meal of deer or buffalo meat, with potatoes or coffee and bread, was never less than $1.50. A man was very poor to get down to fare so coarse as that.

It made no difference what a man might have been back in "the states;" if he was "on the square" in Virginia he was accepted at par.—F. J. Arkins in Harper's Weekly.

Some of the new muffs resemble pillow slips.

SHE LIKED TO BORROW.

Give Her a Fair Chance, Too, and She Was Willing to Pay Back.

Day by day as Mrs. Worth's household and kitchen furniture and groceries slowly disappeared she saw that the moment approached when a final stand must be made. One morning when Jimmy, son of the borrower, appeared at the back door with the statement, "Ma wants the wash boiler," Mrs. Worth determined to act.

"You tell your ma that when she brings back what she has already borrowed I will lend her the boiler."

In a little while Jimmy reappeared.

"Ma wants to know what she has borrowed."

"There are a quart of flour," began Mrs. Worth, "a peck of potatoes, a cupful of sugar, a can of coffee, a half pound of lard, some onions and butter and spices, the screwdriver, the hatchet, a pair of scissors"—she paused, recollecting—"three spools of thread, a paper of needles and"—

But Jimmy was gone. Presently he rapped on the back door again.

"Ma says for you to write 'em down I forgot some of 'em."

Mrs. Worth sat down with pencil and patiently made an alphabetical list of all the articles she could remember.

Jimmy took the list and disappeared. A half hour later he once more appeared at the back door and announced:

"Ma says if you'll lend her the wash boiler to carry them in she'll bring 'em home."—Youth's Companion.

Geographies to Blame.

Ask any hundred English men, women or children what is the name of the capital of Russia and every one of them will reply, "St. Petersburg." It may be a small matter, but in point of fact the proper name is "Petersburg." The English are the only folk who insist upon the "Saint." The city was founded by Peter the Great and is named after him. It is quite true that Peter was one of the most extraordinary men that ever filled a throne, but no one would have been more astonished than himself at being dubbed a saint. He neither lived nor died in the odor of sanctity, and it is hard to find out how it became the English fashion to miscall the splendid town he founded.—London Mail.

What It Cost.

In a little town in England not long ago the entire family had been at church and the young minister was coming home to dine with them. While at dinner they were discussing the new stained glass window a member had given. "It is a most beautiful piece of workmanship," said one, "and must have cost a great deal of money." "Do you have any idea how much?" "I really do not," replied the minister, "but far into the hundreds, I should imagine." "No, it didn't," said little Harold. "I know how much it was. It cost 14s. 10d." "Why, Harold, how do you know anything about it?" "Because, mamma, it says at the bottom of the window, 'Job 14, 10.'"—London Globe.

Pretty Poor Singers.

"Why doesn't your wife sing to the baby when it cries?"

"We've found out that the neighbors would rather listen to the baby."—Mother's Journal.

A Great Plant.

"What do you think will finally be selected as our national plant?"

"Well, it is dollars to dimes it will be the mint."—Baltimore American.

"FEEBLE STOMACH

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascliar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that I would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

No remedy for biliousness, indigestion, headache, sick stomach, or constipation that compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse substitutes. Sold in 25c. boxes. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Publish My Letter The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

LETTER NO. 4311

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Don't be cajoled into receiving anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." Large bottles 50c., trial size, 25c. Sold everywhere or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

DOES LOCAL OPTION HURT A TOWN?

Prominent Speakers Will Tell the Facts Here To-morrow.

The members of the Citizens Committee who are conducting the campaign in Peterborough in favor of Local Option, are arranging to bring to Peterborough prominent business men from other towns throughout Ontario where Local Option is in force to tell the people of this city just how Local Option has succeeded with them. Among the speakers will be the mayors, police magistrates, merchants, lawyers and others well qualified to discuss this subject.

The first of this series of meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, to-morrow, Sunday, afternoon, at 4.15, when a meeting for men only will be held. An evening meeting, open to men and women will be held, starting at 8.15 sharp. The principal speaker at both meetings will be Ex-Controller F. S. Spence of Toronto, one of the best posted authorities in Canada on this subject. He is an eloquent and forcible speaker. At the afternoon meeting the men present will be given an opportunity to ask questions on any phase of the subject concerning which they may desire information. One of the features of both meetings will be solos by Ruthven Macdonald, one of Canada's leading baritones. The singing by the audience will be under the direction of J. M. Greene.

In spite of all the statements that are made about local option hurting the municipalities where it is in force, the fact is that for two years past the liquor interests have been unable to win a single repeal contest in Ontario, although voting was possible in 244 constituencies. Last year in 134 possible contests in Ontario attempts to repeal local option were made in only three municipalities and all three attempts failed. This year contests are possible in 463 municipalities but the liquor interests are attempting to repeal local option in only 20 places and in almost all of these they seem sure to be defeated.

A feature of the Local Option Campaign to-morrow will be the addresses to be delivered by laymen in a number of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches in the city. Those who purpose attending the meetings in the Opera House to-morrow afternoon and evening should be on hand early.—Adv. 1d.

ANNUAL DANCE OF "NOT OUTS"

Nearly Three Hundred Young People Were Present

The annual dance given to the "Not Outs" was held in the Conservatory Music Hall last evening. The evening was one of the most enjoyable of the season, nearly three hundred of the younger set of the city participating. No efforts were spared by the committe in charge to make the affair a success. Most delightful music was furnished by the Misses Gladman and the floor was in perfect condition. Refreshments were served and the dance was over shortly after 12.30. Hoopers catered.

REPORT ON WORK OF HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Twenty Three Patients on List of District Nurse—Seventeen Are Tubercular—Treasurer's Statement Shows Balance of $3,922.89.

The Executive of the Peterborough Health Association gave its first annual report yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Association in the City Council Chamber. The report was a summary of the work that has been carried on during the past year and was received and adopted without any criticism or comment. It was presented by Mr. J. W. Bennet. The Treasurer's report given by Mr. Macleod showed a balance on hand of $3,922.89. The report was referred to the auditor.

A motion was put through authorizing Miss Sparkhall's salary being mailed to her each month and any other expenses incurred by her in her work being paid on the certificate of the chairman of the respective committees.

The report of the Women's Auxiliary was read by Mrs. W. R. Travers and adopted.

Rev. James Rollins moved that a vote of thanks be conveyed to the ladies of the Association for the excellent assistance they were rendering.

HAS MADE 227 CALLS.

In the unavoidable absence of Miss Sparkhall the district nurse, her report was read by Dr. McPherson. There is a slow but steady increase in the number of patients on Miss Sparkhall's visiting list. Twenty-three patients were on her list, 17 of which are tubercular. She has made 227 calls up to date, 75 of which were made this month. The report outlined her methods of carrying on her work and she expressed her pleasure at the courteous manner in which she was always received.

Dr. Neal presented the report of the Nurses Supervision Committee. The latter contained a clause stating that the chairman had interviewed the majority of the clergy in the city with a view to having them set aside a Sunday devoted to sermons on Tubercular work in the city.

Regarding the work of the District Nurse the chairman said that many people come to him requesting the assistance of the nurse. He cited cases whom the nurse had visited. Wherever the nurse had called she had made a very favorable impression.

President W. H. Moore said that it gave him a great deal of pleasure to hear such excellent reports and Mr. Fowell said that to his mind the Association could not have picked upon a better nurse.

Several important amendments to the regulations governing the Association were brought in by Mr. J. W. Bennett and discussed by those present. The new suggestions chiefly aimed at reorganizing the rules in respect to the Women's Auxiliary. A Committee was appointed to consider this work and also to be a nominating committee to bring in names of new officers for the Association.

The Committee is composed of the following who will bring in their report on December 20th:

Messrs. E. A. Peck, Dr. Neal, (Convenor), Dr. McPherson, Dr. McNulty, W. H. Moore and Mrs. Kendry, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Macleod and Mrs. Grant.

Music and Drama

David Belasco takes a gloomy view of the theatrical situation in America. He thinks there is a crash coming. This is his size-up of the show world situation:

"Theatres have sprung up all over the United States like mushrooms. Desire to build theatres has become a mania. There are too many theatres in New York and too many in Chicago. As the huge bubbles blown by promoters of imaginary cities have broken, causing loss of millions of dollars, so will the theatre bubble burst. No other end is in sight. The rush to build theatres has lowered the class of productions. All theatres can't have successes. The demand for plays is so great that authors have ceased to write for literary and dramatic attainment, but write for money alone. The quality of play and writer has sadly degenerated in the last two years. In the next year or two, however, I predict that the drama in America will be greatly improved. The speculative theatres will have been turned into buildings for other purposes, and the producer will have a larger field of writers to select from. He can use more discretion."

Actresses are looming up large in the public eye these days.

Lillian Russell is starting out on a lecture tour to teach women how to be happy, wise and beautiful.

Lulu Glaser was arrested for alienating the affections of her leading man, Thomas Richards, and has a $50,000 damage suit on her hands.

Annette Kellermann, "the divine Venus," married her manager, Jas. E. Sullivan.

Blanche Bates wedded a Denver Police Commissioner and magazine writer and will retire.

Mrs. Fiske has been "filmed" in "Becky Sharp" for the moving picture houses.

Gaby Deslys is being exhibited to the bald-headed row at $5 per.

"The Typhoon" is to be seen in London, England, shortly, where it will be produced by Lawrence Irving.

Kathryn Kidder, whose principal claim to distinction on the American stage lies in the fact that she was the original Mme. Sans Gene in this country, is to give a vaudeville version of the play.

Paul Armstrong's new drama, "The Escape," was tried out in Los Angeles and seems destined to meet with success. It is the story of a woman born in low circles gradually developing through love of the higher things in life.

Thompson Buchanan's new play, "Man's Way," is to be produced by E. C. Bowes, the husband of Margaret Illington. It is likely to be renamed before it sees the light of day. Ann Murdock is to play the leading feminine role.

Dramatic criticism by Ed. Howe in E. W. Howe's monthly: "A play was presented in New York lately without a woman in the cast. I hope it will succeed; I hope other plays like it will succeed. I am so tired of hearing Maud Adams and Billie Burke."

The two 30-minute plays that Charles Frohman has received from J. M. Barrie are ready for performance. One of the plays is called "The Little Policeman," and the other—not quite 30 minutes in length, as one can guess from its title—is called "Half Hour."

Miss Mabel Wilber, the Sonia in "The Merry Widow" company, spent last summer in Paris and brought back with her several of the most attractive gowns ever seen on the American stage. She also obtained a novel design of the picture hat of the historic Gainsborough pattern. This newest mode of ladies' headgear has been the means of reviving the fashion of the large hat, and the milliners in the larger eastern cities are exhibiting varieties of the newest "Merry Widow" picture hat in their display windows.

Arrangements were made for the grand production of Handel's "Messiah" by the Executive Committee of the St. George's Choral Society last night. The last practice for this year will be held next Tuesday but none on Christmas Eve, or New Year's Eve. A social will be held during the festive season for members and their friends.

FRITZI SCHEFF,

the famous operatic star, who will appear at The Grand next Tuesday, Dec. 17, in "The Love Wager." This is the most important attraction that has ever been announced for the local playhouse.

GATTY SELLARS' ORGAN RECITAL

On his last visit to Peterborough Gatty Sellars, the famous English Organist, attracted the largest audience to St. Paul's church that ever attended a similar entertainment in Peterborough, and it is expected he will be equally successful on his return visit. His program stands unique, as he now performs entirely from memory, and includes compositions from the great composers. Between numbers he will relate some of his unusual experiences on this great tour. Cathedral Chimes will be used with the organ. Popular admission price, 35 cents. Murray street church, Tuesday evening, Dec. 17th. 25

MANY FRIENDS AT FUNERAL OF THE MURDERED WOMAN

Line of Vehicles at Last Rites Over the Body of Mrs Hannah Love Extends Over a mile—Floor in Hall Sagged and Panic Was Narrowly Averted.

LOVE STILL DENIES GUILT

Flesherton, Dec. 16.—A procession of cutters and buggies one mile long and extending most of the way from Ceylon village to Flesherton was the most eloquent phase of the parting tribute of respect paid by the surrounding community yesterday afternoon to the memory of the late Mrs. Hannah Lucille Love, who, it is charged, was murdered by her husband last Monday night. Hundreds of people from east, west, north and south assembled in Ceylon to view the remains of deceased and to attend the service held in the little Orange Hall on the hill.

While relatives and friends by tears and words of respect expressed sympathy with the bereaved ones, the husband, Henry Love, who is charged with cutting off a useful and happy life, languished in the county jail at Owen Sound awaiting his trial. He pleaded to be allowed to attend the obsequies of his wife, and on Friday night Provincial Inspector Reburn and High Constable Cook arranged with Crown Attorney John Armstrong of Owen Sound to let Love remain in Ceylon over Sunday for the inquest to-day, but on Saturday morning the crown attorney changed his mind and ordered that Love be taken immediately to the jail in Owen Sound. High Constable Cook accordingly took Love to Owen Sound on the noon train Saturday.

Another tragedy was narrowly averted during the service in the Orange Hall yesterday afternoon. The building is an old one and the floor is shaky. Shortly after the corpse had been carried in and deposited on the platform at the front scores of people crowded into the hall. All the seating space was occupied. Suddenly the floor at the back of the hall commenced to sag under the unusual strain. Two or three women rushed for the door and this started the rest. A minor panic seized all those inside, and a wild rush was made for the door. "Sit down, there is nothing wrong," many men shouted to quiet the excited women. Order was restored and the service went on.

Love Shows No Anxiety.

Owen Sound, Dec. 16.—Henry Love of Flesherton, who was arrested on Friday evening for the murder of his wife, Hannah Lucille Love, on Monday night, was brought to the county jail here Saturday by High Constable Cook of Flesherton, who arrested him.

According to Constable Cook, Love betrayed no anxiety on his arrest, beyond a few hot words at the moment he was taken into custody. He quickly realized the futility of protest and since then has maintained an impassive stolidity, talking little and smoking incessantly as the opportunity has been afforded him.

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO GREAT BRITAIN PASSES

Whitelaw Reid Was Soldier, Journalist and Diplomat—End Was Peaceful.

London, Dec. 16—Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador to Great Britain since 1905, died at his London residence, Dorchester House, shortly after noon yesterday, from pulmonary oedema. The end was quite peaceful. Mrs. Reid and their daughter, Mrs. John Hubert Ward, were at the bedside.

The ambassador had been unconscious since nine o'clock in the morning, and at intervals during the previous 24 hours he had been slightly delirious as a result of the drugs administered to induce sleep.

The Hon. John Hubert Ward, who with his U. S. wife had been at Dorchester House continually since the ambassador's condition became serious, notified the U. S. embassy when the patient began to sink and when death occurred he sent word to the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, the Queen Mother Alexandra at Sandringham and the officials of the court.

Almost immediately the King sent his equerry, Sir Harry Legge, to express the condolence of himself and the Queen. During the afternoon messages conveying the warmest sympathy were received from the Queen Mother Alexandra and the other members of the royal family, the court officials, members of the Government, and of the various embassies and legations, while many who had heard the news of the ambassador's death, or who had seen the flags at half-mast on Dorchester House, called at the embassy.

The body will be sent home, and will probably be interred in Sleepy Hollow.

There will doubtless be a memorial service in one of the great cathedrals in London, in addition to services in some small chapel for the members of the family and the staff of the embassy. The Government also will in all probability offer the use of a warship in transporting the body to New York.

Whitelaw Reid was in his seventy-sixth year, having been born Oct. 27, 1837, in Xenia, Ohio. He became a newspaper writer at an early period of his life and never broke off his connection with the public press. He was editor-in-chief of The New York Tribune for many years and afterwards became proprietor of that journal.

In the meantime, however, his career had been a varied one. He served in the first campaigns of the civil war in 1861, and then as war correspondent, in which capacity he was present at many of the important battles. At one time he was librarian of the House of Representatives; at another he was a cotton planter in Louisiana.

Later in life he went into the diplomatic service and was sent to France as U. S. Minister in 1889, remaining until 1892.

He came back to the United States to run as the Republican candidate for vice-president on the ticket with President Harrison in 1892.

Some years later, 1897, he was sent as special ambassador to Great Britain to attend the celebration of the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria.

He was chosen in March, 1905, U. S. ambassador to Great Britain in succession to Joseph H. Choate. Since that date his popularity in England, which was always very great, augmented from year to year, for he identified himself with all the social, educational and other movements of the United Kingdom.

King George's message to President Taft said: "It is with the deepest sorrow that I have to inform you of the death of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, at noon to-day. As your ambassador to this country his loss will be sincerely deplored, while personally I mourn for an old friend of many years standing, for whom I had the greatest regard and respect. The Queen and I sympathize most warmly with Mrs. Whitelaw Reid in her heavy sorrow."

"Your Majesty's sad news of the death of Mr. Whitelaw Reid," replied the President, "has just reached me. Mr. Reid's death is a loss to both countries, for his services as ambassador was exceptional in the closer friendship that he secured between them through his own personality. His intimate knowledge of both countries, his profound respect and love for England, entirely consistent with the highest loyalty on his part to this country, gave him peculiar influence for good in his great station. I sincerely thank Your Majesty for your message and your expressions of sympathy and respect."

BOURASSA ON THE NAVY

Nationalist Leader Ridicules Both Policies.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—"Sir Wilfrid Laurier wishes at all costs to add to Mr Borden's tribute of gold that of blood," says Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, in the course of an article in Le Devoir Saturday, in which he unmercifully flays the naval proposals of both the leaders of the Government and the Opposition.

Mr. Bourassa says Sir Wilfrid Laurier desires to fill the three dreadnoughts Mr. Borden wants built with a human cargo, food for guns.

Later on he says both policies are fatal, humiliating and pernicious. Sir Wilfrid's proposals are equally as ridiculous as those of Mr. Borden, for the leader of the Opposition stands up in the House and tells the representations of the people that their ships shall be built, manned and officered by Canadians, when he knows full well that even now it is impossible for the Niobe or the Rainbow to secure sufficient complements of men.

Summing up his remarks, Mr. Bourassa, says:

"The sky is clearing and the number increases rapidly in all the provinces of honest people, faithful to the true tradition of their respective parties and careful of their manly dignity, who realize the humiliating roles which are being played by the exploiters who guide the destinies of the two parties. To all, as to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden, to all Liberals and Conservatives, we say now as in the past.

"You have no right to vote the proposed naval laws without first consulting the people."

TO PRISON FOR HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Cobalt Miner was Relieved of Over $100

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 16.—Nicholas was sentenced to two years and James Ryan to 18 months in the Central Prison for highway robbery. The two men, with another companion, who escaped, held up Levi Priest, a Cobalt miner, early in the evening on the C.P.R. station platform, knocking him down and stole one hundred and thirty dollars from him.

NEW NON-SINKABLE LIFEBOAT TO BE TESTED BEFORE NAVY REPRESENTATIVES

DIVING HEAD FIRST LOADED WITH PASSENGERS

The odd looking vessel pictured above is a non sinkable lifeboat, the property and invention of Harry Fisher, of New Zealand. It is now anchored in New York waters, where it will be tried out soon before representatives of the United States navy. It is the assertion of the inventor that the boat cannot be sunk unless it is cut in half, and he says that he has reached this conclusion only after having submitted models of his boat to every possible mishap that might occur in the use of craft of its kind.

DECIDE QUESTION OF PEACE OR WAR

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Dec. 16.—Delegates of Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece assembled in the picture gallery of St. James palace at noon to meet the Turkish delegates in a momentous conference, which is to decide peace or a continuation of war in the Balkans.

They were welcomed by Sir Edward Grey on behalf of King George, whom Sir Edward informed the delegates, desired to express his best wishes for the success of their labors.

The chief of each delegation cordially acknowledged the welcome. Before entertaining the conference the delegations of the Balkan States declared that Turkey must find a way to surrender Adrianople within a week or the war will be resumed

YOUNG EXPRESS MESSENGER CONFESSES TO ROBBING SAFE

Aided by Sixteen Year Old Brother, He Stole $20,000 in Gold.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Bakersfield, Cal., Dec. 16.—Marvin W. Hamby, the twenty two year old express messenger, whose car on the Sunset Western train of the Santa Fe railroad, was robbed of $20,115, in gold near here last week, confessed to-day that he robbed the safe, with the aid of his sixteen year old brother Melvin. The money, which had been hidden by boys in a brickyard at Kern Junction, was recovered, with the exception of $300, which was found in Melvin's room. Both brothers are in jail. Marvin takes all the blame on himself.

Crusade a Success.

Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—Encouraged by the success attending their campaign to reduce the cost of living through the sale of "selected" storage eggs at a price from 6 to 20 cents a dozen cheaper than has heretofore prevailed, officers of the Housekeepers' League Saturday announced their intention of broadening the scope of their activities.

Must Strengthen German Army.

Berlin, Dec. 16.—The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung intimates semi-officially that a further strengthening of the German army is inevitable in view of the international situation.

PEOPLE PROTEST AGAINST WAR

Toilers of France Leave Their Work for the Day

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Dec. 16.—A general strike of all the population of France was ordered for to-day by the General Federation of Labor as a protest against war, was partly successful. Most of the workers in Paris ceased following their usual vocations for the day, but no serious disturbances are expected.

FREIGHT TRAINS IN COLLISION

Firemen Killed and eight others Are Injured

Jarvis, Ont., Dec. 16.—Two freight trains collided on the G.T.R.-Wabash line, two miles west of Nelles Corners, Haldimand County, at one o'clock on Saturday morning, resulting in the death of one man, Fireman L. Locke, and injuries to eight others.

Locke was a young man and leaves a widow. He came from St. Thomas.

The injured men are: Engineers H. Harland, bruised, and Jas. A. Black, nose cut, ankle and knee sprained. Wm. Saron, fireman, shoulder dislocated. Walter McQueen, brakeman, scalded and bruised. S. P. Dougald, bruised. All of St. Thomas. F. Marshall, brakeman. Conductor Brown, shoulder dislocated. Both are from Windsor.

Locke's body could not be taken from the wreckage for several hours, and the track was blocked over twelve hours, it being necessary to send Wabash and G.T.R. freight trains over the Michigan Central Railway.

THREE KILLED

Express Train Runs Into Automobile Stage at Crossing.

Perth Amboy, N.J., Dec. 16.—Three persons were killed and eight injured, several probably mortally, when an express train known as the Atlantic City Flyer on the New Jersey Central Railroad ran into an automobile stage at a grade crossing between Roosevelt and this city Saturday.

The automobile, a closed machine resembling a trolley car, contained 13 persons. There is no gate at the crossing. The train, running at an estimated speed of 60 miles an hour, hurled the stage and its occupants a distance of sixty feet. The dead:

Mary Thornton, 11 years of age; Daniel Thornton, jr., eight years old; and an unidentified woman.

The children were killed instantly. Their bodies were found in the wreckage. The woman died shortly after the accident.

TWO MORE AIRMEN HAVE FATAL FALL

London, Dec. 16.—The fall of an aeroplane yesterday added two to the list of fatalities of aviation. Lieut. W. Parke of the British navy and Mr. Hardwicke, the manager of an aeroplane company, were killed when the machine in which they were making a flight from the Hendon aviation grounds to Oxford, came down with a crash on the Wembley golf course yesterday afternoon.

Lieut. Parke was one of the leading aviators in the last army manoeuvres. He received his license in April, 1911, at Brooklands.

SEA LORDS MAY RESIGN

Churchill's Methods Have Caused Trouble in Admiralty.

London, Dec. 16.—When Winston Spencer Churchill took control of the Admiralty as First Lord there was much speculation as to how a Minister of his enterprising and pugnacious temperament would work with the Sea Lords, who have been accustomed to dominate in professional matters.

The resignation of the First Sea Lord, Vice-Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman, whom Prince Louis of Battenberg succeeds, is followed by rumors that all the Sea Lords have threatened to resign now.

The question of veracity between the First Lord of the Admiralty and Vice-Admiral Bridgeman which has arisen, has created a sensation. Mr. Churchill, pressed by Lord Charles Beresford in the House of Commons, for an explanation, declared that Vice-Admiral Bridgeman's retirement was due solely to his health and on Mr. Churchill's request.

The vice-admiral, asked by a reporter if he had retired on account of his health, replied, "My answer is in the negative."

The friction is believed to have been begun by Mr. Churchill insisting upon directing the details of the last manoeuvres against the advice of the Sea Lords.

There is considerable opposition to Prince Louis of Battenberg holding the highest position in the navy, on the same grounds that the army long opposed the Duke of Cambridge having the highest command, namely, that it was given to him because he was a member of the royal family, instead of for professional competency.

The First Lord of the Admiralty and the leading admirals unquestionably are antagonistic. Some Liberals even express fear, that the efficacy of the navy may be jeopardized on this account.

OBJECT IS TO HASTEN PEACE

Balkan Delegates Will Not Tolerate Any Delays.

London, Dec. 16.—Dr. Daneff, head of the Bulgarian plenipotentiaries, returned to London from Paris late last night and the historic peace conference is to open at noon to-day. Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, will make a brief speech of welcome, and after expressing the hope of a fruitful end of their labors, he will retire and leave the conference to deliberate in private.

The session will be held in the historic St James Palace, where the "picture gallery" has been selected as the conference room. It is a secluded apartment and entirely shut off from the noise of the London streets.

The frequently avowed determination of the Balkan states not to allow an Ottoman policy of procrastination is significant on account of the form which it has manifested. "The Turks are much mistaken," said one of the delegates, "if they entertain such an idea. Peace will practically be concluded between Christmas and New Year's around the diplomatic table in St. James' Palace, or we will impose it in Constantinople at Easter under the range of our cannon and at the point of our bayonets. But then conditions will be very different. Now we are satisfied with the minimum demands; then we will exact the maximum."

The main conditions of the allies includes the immediate surrender of Scutari, Adrianople and Janina, the garrisons of which will be granted full military honors; the evacuation of Eastern Europe by Turkey as far as East Tchatalja to a line which experts appointed by the contracting parties will delimit on the spot; the cession to Greece of all the Aegean Islands, includes Rhodes and eleven others which Italy is keeping as a pledge for Turkish fulfilment of the treaty of Lauzanne; the annexation of Crete to Greece and the payment of a war indemnity and the expenses sustained on account of the Ottoman prisoners.

In return the allies will grant complete amnesty to the Mussulman-population in the territories they annex, for any acts of hostility during the war; the return of all prisoners; the recognition of the spiritual sovereignty of the Sultan over Ottoman's becoming subjects of the Balkan states; and the free administration by the Mussulmans of their pious funds in the Balkans.

The Servian ex-Premier Stojan Novakovitch, head of the Servian plenipotentiaries, informed the Associated Press that he was satisfied an agreement would be reached on the question of an Adriatic port, on which Servia and Austria are at swords' points.

G.T.P. Strike Settlement.

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Details have been received at Ottawa of the terms of settlement arrived at by the striking western machinists of the G.T.P. and President E. J. Chamberlin at the meeting held in Montreal on Friday last and which will now clear the way for the opening of the Transcona shops.

The company agrees to reinstate all strikers who apply for positions again within thirty days.

For the present the existing rate of pay and rules will prevail. This is now 46 cents per hour for Rivers and east of Rivers, and 47 1-2 cents an hour west of Rivers.

CRAZY WITH JEALOUSY FARMER WOUNDS HIS WIFE AND THEN ENDS HIS LIFE

Edward Wellman, Living Near Marmora, Ont., Shoots His Eighteen-Year-Old Wife While She Lies Sick in Bed--Had Been Acting Strangely.

HIS HEAD PARTLY BLOWN OFF

Marmora, Dec. 16.—Driven desperate, supposedly by jealousy, Edward D. Wellman, aged 38, a farmer of Rawdon Township, Hastings County, probably fatally wounded his wife and then killed himself with a shotgun late Saturday afternoon. The scene of the shooting is a few miles south of the village.

Mrs. Wellman, who is about 20 years the junior of her husband, was lying ill in bed, and her mother, who had been nursing her, was in the barn when the tragedy was enacted.

Wellman had during the day borrowed a shotgun from a neighbor on the pretext that he wished to shoot weasels. At 4.30 p.m. he went into the bedroom where his wife lay and deliberately shot her in the back of the head. The shots destroyed one of her eyes, tore away a portion of the roof of the mouth, and broke several of her teeth. Her injuries are such that there are but slight hopes, if any, for her recovery.

Believing he had killed his wife, Wellman went upstairs, reloaded the gun, and after tying a string to the trigger fastened the string around his foot. He then placed the gun beneath his chin and pulled the trigger, with the result that his head was partly blown off. Death was instantaneous.

Wellman had been acting strangely for some weeks. While one rumored cause of the tragedy had to do with differences over property rights, it is generally understood that Wellman fancied undue attentions had been paid his wife by a farmer of the neighborhood.

Dr. Algers of Stirling was called, and Mrs. Wellman, while conscious for a brief period, outlined to him some facts of the occurrence. The affair has greatly disturbed the neighborhood.

An inquest will be held, which is expected to throw light on the cause.

IMAGINARY TUSSLE WITH BURGLAR ALMOST COST LIFE

Ruthenian Bishop Arrives.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—Bishop Nicetas Budka, who has just been ordained in his native country, Ruthenia, arrived in Toronto Saturday afternoon on the 4.40 International Limited from Montreal.

The bishop has been appointed bishop of all the Catholic Ruthvenians, or Greek Catholics of Canada, and will hold jurisdiction over the whole of Canada. He remained Saturday night at the archbishop's palace, and to-day continues his journey through to Winnipeg, which city is to be the seat of his see.

The new bishop speaks no English.

Navigation Closing Late

Sarnia, Dec. 16.—Navigation closing this year will be later than usual, as it will be several days yet before the last vessel makes her port. The big grain fleet which left the Soo on Friday passed down the river here on Saturday afternoon, and anchored above Detroit. The freighters Schoolcraft and Conestoga passed up on their way to the head of the lakes. It is also reported that three other big boats will go up yet. The steamer Harvey passed down Saturday afternoon, after leaving her barge grounded in Alpena Bay.

Woman Dreamed Burglar Was Stealing Her Jewelry

Severed Artery in Breaking Glass — Boarder Called Police.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—As the result of a nightmare following a sleep after a heavy dinner, Mrs. Arnold Newton nearly lost her life at four o'clock this morning. She dreamed a burglar was in the house and stealing her jewellery while she struggled with him. In an imaginary tussle she thrust her hand through a window and the glass severed an artery which caused her to almost bleed to death before the arrival of the police, who were summoned by Larry Suremly, a boarder, who jumped from his bedroom window clad only in night robes and dressing gown on hearing the woman's call for police.

SARNIA MAY TAKE HYDRO

Council is Taking up the Power Question.

Sarnia, Dec. 16.—The local council is looking into Hydro-electric power, with a view to having this city supplied with the current from the Falls. The matter was taken up recently and has been receiving much favorable comment here.

Last spring the town tried to force the power company to sell out, but could not succeed, although the matter was taken into court. At present the power company is building a new $150,000 plant. Should the power be brought here the town no doubt would use a very large amount, which could be resold to the Grand Trunk Tunnel Co., the Imperial Oil and many other large plants.

ALL STEAMBOATS FOR THE TROOPS

Canadian Press Despatch

Rome, Dec. 16.—The steamboat service between Venice and Trieste has been suspended for six days by the Austrian Government, which requisitioned all Lloyd packets for the transport of troops. Commercial interests are protesting against the measure.

NORTH TORONTO IS ABSORBED

Toronto, Dec. 16.—There is no longer a town of North Toronto. With the striking of Big Ben and the shrieking of the whistle on the town's old pumping station at midnight, the ambitious municipality bordering on the city absolved its identity and became the north end of Toronto. The taking effect of the order of the Ontario Railway Board was duly celebrated by a banquet in the town hall, at which the mayor and councillors were hosts. The function also had an official importance, for during the speech-making which followed the dinner, Mayor Brown handed over to Mayor Hocken a gold key to the old town's treasury. While all was merry-making within, a monster bonfire in front of the town hall attracted a large crowd, who indulged in the time-honored form of celebration.

PREMIER WHITNEY ARRIVES HOME

British People Approve of Borden's Naval Policy

Toronto, Dec. 16.—After an exceedingly rough voyage, Sir James Whitney and Hon Dr. Pyne arrived in Toronto yesterday, from England, where they have spent the past month, and where they had an opportunity of observing the spirit in which Premier Borden's naval policy was received.

According to Sir James the $35,000,000 contribution meets with the approbation of the bulk of the British people. They understood, however, that this appropriation was in the nature of an emergency contribution, and that Canada will follow this up with a permanent naval policy.

As Sir James left London two days after Premier Borden made his naval announcement he was unable to say how the people in England regarded Sir Wilfrid Laurier's counter proposals.

G.T.R. FIREMAN MEET DEATH

Cleaned Cab Windows While Engine Was Running

Toronto, Dec. 16.—An attempt on the part of Cecil J. Kribs, a fireman on the G.T.R., to clean the windows of his engine while the train was running, resulted in the young man meeting instant death at the foot of Abell street, near King street subway, about 8.30 Sunday morning. Kribs, who had just passed his 22nd year, was reaching out of the window to clean some glass in the forward part of the cab. He failed to notice his danger until too late and his head struck the corner of a box car shunted on the Abell siding.

EXCUSE ME!

By RUPERT HUGHES

NOVELIZED FROM THE COMEDY OF THE SAME NAME.

ILLUSTRATED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE PLAY AS PRODUCED By HENRY W. SAVAGE

COPYRIGHT 1911 by R. RAPIN CO.

This brought her to terms. She hastened to her place, but put out a restraining hand on Jimmie, who needed no restraint. "Certainly, to save my dear husband. Don't strike him, Jimmie!"

Then each man stuck one revolver into its convenient holster, and, covering the passengers with the other, proceeded to frisk away valuables with a speed and agility that would have looked prettier if those impatient-looking muzzles had not pointed here, there and everywhere with such venomous threats.

And so they worked from each end of the car toward the middle. Their hands ran swiftly over bodies with a loathsome familiarity that could only be resented, not revenged. Their hands dived into pockets, and up sleeves, and into women's hair, everywhere that a jewel or a bill might be secreted. And always a rough growl or a swing of the revolver silenced any protest.

Their heinous fingers had hardly begun to ply, when the solemn stillness was broken by a chuckle and low hoot of laughter, a darkey's unctuous laughter. At such a place it was more shocking than at a funeral.

"What ails you?" was the nearest robber's demand.

The porter tried to wipe his streaming eyes without lowering his hands, as he chuckled on: "I—I—just thought of sumpum funny."

"Funny!" was the universal groan.

"I was just thinking," the porter snickered, "what mighty poor pickings you-all are goin' to git out of me. Whilst if you had 'a' waited till I got to 'Frisco, I'd jest nachelly been oozin' money."

The robber relieved him of a few dimes and quarters and ordered him to turn round, but the black face whirled back as he heard from the other end of the car Wedgewood's indignant complaint: "I say, this is an outrage!"

"Ah, close your trap and [illegible] round, or I'll—"

The porter's smile died away.

"Lawd," he sighed, "they're goin' to skin that British lion! And I just wore myself out on him."

The far-reaching effect of the whole procedure was just beginning to dawn on the porter. This little run on the bank meant a period of financial stringency for him. He watched the hurrying hands a moment or two, then his wrath rose to terrible proportions:

"Look here, man," he shouted at the robber, "ain't you-all goin' to leave these passengers nothin' a tall?"

"Not on purpose, nigger."

"No small change, or nothin'?"

"Nary a red."

"Then, passengers," the porter proclaimed, while the robber watched him in amazement; "then passengers I want to give you-all fair warnin' heah and now: No tips, no whisk broom!"

Perhaps because their hearts were already overflowing with distress, the passengers endured this appalling threat without comment, and when there was a commotion at the other end of the line, all eyes rolled that way.

Mr. Baumann was making an effort to take his leave, with great politeness.

"Excoose, pleass. I vant to get by, pleass!"

"Get by!" the other robber gasped. "Why, you—"

"But I'm not a passenger," Mr. Baumann urged, with a confidential smile, "I've been going through the train myself."

"Much obliged! Hand over!" And a rude hand rummaged his pockets. It was a heart-rending sight.

"Oi oi!" he wailed, "don't you allow no courtesies to the profession?" And when the inexorable thief continued to pluck his money, his watch, his scarf-pin, he grew wroth indeed. "Stop, stop, I refuse to pay. I'll go into bankruptcy foist." But still the larceny continued; fingers even lifted three cigars from his pockets, two for himself and a good one for a customer. This loss was grievous, but his wildest protest was: "Oh, here, my frient, you don't vant my business carts."

"Keep 'em!" growled the thief, and then, glancing up, he saw on the tender inwards of Mr. Baumann's upheld palms two huge glisteners, which their owner had turned that way in a misguided effort to conceal the stones. The robber reached up for them.

"Take 'em. You're velcome!" said Mr. Baumann, with rare presence of mind. "Those Nevada pearlies looks almost like real."

"Keep 'em," said the robber, as he passed on, and Mr. Baumann almost swooned with joy, for, as he whispered to Wedgewood a moment later: "They're really real!"

Now the eye-chain rolled the other way, for Little Jimmie Wellington was puffing with rage. The other robber, having massaged him thoroughly, but without success, for his pocketbook, noticed that Jimmie's left heel was protruding from his left shoe, and made Jimmie perform the almost incredible feat of standing on one foot, while he unshod him and took out the hidden wealth.

"There goes our honeymoon, Lucretia," he moaned. But she whispered proudly: "Never mind, I have my rings to pawn."

"Oh, you have, have you? Well, I'll be your little uncle," the kneeling robber laughed, as he overheard, and he continued his outrageous search till he found them, knotted in a handkerchief, under her hat.

She protested: "You wouldn't leave me in Reno without a diamond, would you?"

"I wouldn't, eh?" he grunted. "Do you think I'm in this business for my health?"

And he snatched off two earrings she had forgotten to remove. Fortunately, they were affixed to her lobes with fasteners.

Mrs. Jimmie was thoroughbred enough not to wince. She simply commented: "You brutes are almost as bad as the customs officers at New York."

And now another touch of light relieved the gloom. Kathleen was next in line, and she had been forcing her lips into their most attractive smile, and keeping her eyes winsomely mellow, for the robber's benefit. Marjorie could not see the smile; she could only see that Kathleen was next. She whispered to Mallory:

"They'll get the bracelet! They'll get the bracelet!"

And Mallory could have danced with glee. But Kathleen leaned coquettishly toward the masked stranger, and threw all her art into her tone as she murmured:

"I'm sure you're too brave to take my things. I've always admired men with the courage of Claude Duval."

The robber was taken a trifle aback, but he growled: "I don't know the party you speak of—but cough up!"

"Listen to her," Marjorie whispered in horror; "she's flirting with the train-robber."

"What won't some women flirt with!" Mallory exclaimed.

The robber studied Kathleen a little more attentively, as he whipped off her necklace and her rings. She looked good to him, and so willing, that he muttered: "Say, lady, if you'll give me a kiss, I'll give you that diamond ring you got on."

"All right!" laughed Kathleen, with triumphant compliance.

"My God!" Mallory groaned, "what won't some women do for a diamond!"

The robber bent close, and was just raising his mask to collect his ransom, when his confederate glanced his way, and knowing his susceptible nature, foresaw his intention, and shouted: "Stop it, Jake. You 'tend strictly to business, or I'll blow your nose off."

"Oh, all right," grumbled the reluctant gallant, as he drew the ring from her finger. "Sorry, miss, but I can't make the trade," and he added with an unwonted gentleness: "You can turn round now."

Kathleen was glad to hide the blushes of defeat, but Marjorie was still more bitterly disappointed. She whispered to Mallory: "He didn't get the bracelet, after all."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Wolves in the Fold.

Mallory's heart sank to its usual depth, but Marjorie had another of her inspirations. She startled everybody by suddenly beckoning and calling: "Excuse me, Mr. Robber. Come here, please."

The curious gallant edged her way, keeping a sharp watch along the line: "What d'you want?"

Marjorie leaned nearer, and spoke in a low tone with an amiable smile: "That lady who wanted to kiss you has a bracelet up her sleeve."

The robber stared across his mask, and wondered, but laughed, and grunted: "Much obliged." Then he went back, and tapped Kathleen on the shoulder. When she turned round, in the hope that he had reconsidered his refusal to make the trade, he infuriated her by growling: "Excuse me, miss, I overlooked a bet."

He ran his hand along her arm, and found her bracelet, and accomplished what Mallory had failed in, its removal.

"Don't, don't," cried Kathleen, "it's wished on."

"I wish it off," the villain laughed, and it joined the growing heap in the feed-bag.

Kathleen, doubly enraged, broke out viciously: "You're a common, sneaking—"

"Ah, turn round!" the man roared, and she obeyed in silence.

Then he explored Mrs. Whitcomb, but with such small reward that he said: "Say, you'd oughter have a pocketbook somewhere. Where's it at?"

Mrs. Whitcomb blushed furiously: "None of your business, you low brute."

"Perdooce, madame," the scoundrel snorted, "perdooce the purse, or I'll hunt for it myself."

Mrs. Whitcomb turned away, and after some management of her skirts, slapped her handbag into the eager palm with a wrathful: "You're no gentleman, sir!"

"If I was, I'd be in Wall street," he laughed. "Now you can turn round." And when she turned, he saw a bit of chain depending from her back hair. He tugged, and brought away the locket, and then proceeded to sound Ashton for hidden wealth.

And now Mrs. Temple began to sob, as she parted with an old-fashioned brooch and two old-fashioned rings that had been her little vanities for the quarter of a century and more. The old clergyman could have wept with her at the vandalism. He turned on the wretch with a heartsick appeal:

"Can't you spare those? Didn't you ever have a mother?"

The robber started, his fierce eyes softened, his voice choked, and he gulped hard as he drew the back of his hand across his eyes.

"Aw, hell," he whimpered, "that ain't fair. If you're goin' to remind me of me poor old mo-mo-mother—"

But the one called Jake—the Claude Duval who had been prevented from a display of human sentiment, did not intend to be cheated. He thundered: "Stop it, Bill. You 'tend strictly to business, or I'll blow your mush-bowl off. You know your Maw died before you was born."

This reminder sobered the weeping thief at once, and he went back to work ruthlessly. "Oh, all right, Jake. Sorry, ma'am, but business is business." And he dumped Mrs. Temple's trinkets into the satchel. It was too much for the little old lady's little old husband. He fairly shrieked:

"Young man, you're a damned scoundrel, and the best argument I ever saw for hell-fire!"

Mrs. Temple's grief changed to horror at such a bolt from the blue: "Walter," she gasped, "such language!"

But her husband answered in self-defense: "Even a minister has a right to swear once in his lifetime."

Mallory almost dropped in his tracks, and Marjorie keeled over on him, as he gasped: "Good Lord, Dr. Temple, you are a—a minister?"

"Yes, my boy," the old man confessed, glad that the robbers had relieved him of his guilty secret along with the rest of his private properties. Mallory looked at the collapsing Marjorie and groaned: "And he was in the next berth all this time!"

The unmasking of the old fraud made a second sensation. Mrs. Fosdick called from far down the aisle: "Dr. Temple, you're not a detective?"

Mrs. Temple shouted back furiously: "How dare you?"

Little Chinese Girls on Their Way to School.

The city of New York is perhaps the most cosmopolitan city in the world. That means that it is the home of peoples from all quarters of the globe. Men of every race and color meet here on the common ground of equality. The poor and the oppressed of every land have in this country found a haven where they may have the same freedom that is the right of the native born citizen. In some of the schools of the city the scholars may represent a dozen different nationalities, and bright pupils they are, the teachers report. The two little Chinese girls shown in the picture were photographed in Five Points park, which is not far from New York's Chinatown. As you may see, they are bright and intelligent looking, and quite pretty as well.

Chains of Thought.

Each player is provided with a pencil and slip of paper, and then a single word is given out by the leader to the company assembled. This word is written at the top of each one's paper, and then each writes down in a list every thought the given word brings to his mind, making a chain of thought.

When these are read aloud the devious paths and the different paths, taken by the "thoughts" cause endless fun.

Tree Conundrums.

What tree its old age sadly cries? Elder.
And from what tall one comes low sighs? Pine.
Which bears the mark of a smoldering fire? Ash.
And which to chastise you takes your sire? Birch.
Which one do you carry about in your hand? Palm.
And which one tall and slim doth stand? Poplar.
Which one bears fruit so golden and round? Orange.
And which one bears the sea's deep sound? Beech.
Come, tell now, which is a stale joke? Chestnut.
And which from a stale acorn awoke? Oak.
To which would you liken a firm young man? Spruce.
Which one yields fruit round and rosy? Apple.
And what would you like to put in a posy? Tulip.
Which tree is cloth and fuel in one? Cottonwood.
And from which [illegible] sweet fluid run? Maple.

A very good substitute for egg and bread crumbs is a fairly thick paste of flour and water. Dip the fish or cutlet to be fried in this paste and sprinkle thickly with finely crumbled bread. When fried, it will be a beautiful brown color.

THE LEGEND OF THE MISTLETOE.

THE hanging of the mistletoe at this coming Christmastide invites the usual tour across the mystic, musty pages of the past. This branch of the holiday's decoration treasures within it sweets that to the young people are most tempting. It was the same ten centuries ago, and so it will be for centuries to come.

While their ladyships were waiting
And their lordships were debating
There were other genuflections going on.
It is hardly worth while stating
That acoustic osculating
Baptized that British Christmas before dawn.

The sacredness of the mistletoe has always been respected, particularly by the Britons and the Scandinavians. It was a part of the religion of the druids, and they regarded it with the utmost veneration, but restricted their worship of it to the plant when found growing on the oak. The oak was the favorite tree of their divinity. Tutane, which the books say appears to have been the same as the Phoenician god Baal, or the sun, was prayed to under different names by the early pagans. At the period of the winter solstice, which was about Christmas time, a great festival was celebrated in honor of Tutane. When this anniversary arrived the Britons, accompanied by their priests, the druids, went forth with glorious pomp and jollity to gather the mistletoe, which they believed to possess wonderful curative powers. With them they took two white bulls and sometimes human beings to be sacrificed.

Upon finding the oak with the mistletoe clinging to it the chief druid, clad in white, the emblem of purity, ascended the tree and with a golden knife cut the vine. As it fell it was caught in the folds of the robe of another priest. Then the bulls and sometimes the humans were offered to Tutane, and various festivities followed. The mistletoe thus gathered was cut into small portions and distributed among the people, who hung it over the entrances to their dwellings to notify the sylvan deities that they were welcome to shelter during the season of frost and cold.

These rites were retained throughout the Roman dominion in Britain and for a long while under the Jules, Saxons and Angles.

The most beautiful legend regarding the mistletoe and the one from which it derives its mystic powers is of Scandinavian origin. Balder, the god of poetry and eloquence and second son of Odin and Freja, had a dream in which it was intimated that he would be killed in battle. He communicated this dream to his mother, who was very fond of him, and she, to protect him, invoked the powers of nature—fire, earth, air and water—as well as animals and plants and obtained an oath from them that they would do Balder no hurt. With his invulnerability assured, as he thought, he entered the combats of the gods and was very successful in slaying all who came forward to engage him. They struck him with their arrows, but he plucked them out and derided his antagonists as they fell mortally wounded before him.

It was about time for Loke, his arch enemy, to challenge him or suffer the ignominy of cowardice, but Loke was a schemer.

He disguised himself as an old woman and, determining to discover the secret of Balder's immunity from death, called upon Freja. He addressed the mother with complimentary remarks upon the valor and good fortune of her son, and the goddess replied that her son was safe from harm, as all the productions of the world had sworn not to injure him. Loke was very much discouraged and was about to go away when Freja added that there was one plant she did not conjure because of its insignificance. With well feigned indifference Loke inquired the name of it, and Freja said it was the mistletoe.

The designing Loke procured a shoot of the mistletoe, made an arrow of it and then sought the assembly of the gods. There he met the blind Heda and concluded that the humiliation of Balder's family would be more complete if Balder should be killed by a sightless god. So he asked Heda, "Why do you not contend with the arrows of Balder?" Heda replied that he was blind and unsupplied with arrows, whereupon Loke gave him the mistletoe arrow and said, "Balder is in front of thee." Heda shot, and Balder fell pierced and slain.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

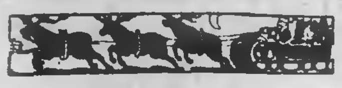
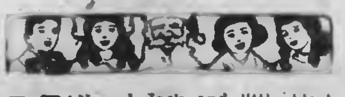
Roasted To Death.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 16.—Following a rear-end collision between an incoming freight train and a standing freight train in the yards of the New York Central Railroad in this city Saturday, Henry A. Grover and Patrick H. Thornton, both of Syracuse, were burned to death.

The men were imprisoned in the debris and were slowly roasted to death despite the efforts of the train crew to rescue them. A locomotive and eight cars were demolished.

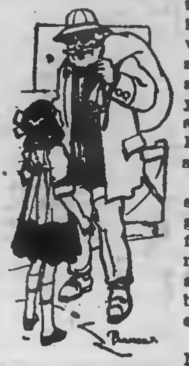


A SANTA CLAUS FROM THE SEA



NAN and Jack and little black Topsy rubbed their eyes and stared about them. A big wave had landed them high and dry on a sandy island.

"All shipwrecks are horrid," said Jack. "But I think I can find something to eat, and if you are cold, why, you and Topsy can lie down and let me cover you with warm sand, and then I'll go and look about.



"I'M AWFULLY GLAD YOU CAME."

"Now, goodby," said Jack. "I'm going to look for food." And he marched off like a man, with his hands in his pockets.

"Topsy," said Nan after he had gone, "do you know it is the day before Christmas and we won't get a single present tomorrow?"

But Topsy was not despondent. "What's de mattah wid Marse Santa Claus?" she demanded. "Ain' he comin' to dis islan'? Dat's whut I ask."

"Why, Topsy," explained little Nan patiently, "how could he? His reindeer couldn't cross the water."

"Let him come in a boat, den. Dat's whut I say. Let him come in a boat," said Topsy fiercely.

"Oh," said Nan, "but I am afraid he can't."

Suddenly Topsy sat up and pointed a skinny black finger toward the sea.

"It's a boat," she said, "a little boat, and it's coming here."

Nearer and nearer came the little boat, and presently Topsy shrieked: "It's Marse Santa Claus. Miss Nannie, it's Marse Santa Claus, and he's comin' straight to dis yer islan'. Didn't I tole yer? Didn't I tole yer he'd come?"

The man in the boat had a nice white beard. He had on a red sweater and wore a soft hat pulled well down over his ears. As he climbed out of the boat they saw that he was very round and fat and had a jolly red face.

When he had pulled the boat up out of the water he leaned over and picked up a great bag and slung it over his shoulder and came trotting up the beach.

"It truly is Santa," said Nan breathlessly, "and he is coming straight toward us. I am going to run right down and meet him."

Away she sped, her golden curls flying behind her, and when she reached the old man she slipped her hand into his confidingly.

"I'm awfully glad you came, Santa," she said. "We were so frightened and lonely, and maybe you can tell us what to do."

The old man stood still and stared at her. Then he chuckled.

"Well, well!" he said. "Where did you come from?"

Just then Jack came running down the beach.

"It's Santa Claus," called Nan as soon as he was within hearing.

But Jack was older than Topsy and Nan, and he had his doubts. "Are you really Santa Claus?" he asked gravely.

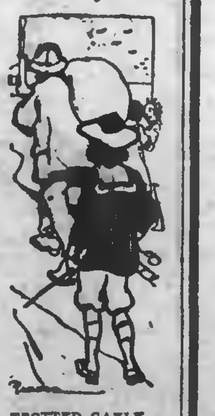
The old man winked. "Don't I look like him?" he said

"Yes," said Jack, "you do."

"Ain't I got a pack on my back?" he asked.

"Yes," said Jack, "but it looks like potatoes and not toys."

Then the old man leaned down and whispered in his ear: "That's jes' what it is, but if them little dears wants to think I'm Santa, why, let 'em think it. It won't hurt anybody, will it?"



TROTTED GAYLY AFTER HIM.

"No," said Jack, "it won't."

"Well, then," said he out loud, "that being decided, we will go and have dinner."

"Dinner?" said Jack, in surprise. "Why, where do you live?"

"Follow me," said the man, and they trotted gayly after him.

Away among the sand hills they came suddenly upon a little house. Within was a glowing fire, and a great pot was bubbling on the stove, and each of the little folks had a hot bowl of soup and a big piece of bread, and when they had finished their eyes drooped.

"Now hang up your stockings," said their host, "and go to bed."

How the old sailor found things to fill those stockings was a wonder. But there was a quaint sandalwood fan for Nan, a pair of Chinese shoes for Jack and a Japanese doll for Topsy. Then he filled up the corners with beautiful shells and with little boxes of dried fruit and such things as sailors pick up in many voyages.

Such a jolly Christmas morning as it was! The children were delighted with their gifts, and afterward Santa rowed them over to the mainland and put them on the road for home.

A TOWN PLANNING OPPORTUNITY

Sub-divisions of land within five miles of any city over 50,000 population must be approved by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board. But why should so beneficial an act be confined to cities of over 50,000? There are only three of them in the province: Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton. Why should not London, Brantford, Peterborough, Kingston and the others be able to regulate equally as well their future growth? The demand of the town-planners at Berlin for the extension of such powers to the smaller municipalities will awaken an echo in every city of the smaller class in Ontario. There are many other municipal reforms it might press for, but in these days of real estate booming, this is one of the most immediately necessary.

Town-planning is of such recent origin that many people have very vague ideas as to what it really means. Town-planning is the straightening of streets, the limitation of building growth whenever it invades the rights of the public to plenty of air and space, the arrangement of a park system upon well-ordered lines, the beautifying of the city in every way possible. A city does not just grow; like Topsy, it adds to itself by a slow regular process, in a haphazard way that suits the purse of the people making the extensions, unless there is some supervising eye to watch continuously over how the city is laid out and built up. As the next 20 years will be years of great prosperity and growth in Canada, there ought to be an early start upon getting such recognised plans under operation.

LAURIER'S NAVAL SUBSTITUTE

The Laurier naval policy has been announced. It is still that of a Canadian navy, manned by Canadians, controlled by the Canadian Government, and maintained in Canadian waters, except in an emergency when it might be put at the service of the admiralty. Sir Wilfrid says that he would have two Dreadnoughts established as flagships, one on each side of the Atlantic, and around them he would have a cruiser fleet.

There is nothing substantially new in the program as announced. Sir Wilfrid's speech was very largely confined to a criticism of the Borden naval policy of giving three Super-Dreadnoughts to Britain. Sir Wilfrid said that it was a cross between Nationalism and Jingoism. It gave not where Britain needed help most—in the supply of men to man the ships. Canada gave, but her giving would cost her slightly over a million dollars a year interest, while Britain would pay $3,000,000 a year to maintain them. Australia not only had built her own ships, but was maintaining them at a cost of $3,000,000 a year.

While Sir Wilfrid has held back until this announcement, his newspaper press has not felt under any restraint. Right from the drop of the hat they have attacked the Borden policy right and lift. One of their arguments counteracted another. For instance, they claimed that Canada does not do enough for the naval defence of the Empire because she does not man and maintain the ships. Now they advocate only two Dreadnoughts in far away Canadian waters where the crisis will never break first. The Imperial aspects of the question are subordinated to the local. It is undoubted that the naval policy of the Borden Government will be the subject of many a contentious debate before Canada's duty to the Empire in the matter is well settled. Henri Bourassa fires into the policy from another angle. He declares that there is no emergency, and therefore no need of any direct contribution.

But from all these meshes, the gift of three Dreadnoughts will come out on top as a really effective Canadian policy. The Admiralty wanted the big ships to add to its own fighting forces, to release older ships for service on outlying seas. Canada has done what Britain has asked. Surely that is the measure of Canada's obligation. The Canadian navy idea is still the separatist, continentalist, idea and though Sir Wilfrid has embellished it by sticking Dreadnoughts into his scheme instead of "tin-pots" it is still the whole fiasco it was before. Why? Because it is to be doubted very much whether Canadian ships could be manned with Canadian crews? Where are the Canadians to undergo the service that the British tars do? It takes seven years to make a properly trained seaman. If the Canadian ships were built in Canadian yards, and had to wait for the training of Canadian crews, how long would it be before Canada was "effectively" adding to the naval defences of the Empire? What is wanted is prompt and effective aid, and that is what the direct contribution of three Super-Dreadnoughts is giving.

MR. BRYCE WASHING HIS HANDS

James Bryce, the British Ambassador at Washington, says that in the reciprocity negotiations between the Laurier and Taft Cabinet representatives he acted only as an intermediary. He was, so to speak, only a letter carrier between the two governments.

For the sake of Mr. Bryce's reputation, it is well that he took occasion at the Peace dinner in New York a few evenings ago, to make this declaration. Had he held his peace he would have terminated his tenure of office as British Ambassador to the United States, under a cloud, so far as the opinion of the imperialists of the Empire is concerned. The hoodoo which the pact held for everyone concerned seems now fairly complete. It destroyed the Laurier Government, and it helped very materially to put Taft down and out. When they were questioned in the House of Commons, both Mr. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey disclaimed any responsibility for the pact or its negotiations. Like Pilate, they washed their hands of it. Now comes the other party chiefly concerned, Mr. Bryce, and in effect declares that he did nothing toward helping it on. He confined his effort merely to acting as the agent of the two Governments, the go-between who would make the exchange of views easier.

Mr Bryce is sufficiently explicit in his statement to warrant the belief that he stood aside from rendering personal assistance and encouragement. But his well known desire to bring the people of the United States and the British Empire closer together has led him into many great mistakes. He has frequently expressed his admiration for the United States in such gushing terms that he has been accused of liking the American people more than those of his own country. He certainly conveys such an impression in his book, "The American Commonwealth." However, if he was not so false to his duty as the representative of the British Empire as to openly encourage the negotiation of a pact, designed by President Taft to make Canada—an important part of the Empire—adjunct of the United States, he has the forgiveness of the Canadian people and the others who favor British connection if he will not let it occur again. Everyone else connected with the pact has been sufficiently punished.

DRUNK OFF DUTY

Ten thousand railway engineers and other trainmen of the railways in North Eastern England, are not on strike. They are out because the North Eastern Railway put an engineer, who was found drunk while off duty upon pilot engine runs. The union demanded his reinstatement, but the company refused. It seems inconceivable that such a great strike should be caused over such an incident. Was the company justified? Certainly. The railway engineer has a duty to the traveling public as well as to the company. He cannot, with safety to himself or the passengers who depend upon his steadiness of nerve and presence of mind, commit excesses off or on duty. At Corning, New York, twenty people were killed in a wreck recently because the engineer went on his run drunk. The body of engineers which protests against the disciplining of a man who so openly violate what ought to be one of the first principle of good railway engineering, cannot expect much sympathy. It would get very little sympathy in Canada or the United States. The ratio of railway fatalities in England is only one fourth of what it is in Canada or the United States, indicating the great care and thoroughness of English railway management. In Canada, the rule with regard to drink or frequenting of places where drink is sold, when off duty is deemed sufficient cause for dismissal. That allows the railway management some discretion as to how it shall deal with cases, but public opinion would strongly support them in any such case, as that which has caused 10,000 men to walk out in England.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A town-planning organization for Ontario comes late, but better late than never. Most cities and towns in this country "just grew," like Topsy. The wonder is that they have turned out so well.

There were seventeen hunting fatalities in Northern Michigan, during the season just closed. Four of the victims of mistaken shooting wore red coats. If innocence of the woods develops much further, it will be necessary for every hunter to be attended by a brass band.

Out in Topeka, Kansas, they propose to add a course in the high schools to teach girls how to look pretty. Here, such a proposition would be laughed at. All Peterborough girls cannot help looking pretty without being taught.

BABIES UNDER THE SPOUT.

In Simla They Water the Youngsters to Keep Them Quiet.

The native mothers in the neighborhood of Simla, in India, have a curious practice of putting their babies' heads under a spout of water in order to send the youngsters to sleep and to keep them quiet. When a new cart road was made some years ago in the locality mentioned there was a halting place, where rows of such children might be seen in a grove close to the road.

The water of a hill spring was so adjusted as to furnish a series of little spouts, each about the thickness of one's little finger. Opposite each spout was a kind of earth pillow and a little trough to carry away the water. Each child was so laid that one of the water spouts played on the top of its head, and the water then ran off into the trough.

An English official testifies that the process was most successful. There never were such quiet and untroublesome babies as those under the spouts. The people were unanimous in asserting that the water did the children no harm, but that, on the contrary, it benefited and invigorated them. In fact, they seemed to think that a child not subjected to this process must grow up soft brained and of little account.—Harper's Weekly.

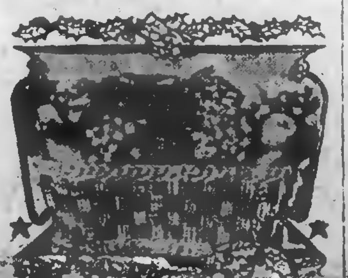
WINTER FRUITS.

Artistic Arrangement of These Makes Attractive Table Decorations.

Fruit makes a charming decoration for the center of the Christmas table. Grapes, apples, winter pears, oranges, bananas and pineapples may be used for this purpose. The fancy baskets of braid or wicker can be filled with the fruits and make not only attractive but useful centerpieces.

The once despised epergne of fruit has come back to take its place as a center dish, and even the cruet stand is receiving some approval. Combination fruit and flower dishes of cut crystal mounted in silver or silver gilt are being restored. In the proper phrase, to grace the festive board.



A BASKET OF FRUIT.

A center dish with a series of smaller dishes radiating from it is a handsome device, and sometimes there is a center epergne with flower dishes and candles united to it by crystal chains.

Lamp and candle shades with prismatic pendants are fashionable again, and candelabra of the same genre, once relegated to the storeroom, are now brought out as the things of beauty that they are and reflect the light of electricity as of yore they sent back the golden flicker of many candles.

Chained decorations are very fashionable, and lamp shades, candlesticks and flower holders are made to match and wholly in crystal of slim and graceful design. Tulip shaped bowls for flowers and antique goblets for fruit are pretty decorative details.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

THE NAVAL QUESTION.

To the Editor,—The Admiralty "Memo" sent to Premier Borden distinctly states that naval aid is required by England.

Germany has declared that she can hold her own in the North Sea.

England admits she cannot guarantee to hold the Sea routes like she has done in the past.

England also admits that Dreadnoughts are the most efficient battleships to help her through.

Germany, allied to Austria and Italy, and when combined as an alliance, actually overpowers Britain to protect the Empire.

France and Russia may detach themselves from Britain by a stroke of the pen or by mutual consent.

Still, Sir Wilfrid Laurier declares, it is not a case of emergency although published by the British Admiralty, and still refuses to back up the Borden policy which is both a Canadian and British policy, and founded by Admiralty experts.

Premier Borden admits that there are British Admiralty secrets which he cannot divulge. Still under the circumstances Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues, notwithstanding their patriotic outbursts on public platforms, and their loyalty to the Empire, still apostatize, and also state there is no emergency for "Canada" to support the Empire.

There is no doubt whatever, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, under the above circumstances, must be trying to force Premier Borden to divulge the secrets of the British Admiralty, entrusted to him, and if divulged to the public would also be divulged to all Foreign powers.

Under the above circumstances, does Sir Wilfrid Laurier expect either Liberals or Conservatives to support him and his colleagues, against supporting Britain and the Empire?

If anyone should try to force from Premier Borden the secrets of the British Admiralty entrusted to him, either by taking undue advantage of the circumstances in which he is placed, knowing fully well he cannot divulge them to Sir Wilfrid or his colleagues or the public at large, surely the people of Canada, French or English, whether Liberals or Conservatives, will take this into consideration and support the Naval Policy, which is both British and Canadian combined.

Yours truly,
H. M. S. "THUNDER-BOLT."

WIDOW WITH EIGHT SONS

Wishes to Come to Canada That Boys May Learn Farming

To be left a widow with eight sons in a somewhat unusual condition of affairs. Such is the predicament of a woman living in Leith, Scotland. But what makes it more interesting is the fact that she desires to bring herself and family out to Canada.

Immigration Officer Miller has received a letter from the woman in which she frankly states her position and a desire to bring her eight boys to this country and have them learn agriculture.

The communication is full of interest. The writer says she is thirty-four years of age and her sons' ages range as follows: Seventeen, sixteen, fifteen, fourteen, twelve, ten, eight and three. Five of them are at present working. She is very anxious to know if a general house keeper's place might be found on a farm where the boys and her self could do all the work together, for a combined wage and a free house. None of the family have had any experience in farm work but the boys were very anxious to learn.

She describes herself as a capable worker and confident that she could turn her hand to anything. She and the boys are all healthy and willing workers and the youngest child of three would prove no drawback.

To bring each member of the family out £7, 13s. 7d. would be necessary and she would be willing to pay £25 towards their fare if some kind party would advance the balance.

The immigration officer is much impressed with the plucky tone of the letter and feels sure that the family would do well in this country.

VISITED GRAVE OF THEIR FRIEND

Messrs George and Benjamin Bethel in Peterborough

At the request of the father of the late Charles H Hindley, Mr. Geo. Bethel accompanied by his brother, Mr. Benjamin Bethel, both of whom are in this country in the interests of their firm, Messrs. John Bethel and Son, came to Peterborough Saturday evening to make inquiries regarding the sudden illness and death of Mr Hindley, the English traveller representing Messrs. Rylands and Sons, who passed away on November 11 after a few days' illness.

They reside in Eccles, near Manchester, and are friends and neighbors of Mr. Hindley, sr.

After receiving further particulars of the illness and death of their friend, also of the care and attention he had received at his hotel and the hospital, and of the honor conferred by the Masonic brethren at the funeral and obsequies, they were deeply touched. Both gentlemen are prominent Masons in their home town, and they desire to acknowledge all the courtesy and kindness extended to them.

On Sunday morning they were driven to the Little Lake Cemetery by Mr. Walter Stocker, and shown where the remains of Mr. Hindley were interred in the Masonic plot. The floral emblems and the Masonic wreath were still in evidence.

They left yesterday afternoon for Montreal, but not without expressing themselves as highly pleased with Peterborough. They had no idea Peterborough was so large a place and they remarked that seldom had they visited a place which, considering the size, showed so much life and activity, as did Peterborough.

Messrs. John Bethel and Sons are extensive manufacturers of Lustreen and all kinds of fabric which go to make up the linings of gentlemen's suits. The firm does an enormous trade in Canada and the United States.

Mr. George Bethel is one of the active partners residing in England and makes periodical visits to Canada, while his brother, Mr. Benjamin Bethel is in charge of the United States business, the office and warehouse being situated at 684 Broadway, New York.

MODISH FURS.

Smart Girls Wear Their Neckpieces Thrown Over Shoulder.

In an article on "Furs" in the November Woman's Home Companion appears the following:

"It is always interesting to know at the beginning of the season what the new styles are in furs as to shape and trimming, but of much more importance is the question, What are the fashionable furs? Last year among the inexpensive furs Australian opossum was high in favor. This year it has been set aside, and a new fur called chinchilla squirrel has taken its place. This fur is not quite so inexpensive, as much work has to be done in matching the skins. Chinchilla squirrel is the pelt of the ground squirrel dyed in a lovely chinchilla gray. When the pelts are correctly matched and dyed it shows a striped effect. Paris is using this fur extensively for flat muffs and empire and colonial scarfs and also for trimming purposes. It is called petitgris. The fashionable maid does not drape her fur neckpiece around her shoulders like a shawl, but tosses it over one shoulder, while the opposite end hangs down straight. The set of pointed fox illustrates the modish way of wearing the neckpiece. The picture shows also the smart new gaiter boot with buttoned top of contrasting material."

FOR STUFFY ROOMS.

Different Ways to Purify Air In Close Apartments.

There is no greater purifier of air than open windows, but sometimes in sickrooms this method of changing the air is impossible.

Have you ever tried overcoming closeness by carrying a rolled burning newspaper through a sickroom? Equally good is a tablespoonful of vinegar ignited over an alcohol lamp.

An atomizer for spraying cologne can be used with toilet water or witch hazel with refreshing effect.

There are special spirit lamps that have a connection with a platinum ball attachment that are excellent to permeate a room with purifying odors. There are special mixtures for burning in these lamps, but a good cologne or toilet water answers.

The lamp burns until the platinum ball grows red hot; then the flame is extinguished. The vaporization of the cologne is increased by coming in contact with the heated metal, and the room is soon fragrant.

A quick way to cool a room is to wet a small crib sheet with cologne or water highly scented with perfumed bath tablets. Hang in a draft of air or shake the sheet lightly while still wet.

Niceties For King Baby.

The fascinating little Afghans for the baby's carriage are made of white handkerchief linen. First a strip of the material is cut into three-quarter wide by one and one-half yard long proportions. Then a half yard of the length is turned back from what is to be the upper end of the spread. This turnover is daintily embroidered in white and trimmed at either end with huge bows of pink or blue satin ribbon. The lower end is rather more closely hand embroidered, and finally the entire afghan, including the folded over edge, is bordered with wide cluny, put on flatly.

One of the most substantial and effective afghans is made of macrame, of appearance similar to those of handkerchief linen. But instead of folding over the top of a yard and a half long strip of the macrame all over the apparent turnback veils coarse unbleached net, and to this is attached the under section, after which the macrame edging is sewed flatly upon the sides of the entire spread.

Valuable Information.

Silks have been so fashionable the past season that a hint on their preservation will not come amiss. When they are put away they should not be folded in white paper, for the chloride of lime used in bleaching the paper is apt to spoil the color of the silk.

Free food for thought may be had at any public library.

WHISTLER AT WORK.

The Eccentric Artist Had a Method That Was All His Own.

In "Memories of James McNeill Whistler," by Thomas R. Way, the author allows us a glance at the artist's methods during his residence at the white house in Tite street, built from the designs of his friend, E. W. Godwin, the architect:

"The studio was surprisingly different from the room he previously used in Lindsay row, and entirely unlike the studios usually occupied by other artists. I remember a long, but very lofty room, very light, with windows along one side; his canvas beside his model at one end and at the other, near the table which he used as a palette, an old Georgian looking glass, so arranged that he could readily see his canvas and model reflected in it. Those who used such a mirror (as he did constantly) will know that it is the most merciless of critics.

"I marveled then at his extraordinary activity, as he darted backward and forward to look at both painting and model from his point of view at the extreme end of the long studio. He always used brushes of large size with very long handles, three feet in length, and held them from the end with his arm stretched to its full extent. Each touch was laid on with great firmness, and his physical strength enabled him to do without the assistance of a maulstick, while the distance at which he stood from the canvas allowed him to have the whole of a large picture in sight and so judge the correct drawing of each touch."

BATTLEFIELD BRAVERY.

An Instance of Cool Courage In Face of Imminent Danger.

Perhaps few stories of battles so thoroughly illustrate cool bravery in the face of real danger as the little incident at a reconnoissance before the battle of Ulundi, of which Lord William Beresford was the hero.

The British were almost led into a terrible trap and discovered the danger only just in time. They turned to retreat, and the Zulus poured in a volley which brought down the gray horse of a mounted infantryman. His rider fell headforemost. The rest thought both man and horse were killed at first, but the former soon struggled to his feet, with his face covered with blood and dazed with his fall.

Lord William Beresford, seeing what had happened, pulled up and, in the face of advancing hosts of yelling savages within easy range, quietly trotted back and told the man to mount behind him.

With a cool courage scarcely second to Lord William's, the man refused, noble fellow that he was, preferring the certain sacrifice of his own life to the probability of destroying his preserver.

The reply was admirable, terse and telling. The savages swarmed closer and closer; bullets rattled around them. The two who lingered were almost within reach of the assagais, and Lord William said:

"Get up or I'll punch your head!"

The man obeyed, and rescuer and rescued escaped.—Pearson's Weekly.

Why Blackie Wore the Plaid.

Professor Blackie frequently stayed at Dr. Donald Macleod's house in Glasgow. One night, said the doctor, we were sitting up together. Blackie said in his brusque way, "Whatever other faults I have, I am free from vanity." An incredulous smile on my face roused him. "You don't believe that. Give me an instance." Being thus challenged, I said, "Why do you walk about flourishing a plaid continually?" "I'll give you the history of that, sir. When I was a poor man and when my wife and I had our difficulties she one day drew my attention to the threadbare character of my surtout and asked me to order a new one. I told her I could not afford it just then, when she went, like a noble woman, and put her own plaid shawl on my shoulders, and I have worn a plaid ever since in memory of her loving deed."

Man Who Beheaded Charles I.

The mysterious masked man who beheaded Charles I. remains the British analogue for the Man With the Iron Mask. Lilly, the lying astrologer, denounced Cornet Joyce at the restoration, but Joyce on the fatal 30th of January was not in favor with Cromwell. The parish register of Whitechapel records the burial in 1649 of Richard Brandon, the common hangman, and opposite the entry a contemporary hand wrote that "he cut off the head of Charles the First." Brandon himself asserted that "they made him to it for £30," with which he drank himself to death.—Dundee Advertiser.

Sadly Lacking.

"Did young Charlie Goldie call on you last night?" "Yes. He calls almost every night." "That sounds serious. What sort of young man is he—pretty intelligent?" "Intelligent! Why, sir, he doesn't know enough to embrace an opportunity."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

How Could She?

The congregation was asked for $1,000 and responded generously, nearly the full amount being subscribed. It is expected that by next Sunday when all subscriptions are given, the $1,000 mark will be attained.

THE PROGRESS OF THE ROYAL BANK

First Statement Since Acquisition of Traders' Bank

The annual statement of the Royal Bank of Canada this year, marks an epoch in the growth and development of the institution, as it is the first one published since the important transaction by which the Royal took over the Traders', thus rounding off its branch system throughout the entire Dominion. The acquisition was such a large one that it makes it impossible to compare the statement with that of previous years. As a result of a change in the fiscal year of the Bank, the statement is for the eleven months ending November 30th.

The net profits for the eleven months, after deducting charges of management, accrued interest on unmatured bills and general bonus granted to the staff, amounted to $1,527,324.77 equal to 19.19 p.c. on the average paid-up capital of the bank of $8,680,756. These profits together with the balance carried forward at the end of the previous year and the premium on the new capital stock made the amount available for distribution $7,412,617.33.

The growth of the Bank is instanced by the deposit account, the total deposits now amounting to $137,891,667. Of this amount deposits bearing interest totalled $101,665,361 and deposits not bearing interest $36,058,812. These figures show large increases over the combined deposits of the Royal and Traders' at the end of last year.

The amount applied to reserve fund brings the total of this account up to $12,560,000 being $1,000,000 in excess of the paid-up capital of $11,560,000.

The Bank's Peterborough branch is in charge of Mr. Vincent Eastwood and is one of the busiest banking institutions in the city.

"Boyce Will Be Boyce."

Should Arthur Cyril Boyce, the Sault Ste Marie lawyer and member of Parliament for West Algoma, be appointed Solicitor-General in the Borden Government, said Saturday Night recently, he will be the first native-born Englishman to hold that office. He was born in Yorkshire, the county of broad acres, forty-five years ago. In the days of Conservative opposition, Mr. Boyce was one of the most aggressive younger Tory band which made matters constantly unpleasant for Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues. It was Hon. George Graham who made the House laugh heartily after one of the fighting speeches of the man from West Algoma by rising and gravely improvising the following:

"Boyce will be Boyce,
Boyce will be Boyce.
Things may change,
And life seem strange,
But Boyce will still be Boyce."

DONATIONS OF CHRISTMAS CHEER

Is the Request from the King's Daughters

A single kindness to the living is better than a load of flowers to the dead.

No season of the year offers greater opportunities for extending kindness to the lonely, the poor, and the stranger, than does the Christmas period. The King's Daughters realize this, and their annual dissemination of good cheer, in the shape of food, clothing and money and other useful gifts, to those in need, will be carried out this Christmas as heretofore.

Many an empty larder has been filled by these contributions, and the hearts of hundreds of the needy gladdened.

All donations this year will be most thankfully received by the King's Daughters, and they will be used to the best advantage. Contributions of money will be thoughtfully expended. Those who wish to aid this most worthy giving are asked to leave their parcels and gifts at the Crown Hotel, across from the Post Office, where several of the King's Daughters will be waiting to receive them.

THREE MONTHS IN COUNTY JAIL

Sentence to Man Who Stole Suit of Clothes

Harry Raymond, the young man charged with the theft of a suit of clothes, was given three months in the county gaol with hard labor by Magistrate Dumble this morning. When arraigned first Raymond asked for an enlargement until Wednesday until he secured witnesses from Lindsay. However, he changed his mind and pleaded guilty today.

Raymond said that he would not have stolen the clothes if he had not been drinking.

CHRISTMAS ROMANCE

"Me a preparing for Christmas—me—Goodness knows I wisht I was, but Christmas doings don't me no more. And just because I was a baking something to eat to-morrow, which happens to be Christmas, she thought I was preparing for that day a special."

Betty Green sighed as she laced the pie in the oven, and pulled a kitchen chair up beside the stove. The new neighbor, who had but recently moved into town, and who knew nothing of Betty's history, had just left. With the Christmas spirit everywhere she had thought of course that Betty was preparing a feast for the day.

"Now, if Jim hadn't never sailed away on that water-logged old Mary Ann, as he did a-going on four year ago, I guess I could have been preparing for Christmas like other folks. If there hadn't been nobody else, Jim and me could of enjoyed Christmas, and then maybe there'd a been somebody else—somebody what just about now would a been liking dolls on the cars, and if so Jim and me would a-been having a Christmas tree for that somebody and we'd be a having the best Christmas in all South Cove.

"My, how I did try to keep Jim from sailing in that Mary Ann. Anybody what knew about ships knew she wasn't fit to go to sea in, but Jim says it's the only berth he's likely to get, and taking it would mean our marrying just that much sooner and the Mary Ann or Jim ain't never been heard of since she left that South America place to go round the Horn on her way to China."

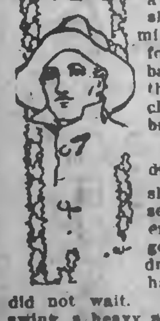
The bright eyes of Betty Green were wet with tears as she opened the oven door to raise the pie to a higher shelf. Ever since Jim Busby failed to return in time for the wedding which Betty had so carefully prepared for four years ago—a wedding which was to be the big event of the Christmas season at South Cove—she had had a lonesome life.

Two months after the Christmas that was to have been Betty's wedding day her aged father had been carried to the village cemetery, leaving her all alone in the world. With no other relatives, and with no friends except those at South Cove Betty remained in the little fishing town in which she had been born nearly twenty-seven years ago.

With the baking finished, Betty left the kitchen and went into her bedroom. She wanted nothing so much as to be alone in that room that had been her father's—in that room where she kept carefully preserved the wedding clothes she had lavished so much care upon four years ago. These clothes and the faded photograph of Jim Busby on her bureau were all that were left her of her romance. With these she would spend her Christmas eve, would live over again the courting days. And Jim should be there with her. That would be her Christmas.

With care she took each garment from its wrappings in the bureau drawer and spread them on the bed. The pretty wedding dress which Sarah Glover had helped her make—yes, she would put it on to-night just as she had planned to four years ago. Jim would like her to do that; he had always liked to see her prettily dressed, and maybe Jim might see her from the spirit world to-night.

As she fastened the gown she almost forgot that Jim could not be there, that it was all a make-believe. As she stood before the mirror the smile of four years ago came back again. She noted the color in her cheeks; it was like a bridal blush.



A rap at the door dispelled the illusion she had permitted herself for a few moments. She could not go to the door in that dress. The caller would have to wait, but he did not wait. She heard the door swing, a heavy step on the floor, and a voice—oh, such a familiar voice—calling Betty.

"Jim! My Jim!" she answered to Jim's tale of shipwreck on the Patagonian coast, of the months and years of practical captivity before he could get back to a seaport.

"And now," he said, "I am home to claim my Christmas bride."

"And I have our Christmas baking done," said Betty.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Mrs. Petticoat Sees Domestic Side of Battleship Life.

UNCLE SAM'S HOUSEKEEPING.

The Significance of Little Things That Help to Oil the Social Wheels—No Quarter For the Man Who Forgets His Wife's Birthday.

Dear Elsa—I was so sorry you could not come to New York when the fleet was here, for the sight was well worth seeing. Over a hundred of our battleships, armored cruisers and torpedo boats lined up for miles along the Hudson river, and at night, when the ships were brilliantly lighted, the effect was gorgeous. Dick knew a number of the officers on board the ships, so we were royally entertained during their stay in these waters. I had lots of fun going over one of the ships with a young ensign. He was so terribly afraid that everything would not be in perfect order that he reminded me of a very new young housekeeper receiving her husband's relatives for the first time.

You go down a flight of stairs. Everything is up and down on a ship, just like your grandmother's old house in the country, where no two rooms are on the same level.

"Here's the mess room," said my escort.

"But where are the tables and chairs?" I inquired, looking meanwhile into corners for piled up heaps of furniture.

"Up on the coils," replied Mr. Ensign. And, sure enough, there were the tables on racks against the ceiling, but not a chair in sight.

"Where are the chairs?" I persisted, and the encyclopedic guide explained that the seats were all fastened to the ceiling. They are long benches which fold up like those for the tables. Just think of getting your furniture all out of the way during housecleaning time or when you want to give a dance! And no sharp corners to bump into when you come home in the dark!

Up another flight of stairs, across a sort of bridge effect and down again, and I found myself in the ship's sewing room—a man's sewing room. There sat three seamen, their legs thrashing up and down like mad, stitching away for dear life. "They are the ship's seamstresses, the tailors," explained my escort.

"Is there an attachment for darning socks, or do you do them by hand?" I saucily inquired.

A smile of pitying toleration appeared on the countenance of Mr. Ensign, who replied with a significant flourish of his hand in the direction of the Hudson:

"Our method of repairing socks is far superior to the old fashioned way of darning. We require neither machine, thread nor needle. We throw 'em overboard."

"Would you care to see my quarters?" politely inquired my guide after we had inspected the kitchen regions and found them immaculate and up to date in their appointments.

The ensign, stifling the mingled pride and anxiety which always beset young housekeepers, led the way to his apartment with a nonchalant air. After giving a hasty glance around the room as I peered into it and, while preserving an unconcerned face, I caught him giving a surreptitious backward kick to an inquisitive slipper under his bunk and swiftly jamming a sociably inclined handkerchief back into the drawer of a chest.

"I didn't know until yesterday," confessed Mr. Ensign earnestly, "that I was a confirmed old bachelor." (I scarcely think he looks his advanced age of twenty-three.)

"I had asked some girls over for tea, and I told the boy to clean up my quarters. Well, do you know, I went down there after lunch, and such a place! It took another fellow and me a whole hour working frantically just to straighten up—not to clean up at all—just to smooth things over." My word, but the boy was funny!

The ward room would have come next in order for inspection, but time was up—visiting hours were over—so there was a chance only for one peep into the quarter which seemed to be a thoroughly masculine place, its walls lined with pictures. She was there in full force and variety, a la Gibson, a la Harrison Fisher and a la nobody in particular.

But don't you think, Elsa, dear, that in this world the significance of little things is often overlooked? Women, though, don't lose sight of them as much as men do. The housewife, for instance, who wants to make her home attractive spends time and thought upon the smallest details and sees to it that the inside as well as the outside of her glass lamp globes is dusted and that her rugs are even and straight. She knows that a good dinner is one that is good throughout and that cold gravy or stale bread will take the touch of completeness away from an otherwise charming meal.

Nothing is too small to be of some importance, and the man who forgets his wife's birthday or does not stoop to pick up her handkerchief when she drops it is pulling out one by one the tiny pegs which hold together the great structure of their happiness.

My, what a lot of cheap philosophy I am getting out of my system! But the weather has been so "beastly, you know," for the last few days that I'm feeling down on my luck. So write soon and cheer up your doleful chum,

MABEL.

If a fire is used constantly during the day, replenish the coal frequently and in small quantities.

CHRISTMAS SWEETMEATS

HOMEMADE candies are so wholesome that whenever possible it is advisable to manufacture the youngster's sweetmeats yourself; then you know exactly what are the ingredients, and there is no danger of their little stomachs being endangered by too rich confections.

These recipes will afford a wide range of choice for the mother who desires simple candies for the little ones' Christmas stockings or to fill the bonbon boxes that make such charming souvenirs for the Christmas party.

The illustration shows one of these bonbon boxes, which is made to represent a snowball with a doll seated on top. Both box and doll are incased in cotton, which is meant to represent snow. A tiny branch of pine is grasped in the doll's hand. Miniature Santa Clauses arrayed in white make favorite decorations for boxes, which may be shaped like houses or sleighs and covered with crape paper.

Delicious Sweets.

Plain Bonbons.—Take the white of one egg, beat till firm, add one egg cupful of water; then weigh one pound of icing sugar and gradually mix altogether. Add for flavoring vanilla or ground almonds. Orange juice instead of water may be used. The sweets are colored pink with cochineal. Walnuts or almonds may be placed on the top when the sweets are finished.

Vanilla Caramels.—Take two cupfuls granulated sugar, one-half cupful of cream, one-fourth cupful of molasses, three level tablespoonfuls of butter and one teaspoonful of vanilla.

Put the sugar, cream, molasses and butter into a saucepan over the fire. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then cook without stirring until a good ball can be formed. Then the mixture is dropped into cold water. Remove from the fire and stir until creamy. Turn into a buttered pan and when cool cut into squares.

Nut Dainties.

Nut Taffy.—Take two cupfuls of sugar, a cupful of molasses and a tablespoonful of butter. If the molasses does not moisten it enough add a little boiling water. Boil until it candies in water without stirring. When done pour on a buttered plate on which two cupfuls of nut meats are spread.

Nut Brittle.—Take a cupful of granulated sugar, a cupful of chopped nuts and a bit of butter the size of a walnut. Melt the sugar and the butter and stir in the nuts. Pour into a buttered pan.

Cream Candies.

Peppermint Creams.—Take a cupful of granulated sugar a quarter of a cupful of water, two drops of oil of peppermint, pour into a saucepan on the fire. Cook until crisp, when put into cold water, pour on a heavy platter and beat until creamy. Drop on oiled paper, flatten and allow to cool. When firm melt a quarter of a cake of chocolate over hot water. Sweeten slightly and dip the mints into the melted chocolate. If a thick chocolate coating is desired the mints should be allowed to harden after the first dipping and then be dipped a second time.

Maple Creams.—Take the whites of two eggs and a quarter of a cupful of sweet cream. Add to this enough melted maple sugar to give a good color and flavor. Then add enough confectioner's sugar to mold easily. Roll into a strip one-fourth of an inch thick and cut into rounds with a tiny cutter. Use dark, moist sugar for these.

Cocoanut Creams.—Place two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, then pour in half a cupful of milk and half a cupful of sugar. Bring to a boil and cook twelve minutes, being careful to prevent its scorching. Push to the back of the fire, add a third of a cupful of shredded cocoanut and half a teaspoonful of vanilla and beat until the mixture is creamy. Pour or drop by spoonfuls on a buttered pan.

PEPYS' LITTLE FEAST.

At Which the Diarist Fared Better Than He Did on Washday.

Mr. Samuel Pepys, of the famous "Diary," had rather more than his share of human weaknesses and frailties, but had he been a better man it is certain that his "Diary" would have been a duller book.

It is, for example, an undoubted fact that Mr. Pepys was something of a gormand—was rather fonder of the table and of the delights thereof than a really wise man ought to have been. It is to this trait in his character and to his curious habit of jotting down rough notes of what he had had for dinner that we owe a thousand little details regarding the table of well to do Englishmen in the reign of his majesty King Charles II., of hilarious memory.

What will be thought of the following for a nice, dainty little meal? It is the menu of a little "feast," as he calls it, which the diarist gave every year in commemoration of his being operated on successfully for a dangerous disease. He proudly chronicles that the dishes on this occasion included "a fricassee of rabbits and chickens, a leg of mutton boiled, three carps in a dish, a great dish of a side of lamb, a dish of roasted pigeons, a dish of four lobsters, three tarts, a lamprey pie"—a most rare pie—"a dish of anchovies and good wine of several sorts. And all things mighty and noble and to my great content," he adds complacently.

The number of guests on this occasion is not given, but at another time, with six guests, he has "after oysters a hash of rabbits and lamb and a rare chine of beef; next a great dish of roasted fowl—cost me about 30 shillings—and a tart, and then fruit and cheese."

About 10 o'clock at night he sends his guests away "after a good sack possett and cold meat." The whole will cost him, he observes, about £5—say £20 of present day English money.

These are what the diarist calls "feasts." On ordinary occasions the fare is, of course, much more modest—for instance:

"Dined at home with my wife. It being washing day, we had a good pie baked of a leg of mutton."

No doubt the poor man was thankful enough to get that, for one gathers from the "Diary" that he generally had cold meat on washing days. In those days, look you, washing day was—washing day. Mrs. Pepys and her "people"—two or three maids and a cook maid—did it themselves—no washerwomen, and the good lady and her helpers were generally up at 4 o'clock in the morning in summer.

Men Who Walked on All Fours.

In the kingdom of Poland there was formerly a law according to which any person found guilty of slander was compelled to walk on all fours through the streets of the town where he lived accompanied by the beadle, as a sign that he was disgraced and unworthy of the name of man. At the next public festival the delinquent was forced to appear crawling upon hands and knees underneath the banqueting table and barking like a dog. Every guest was at liberty to give him as many kicks as he chose, and he who had been slandered must toward the end of the banquet throw a picked bone at the culprit, who, picking it up with his mouth, would leave the room on all fours.

An Easy Way to Stretch Shoes.

To ease a tight boot or shoe take a pair of shears—the longer the better—wrap the blades with cloth and insert the handles into the toe of the shoe, then spread apart the blades. That will, of course, spread the handles at the same time. If the shoe presses unduly in one particular spot place the round handle of the shears at the point of pressure; if it is desired to loosen the shoe equally from toe to instep turn the oval handle toward the side to be stretched. The stretching is made easier if the shoe is first moistened with alcohol. It does not injure the leather.—Youth's Companion.

When boiling molasses or sugar candy rub the dish in which it is being boiled with butter all around about an inch from the top and it will not boil over.

AROUND THE WORLD TRIP

The Canadian Pacific Railway has decided upon a new departure in connection with the first sailings of the two new "Empresses," which are now almost completed, and will be ready for service early next summer. The C.P.R. will divert from the ordinary course of sending the vessels round Cape Horn to make a start in the Pacific service from Vancouver, and instead have arranged attractive around the World trips for their first voyage. A start will be made from Southampton, England, and the Empress of Russia will be the first vessel to sail on April 1, while the Empress of Asia, which was launched at Govan recently, will leave the English port on May 1. Both steamships will call at Gibraltar, Monte Carlo or Villefranche, Port Said, Suez, Colombo, Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Nagasaki, Kobe, Yokohama, and arrive in Vancouver about two months later. Arrangements have been made for Canadian passengers to leave from Canadian and American ports in time to catch the "Empresses," and the fare for the round trip, exclusive of the cost of hotel expenses in England and sleeping berths and meals on the Canadian railway, will be $630.10. An arrangement has been made for the inclusion of meals and sleeping berths across the Canadian continent on payment of an extra $29.20. These two vessels are sister ships and 590 feet long, 68 feet beam, with gross tonnage of 16,850, and a speed of 20 knots, and are the first merchant vessels with cruiser sterns, a feature which is specially adapted for speed, and increases the stability, besides securing more room on the various decks. When ocean liners were built so that they could float with two of their compartments filled with water it was considered a great thing, but the new "Empresses" can have on four compartments filled with water and still float. These vessels constitute the very latest improvements in ocean liners, and the initial trips of the "Empresses" offer a unique opportunity to take an Around the World tour, covering the whole distance under the Canadian Pacific flag. Various side trips will be arranged for from the ports of call between Southampton and Hong Kong.

A Christmas Time Saver

To save the minutes on Christmas eve and leave time for the many things that are bound to come up shut off from the children one room in the house suitable for the tree a couple of weeks before Christmas, and gradually accumulate there all decorations and presents. The tree can be trimmed a day or two before the holiday, and the presents wrapped more quickly and easily because they are all in one place. The children, too, will enjoy the mystery that centers around an inaccessible room.—Housekeeper.

THE SPORTING WORLD

HOCKEY PLAYERS HAD GOOD PRACTICE

The O.H.A. players were out in force at the canal Saturday afternoon and made the best of the good ice. Mason looks to be a find. He is a very speedy player and handles his stick well, in fact he promises to be a second Whitcroft.

Ice-making operations at the rink have received a set back, but the management will be on the job to take advantage of any change in the weather.

St. Michael's had an easy time with New Edinburgh at the Toronto Arena, defeating the easterners by 11—0.

St. Mike's appear to have a strong seven, one that will take a lot of beating, but that club has not all the good hockey players. Men like Fred Kelly, Jerry Coughlin, Art Armstrong, Mason, Pete Spratt and Bradshaw have to be allowed in on the spotlight.

CURLERS MEET THIS EVENING

Members of the Curling Club are reminded of the meeting at the rink this evening at 7.30 o'clock. The report of the Schedule Committee will be given and other business discussed.

Mercantile League

At a meeting of the executive of the Mercantile Hockey League to be held this evening in the Y.M.C.A. at 7.30 sharp, any team wishing to enter should have delegates present.

Junior Hockey players are asked to meet at the T.A.S. gymnasium to-night at 7 o'clock.

For a damp cupboard, which is liable to cause mildew, place a saucerful of quicklime into it, which will not only absorb all dampness, but sweeten and disinfect the space.

Appearances are deceitful. Even French pastry doesn't taste as good as it looks.

A Handsome Gift.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—A letter has been received from Mr. A. C. Hardy of Brockville, written at Vevy, Switzerland, authorizing Mr. W. J. Gage to subscribe, on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy, the sum of $25,000 to the King Edward Memorial Fund for Consumptives. Out of this sum, $5,000 is to be devoted to the erection of a cottage, and the balance of $20,000 is to form an endowment fund. The cottage will be a memorial to Mrs. Hardy's father, the late Hon. George Taylor Fulford of Brockville, and will be erected at the Muskoka Free Hospital. It will not only form a striking memorial to the late Senator, but will prove of inestimable benefit to residents of Brockville and its neighborhood, who are afflicted with tuberculosis.

Contradictory.

YOUR AMBITION.

Have You a Clear Cut Idea of the Object of Your Desire?

Several years ago, when I filled a position which brought me many visitors each day and many more letters at the same time, I was overburdened with requests for advice from persons who wished "to succeed," "to accomplish," "to attain." But, as strange as the statement may seem to you, I can truthfully say that not one in a hundred of these earnest seekers was able to state exactly what he or she really wanted.

They were dissatified and discontented and felt the vague urge of unrest pushing them forward to further endeavor and attainment, but it stopped right there. Ninety-nine out of every hundred did not know what they wanted. They asked not only for advice regarding the means of accomplishment and attainment, but also for information as to what they should really desire.

"Silly," you exclaim. Not a bit of it. I venture to say that you—yes, you who are now reading these lines—are no much better off regarding clear cut ideas and ideals. You want and want and want, of course, but just what do you want? Have you a clearly defined idea and a clear cut ideal of the object of your desire? Honor bright now have you?—William Walker Atkinson in Nautilus.

Good Nature May Be Costly.

"Don't look so glum, Pilkerton. Use cheery words. They cost nothing."

"Cost nothing! If I speak ten cheery words to my wife she asks me for some money."

The Blue Ticket

It Brought a Rich Reward

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Jink Prole, galloping in from the Twin Star ranch, halted his horse in front of the Red Spider Opera House and mopped his heated brow as he read the announcement on the billboard.

"I'll be durned!" he ejaculated, with a supplement of verbal pyrotechnics calculated to scorch the offending billposter. A soft little voice whipped him around in the saddle to stare down at a pale, pretty little girl who was watching him with anxious blue eyes.

"Hello there, little gal! Jest you keep from under this here critter's heels," warned Jink, pulling his horse away from the child's vicinity. "Now, there! What was it you was asking, eh?" His lean, brown face softened wonderfully as he bent down to catch her answer.

"I heard you swearing, mister. Is it because you don't like the play tonight?"

"Why, I dunno, little gal. I liked it well enough the fust time I seen it, but somehow after you've seen the same play mangled some seventeen times, not to mention shootin' up one or two specially bad, rank companies, it looks almost too familiar to me. Most like gettin' a bill sayin', 'Please remit,' when you've broke yourself payin' it the week before."

"I'm sorry," said the child, with a little tired smile. "That's what everybody says. I wish Mr. Bemis had picked out some other play that folks would want to come and see."

"Who's Mr. Bemis?" demanded Jink Prole, with sudden suspicion.

"He's the manager of the company. He plays Lawyer Marks. I'm Little Eva," she explained proudly.

"Ho, ho!" Jink blinked rapidly. "So you're Little Eva, eh? Well, I reckon you'll make a right pretty one too. Where's your ma, Eva?"

"She's in there getting ready for the parade. Mother's Eliza."

Jink threw one spurred boot over the pommel of his saddle and rested his chin in his gloved hand. "Where's your dad? He playing Uncle Tom, eh?"

"Oh, no; father's dead. There's just us two, and mother hates it all, but we have to work to take care of each other, you see. The last town we were in the cowboys shot holes in the scenery and broke all the windows in the opera house, so we didn't make any money at all. I—I hope they won't do it here."

"Little Eva," declared Jink solemnly, "if any varmint so much as breathes out loud in that opery house tonight I'll shoot him as full of holes as a pepper pot! Now, don't you worry, honey. Jest you tell me where I can buy some tickets. I've got a pocket full of money to spend."

"Oh, you are the best man I ever saw," cried Little Eva, jumping up and down with excitement. "Now, I wonder—you must do just as I say, will you?"

"Sure thing!"

"Well, you can buy just as many tickets as you please, but the one you go in on yourself is to be a complimentary one from me—see? Specially because I like you and you are so kind and brown." She opened a little bag that swung from her waist and extracted a piece of blue pasteboard. With a bit of pencil she wrote something. "If you'll tell me your name," she suggested, "I might put that on too."

So Jink blushingly received his complimentary ticket entitling him to witness one performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" free of charge. "That's a mighty pretty ticket, Eva," he said, tucking it away in his pocket. "I'm much obliged to you, and I shall be settin' there whoopin' her up to beat the band, and don't you forget it! Now, how about my buyin' them tickets?"

"Right after the parade you can get them at the box office," said the child proudly. "And now I must hurry, for the parade starts in a minute."

At the Royal hotel, which in this democratic country appeared to be the favorite lounging place for man and beast, the coming theatrical performance was avoided by universal assent, for Jink Prole sat at the head of the table and had ordered horseradish with his baked beans. When Jink ate horseradish there was usually trouble ahead for somebody.

Suddenly Jink Prole jumped from the table and strode down the street toward the opera house. When he returned he tossed a box full of yellow tickets down in front of his plate and resumed his chair.

"Gents," he said briefly, "I've bought out every ticket in this here show. It may be the bummest outfit that ever played 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' in Red Spider—and there's been some pretty bad ones, too—but I invite you all to be present tonight as my special guests and each one can take as many tickets as he likes—pervided he gives 'em to somebody who'll go to the show and act like he enjoyed it some. Here, you begin, Tony, pass 'em along."

Then, as the box went around the three long tables, Jink Prole arose and faced the room. His customary self consciousness vanished with the sincerity of his motive and his words left the big hearted audience thrilling with eagerness to help the little band of strolling players.

"That there outfit may be all to the bad so far as actin' goes, but they mean all right and it's their livin' they're after and it's mighty poor pickin's they get, too, I reckon! They don't come here just nacherly to aggravate us—they don't know how we feel about that there play and I don't want 'em to. Every one of 'em is dyin' to get back home to somewheres where they can earn plenty enough to eat and drink, but they can't pull out enough money to get thar. If we buy up the house, why, they'll all buy tickets home again and there'll be one less of that Uncle Tom outfit to aggravate us, see?"

They saw, and said so vociferously.

"That there Little Eva and her ma, Eliza, crossing the ice, you know, fellers?"

They nodded gloomily.

"They want to get back to Ohio to grandfather's farm. Topsy wants to learn to be an engineer, and old Legree—he used to be a lay preacher down east and he's goin' to tackle it again. Same way with all of 'em. Shall we send 'em home?"

There was a chorus of affirmatives. And now came the most interesting incident of the meal, for as each man took one or more tickets he solemnly dug down and paid the price for it, so when the box came back to Jink Prole it was full of silver quarter dollars and fifty cent pieces, which, added to the price he had paid for the entire house, doubled the receipts for the evening performance.

Jink Prole spent the entire afternoon interviewing the different members of the company, and before the curtain arose that night each one had a sum of money sufficient to take him back home, wherever that was. Little Eva and her mother, Mrs. Frayer, were perhaps the happiest among the lot.

It was a performance long to be remembered for the enthusiasm of the audience, as the spirited acting brought forth its own reward. Red Spider agreed to a man, and the women were unanimously of the same opinion, that never had there been so sweet an Eva, so winning an Eliza, whose happiness bubbled above the tragedy of her part. Legree was positively amiable when off his guard, and only Lawyer Marks maintained his dignity and poise. Uncle Tom twanged his banjo until the strings broke, and the bloodhounds leaped playfully upon Eliza and her infant. The gay and rollicking Topsy was the talk of Red Spider long after other Uncle Tom companies had appeared and disbanded under the system of elimination adopted by the community.

By the next afternoon the theatrical company had left Red Spider in the stagecoach for the nearest railroad station, with the exception of Mrs. Frayer and Eva—whose real name was Eva—to Jink Prole's delight.

Mrs. Frayer remained to convince Jink Prole that he was making a great mistake to believe that he was really in love with her when he had only known her a brief twenty-four hours.

"I tell you it don't make no difference in love. It comes when it gets ready and then stays forever, if it's the right kind," said Jink convincingly. "I know mine is the right kind because I never felt like this before—and your bein' an actress don't make a mite of difference to me, ma'am. Your husband bein' a small manager and dyin' sudden that way, there wasn't anything you and Eva could do except get jobs in some company. Now, I reckon you ain't so all fired afraid of me. Mr. Corwood, he's boss of the Twin Star outfit where I work—he's always known me and he'll tell you. And there's a little house down by the East crick, near the schoolhouse, handy for Eva, here, and it's waitin' for some married chap to take it. I leave it to you, shall it be me? And you? And Little Eva, here?"

Jink's arm was around Eva, and her fair cheek was pressed against his brown one. Mrs. Frayer's dark head was bent in confusion at this rapid wooing, but the little flickering color in her cheek betrayed that her heart was not untouched.

Jink Prole, late in approaching matrimony, was now impatient of delay.

"Eliza," he urged at last, "just you make believe you're in that play and come across the ice and sit beside me and Little Eva."

And this Eliza crossed the ice for the last time.

Conkling's Invective.

Roscoe Conkling, like John J. Ingalls, was a master of invective. Conkling, it is said, once upon a time in summing up to a jury thus attempted to belittle the testimony of a rummy faced, knobby nosed witness for the opposition: "Methinks, gentlemen, I can see that witness now, his mouth stretching across the wide desolation of his face, a sepulcher of rum and a fountain of falsehood!"

WINTER TOURIST TRIPS

Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern, luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With one change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast, where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides, it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes, via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m., January 6th, via Detroit, for Palm Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write A. London, Dec. 16.—The withdrawal of J. Bruce Ismay from the management of the White Star Steamship Co. has long been regarded here as merely a question of an opportune moment. In reply to a query as to his intentions, Mr. Ismay sent the following message Saturday evening from Liverpool;

"I cannot give any information at present in regard to the published statement of my intention to withdraw from the White Star Line."

GOOD MEETING IN THE INTERESTS OF LOCAL OPTION

Large Audiences Heard Ex-Controller Spence of Toronto at the Opera House

Two largely attended meetings in the interests of local option for Peterborough were held in the Opera House yesterday. The cause was also championed by speakers in several of the churches.

Ex-Controller Spence, of Toronto, addressed the Opera House meetings and made a good impression. His arguments, and he had many, were full of logic. He did not make wild statements or endeavor to work up his audience by sentiment. He spoke for the most part quietly and convincingly. And he was optimistic.

"Just as sure as I stand on this stage and just as sure as you sit in your seat," said he at the afternoon meeting, "you will live to see this licensed system wiped out."

He estimated that Peterborough was poorer last year, on account of the open bar, by $139,500. He allowed $20 per day for each of the 15 licenses. As a contrast, he cited the case of the man who went to the boot dealer. He handed over the $5 and took the boots. The exchange meant $10.

"Who pays the revenue, which it is said will be lost with the abolition of the open bar?"

The speaker explained that it was the customer at the bar who paid. Metephorically speaking, the hotelkeeper put his hands in the pockets of the customers and took the money with which to pay his fees.

H. B. Cowan presided at both meetings. Preceding Mr. Spence, he spoke of the last campaign and of the prospects of success in January. He pointed out that at the first voting had 97 votes been turned from the other side, local option would have carried. In the canvass just made members of the Citizens' Committee found hundreds of people who said they had voted against local option, but would vote in favor this time.

HENRY HOPE AND SONS FACTORY FOR PETERBOROUGH

The Canadian Engineer has the following to say of Henry Hope and Sons Limited, which firm will locate in Peterborough if the by-law is passed:

Attracted by the number of factories and other buildings being erected in Canada for which metal sash could be used advantageously, Henry Hope & Sons, Limited, of Birmingham, England, have decided to build a Canadian factory. Peterborough, Ontario, has offered a free site and exemption from taxes, excepting educational and local improvement taxes, and if the by-law making this grant is approved of by the electors of Peterborough next January 1st, a factory will be established there.

The site is bounded by Park, Romaine and Monaghan streets, and is about 2,000 feet by 220 feet. It will be served by both the Grand Trunk and C.P.R. The first building will be a machine shop about 100 feet by 200 feet. It is intended to erect a model plant, with employes' lunch and rest rooms, recreation grounds, etc. About fifty men will be employed at the beginning. The plant will be constructed with the Hope sash and with saw tooth roof construction, with Hope's patent roof glazing. It is intended that the plant be a model daylight factory. Sproatt & Rolph, of Toronto, will be the architects. One of their staff will visit the English factory, of which the Canadian factory will be a duplicate, to get data for preparing plans.

The capital for the Canadian company, which will be called Henry Hope & Sons, Limited, of Canada, has been all subscribed. H. D. Hope, President of the English company, is also President of the Canadian company. A. L. Young, of Toronto, is Vice-President, Secretary-Treasurer and Manager; and David McGill, of Montreal, is a director.

Henry Hope & Sons, Limited, was established in 1818. They ship all over the world, but have been interested in Canada for only about five years. The business in Canada has grown to such proportions, and also that in the United States, which territory they started to invade about three years ago, that it was deemed necessary to have a factory on this side of the water.

It is intended, at the start, to manufacture only the steel sash and patent roof glazing at the Peterborough plant, but the firm of Henry Hope & Sons, Limited, also manufacture a very high grade of gun metal sash. This sash is actually manufactured of the same metal that is used for the English battleship guns, and is extremely tough and durable.

FRITZI SCHEFF IN "THE LOVE WAGER"

Miss Fritzi Scheff, the undisputed queen of light opera, appears for the first time in Peterborough at the Grand, to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, in what is said to be the best operative vehicle of her entire stellar career—"The Love Wager." The piquant personality of the prima donna is said to be especially well suited in this offering. Miss Scheff appears as Mitzi, the fourth daughter of a large Hungarian family, who makes a wager with a handsome lieutenant that she will give him one kiss for each of her three elder sisters whom he succeeds in marrying off within a year. The three acts show how the lieutenant and the charming Mitzi conspire to entrap the three elder sisters into situations where matrimony ensues, and in the end Mitzi finds herself caught in the same trap, for she loves the lieutenant.

The scenes take place in picturesque Hungary, affording splendid opportunities for attractive and stunning uniforms and pleasing gowns. Miss Scheff wears seven costumes, and is seen in the first act as a girl of 14 in short skirts. Manager Jos. M. Gaites has surrounded the prima donna with a splendid singing and acting company. The book is by Miss Edith Ellis from the famous Hungarian comedy, "Seven Sisters," while the music is by a new composer, Charles H. Hambitzer. There are 2[illegible] music numbers in the opera, and many of them are sure to become popular. Mr. Hambitzer is a young man of great promise, and Miss Scheff firmly believes that she has unearthed in him a new and great American composer of exceptional merit.

Rebels Disheartened.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Dec. 16.—An incipient revolution in Honduras was quelled immediately by the killing Friday of its leader, Gen. Jose Maria Valledares, while urging his followers to start the outbreak. Honduras Government troops happened to be near the scene and after a short skirmish with the rebels and shooting of their chief, disarmed and dispersed them.

The uprising occurred near Ojojona, the native place of Gen. Valledares, where he was occasionally reported to have died some time ago from the effects of wounds. He had acquired notoriety as a rebel at Amalapa and in Nicaragua.

The Snipe's Bill.

The bill of the snipe is provided with a nerve running down to the tip and then distributing itself over the end of the beak. This is the only instance of this kind among birds and is a singular case of the care of nature in providing for her creatures. The snipe seeks for his prey in mud and water, where he cannot see, and it is believed that the nerve advises him of the presence of food when his eyes give him no information.

The New Yorkers.

"Are they fond of their New York home?"

"Oh, awfully fond. They spend their winters in Florida, their springs in Lakewood, their summers at Newport and their autumns at Lenox, but they are simply devoted to their New York home!"—Chicago Mail.

ORIGIN OF CINDERELLA.

The Dainty Footed Damsel Who Became a King's Wife.

It has been said, "Not one girl in a thousand knows the origin of the friend of her childhood, Cinderella."

Her real name was Rhodope, and she was a beautiful Egyptian maiden who lived 670 years before the common era and during the reign of one of the twelve kings of Egypt. One day Rhodope ventured to bathe in a clear stream near her home, leaving her shoes, which were very small, lying on a bank. An eagle, passing above, caught sight of the little sandals and, mistaking them for a toothsome tidbit, pounced down and carried off one in his beak.

The bird unwittingly played the part of fairy godmother, for, flying over Memphis, where the king was dispensing justice, it let the shoe fall directly at the king's feet. Its size, beauty and daintiness immediately attracted the royal eye, and the king determined to know the wearer of so cunning a shoe.

Messengers were sent through all the kingdom in search of the foot that it would fit. Rhodope was finally discovered, the shoe placed on her foot, and she was carried in triumph to Memphis, where she became the queen of King Psammeticus.

Chesterfield's Love Letter.

A famous love letter, cautious and clever, is that written in 1661 by Philip, earl of Chesterfield, to Lady Russell:

"Madam—The dullness of this last cold season doth afford nothing that is new to divert you; only here is a report that I fain would know the truth of, which is that I am extremely in love with you. Pray let me know if it be true or no, since I am certain that no one but yourself can rightly inform me, for if you intend to use me favorably and do think I am in love with you I most certainly am so, but if you intend to receive me coldly and do not believe that I am in love I also am sure that I am not. Therefore let me entreat you to put me out of a doubt which makes the greatest concern of
